A RUPTURE IN THE PEACE NEGOTIATIONS BETWEEN RUSSIA AND JAPAN IS IMMINENT

THE PRESIDENT OF ARGENTINA HAS A NARROW ESCAPE

Insane Laborer Draws Revolver and Attempts to Shoot.

Executive Aide-de-Camp Overpowers Would-Be Assassin.

Washington, Aug. 12.—Minister Beaupre at Buenos Ayres, cables the state department today that a laborer named Planas Vicello attempted to assassinate President Quintano yesterday afternoon as the presidents carriage was passing Reitro park. The assailant rushed from behind a monument with a revolver in his hand, but the president's aide de camp threw himself from the carriage on the assailant, overpowered him and prevented him from shooting. The man was arrested. He is supposed to be insane.

WIFE TOLD HIM TO JUMP IN LAKE---HE DID---NOW HE'S DEAD

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Joseph Garron returned home intoxicated yesterday and his wife told him to jump into the lake and drown himself. "All right," said Garron, "I will do just that."

He did, and though he was alive when taken from the water, he died in the hospital two hours later. In the pocket of his coat the coroner found this note: "This is to certify that my wife, Maggie Garron, told me to leave the house and go to the lake and drown myself. Goodbye and forever."

Mrs. Garron became hysterical when informed of her husband's act and hurried to the hospital, but she arrived a few minutes after his death.

"I was only joking," she said, as she knelt at the side of the bed where lay the body of her husband. "I never thought he would take my words seriously."

PRAYED AT HUSBAND'S COFFIN, THEN STOLE WIDOW'S MONEY

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Mrs. Mary Genders, a widow, 21 years old, has lost $3,000 from her safety deposit box in the Illinois Trust and Savings bank, and yesterday she swore to a warrant charging Charles C. Hammil with the theft. The money was paid her by a life insurance company, after the death of her husband. Hammil, who had been friendly with the Genders, advised Mrs. Gender to put the money in the safety deposit vault until a good opportunity for investment was offered, and told her that he had better keep one of the keys, as she might lose her key. When Mrs. Gender went to the safety deposit vault yesterday her money was gone.

"He is the last man in the world I would think would do such a thing," said Mrs. Genders last night. "Why, he actually knelt down and prayed at my husband's coffin."

The police have traced Hammil to Cincinnati.

RAILROAD VALUES

In the United States Amounts to Sum of $11,244,852,000.

Washington, Aug. 2.—According to a bulletin of the census bureau, the commercial value of the railroad property in the United States is $11,244,852,000, distributed among the various states as follows:

Alabama $150,211,000; Alaska $100,000; Arizonia $68,356,000; Arkansas $124,626,000; California $350,694,000; Colorado $198,261,000; Connecticut $105,369,000; Delaware $17,285,000; District of Columbia $5,578,000; Florida $80,467,000; Georgia $156,603,000; Idaho $91,877,000; Illinois $305,057,000; Indian Territory $79,405,000; Indiana $375541,000; Iowa $344,847,000; Kansas $356,356,000; Kentucky $155,772,000; Louisiana $123,401,000; Maine $80,146,000; Maryland $132,342,000; Massachusetts $250,052,000; Micnigan $277,597,000; Minnesota $466,734,000; Mississippi $107,884,000; Missouri $369,768,000; Montana $196,209,000; Nebraska $263,170,000; Nevada $43,745,000; New Hampshire $79,784,000; New Jersey $333,568,000; New Mexico $86,400,000; New York $598,222,000; North Carolina $113,146,000; North Dakota $123,390,000; Ohio $699,797,000; Oklahoma $78,668,000; Oregon $85,661,000; Pennsylvania $1,420,668,000; Rhode Island $25,819,000; South Carolina $75,500,000; South Dakota $49,646,000; Tennessee $131,166,000, Texas $237,718,000; Utah $90,325,000; Vermont $37,311,000; Virginia $211,315,000; Washington $182,837,000; West Virginia $261,799,000; Wisconsin $284,510,000; Wyoming $100,307,000.

Alabama, 35.9; Alaska, ——; Arizona, 9.7; Arkansas, 27.8; California, 26.3; Colorado, 25.0; Connecticut, 114.4; Delaware, ——; District of Columbia, 44.6; Florida, 27.1; Georgia, 40.3; Idaho, 11; Illinois, 63.8; Indian Territory, ——; Indiana, 44.2; Iowa, 16.7; Kansas, 16.9; Kentucky, 49.9; Louisiana, 28.9; Maine, ——; Maryland, ——; Massachusetts, ——; Michigan, 70.9; Minnesota, ——; Mississippi, 27.7; Missouri, 31.6; Montana, 18.7; Nebraska, 18.5; Nevada, 31.5; New Hampshire, 28.3; New Jersey, 69.5; New Mexico, 9.9; New York, 25.8; North Carolina, 61.4; North Dakota, 18.0; Ohio, 19.4; Oklahoma, 17.2; Oregon, ——; Pennsylvania, ——; Rhode Island, 61.5; South Carolina, 39.0; South Dakota, 28.9; Tennessee, 46.6; Texas, 40.0; Utah, 22.9; Vermont, 72.3; Virginia, 37.8; Washington, 14.3; West Virginia, 14.2; Wisconsin, 76.6; Wyoming, 7.5.

The valuation given does not include the value of Pullman cars or private cars. The value of this equipment, independent of the commercial use to which it is put, is estimated as follows:

Pullman cars, $51,000,000; private cars, $72,000,000.

The publication is intended to show estimates placed on the railroads for business purposes, and it purports to give their market value rather than the tax valuations. In a note it is explained that "The value submitted was determined, not with a view to discovering a property purchase price for the railroads of the United States, nor as a basis for taxing these railroad properties, but as one step in ascertaining, for the census bureau, the total wealth of the United States.

"Whether or not," the note continues, "the value submitted represents the value on which the railroads of the United States might properly be taxed depends on whether the state undertakes to tax the roads at their full commercial value, including the values of both tangible and intangible property, or whether it seeks to confine its taxation to the value of the tangible property alone. In the former case the values submitted are believed to be substantially correct, so far as it concerns the operating properties of the railroads, in the latter case it is too high."

HELENA RAILROAD SOLD.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 12.—M. H. Gerry, Jr., general manager of the Missouri River Power company, announced last night that the light and traction company property in this city had been sold to J. G. White & Co., of New York. The purchase price was in the neighborhood of $500,000.

AMERICAN SHIP BURNED.

San Francisco, Aug. 12.—News has been received here that the American ship Roanoke was burned to the waters edge at Noumean, Caledonia, while loading nickel ore for Philadelphia.

MURDERS INCREASE.

Warsaw, Russian Poland, Aug. 12.—The long list of murders resulting from the strikes was increased this morning by the assassination of the manager of the Lilpoprau Iron Works, who was shot down at his residence by strikers.

NIGHT MAIL WEST

Full Service Will Be Re-established on Northern Pacific.

Congressman Bede Takes Matter Up With Postoffice Department.

Washington, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative J. Adam Bede today took up with the postoffice department the matter of night mail service on the Northern Pacific railway mail trains west from Duluth. "It will be a matter only of a few days," said Mr. Bede, "until service on the night trains will be instituted. As a matter of fact the order establishing this service has been made, and its actual consummation is a mere matter of routine requiring a few days to accomplish.

STRUCK BY LIGHTNING

On Pike's Peak But Woman Lives to Continue Trip.

Colorado Springs, Aug. 12.—Mrs. L. M. Cadwall, and two sons, Roy and Ray, aged 15 and 10 years, of Des Moines, Ia., went through the thrilling experience of being struck by lightning, on the top of Pike's peak, and lived to complete the trip to the summit, and back.

They started to walk to the summit and at Windy they were overtaken by an electrical storm, when a sudden flash of lighning sent them to the ground unconscious. They were found by a man walking down the cog road and taken to a nearby house, where they remained for the night. The woman was burned about the lower limbs, but was able to complete the walk to the summit, and returned here by train.

WOMAN IMPRISONED IN AN ICE TOMB.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 12.—Imprisoned for two hours in an ice tomb in the Sperry glacier, north of Lake McDonald, in Northern Montana, after falling through a crevice that had been weakened by the extremely hot weather, was the terrible experience of Mrs. A. M. Burt of Jamestown, N. D. She was a member of a party of sightseers from the Montana biological station at Big Fork, who were crossing the glacier. Mrs. Burt was rescued by ropes after hard work.

ADDICKS' PROPERTY SEIZED BY MARSHAL.

Wilmington, Del., Aug. 12.—United States Marshal W. R. Flynn of this district has seized all of the personal property of J. Edward Addicks to satisfy a judgment which was obtained in New Jersey some time ago by Charles Henchman of Camden. Henchman sold a building purchased by Addicks to satisfy a mortgage, and it failed to bring the amount of the mortgage and bond which accompanied it, whereupon he obtained judgment for $42,000, which was later confirmed by the court here.

The marshal levied upon the growing crops, the horses, milk wagons and other property on the three farms of Addicks, in this county, but was unable to levy upon the farms because they are already covered by mortgages given to secure the money which Addicks was ordered to pay in the Bay State gas cases some time ago.

RANCHES IN DANGER.

Nelson, B. C., Aug. 12.—Forest fires are raging in the low lying woods along the south bank of Kootenai river, three miles below Nelson, and for a stretch of four miles the hillside is aflame. The many scattered ranches are in grave danger. At Ymir, twelve miles south of here, the whole of Jubilee mountain is on fire. The buildings of the Dun mine have been burned. Several men are known to be in the mountains. Their fate is unknown.

MUCH TIMBER BURNED.

Wallace, Idaho, Aug. 12.—Forest fires are burning in several places between Slate Creek and St. Joe, the smoke rolling in huge volumes over Wallace and in Eastern Idaho and Western Montana. State Land Inspector Munson estimates that 5,000 acres of timber have been destroyed in Idaho this year by forest fires.

UPRISING PURELY LOCAL.

Shanghai, Aug. 12.—The governor reports that the uprising at Fu Chou in the province of Changsi is purely local. Of 143 soldiers sent out, only three have returned, the remainder having probably deserted. The officials at Tai Yuan Yu are sending a large force with artillery to the scene of the disturbance.

CHIEF OF POLICE WOUNDED.

END OF OPERATORS' STRIKE SEEMS TO BE NEAR AT HAND

Difference of Opinion However as to How It Will End.

Statements From Local Railroad Officials and Strikers.

St. Paul, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—That the end of the telegraphers' strike on the Northern Pacific and Great Northern railroads is near seems certain. The only uncertainty is how it will end. The prediction was made here, since the report from Sioux City, Iowa, of wholesale desertions of men from the union cause on the Willmar and Sioux Falls division of the Great Northern, that the strikers had lost, and that from that time there would be landslides in favor of the railroads.

This was offset today by a special telegram from Helena, Mont., quoting J. J. Dermody, fourth vice president of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, who has charge of the strike on both railroad systems in Montana, as saying:

"Withing forty-eight hours the public will learn that the strike is over. We are on the eve of a victory. In fact it is over now except to arrange the final terms of settlement, which will be advantageous to the men who stood together for living wages."

General Manager Horn of the Northern Pacific road, when told of the statement made by Mr. Dermody, said to the Associated Press:

"That is a big bluff to hold the men together. They are afraid of a landslide. Our own chairman, Holmes, who is in charge of the strikers on our road, is anxious to call the strike off because he realizes the hopelessness of continuing the struggle and he wants to save the positions which are still open to our old men. We issued a proclamation to our men last Tuesday giving them until noon today to come back and thus reserve their relative rank as our employes. They are afraid that the men will take advantage of this offer, as many have done and as many more will do. President Perham has ridiculed this ultimatum from us. He would rather sacrifice the positions of a number of good men and let them struggle along in idleness rather than submit that he is beaten."

It is learned here that negotiations are pending between the Western Union company and the federal government to put troops about the telegraph stations in Montana where it is reported strikers have interrupted the telegraph lines by cutting wires. If this is done communication in that state will be restored and operators will be able to return to work with comparative safety. In the isolated stations in the West, especially in mining towns, where unionism is strong, an operator who takes a striker's place takes his life in his hands.

THE LOCAL SITUATION.

Still there is little change in the telegraphers' strike situation. Both sides report gains. The Michigan street wholesalers say that they are shipping all classes of perishable goods to practically all points from which orders usually come, the only exception being the Fosston branch of the Great Northern, according to one of the leading commission men. On this branch, he said, there are a few of the smaller towns where perishable freight cannot be sent.

Express is also moving forward in much better shape than it was a few days ago, the embargo being as good as raised. According to the Great Northern and Northern Pacific Express companies everything is moving along with them just as if there were no strike, and the commission man in question says that his concern is meeting with no difficulty in sending express shipments to any and all points.

D. M. Philbin, assistant general superintendent of the Great Northern, today gave The Herald an interesting interview relative to the scale of wages paid the operators. According to Mr. Philbin, the telegraphers have been receiving much better wages than the public has been led to believe.

"I fear that the general public does not clearly understand the schedule under which our operators are paid, and never will understand it if they are to be educated by the editor of the Duluth News Tribune, whose editorial in this morning's issue makes it appear that he either does not know the facts or purposely mis-states them," said Mr. Philbin.

"To quote the whole schedule would require too much space, but, in explanation, take the case of agents and operators at most of our smaller stations. They are paid a regular salary of $55 and $60; $55 being the minimum salary paid, and, in many cases, they are privileged to live in rooms provided in the depot; rent, fuel and lights free.

"They are supposed to work twelve consecutive hours, out of which, however, they are allowed one hour for meals. At stations where they are required to run a gasoline pump they are paid $10 per month extra. If required to work during the meal hour, or to continue work after regular hours they are paid overtime pro rata. If, however, day operators are called during the night, or night operators called during the day, they are paid 50 cents for each call and, if kept on such duty more than one hour, regular overtime rates thereafter.

"Agents are paid extra on commission basis for handling Great Northern express, such commission running all the way from $2 to $40 per month, depending, of course, on the size and business of the station. They are paid extra for handling Western Union messages on basis of 10 per cent of this company's earnings.

"Many of them at the smaller stations hold positions as postmasters; having postoffice in the depot and receiving from $5 to $10 salary. For instance: The day operator at Saunders (simply a telegraph and water station six miles west of Superior) is paid $60 per month as operator and $10 per month for running gasoline pump; which work he does during his regular hours—total earnings per month $70, and has lived with his wife and family in the depot, rent, fuel and lights free. The night operator at the same point is paid $60 per month.

"At Foxboro (a little country station twenty miles west of Superior, where the population does not total more than fifty) the man in charge is agent and operator, schedule salary $55, overtime averages about $8, express commissions $2 and salary as postmaster $10; total $75, and he lives with his family in the depot, rent free. The striking agent at that point recently told me himself that his earnings had averaged $75 per month for the last twenty-seven months and that he was perfectly satisfied with his position, but went on strike because ordered to do so by the O. R. T.

"Day operator and agent at Nickerson (a small station thirty-two miles west of Superior) gets a salary of $60; his overtime amounts to about $5, express commission's average $8, Western Union commissions not less than $1—total, $74 per month. Other small stations of about the same class are paid about the same.

"At Grasston, Cambridge, Braham, Bethel and other stations at larger towns and in a better country, agents are paid salary of $55 to $60; express commissions run from $20 to $40, Western Union commissions $4 to $5 per month, and they too get in some overtime, so that the agents at those points will make in the neighborhood of $100 per month.

"Agent at Floodwood gets $60 salary, $10 extra for running the pump, express commissions about $2 and Western Union commissions $1; totni, say from $70 to $75 per month.

"At Ellis, where there is a day and a night operator, they are paid $60, plus overtime, which brings it up to about $65 per month, and live in the depot, rent free. The day and night operators employed at Coon Creek, who handle the interlocking plant, earn $67 per month.

"At some of the stations the hours are long, but the men are paid overtime and the work at the smaller stations, at least, is not hard. At such stations as Foxboro, Dedham, Bruno and others of that class, there is not over four or five hours of actual work in the day. The balance of the time is put in waiting for trains, which have to be reported and taken care of.

"I have personally talked with a great many of our agents and operators, nearly all of whom frankly admit that they had been quite satisfied with their positions and salaries, and, I think, better than 75 per cent of them told me that they had voted against the strike. About 50 per cent of our old men are working now and 90 per cent of our stations are open.

"The double track between Wingate and State Line will be entirely completed within the next week, doing away with the necessity for keeping any operators at State Line, Huson, Wingate or North End, so those stations, so far as the telegraph business is concerned, are closed permanently."

"There are still two vacancies in operators' positions on the Lake Superior division of our road," said Superintendent E. C. Blanchard of the Northern Pacific today. "We have men in sight to take these places, however, and by Monday expect that the vacancies will be filled. In the local dispatcher's office two of the four vacancies resulting from the strike have been filled, one by one of the old employes.

"Last night I received a telegram from General Manager H. J. Horn to the effect that President Perham of the telegraphers was willing to call the strike off, but that Vice-president Neuman was against taking such action. Another message received from Mr. Horn this morning states that President Perham says the men are in for a long fight, and that the boys have been asked to contribute a fund of $500,000. Mr. Horn further says that the company will agree to no settlement of the trouble except on the railroad's terms, as set forth in the agreement which we asked the men to sign August 10, and which outsiders have passed upon as being perfectly just, fair and reasonable, even generous, on the part of the company.

"Still another message says that, according to Edward Arlington, traffic manager of Barnum & Bailey's circus, the circus made the fastest run in its history on the night of August 10, over the Northern Pacific, from Missoula to Spokane, a distance where the strike situation is supposed to look the blackest for the road. Mr. Arlington has wired a congratulatory report to headquarters."

J. M. Hogan, Head of the Lakes chairman of the strikers, last night issued the following signed statement:

Strike Headquarters, O. R. T.,
Superior, Wis., Aug. 11.

A report has been circulated by General Superintendent G. T. Slade of the Great Northern and General Manager Horn of the Northern Pacific that 96 and 92 per cent of their respective stations were open. To offset this report I hand you herewith a list of stations on Great Northern, Superior and Mesabi divisions, which are closed as indicated below:

Central avenue telegraph office closed, open as agency; Saunders, closed day and night; Boylston, closed day and night; Dedham, closed; Foxboro, closed, Holyoke, closed; Nickerson, closed day and night; Kerrick, closed; Bruono, clerk doing agent's work; Partridge, closed; Sandstone, agency open, telegraph closed day and night; Hinckley, agency open, telegraph station closed; Brook Park, agency open, telegraph station closed; State Line Tower, closed day and night.

Huson, closed, day, night; Wingate, closed day and night; Carlton, open; Scanlon, agency open, telegraph station closed; Cloquet, open; North end,

THE NEXT MEETING MAY BE THE LAST

Russia's Reply Was Handed to Japanese at Morning Session.

If Negotiations Are Broken, Oyama Will Make an Attack.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 12.—So pessimistic is the feeling among those in the confidence of both sides that the prediction was made to the Associated Press correspondent that if the meeting should be held this afternoon it might be the last, and that the history of the "Washington conference" would be abruptly concluded today.

If the negotiations are broken off Oyama will immediately give battle to Linevitch. The Associated Press learns from an unimpeachable source that Oyama's plans are perfected, his armies are ready and only await the signal that a rupture has occurred to launch his attack.

Portsmouth, Aug. 12.—The Japanese envoys have agreed to make their response to the Russian reply at 3 o'clock this afternoon or at the same time tomorrow.

Portsmouth, Aug. 12.—The meeting of the peace conference this morning was brief. It lasted a little more than an hour. The Russian reply was delivered by M. Witte and the meeting was adjourned to give Baron Komura and his colleagues opportunity to examine the document. M. Witte indicated courteously that he would expect the same expedition in the Japanese response as had been observed in the preparation of the Russian reply and this was readily assented to. The Russian envoys returned to the hotel while the Japanese remained at the navy yard.

The official statement regarding this morning's session was given out by Mr. Sato at 11:15, accompanying it with the explanation that it was an official statement, to which both sides had agreed. It is as follows:

In the sitting of Saturday, Aug. 12, their excellencies, the plenipotentiaries of Russia, have handed their reply, in writing, to the note presented to them on Thursday by the envoys of Japan. It has been decided that the next meeting will take place after the Japanese envoys have examined and studied the reply received, which will be at 3 o'clock this afternoon, or tomorrow at the same hour."

The Associated Press is in a position to state that the Japanese believe the Russians have been laying the foundation for the claim that the responsibility for a rupture, if one comes, will have been due to their intransigent attitude. They have decided, in case of a break, to take steps to disprove any such claim.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 12.—The Russian reply to the Japanese conditions of peace was delivered by M. Witte to Baron Komura this morning. The heat was almost unendurable when the Japanese and Russian envoys set out for the navy yard about 9 o'clock. The mercury was dancing in the nineties on the veranda of the hotel, not a breath of air was stirring, bay and shore seemed swooning in the tropical atmosphere. The foreigners were fairly overcome. They were mopping brows as they left the hotel. The grim, serious business on hand on the issue of which the whole world waits breathlessly seemed to be temporarily forgotten in the general execration of the weather. M. Witte and M. Takahira, who have suffered particularly from the unprecedented heat wave which has held this vaunted summer resort in its relentless grip for three days, looked almost worn out. Baron Komura with M. Takahira and M. Witte with Baron Rosen were taken to the navy yard in automobiles while the secretaries and attaches of the missions went over in a launch. The latter greeted each other on the wharf with smiles, but there was little cordiality and no fraternizing. The few remarks exchanged were simply the polite amenities and complaints against the weather.

When they entered the launch, they were perforce compelled to again speak to each other as they were taking their seats, but before the launch had gone 200 yards the attempt to keep up a conversation ended. Perhaps among the Russians the reserve was less noticeable than among the Japanese. But there was little to choose between in this respect. Their strained attitude toward each other could have been manifest to the most indifferent observer. It seemed a bad augury. Indeed, pessmism, black pessmism, reigned. It was already well understood that M. Witte's reply on the two main points was a firm but courteous refusal. The Russians had made no concealment of that and such indications as came from their headquarters breathed a spirit of implacable resolution to adhere to the refusal. Indeed, there was open intimates that unless the Japanese modified their positions on these points the attempt to negotiate peace must result in failure and predictions were freely made among the Russian correspondents that next week would see the end. At the same time there was a popular expression about the hotel that M. Witte was "bluffing." On the other hand a similar but more impressive attitude of determination was observed. They seem sure of their position and their strength. The Japanese acted as if their minds were made up. They would discuss nothing. There seems good warrant for the statement that two of the minor conditions were included for the purpose of bargaining. But that the other side substance must stand. In this condition of affairs there must be surrender on one side or the other or the war will go on. There may still be a chance of peace, but it is based entirely upon a sudden change of the uncompromising attitude of one side or the other. Predictions are heard that if a break comes, President Roosevelt will again step into the breach.

When the meeting adjourned the envoys of each side retired to their respective private communication rooms. M. Witte decided, in view of the possibility of a meeting this afternoon, not to return to the hotel, and telephoned that morning newspapers and any telegrams that had arrived for him should be sent to the yard. Mr. Sato alone of the attaches came back to the hotel, bringing the official account of the meeting to the newspaper correspondents there, who were in waiting. Mr. Sato declined to supplement the official statement with any other information.

The action of Baron Komura, in announcing at once, on delivery of the Russian response, that the Japanese would be prepared to meet the Russian envoys again, at either 3 o'clock today or tomorrow at the same hour, produced a distinctly unfavorable impression. To fix the time of meeting in advance of an examination of the reply was interpreted as evidence that the Japanese mind was made up, and that such concessions as they were prepared to make had been agreed on in advance, and only remained to be formulated. M. Witte, however, is believed to have practically outlined the reply in presenting it, so that when Baron Komura made his announcement, he knew the substance of the Russian reply.

WITTE'S REPLY

To Japanese Note Is Courteous But Firm.

Portsmouth, Aug. 12.—The Russian reply to the Japanese terms delivered by M. Witte to Baron Komura was outlined in the Associated Press dispatches last night. On the two points —indemnity and cession of Sakhalin —it declines to admit discussion. Other conditions are accepted conditionally. It is long, taking up the conditons seratim and setting forth the reasons and arguments for the decision reached in each case. The argument against the payment of an indemnity and of the cession of territory is based on the theory that Russia is not responsible for the war and that as Russia is still prepared to continue the fight and has sought this meeting not as a vanquished foe begging for terms, but because she sincerely desired peace if honorable peace is possible. Therefore she could neither agree to foot Japan's bill for war expenses nor cede territory. The argument can be fairly stated as follows:

Russia is not vanquished. She has suffered reverses, but she is not obliged to accept peace at any cost. She desires peace now as she always has, even before Japan opened hostilities. That she did not court war was evident by the fact that she was not prepared for war. Russia could possibly be properly accused of only one thing—of having given the occasion which Japan was seeking for and for which Japan had been prepared to make war upon her. The responsibility for the war therefore falls on Japan and not on Russia.

It can be said, however, that although firm on the main points, M. Witte's reply is exceedingly courteous in form and tone and leaves the way open to discussion and negotiation if the Japanese are willing.

PRESS REPORTS

Of Peace Offer Identical With Witte's Note.

London, Aug. 12.—A dispatch to the Times from St. Petersburg says: Although the foreign office preserves absolute secrecy in regard to the news from America, I am informed from a trustworthy source that the press dispatches containing the Japanese condition of peace is identical in substance with that sent to the foreign office by M. Witte.

STRINGENT MEASURES

Being Taken to Stamp Out Typhoid Fever In New York.

New York, Aug. 12.—Stringent measures are being taken by the health department to stamp out typhoid fever which has become almost epidemic in some quarters of the southern section of Brooklyn. It was said last night that bathing in Gravesend bay, from Fort Hamilton to Ulmer Park, including Bath Beach and Bensonhurst, will be prohibited unless there is an immediate decrease in the number of new fever cases. If such an order is found necessary the police will be called up to aid the department of health, and all bath houses will be closed and all beaches patrolled. The sanitary inspectors declare that sewage has contaminated the entire bay front at the places mentioned.

For the week just ended the health department reports 72 deaths from typhoid in Greater New York, 44 of which were in Brooklyn, as compared with 30 deaths in July a year ago, 25 of which were in Brooklyn.

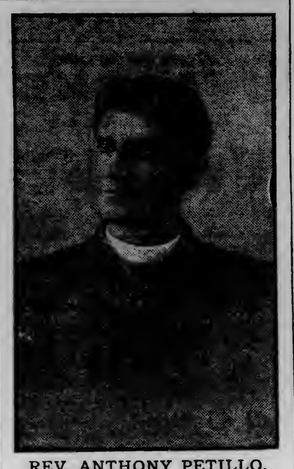

NEW PASTOR OF ST. PETER'S BECOMING VERY POPULAR

Rev. Anthony Pertillo Has Won the Hearts of Italians.

Tomorrow will be Rev. Anthony Petillo's second Sunday as pastor of St. Peter's church. Rev. Petillo, who is a young minister, only recently ordained, made an excellent impression on the occasion of his first appearance in the city. Already he has become firmly established in the hearts of his parishioners. He is energetic and a devout worker for the cause, and it is believed that his presence here will result in a large increase of interest and membership of the church.

Sundays low mass will be held at 8 o'clock in the morning, and high mass at 10:30 a. m. Vespers will be at 7:30 o'clock in the evening. Daily masses will be held through the week at 7:30 a. m.

St. Peter's church, located at the corner of Superior street and Eleventh avenue west, and started for the benefit of the Italian Catholics in Duluth, has been in existence but a short time. The parishioners are showing great enthusiasm in their support of the institution, which is rapidly coming to the front in local church circles. It is now firmly established, and a steady increase in its growth and influence is looked for. To the trustees, B. Summers and Joseph De Marco, is due a good deal of credit for the progress made thus far.

ST. PETER'S ITALIAN ROMAN CATHOLIC CHURCH.

A fair for the benefit of the church is planned for the first week in October. The place for holding the affair has not yet been selected, but it is known that it will be in the downtown business district, probably somewhere along Superior street. The bazaar will continue for a full week. Preparations are now being made for it, but as yet the program is incomplete. Details will be announced later.

THE GAME LAWS

Everybody Must Pay License Fee to Hunt In Minnesota.

Except That Resident May Hunt Birds In Own County.

If any resident of Minnesota hunts game birds outside of his own county this year it will be necessary for him to pay the state a license fee of $1, according to a new provision of the state game law, as passed at the legislative session of 1905. He will not have to pay a license to hunt the birds in the county in which he lives. A Duluthian, for instance, can hunt game birds anywhere in St. Louis county without contributing his mite to the state, but if he should go into Itasca, Cook, Lake, or any other Minnesota county to hunt birds he will find himself in trouble if he does not first procure a license, at an expense of $1, from the county auditor of his home county.

Everybody will have to pay the $1 who hunts game animals, that is everybody who resides in the state. Non-residents will be required to pay a fee of $25 before they are allowed to hunt game animals, and a fee of $10 before they can hunt game birds within the borders of Minnesota. All licenses will expire on the 31st day of December following. From this it will be seen that a non-resident who desires to hunt both game animals and game birds will be forced to contribute $35 toward paying the expenses of the game and fish commission.

Non-residents will be allowed only one moose and one deer during the season. The moose must be an antlered male. The resident of the state is allowed two deer and one moose. His license entitles him to fifty game birds. At least that is the number he is allowed to ship home by "common carrier," although the law does not specifically state that he will be allowed to kill no more than this. Last year both residents and non-residents were allowed to kill three deer and one moose.

No shipment of game can be made without the proper coupon from the hunting license is attached to it. The resident is allowed to ship by common carrier his fifty birds in two shipments not to exceed twenty-five birds each. There is no provision in the chapter in question which may be construed to prevent any resident of the state from personally carrying with him as baggage, on any train or conveyance, any game birds or fish which may be legally in his possession, and any common carrier is permitted to carry such game birds and fish as baggage, when the same is accompanied and carried on the same train or conveyance as the person who is legally in possession of the same. The non-resident may ship home his three game animals and twenty-five game birds. The license will be taken from anyone violating the provisions of the law, and he will further be prosecuted.

From Sept. 1 to Nov. 1 will be the open season for turtle dove, snipe, prairie chicken, pinnated, white-breasted or stump-tailed grouse, woodcock, upland plover and golden plover.

From Oct. 1 to Dec. 1 will be the open season for quail, partridge, ruffled grouse, pheasant, other than Mongolian, Chinese ringneck or English pheasant. Ducks, geese and all aquatic fowl may be killed between Sept. 1 and December.

Deer may be killed between Nov. 10 and Nov. 30. The season for moose will extend over the same period. No person will be allowed to have more than the two deer and one moose and proscribed number of birds in his possession at one time. The sale of game is prohibited.

DIFFICULT OPERATION

Performed on Alan W. Wood, Son of Steel Magnate.

New York, Aug. 11.—Alan W. Wood, son of W. De Wees Wood, the Pittsburg steel magnate, lay at the point of death last night in Roosevelt hospital. Taking violently ill on Thursday afternoon, he was operated on that night. Though hope is held out to the members of his family that he may recover, it is admitted that the chances are extremely slight. It was supposed that he was suffering from an attack of appendicitis, but the operation revealed the fact that one of his intestines had been ruptured. The operation was extremely difficult and unusual, and it was feared Mr. Wood could not survive the shock, but he rallied from its effects and was still alive last night.

Mr. Wood retired from active business about four years ago and came from Pittsburg to make his home in New York. Great surprise was occasioned when announcement was made last February that almost a year before Mr. Wood had married a well-known show girl.

MECHANIC AND COFFEE.

The Old Coffee Troubles Left When He Quit.

"Since quitting coffee I am hearty and well at 63 and go to my work every day and feel stronger and better in every way than I used to when I was considerably younger.

"I am a mechanic and have been a great lover of coffee and used it all my life until a few months ago when I made up my mind it was hurting me. I suffered from constipation, indigestion and kidney troubles and I used to bloat up and have pains in my back.

"Something had to be done and I quit coffee, the old kind, I mean, and began to use Postum Food Coffee. In a few weeks I was a well man again. My bowels became regular, my food digested comfortably, the bloating and pains in my back no longer troubled me and my kidneys resumed healthy, normal action. That improved condition remains. I am sure I owe it to Postum Coffee, for I have used no medicines.

"I like Postum much better than the old kind. It seems to be more satisfying and I and my whole family drink it morning, noon and night. This is my honest statement of what Postum has done for me." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

WILL FIGHT BOSSES

Labor Unions Join Opponents of Master Printers' Combine.

Lyle to Receive Support of All Unions In His Trouble.

Union meetings:

Monday—Retail Clerks, Labor World hall.

Tuesday—Painters, Decorators and Paperhangers, Labor World hall; Stationary Firemen, Labor World hall; Carpenters, Rowley block.

Wednesday — Cigarmakers, Labor World hall.

Thursday—Electrical Workers, Labor World hall; Stationary Engineers, 600 Lyceum building.

Friday—Leather Workers, Labor World hall.

The feature of last night's meeting of the Federated Trades' assembly was the discussion of the fight between the master printers' combine and A. J. Lyle, because the latter refuses to quit using the union label. This matter was brought up in connection with the printing of the Labor day program, which work Mr. Lyle is doing. James Walsh, the chairman of the printing committee, claimed that there is no doubt but that the other printers are making a vicious fight on Lyle, and that they propose to put him out of business. Mr. Walsh said he believed that it is not only the duty of union men to stand by Lyle in this fight, but after it is over, for the reason that Lyle is the only master printer in town who has shown a disposition to favor unionism and the eight-hour law the printers expect to put in force Jan. 1, and which is the cause of this whole fight.

Mr. Walsh said that Secretary Lounsberry of the printers' combine took up the labels from the different shops, and then returned them to three of the shops in order that these shops could fight Lyle with his own weapons. Delegate John McDonald of the local Typographical union said that if Secretary Lounsberry took up the labels he has overstepped his authority and is liable to prosecution, and that it is possible steps in this direction may be taken toward that end.

President Shartel of the assembly said that a few days ago he was present with Mr. Lyle in a local bookbinding house, when Mr. Lyle was refused ruling work, the owner of the bindery telling him that the other printers would put him out of business if he did work for Lyle, and that he had been ordered not to do such work. Mr. Shartel said that with this trust condition, he believed it fitting and necessary that the union men of the city go farther than they usually do in such matters, and get out and solicit business for Mr. Lyle—that it is more than a fight on Lyle—it is a fight against unionism, and all friends of unionism, and for that reason the unions should take an active hand in the proceedings and show the master printers where they get off at.

Gordon O'Neill, who was present and who was called upon for a talk, said that it should be remembered that a good many of the master printers who were causing the trouble are and have been members of the Typographical union and that they have been delegates to the trades assembly and have taken obligations to support unionism. Mr. O'Neill claimed that the fact that they were union men caused union men to get out and boost for them and helped them build up their business; and now they are fighting unionism. Mr. O'Neill said that union men should remember these traitors when the present trouble is over and deal with them accordingly.

• • •

The matter was quite generally discussed last evening and a good many more delegates took part than ordinarily enter discussions of any question which comes up. The delegates asked the printers' delegates for printed matter to hand back to their respective unions and their spirit would seem to indicate that a general fight on the master printers' combine is about to begin.

• • •

T. G. Freshney, business agent for the Painters' union reported on the fight conditions of that union in West Duluth. He said that, thanks to the Longshoremen's union of that part of the town, West Duluth is being organized and will eventually be one of the strongest union hot-beds of the city.

• • •

J. C. Abbott of the engineers, J. A. Barron of the typographical and L. C. Burnham of the tinners were the delegates obligated last evening.

• • •

• • •

President Shartel and James Walsh of the Labor day committee reported on the preparations for Labor day, which are unchanged from the arrangements already published.

The butchers' picnic will take place tomorrow at Zenith park. Quite a program has been prepared in the way of barbecue and sports.

John Swift of Minneapolis, who has been here since United States court opened as a deputy marshal, is known throughout the state as "the father of unionism" in Minnesota. He addressed the trades assembly a few weeks ago, urging education as the chief hope of unionism. He has dictated the following communication on unionism to The Herald:

"I have been connected with the labor movement of this state for over thirty years, and have spent considerable time before that in the movement in the East. I have seen the labor movement during every period of its growth, when its stock was low, and later when it advanced into extreme popularity.

"I have always noticed that the labor movement has thrived most when it was managed by wise and conservative men. No one is more desirous of seeing the workingmen secure his share of his production than I, but long experience has taught me to be cautious. Rome was not built in a day. Our industrial system of this moment is the result of a hundred years growth. So labor must carefully and wisely make its way forward through a progressive, evolutionary course.

"There have been strikes during the very recent past that have been entirely uncalled for, and which have done the labor movement more harm than good. I have in mind a strike in my own city some two years ago, where the unions by one effort a year previous, and without a strike, had secured a reduction in working hours from twelve to eight in every flour mill in Minneapolis. The next year they went after still more. The Minneapolis mills were the only ones which recognized the eight hour day, and the unions were in duty bound to organize the flour mills of the country before they should ask for anything more from the Minneapolis mills. The mill owners attempted to reason with the union along this line, but without results. A strike was called, and as it was inopportune and hasty, the men lost. The loss too was heavy, for it not only was a sacrifice of many years in unionism for flour mill employes, but all organized workingmen in Minneapolis felt the blow, because of the indignation of the many business interests on account of an unjust and unwarranted strike.

"Workingmen, during the heat of discussion about a strike, are often led to believe by hot headed leaders, that the man who advises caution is their foe. I felt the sting of such suspicion several times during my life, but I have always managed to outlive it, and if every labor leader acts rightly no matter what the immediate cost may be, he can at least come out of the trouble maintaining his own self respect. This is worth more than all of the false praise and mock admiration that comes from falling in with the majority, when it is known that the majority is in the wrong.

"The trouble with many of us who take an active part in the work of labor is that we are given too much to soft soaping and flattery, when we ought to censure our fellow unionists who persist in taking unwarranted action.

When unions act wisely and conservatively they invariably command the respect and sympathy of the public. The railway telegraphers, for instance, have carried on their struggle admirably, and against frightful odds, but they hold the respect of the people. Neither does this respect come to them because of any ill-feeling toward railway corporations, but because of the behavior of the operators themselves. The printers' union, too, is being respected by the thinking public because it has a reputation for conservatism and wise action.

"After all it is largely ignorance that is responsible for unwise action on the part of labor. I presume, too, that it is responsible for much arrogance on the part of employers. We may be ever so bright, but we never can be intelligent men in the labor movement until we begin to know something about the other side of the labor question represented by the employers. Nor can the employers become authorities on industrial conditions until they get acquainted with the hopes, aspirationes and desires of the working men.

"I plead for a fraternity between the employers and the working men. I have no sympathy for that sentiment so often expressed by radical men in our movement, that there is no identity in the interests of the employer and employe. If this contention is true then there can never be industrial peace, and society will always be in a state of unrest.

"Capital is the creature of labor. One is effort put forth in the present. The other is effort put forth in the past. While they have assumed different forms, both are absolutely necessary for the promotion of industry. All that is necessary to insure success and peace in industry is for both sides to learn each others rights, and then to act in accordance with them.

"We all need education in this direction, and I am devoting my time among working men advocating a recognition of this principle."

SHEA CHANGED THE RECORDS

Philadelphia, Aug. 12.—The session, yesterday afternoon, of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters was the stormiest in the history of the union. Physical violence was several times narrowly averted. Nothing was accomplished and the convention was adjourned to permit the delegates to cool down. The disorder was the result of a motion made by C. W. Briggs to endorse the Chicago strike. As soon as the motion was made, there was an uproar. Men in all parts of the hall began shouting and shook their fists at one another.

F. J. McDermott of New York, wanted the convention to go into executive session but this was vigorously opposed by President Shea, who took the floor and said he wanted the world to know the truth concerning the Chicago strike. The motion to go into secret session was defeated. This caused an uproar and a large body of delegates in the rear of the hall who were in favor of an executive session made a rush toward the front of the hall, where the Shea delegates met them. For a moment it looked as though there would be a clash, but President Shea by the vigorous use of his gavel brought a semblance of order. "It does not matter what delegates have in their pockets," he shouted, "this convention must be conducted in an orderly manner."

President Shea then became the object of attack by delegates. They accused him of misconducting the strike and also made general charges of incomptency. His friends came to his rescue and then the delegates charged each other with bad faith.

"Cur" and "liar" were among the epithets exchanged.

Dozens of other delegates took the floor and accused one side or the other with bad faith, incomptency, etc., and finally President Shea made the following reply: "I make this statement realizing the full force of what I say. Realizing that my remarks may be brought against me in a court of justice. I deliberately state that I did recommend the changing of certain things on the records of the local unions of Chicago during and after the teamsters' strike because I thought that the alteration of the records would prevent some of our men being indicted."

RAILROAD TIE PRODUCTION

The Study of the Forest Service Is Nearly Completed.

Washigton, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—The study of railroad tie production, which the forest service is making in co-operation with the Northern Pacific railway in Minnesota, is nearing completion. The field force is in Hubbard county, where figures are being gathered to determine the possible yield of ties of jack pine. These figures, which will probably be completed by Sept. 1, will show the yield of areas fully stocked with jack pine and will so be of value also in estimating the yield of planted areas. An estimate of the whole standing supply and of the character of lumber in Northern Minnesota is well under way.

STEINKAMP GUILTY OF MANSLAUGHTER.

St. Paul, Aug. 12.—A special to the Dispatch from Fargo, N. D., says: Nicholas Steinkamp, who has been on trial on a charge of having murdered Charles Dolman during a quarrel over a woman, was found guilty of manslaughter. The jury fixed the penalty at six and one-half years' imprisonment.

ASKS DIVORCE.

Mrs. Jennie Wilson Claims Cruel Treatment.

Alleging cruel and inhuman treatment and desertion Jennie Wilson this morning filed a suit in the district court for a divorce from her husband, David Wilson.

The complaint states that Mrs. Wilson is 26 years of age, while her husband is 60. They were married in Superior in 1894 and for a while they lived together in Fargo, but Mrs. Wilson claims that she was forced to leave her husband and came to Duluth. She states that she does not know where her husband lives, but the summons was served in Fargo.

Mrs. Wilson claims in her complaint that her husband was in the habit of coming home drunk and ill treating her. She specifies that on one occasion he came home under the influence and threw her on the bed, choking her and threatening her life with a knife; also that on another occasion he came home intoxicated and threatened to kill her and their three children, and was only prevented from doing so by the other occupants of the block, who came to the rescue. The complaint states that these sprees became so frequent that Mrs. Wilson was forced to leave her husband, and that since that time he has done nothing to support her and she has been forced to earn her own living.

Mrs. Wilson asks for a decree of divorce, the custody of the three children, and an allowance sufficient to take care of the children until they become of age.

NOVEL TRIP ABROAD

Unique Entertainment Is Given By Ladies of Glen Avon.

Take Their Guests For a Tour of the World.

A trip abroad is always delightful, but seldom indeed can a tourist strike a Europe, glittering and alluring as was the continent visited last evening by several hundred Duluth people. It was situated at Glen Avon and the idea seems almost preposterous that one suburb could conceal the beauties that were bunched together last evening.

The tour of the world provided by the Ladies' Guild of Glen Avon was a brilliant success and their guests last evening were aroused to wonder and admiration at the infinite attention to detail which was necessary to produce so wonderful an entertainment. The tickets were lengthy and amusing. The first provision advised the purchasers that special arrangements had been made for special stopover privileges at the parsonage for those holding marriage licenses. In spite of this encouragement, the management entirely ignored the cathedral towns, making a courtship like unto the one told by Kate Douglas Wiggin, an impossibility. However, one of the other rules to which the tourist's attention was called was "No courting aloud on this tour."

After a half hour's ride from town the guests reached Montreal, which place in the disenchanting light of this morning would be called the residence of J. A. Ferguson. No individual, however, who had a remnant of childhood's ability at "supposin" left would doubt for a moment but that he had reached a portion of King Edward's realm. St. Lawrence river was spanned by two rustic bridges and at Mount Royal coquettish French maidens induced dazzled tourists to purchase maple leaves or other mementoes of the place. Canadian papers were sold and French guides gave courteous and prompt attention to momentarily confused travelers.

Scotland as the next country to which the travelers were welcomed at A. R. Macfarline's home and a more attractive and wonderful representation of the country could scarcely be achieved. This land, with its heroes and heroines who through their mystical attractions never lose their power over the wondering sympathies of even an unenthusiastic admirer was presented in a truly wonderful manner. Anchored on the lake was Ellen, the noted lady. A lighthouse twinkled at intervals upon the far shore and on one bank a bonfire blazed adding by the reflection in the water to the beauty of the scene. The ill-fated Mary whose very name commands a thrill of passionate pity, posed in the moonlight surrounded by her four faithful and devoted Marys. Miss Annie White was the queen and her attendants were Misses Katherine Ensign, Grace Gilbert Barbara Rupley and Marjorie Morrow.

In other parts of the ground were statues of Highland Mary, Queen Margaret and Ellen McGregor. Assisting in the capacity of statutes or very much alive Highland girls were Misses Marian Morrison, Anna Guthrie, Georgana Clark, Miss Margaret Denfeld Mary Paine and Ruth Kennedy. At the entrance of the country Chester Quigley and Wyman Miller in scarlet coats and suits were mounted on gray charges, entirely typical of the Scotch grays.

The next step was a long one, no less than from Scotland to Africa. From the mysterious atmosphere of dead and gone heroes of Scotland into the flickering lights of torches that displayed a colored gentleman cutting swaths of watermelon and coaxing all travelers to get both ears wet at the same time was the achievement accomplished. In this land which was marked off by tall cat-tails with an occasional immense sunflower and the flaring torches, the happy songs and good nature of the colored folks was supremely evident. Aunt Jemima baked cakes, fortunes were told and Africa as presented at the home of T. W. Hoopes was entirely satisfactory.

A glee club of Sweden and Norway at the homes of Mr. and Mrs. John Nybery and Mr. and Mrs. L. J. Wixen was one of the most delightful attractions of the evening. In addition to the singing which was very fine the luncheon served was entirely typical of the country caused many favorable comments.

If Portia was impressed with the distance that one little candle could throw its beams, what would she have said to the myriad candles, all of the same height, and regularly arranged upon the windows of the German castle, beaming away at more than thirty-two candle power rate? The effect was charming, and Germany beckoned the tourist from afar. The country was installed temporarily at the home of Robert Forbes. Upon the piazza a picture gallery was arranged, and steins and German lunches were in evidence at every turning. Assisting upon the lawns were Mrs. Julius Weiland, Mrs. John Frazer, Mrs. H. R. Nelson, and Misses Blanche Forbes, Jessie Clark, Gertrude Young and Julia Vandergrift, and Prof. Carl Ulrich. Dancing around a Maypole in the garden were little Misses Mary McGonagle, Gertrude McKenzie, Zelma Meier, Gertrude Forbes, Mabel Rossman, Celia Hathaway, Patience Quigley and Mildred Hopkins.

To China and Japan the traveler journeyed next, and the cool, dainty and Oriental fittings of the grounds of William C. Sherwood were ideal for the display of these Eastern countries. The grounds were strung with rows and rows of lights, and dainty lanterns swung in the breeze. Chop suey, made and served by Hom Sam, a genuine inhabitant of the real country, and tea, was also served under the direction of Tong Woo. A tea house, hung with matting, many cherry blossoms, and Chinese gongs and bric a brac, was especially attractive, and in a Japanese pagoda dainty trifles were sold by young women in costume. They were Misses Elizabeth Morris, Effie Smith, Sybilla Hartman, Vandergrift, Helen Congdon, Alice Wilson and Katrina Richardson.

Musical and happy, gay and gracious little Italy was presented with great charm by the people who live at Woodland and who are from the real Italy of sunny skies. The time spent in this country was greatly enjoyed by the tourists and macaroni as it should be cooked was served and was received with delight.

Switzerland was one of the most unique and charmingly arranged of the countries. The capital was at the home of Mrs. C. C. Salter, approached by a steep embankment which was glittering in the moonlight exactly like real snow banks. Ropes and guides and Alpine stocks added the distinctive marks of the country and at the top, luncheons of cheese and milk and other tropical products was served. Presiding here were Mrs. Charles Miller, Mrs. John McCabe, Mrs. H. C. Fulton and Miss Salter.

The White House, with a host who was de-e-lighted the entire evening, ended the tour of countries. Red, white and blue, which may at times seem ordinary was the most welcome of decorations and the reception by the president and the members of the cabinet was the final touch to a delightful evening. Receiving at the White House were Mr. and Mrs. W. A. McGonagle, Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Denfeld, Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Smith, Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Farles, Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Washburn, Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Richardson, Mr. and Mrs. Ward Ames and Mr. and Mrs. C. A. Duncan.

The evening was a brilliant success and is causing much comment among the many who were guests.

TRI-STATE RACE CIRCUIT

Large List of Entries For Fine Speed Contests.

The Duluth meeting of the Tri-State Race circuit opens next Tuesday afternoon at the fair grounds. The usual county fair has been done away with this year because the people wouldn't support a fair and the fairs have not been profitable for the last few years.

There is a great deal of interest taken in the race meet, however, and there will be some good races pulled off. The meet lasts three days and the list of entries is a large one, though it is not yet complete. There are five races, they being a 2:22 trot or pace, a 2:30 trot or pace, a 2:30 trot, a 2:40 trot or pace and a 2:18 trot or pace. In addition to these there will probably be a running race. The races start at 2:30 each day.

AL. ABRAHAM'S COTTAGE AT SOLON SPRINGS.

FOUND FRIENDS OF HIS YOUTH

New York, Aug. 12.—"'Where are the friends of my youth?' is the way the old song goes," remarked a busy New Yorker, "and I suppose I have sung that song 500 times. I sang it as an urchin standing beside my mother's elbow on a Sunday afternoon when they wouldn't let me go out with the boys, for they know I'd go in swimming or skating, so they sought to keep me interested by singing songs. Then I didn't know what friends were—that is, I didn't know what the word meant, and the word 'youth' was Sanskrit to me. As soon as I was old old enough to know what these two words meant, I stopped singing the song—had no time, I suppose.

"I don't suppose I had thought of the song for fifteen years till one day last week I caught myself humming it. Then I broke off humming and said: 'Well, where are the friends of my youth, anyway? Now, I've been pretty successful the last ten years or so, have made a lot of money; there's no use of my telling you I haven't for you happen to know better. The way I've made my money has been to make up my mind to get what I wanted and to leave no stone unturned and to keep all wires hot until I got it. So after I asked myself where my old friends were, I said to myself, 'I'll find out.' And I have found out.

"It was easier than you might think. I didn't go pawing around among graveyards under weeping willows, parting the grasses from in front of the tombstones, for I knew the 'mossy marbles' didn't rest on the remains of many of the kids I used to play with or of the college boys with whom I went through college, for they were a husky lot, most of them, and their chances for life were good when I last saw them. I am no pessimist, and I didn't sit and hope and think about the hereafter and the procession of sheeted figures waiting for me on the other side.

"I started out with the assumption that the gang was alive and kicking. I figured at once that while some might be far away, as the sentimental songmakers love to tell us, the great majority of the bunch must be doing business of one sort or another within 200 or 300 miles of New York city. I figured also that some of them had buzzed about the world at one time or another looking for fortunes and so on, but I reasoned it out that they were all old enough to have gotten over the fortune hunting fever and to have come back to the old neighborhood to get the benefit of what papa had done before him.

"You see, this season is my easy time. The family is away and there was no business doing on the day I began my search for the friends of my youth, and I first went to a library, a public library, where I knew they had the directories of all the leading cities in the country. I had about twenty of these directories brought and piled up on a broad table in an alcove of the library, and then I sat down. I thought hard for perhaps half an hour, putting down in a list the names of all the old-time friends I could remember whom I would care to know about or to see again.

When the list was made up, I picked out the Utica city directory and went through it, hunting for every name on my list. I found two, I next tried Buffalo, and here I found three I found none in Rochester, none in Syracuse, four in Binghamton and one in Poughkeepsie. These were all the boyhood crowd I could get trace of in the directories. Then I started out for the college bunch, and I hunted further—that is in cities outside the state. I was delighted at my success. The boys are littered all over the map, and I got tracks of them all through the Middle West, and even out on the Pacific slope.

"Say, I was in that library from 11 o'clock in the morning until they put me out at closing time in the afternoon. At noon I telephoned to the office telling a clerk where I was, and that if I were needed to call me up. No call came and there I sat reveling in old-time memories. Why it was wonderful the amount of information I got from those directories. It gave me a strange feeling, the like of which I had never before experienced.

"As I opened a directory it was like getting off a train at a railroad station and starting out to look for familiar faces. Everytime I took up a fresh directory I had a feeling that it was foolish to look in such a big book for a friend's name. But I would start out with my alphabetical list just the same, and it would give me a pleasureable thrill when I came across someone I knew. Sometimes the name would be in black-faced type, meaning that the person was of some consequence in his community, and for advertising reasons had paid to have his name made conspicuous.

"I remember looking up one chap who the last time I saw him, was nothing but a redheaded, freckle faced kid of 10 who was forever playing hookey from school. His name was O'Brien and we used to say that he would have the jail for his if he didn't watch out. But he turned off somewhere on the road evidently, for he's a priest now, according to the directory, and in charge of one of the biggest churches in—well, I won't say what city in the state of New York. I'll bet the boys of his parish don't fool him, and perhaps that has something to do with his popularity, for he knew human nature.

"Well, it was fascinating work, I found doctors and lawyers, and one with 'lab' after his name, showing that he had stayed down where he started. The funniest of all I came across in that directory hunt was the case of the boy who was the bully of the school and who was able to bat the ball further than any one else. He's a man milliner now.

"Another who, I remember, carried a pledge, a solemn promise, neither to drink nor smoke for the rest of our lives, is a tobacconist. I remember he made the whole school's life a burden with that pledge of his, now he lives off smoke—think of it. Against some of the names I found notes in fine type telling the reader to see advertising page so and so. Of course I would see the page, and you'd be surprised how many times those ads revealed to me that what I had planned for this fellow or that had come true.

"This was especially true in the case of my college classmates. But I suppose this was because I had known them just as they were about to begin their life work. Once in a while I found that a boy whom I had known as the poorest of the poor, in this world's goods, had somehow or other fought his way up to something fine when you considered his antecedents and the chances he had as a lad.

"I actually found they'd made a mayor of a large city out of one boy who used to come to school hungry in the mornings and then it flashed across me how I'd carried hot baked potatoes from my mother's table to that boy, wrapping them in my handkerchief, and sneaking them out of the bowl when nobody was looking. I could see that boy standing behind the school house, just as he did thirty years ago, devouring that potato, skin and all, like a hungry rat, his eyes bulging out with the fear that he might not get it all inside his mouth before the school bell stopped ringing.

"When I came out of the library I was like a man in a dream. I was under a sort of spell for two or three days. I had found the friends of my youth, and I now knew that many of them were men of action, following out their life's pathways, many of them, within 200 miles of my home.

"Then it occurred to me that I hadn't looked in the New York and Brooklyn directories. That caused me to have these two volumes brought into my private room from my outer office. Here was another revelation, for I found that twenty or thirty fellows whom I had known at one time or another were located all around me. Would you believe it, I found an old prep school seatmate right in the same office building with me, and when I went into his office I discovered that he was a man whom I had seen nearly every day for the last three years and had not known him.

"But my strangest experience in this whole search came when I took to the telephone book to see if I could make connections with a few voices that I had not heard for many a year. First I started in on my old town, the village where I was brought up. It had never occurred to me until I got this directory habit that there could be such a thing as telephone connection with the old town. I hunted for the name and found it, with four or five telephone numbers in it, too. Three I did not know, but the postmaster and one of the doctors—their names were the good old names. I rubbed my eyes. It could not be that these old chaps could still be living and doing business!

"First I tried the postmaster, sitting in my library at home, with my feet on the library table and the desk 'phone in my lap. It was about 8:30 at night, and I figured that the postmaster must have just finished sorting the evening mail and the crowd of hangers-on must have melted away. It took a long time to get the connection, but when I got it I could recognize the very voice of the old man who used to chase me out of the office twenty-five years ago.

"I gave him a strenuous two minutes trying to guess who I was, and then I told him. Then we had a good chat, going over the five-minute period into the fifteen; but what did I care? It was cheap to me. He told me more about men and women and things up in that poky little place than I had gathered from meeting old friends in twenty years.

"Then I called up the old doctor, for the postmaster had told me that the name I had found in the telephone book was that of the old practitioner I had known as a boy, and not his son. Now, this old sawbones was of the rare old sort, a veteran of the rebellion, a surgeon, who was shot in the back while leaning over a wounded man on the field, and who always hated to tell us boys where he was wounded for fear we might think he had run away in battle. So when I got the connection and the good, crisp old voice said, 'Well, what is it?' I began: 'What is your opinion, doctor, of a soldier who comes out of a war with a wound in the back?'

"'Who are you, and what the devil do you mean, sir? You've got no business to talk to me like this. This is an outrage. I'll report this to headquarters, sir; to Central, and have—'

"I was really afraid the old chap would go into apoplexy, so I broke in and humbly begged his pardon, apologizing over and over again and telling him that I knew how he was shot, telling him the very name of the wounded man he had ministered to at Chancellorsville when he got his wound. I told him that I had it all from my own father, and then he burst in with who the devil was I again and what was my father's name. But I couldn't let him off the string yet.

"'Say, doctor,' I said, as soon as he had calmed down a little, 'is yours a desk 'phone, for I don't want to keep you standing; I have a whole lot to say to you.'

"'I am sitting in my office chair, sir; but if you don't stop this damn foolishness and tell me who you are and what you want I shall hang up the receiver.'

"'Well, doctor,' I said, and here I stopped my fooling, 'just before I called you up I called up Mr. Lewis, the postmaster, and, well, you see, I told him who I was before I got through, and as my father and Mr. Lewis and you were all in the same regiment, he told me a little more about your personal affairs than he would probably otherwise have done. He told me, if you'll pardon me for mentioning it over the wire, and the two of us a hundred miles apart, more or less, that you've had trouble, financial trouble, and that some shark of a lawyer is about to foreclose a mortgage on your house.'

"Here the doctor broke in to say that somebody had just been ushered into his office, a patient, and if I could wait a minute he would be back with me again. His voice had lost its caustic tone, I noticed.

"So he laid the receiver down and I was glad of it, for it gave me a chance to pull myself together and prepare to put what I had to say in a way that might accomplish what I wanted. As I sat there, all alone in my library, with the receiver to my ear, I could actually hear the doctor's old office clock, and I'll bet my hat it is the same old-fashioned contraption that I stared at for five minutes one day with my teeth clenched trying hard not to cry while the doctor probed my bleeding, blackened hands to get the shot out after I had had a little discussion with a shell I had been loading to go hunting. Presently the doctor came back to the 'phone and then I said:

"'Now, Dr. Freeman, my name is Willis—Fred Willis, or 'Fud,' as the boys used to call me, and my father was second lieutenant in E company in the regiment that most of the men in the town enlisted in; you know. Now you know me, don't you? But there's something that you never knew that I knew before, for you made my father swear to keep quiet about it. Father was bit in the side by a piece of shell at Fair Oaks, and you saved his life.

"Father died here in my home three years ago, and before he died he said to me that he had always felt that you saved his life, since it was you that found him bleeding to death and worked for two hours to fix him up. Father put it this way: 'I owe Freeman a big doctor's bill, and it's double what it was, because I've never paid anything in interest or on principal.'

"Here the doctor broke in with a lot of talk about there being no bill and nothing to pay, but I could tell he saw what I was coming to.

"'Now, doctor, your mortgage is $1,768, so Lewis, the postmaster, tells me, and I figure that my father's debt to you was about $2,000. You see I'm a lawyer now and a judge, and this is a court from which there is no appeal. Why, Dr. Freeman, nobody dares try to disobey me when I'm in the court room, and you've got to do as I say now. I stole your cherries once, doctor, and you vowed you'd larrup me; you have never had a chance, so, as I escaped a licking, for which I am thankful, as I know you had a heavy hand in those days—I feel a little indebted, too. Now, doctor, Central is getting fidgety, and I must ring off—but I shall send you a check for the amount of your mortgage tomorrow morning. And if you have any more trouble with that shyster lawyer let me know, and I'll come up and give him the larruping you were going to give me twenty-five years ago.'

"He caved in, poor old chap, although he swore scandalously over the 'phone, and I don't know yet but that I'll have my telephone taken out by the company for being parties to criminis. But I never wrote a check with so much satisfaction as I did that one, and I didn't wait until the next morning, either.

"Yes, I found the friends of my youth, all right, and it will cost me about $2,000, with the mortgage, telephone tolls, reunion dinners and all that; but it is cheap—cheap. It's made me ten years younger."

LON WHITEMAN IS ALL READY FOR HIS TRIAL AT DANSVILLE

Buffalo, Aug. 12.—Alonzo J. Whiteman of Dansville is at the Lafayette hotel. Being complimented upon his improved appearance since he was here last on trial for forgery, he said:

"Why should I not look better? I play golf and tennis, and live much in the open air."

He said that he was ready for his trial in October, but expressed the opinion that the prosecution ought to be dropped on account of the failure to convict in his last trial.

"We have Horseman Flynn's record all ready for the trial," said Whiteman. "We have certified copies of convictions out West which we lacked before.

"Moreover, we have the word of Handwriting Expert Osborne of Rochester, whom the prosecution relies upon to prove that the check for $2,500 was forged, that it is not in my handwritng. He has told us that he will so testify upon the trial."

Summer Diarrhoea in Children.

During the hot weather of the summer months the first unnatural looseness of a child's bowels should have immediate attention, so as to check the disease before it becomes serious. All that is necessary is a few doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy followed by a dose of castor oil to cleanse the system. Rev. M. O. Stockland, Pastor of the first M. E. Church, Little Falls, Minn., writes: "We have used Chamberlain's Colic, Choelra and Diarrhoea Remedy for several years and find it a very valuable remedy, especially for summer disorders in children." Sold by all leading druggists.

A POLICEMAN.

Dominick McCaffrey, at one time a pugilist of some renown, is now a policeman in Edgewood, a suburb of Pittsburg, says the Kansas City Journal. His pay as a guardian of the peace is the smaller part of his earnings, for in his leisure hours he teaches a boxing class composed of young men and boys resident in the rather aristocratic village named. In his time McCaffrey met such famous fighters as John L. Sullivan and Charlie Mitchell.

LIMITATION FOR MURDER.

There is no punishment in France if the murderer is not discovered and brought to trial within fifteen years. Arnold Weber, who committed a murder twenty-five years ago, has just written defiantly to the police confessing the crime and saying he is about to return to Paris.

TWELVE MORE

Added to List of Homeseekers, Making Sixty-Nine.

Religious Services In Federal Building Corridor Sunday Morning.

At the time of going to press this afternoon twelve more men had joined the waiting list at the land office door today, making in all sixty-seven men and two women, sixty-nine in all who will take part in the filing for land when the Fond du Lac reservation opens on Tuesday morning. They are standing the strain of waiting well, thanks to the system which they have organized among themselves which allows numbers to be issued and permits members of the list to go out and take an airing when they feel the need of it. The system is being adhered to strictly and the feeling among the participants is friendly and everybody seems good-natured. Enough of them stay in the corridor to prevent a rush of positions should any be attempted, but there seems but small chance of any such thing happening. Generally speaking the crowd in the corridor is of a good standard of intelligence and in fact it may be said that there are some more than ordinarily keen men among them. The first comers organized on their present basis and made the scheme of organization practicable and fair, which seems to be generally recognized.

Tomorrow morning religious services will be held in the corridor for the benefit of those who are waiting to file on homes. Rev. James T. Moody, superintendent of the Bethel Branch has agreed to go to the government building and take with him singers and a portable organ so that the homesteaders may join in divine worship regardless of creed. Mr. Moody will preach a sermon and the regular services will be gone through with. The men seem to appreciate this, for, aside from the religious aspect, the services will break the monotony which has grown heavily upon those in line.

The line-up to date follows:

1. E. C. Osborn, Schroeder, Minn., telegraph operator.
2. N. Larson, 1708 Dingwall street, Duluth, carpenter.
3. John Ciocarelli, Cromwell, Wis., stump puller.

A delightful house party is being entertained at Ox Lake, Wis., by Mr. and Mrs. Claus. The guests are Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Swenson and children of St. Paul, T. C. Swenson, Misses Hedda and Freda Anderson, Helmer and Martin Swenson, A. Johnson and Miss Lottie Austin, all of Duluth.

Mr. and Mrs. P. G. Somers of 17 Second avenue east, entertained Tuesday afternoon in honor of their grandson, Master Arthur Gerin of Seattle, who is spending the summer here.

Mrs. W. A. Cragin entertained at cards last evening in hoor of Miss Teresa Fink, who is to become the bride of Joseph A. Roth. The house was prettily decorated with red and white hearts. Those present were: Mesdames Cummings, Grierson of Greenwood, B. C., Smith and Grover, and Misses Anna Roth, Elizabeth Fink, Jeanie Grady, Dolores Fink, Mary Ehling, Mollie Fink, Edward Coates, Nettie Felberger and Augusta Ehling.

A pencil sketch of "Mooney, the best-known newsie of the Northwest," is the center of attraction in the front window of the South Shore road city ticket office today. Mooney is a familiar sight on the streets of Duluth. A. J. Perrin, city ticket agent for the South Shore, was struck with the design of the boy's hat yesterday and took him to a pencil artist, where a lifesize picture was drawn.

KEEFE COMING MONDAY.

Labor Leader Arriving on Steamer Juniata.

Daniel J. Keefe, president of the Marine Workers' association, will arrive on the steamer Juniata on Monday morning and will be here all of Monday and Tuesday, returning to Buffalo on the Juniata on Tuesday night.

Mr. Keefe is probably one of the greatest labor leaders in the movement in the United States. He is considered scarcely second to either Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, or John Mitchell of the miners' organization. Mr. Keefe is a power in labor circles and has great influence with the employer class.

Doubtless some attempt will be made to entertain him while here. It was not known until this morning when he would arrive.

CHATTANOOGA, SEPTEMBER 17-21, 1905

On September, 18, 1905, will occur the forty-second anniversary of the Battle of Chickamauga. It is proposed to celebrate this memorable event with a reunion of the various regiments that participated in this memorable battle, and, in addition, to hold at the same time, a grand reunion of all the regiments that participated in the various battles fought around Chattanooga. This reunion will be held at Chickamauga National Park, September 18, 19 and 20, and the present indications are that it will be the largest and most notable gathering ever held in the South. On the above dates, the remnants from the armies of twelve states, comprising the following: Pennsylvania, Ohio, Michigan, Indiana, Illinois, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa, Nebraska, Missouri, Kansas and Kentucky, will assemble, many for the first time since they marched from its blood-stained fields, forty-five years ago.

Here is one of the great opportunities for the education of the youth. Don't fail to take your children and show them historic Chattanooga, with all its historical connections. It is the opportunity of a lifetime. Go and see the old war generals and other officers point out the places of interest on the battlefield; let them show you and explain, in person, the markers erected on the battlefield showing the positions of the opposing armies at the time of battle. It will not be long until none will be left to do this noble work; take this opportunity and don't let it escape you, it it worth six months in the school room to any student.

It will be many years, if ever again, that such an opportunity will present itself. See that your tickets read via the Louisville & Nashville R. R., the Battlefield Route. Call on your nearest railroad agent for rates and advertising matter pertaining to the reunion, or write nearest representative of the Louisville & Nashville R. R.

WATER USED

Came From John Brown's Spring In Camden County.

Philadelphia, Aug. 12.—The battleship Kansas, which was launched today at the yards of the New York Shipbuilding company in Camden, is a sister ship of the Vermont, now being built at the yards of the Fore River Ship and Engine company, Quincy, Mass. She will have the same armament as the battleship Minnesota, launched several months ago at Newport News.

The keel plates of the Kansas were laid Feb. 10, 1904. She is known as a 450-foot battleship and her contract calls for a maintenance of eighteen knots speed for four consecutive hours. The hull is of steel throughout and is fitted with bilge and docking keels. Her general dimensions are as follows: Length on load water line, 460 feet; extreme beam, 76 feet 5½ inches; to outside of plating, 76 feet 8 inches; extreme beam to outside of plating, 76 feet 10 inches. Her trial displacement will be 15,000 tons and when she goes on her speed test she will carry 900 tons of coal, although her bunker capacity is 2,200 tons. Sixty-six tons of feed water will also be carried on her trial trip. Her trial draft to bottom of keel will be 24 feet 6 inches, bottom of keel to moulded base line 1½ inches.

Her armament will be: Main battery, four 12-inch; eight 8-inch; twelve 7-inch breechloading rifles. Secondary battery, twenty 3-inch (or 14-pounder) rapid-fire guns, 50-caliber in length; twelve 3-pounder semi-automatic guns; six 1-pounder automatics; two 1-pounder semi-automatics; two 3-inch field pieces; two machine guns of .30 caliber and six automatic guns of .30 caliber.

These guns will be amply armor protected and well placed. Mounted in pairs, the 12-inch guns will be placed in the two turrets on the center line, one forward and one aft; the 8-inch guns will also be mounted in pairs in four turrets on the quarter, separated by two-inch nickel, steel splinter bulkheads; the 7-inch guns will be mounted on the gun deck, where six of the 3-inch guns will also be placed, two fore and four aft, while six will be mounted on the main deck in casemate structure, six on the upper deck and two on the bridges.

For her protection the Kansas will have a complete main belt armor, 9 feet 3 inches wide on the water line, having a uniform thickness of 9 inches throughout magazine and machine spaces, tapering to 4 inches at the ends.

Her propelling power will consist of the vertical twin screw, four cylinder, triple expansion type of engine of a combined indicated horse power of 16,500. The ship is provided with an ice plant with a cooling capacity of 3,000 tons of ice per day, an evaporating plant of 16,500 gallons capacity, and a distilling apparatus capable of condensing 10,000 gallons of water a day. She will be equipped with powerful searchlights and her masts arranged for wireless telegraphy.

An unusual feature of the launching was the fact that the vessel was christened with water from John Brown's springs, Camden county, Kansas, instead of the customary bottle of champagne. This was the first time that water instead of wine has been used in launching a vessel in this vicinity. Governor Hoch of Kansas made the suggestion and he made the announcement after the launching that the christening bottle contained only water.

STATE MAY GET MONEY

Governor Calls Auditor's Attention to Claims on Government.

St. Paul, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Governor Johnson has dictated several letters to State Auditor Iverson which may have the effect of swelling the coffers of the state several hundred thousand dollars. In 1863 the state issued $100,000 worth of 7 per cent bonds to cover expenses incident to the suppression of the Indian outbreaks. The principal has been satisfied by the federal government and now correspondence has been started with a view of securing repayment of the interest by the federal government. There is no law authorizing it, but it is believed if the state representatives make an effort the money, which amounts to about $70,000, can be obtained.

Another matter, involving even a greater amount of money, to which Governor Johnson has directed attention, is the 5 per cent due from the sale of Indian lands. Under an agreement with the state the federal government was to pay over to Minnesota 5 per cent accruing from the sale of all federal lands. The sale of Indian lands was never included.

Such receipts are put into the road and bridge fund, and Governor Johnson believes that if the Indian lands were included, the fund would be greatly enhanced.

AUTOIST KISER HURT.

Machine Strikes Fence and Smashes His Leg.

Glenville Race Track, Cleveland, Aug. 12.—In warming up for today's races Earl Kiser, one of the most famous automobile racers in the country ran into the inside fence. He was hurled from his machine, striking on a post. His left leg was reduced to pulp and will have to be amputated. He was otherwise bruised and cut. The car took fire and was partially destroyed. This accident spoiled the free for all races as Kiser was Webb Jay's chief rival.

Kiser had just completed a mile in one minute and five seconds and was trying to pocket another car when he lost control of his machine and it dashed into the fence.

FIVE DEATHS FROM FEVER

Is the Record For New Orleans Up to Noon.

NOON YELLOW FEVER REPORT:

New cases in New Orleans since 6 p. m. Friday	16
Total cases to date	824
Total deaths	138

New Orleans, Aug. 12.—Although there was no change in the general fever situation at New Orleans today, the noon reports showed a slight increase over same hours yesterday in the number of new cases and deaths. August is a critical month when the fever appears early in the summer, yet the small death rate this week is regarded as justifying a recent interview by Dr. White that the present visitation will not reach the proportions of any previous epidemic. The fever continues to be confined to New Orleans and Louisiana, no cases being reported in Alabama or Mississippi. There has been a lessening of quarantine restrictions as regards freight and the running of trains in Louisiana, the detention of passengers instituted by the various localities continues in force.

TO OPPOSE CULLUM.

Some Democrats Want Alderman Tessman to Run.

A meeting of Democrats who are not in accord with the administration of Mayor Cullum was held last evening for the purpose of casting about for a candidate to run against him. The men who were in attendance at the meeting are saying little about it. In fact, no one professes to know anything about it. It is understood that the men interested in the movement are trying to prevail upon Alderman Tessman to be a candidate.

BEDE GETS GUNS

Provided It Will Not Violate Treaty With Great Britain.

Washington, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Representative Bede, this forenoon, called upon Assistant Secretary of the Navy Darling and that official has consented to furnish three six-pound guns for the Fern. The guns he has consented to part with are the same which were on the Fern when assigned for the use of the naval militia of the District of Columbia. There is, however, a string attached to the promise and that is the navy department will cheerfully give guns provided it does not appear to the state department that the mounting such guns upon the Fern the United States is not violating an ancient treaty with Great Britain, the provisions of which are briefly to the effect that neither country shall maintain armed vessels of war on the Great Lakes.

Mr. Bede says this can be avoided, as in some other cases where guns have been allowed for practice purposes of naval militias of other states upon the Great Lakes. In some instances these guns have been given, but are in reality not aboard practice ships, but mounted upon land.

"We will get the guns all right," said the very optimistic Bede, "and mount them on land if necessary, but that is not what our naval militia want. We want the guns actually aboard ship and I will get them there, even if I have to go over to London and ask his majesty, King Edward, to grant consent to this small alleged violation of treaty obligations."

To Restore Our Flag.

The foreign commerce of the United States has grown to over two and one-half billion of dollars annually, yet most of it is carried over the seas under foreign flags. In order to restore our flag to the high seas many prominent business men are advocating the building of several ships for this trade and immediate action is recommended. In order to restore the stomach to its normal condition, to make the liver and kidneys active or to promote sound sleep, doctors and druggists everywhere recommend Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Over fifty years' record is back of every battle, which is a strong reason for giving it a fair trial. It always cures bloating, heartburn, indigestion, dyspepsia, costiveness, poor appetite, cramps, diarrhoea or malaria, fever and ague. Try a bottle today.

JOY IS IN STORE

For Woodland People—Double-truck Service in Few Weeks.

Street Railway Company Getting Ready for New Service.

Woodland people will soon know the "bob-tail" service from Hunter's Park out no more. General Manager Warren of the street railway company says that in two or three weeks more it will be dispensed with and a double truck car service run clear to the end of the Woodland line. The company is even getting ready for this change, which will be an important one for people living in Woodland and for which they have been asking for some time. It will do away with the wait at Hunter's Park for the small car which has been running from Hunter's Park to Woodland, which proved very disagreeable in wet, cold or extraordinarily hot weather.

So far as known there will be no change in the time schedule but it will necessitate the getting of another double track car for the Woodland line, running three instead of two as at present.

The company is at present making preparations for getting the Woodland line ready for the change. Extra feed wires for carrying more power will have to be put in, the track from Hunter's Park out, strengthened, a Y put in at the end of the Woodland line and numerous other details attended to besides the getting of the new car.

The service will be installed in two or three weeks and will fill what the Woodland people have considered their greatest want.

EGAN KEEPS WELL AHEAD OF SAWYER.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—When Chandler Egan appeared at the first tee today to play the morning half of the finals of the great national golf championship with D. E. Sawey of Wheaton, clouds were hovering over the championship links of the Chicago golf club. Rain threatened, but the largest gallery of enthusiasts ever seen on a golf course had assembled to watch the struggle. Many of the best known society belles of the city were in the crowd that followed the play. Bringing up the rear were escorts with umbrellas and rain coats. Egan expects to be successful in defending his title from the golf assaults of his young rival. Last year Egan, on his home course at Exmoor had his first battle with Sawyer, who, after holding down the champion in the 35 hole western championship finals for the first 18 holes, succumbed easily to Egan's wizard like skill in the afternoon, 6 down, 5 to play.

Egan won the sixth and was one up on Sawyer. Egan won seventh, making him 2 up on Sawyer.

Race For Supremacy.

It is interesting to watch the race for supremacy among Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago trains. First place is securely held by the Pioneer Limited and the second place by the Fast Mail. Both trains are entirely owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. There are three other fast trains via this line from the Twin Cities to Chicago every day, and there is no extra fare to ride on them. Address W. B. Dixon, Northwestern passenger agent, St. Paul, for further particulars, lowest rates, etc.

San Francisco and Los Angeles and Return $59.90.

August 6th to 14th inclusive, "The North-Western Line" will sell excursion tickets to San Francisco and Los Angeles, $59.90 for the round trip. City and Depot, foot of Fifth avenue west.

MANY SHOE LACES.

"Some of the apparently most trivial things in this world are the most necessary things, and fortunes are made in manufacturing them," said Ralph L. Jenkins in the Milwaukee Sentinal.

"Take the lace eyes of shoes, for instance. The average person never gives them a thought, but they are indispensable to our footwear, and there are factories that devote themselves exclusively to making them. Did you ever stop to think how many of those little things are used every year?

"On the basis of the population of the United States being 80,000,000, this country uses more than 3,000,000,000 of lace eyes and hooks every year. Every man, woman and child will wear out on an average two pairs of shoes in twelve months. The majority of people have two feet, and there are twenty eyes and hooks in each shoe. Use your arithmetic and see what the total is. It foots up to 4,000,000 more than 6,000,000,000."

JOKES ON BILLY.

When Billy Lee, private secretary to Charities Commissioner James H. Tully, and the star of the East Side, was married to a niece of Charles F. Murphy the other night, the Association of Billy Lee Victims concluded that the occasion was propitious, says the New York Sun.

The ceremony was just starting when the dead wagon from the morgue drove up. The driver pounded loudly on the door, and presented an order for the bodies of Mr. and Mrs. William J. Lee, supposed to have died from gas poisoning. When the driver was finally shooed away he carried a box of cigars.

A few minutes later a Bellevue ambulance clanged up to the house, and an eager surgeon asked where he could find the patient suffering with alcoholic delirium. He was told that the patient had revived, and was considerably worked up until he also got a box of cigars.

The bride and bridegroom were receiving congratulations when the reserves of the East Twenty-second street station burst into the house, and asked who had turned in a riot call. Explanations were offered, also other things, and the policemen went back to bed, not entirely appreciating the joke. The fire department was also expected, but the man who had promised to turn in the alarm got cold feet.

NANSEN IS ATHLETIC.

The greatest and most successful Arctic explorer in modern days, Fridtjof Nansen, has been visiting England, says the Kansas City Star. Nansen is said to be a splendid looking man. Over six feet tall, he is that rare thing—a scientist who is also an athlete. He wears his fair hair tossed vikingwise, back from his forehead. Nansen has many close friends in England and he and his beautiful, gifted wife—she is one of the most successful of Swedish singers—often entertain English travelers in their delightful house on the Christiana fjord.

YOUNG MAN'S GOOD FORTUNE

Harry Rasmussen of Crookston Inherits $5,000.

Crookston, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Harry Rasmussen, a humble circumstanced young man of this city, as one of the beneficiaries in the will of the late Halvor Peterson, the eccentric Cashton, Wis., capitalist, will receive, upon the 15th of this month, $5,000. The news of the young man's good fortune arrived some time ago, while he was employed in the railroad camps of the Soo as timekeeper. He arrived in the city this week, and is here visiting friends while awaiting the arrival of the large sum of money, which comes as unexpectedly as a bolt from the sky.

"Harry," as Mr. Rasmussen is generally known about this city, has not seen his grandfather and benefactor in ten years, and the fact that he was remembered in the old gentleman's will is astounding to him. The estate left by the old gentleman, who was Mr. Rasmussen's mother's father, is valued at some $200,000, and a score of heirs come in for a division of the property, the nearest of kin, sons and daughters of the deceased, receiving the greatest bulk, and the sons and daughters of sons and daughters coming next. The recipient of the sudden wealth has been a resident of Crookston for quite a number of years, and is popular and well known here. He has been engaged as hotel clerk and at various clerical positions during recent years.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Convinced that from 92 to 96 per cent of the stations on the Great Northern and Northern Pacific railroads in Minnesota are open and that the rest will be opened in two or three days, the state railroad and warehouse commission has decided not to intervene in the telegraphers' strike on these two railroads.

After a consultation with the president, Secretary Bonaparte announces that the formal exercises accompanying the interment of the body of John Paul Jones in the United States will be held next spring at which time, it is understood a French squadron will be sent to this country to participate in the ceremonies.

After a day of the most sensational golf ever seen in a national tournament, Champion H. Chandler Egan and D. E. Sawyer, also a Chicagoan, survive to play the finals over 36 holes at the Wheaton links Saturday. The East for the first time since the national golf championship was instituted ten years ago, was without representation in the semi-finals.

According to a report received at the navy department, ships of the North Atlantic fleet have communicated with one another by wireless telegraph at a distance of about 262 miles. This is announced to be the greatest distance at which wireless messages have been sent from ship to ship in the navy.

PEORIA PEOPLE RECEIVE SHOCK

Over Developments Resulting From Death of Edward Drouin.

Peoria, Ill., Aug. 12.—It has been years since Peoria society has suffered such a shock as that produced by the development in the inquest over the death of Edward Drouin. Mrs. Drouin is incarcerated in the county jail, violently agitated and seemingly deranged. The interior of their Fisher street home, is filled with furniture of the strangest character, and the walls are covered with facsimile reproductions of the "Coat of Arms" adopted by Drouin and his wife. For some time he had posed as "King of the World," and his wife as "Empress of the Universe."

With an energy almost inconceivable, Mrs. Drouin spent hours of each day writing letters to prominent people in this city, warning them of attempts on their lives and asserting that a band of people were threatening the extermination of the populace by turning on the "Electric Fluid."

All efforts to investigate were frustrated by the vigilance of the wife. When searched, their apartments were found to contain vast quantities of mineral and medicinal water, designed to destroy the efforts of the people with the "Electric Fluid."

GREAT RACE IS EXPECTED

Saratoga, Aug. 12.—In the second and probably last running of the Great Republic $50,000 stake here this afternoon, the long-looked for race between the great 3-year-old colts, Sysonby and Oiseau is expected to take place. However, if the track is at all muddy, Sysonby may be scratched, and James R. Keene will depend on Wild Mint in the struggle for the rich prize.

The Great Republic is not exclusively for 3-year-olds, but there has been so much discussion on the Eastern turf as to the respective merits of the English-bred Keene colt and Oiseau, bred in Tennessee, that the interest in today's race centers on these two to the exclusion of Wild Mint, Broomstick, Prince Hamburg and Daniel's Son, composing the balance of the field. Should the track be heavy, Oiseau's chances will be much enhanced, as the Brady colt is perfectly at home in heavy going. Prince Hamburg will bear the Whitney colors, but the stable connections said last night that they were only starting him in the hope of winning third money. Capt. Brown's Broomstick is only a shadow of his former self and with 126 pounds on his back, is not expected to cut much ice.

In the over-night betting Sysonby was favorite at 1 to 2 with 4 to 1 laid against Oiseau. Liberal odds prevailed against the others for they were considered by the layers as far outclassed. One of the greatest crowds in the history of the Saratoga races has arrived to witness the races today. Every hotel on Broadway is jammed to the doors and hundreds, unable to obtain rooms, spent the night on cots in the hallways.

ADMIRALTY CASE MONDAY.

Damages Asked For Injuries to Steamer Gawn.

As a result of the sinking of the lumber hooker Thomas Gawn on Nov. 9, 1903, at which time she was being towed by the John Harper, the libel case filed by the owners of the Gawn against the Gilchrist Transportation company, which owned the Harper, will come before Judge Morris in United States admiralty court on Monday. H. R. Spencer will represent the libellants and John H. Norton and A. J. Gilchrist will represent the Gilchrist interests.

It is claimed that on the night in question the wind was blowing about forty miles an hour and the air was thick with snow. The Harper, which was towing the Gawn at the end of a 150-foot hawser, attempted to negotiate the harbor with her tow in the teeth of the gale, with the result that the Gawn crashed into the south pier, had to be quickly gotten hold of by tugs and beached inside of the harbor to prevent her from sinking. The libellants claim that they had to spend $2,518.49 on the Gawn to get her into commission again.

WOULD END LIFE.

Crookston Young Man Arrested to Prevent Suicide.

Crookston, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Frank Richmond, well known in this city and the principal figure in a justice court some time ago, was arrested at the Brosseau hotel for making threats to do away with himself, and when searched at the lockup was found to have on his person a bottle of prussic acid, purchased at a Crookston drug store, a few drops of which would have killed him almost instantly. When arrested by the police Richmond was in a morose condition and evidently gave little thought of what was to come in the future. He was placed in jail and the officers later in the night barely arrived in time to prevent him from hanging himself to the steel chains which hang up the upper cots at the station.

At his hearing Richmond declared himself not guilty of "attempting to commit suicide" and the hearing was adjourned until 4 o'clock in order to enable witnesses to be present. Richmond, it is believed, has been the victim of a love affair and is despondent over the outcome. He told several of his friends that he "would end it all" and it was at the suggestion of one of his confidant that the police interfered.

FITZ IS BACK IN THE RING

Hero of Many Hard Battles Refuses to Retire.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—The strain has been too much for old Bob Fitzsimmons. He has remained out of the game for nearly two months without having a fight in sight and that was as long as he could stand it. It was generally supposed that when he left for Paris shortly after his proposed fight with Mike Schreck failed materialize, that the ancient one would be gone for at least a year. But, suddenly Bob returned last Saturday, and now he is arranging to fight Marvin Hart. The fight, which is now looked upon as almost certain, will take place in California some time in September. Aleck Greggains, of San Francisco, is responible for it.

Just how good Fitzsimmons is at present has been something of a mooted question since he so abruptly called off his affair with Schreck. At that time there was a good deal of talk to the effect that Fitz had found himself unable to stand training and had taken this step to save being beaten by a man seemingly far inferior to him as a figter.

It is well known that in recent years Bob's hands have become badly battered and have given him a good deal of trouble. He pounded them to a frazzle against big Jeffries' thick skull in their last battle and the old boy has always maintained that his hands going back on him did more to beat him than Jeffries did.

However, Fitzsimmons has had a long rest and is probably in pretty fair shape at the present time. The old man had always been noted as a clever matchmaker and he probably knows what he is doing in hooking up with Hart. Bob wants that championship back and with Jeffries out of the game, he thinks he sees a royal chance to get it. It is certain that if the two men meet, the veteran will carry a lot of money, wise and otherwise.

HINTS ON SWIMMING.

Begin Early—How to Behave In Deep Water.

"At this time of the year plant onions," says the old almanic, and "at this time of the year learn how to swim," says the swimming teacher. They used to say that the best way to teach a boy—or a girl for that matter—how to swim was to just throw him, or her, off the pier. That may be all right, but the boy might drown and the coroner might be inquisitive. It is cheaper to get instructions in the regular way—and there is a good deal more fun in it, according to the Brooklyn Eagle. Besides, when a boy knows how to swim it rests his mother's mind to a great extent, for she is perfectly aware of the fact that he is going in the water anyhow—swim or no swim. Some of us may recall that note of warning sounded by the anxious mother who cried to her hopeful heir: "Johnnie, don't you never go into no water till you know how to swim," and, of course, we all remember the even more cautious maternal guardian and her pleading feminine descendant, who warbled:

"Mother, may I go out to swim?"
"Oh, yes, my darling daughter.
But hang your clothes on a hickory limb
And don't go near the water."

But that is neither here nor there. The point is this: If you go into one of the swimming schools in Brooklyn or Manhattan these days you will see instructors teaching the youthful minds, not how to shoot, but how to grasp the swimming proposition. And you will not only find young men and young women paddling about in the big tanks, but you will also find old men and—well, yes, old women too, and some of them can swim like eels. Why, not long ago a grandmother went to a Brooklyn swimming school leading her little grandson in knickerbockers by the hand.

"I want you to teach Tommy how to swim," she said to the instructor.

And Tommy was soon in the tub blubbering and sputtering like a spit automobile horn, but after a while he liked it, and in a few weeks could swim as well as any of them. In the meantime, however, grandma, who went there every day to watch him, became enthusiastic in the sport, and although she is 60, she took a dip herself and now is one of the champion swimmers in the school.

You can see all sorts of characters at the swimming class. The fat man probably gets as much enjoyment out of it as anybady. He works harder while he is in the water, but he is just as cool when he comes out as the proverbial shade-made lemonade. The thin man, under the delusion that swimming will make him fat, usually overplays the game, and it is necessary to frequently warn him that it is time to quit. Of course, the young women have a splendid time when they attend the morning lessons. There is such a nice chance to feel so comfortable, you know, and indulge in a little gossip at the same time. The latest method of teaching one how to swim is by the "trolley" system. It isn't exactly rapid transit, but that depends a good deal how apt the pupil proves to be in mastering the principles. The process when in full operation looks as if the instructor were a fisherman, and had just hooked a big fish. In reality the apparatus consists only of a stout cord run over a sliding pulley on a wire above the tank. At the water end the pupil is attached by a sling around the chest. He is thus held in the proper position and learns the strokes at the same time, being perfectly confident that he will not sink. After he has been practicing for several lessons, the instructor eases off the line, and the first thing the pupil knows he is swimming without any support whatever. Then the fisherman grins and remarks:

"Say, you are swimming, boy."

Among the thousands of bathers that one sees at the beaches about New York it is not likely that more than 10 per cent are actually good swimmers. The great number of lives lost on the steamer General Slocum would indicate that the percentage was even lower than this. Even among expert swimmers there is a good deal of bungling. The average swimmer who goes in from a small boat into deep water usually dives from the side of the boat, thereby running the risk of an upset; whereas if he would dive from the stern there would be no danger at all. Nearly every swimmer swallows considerable water. This may be avoided to a great extent if the breathing is correct. One should never inhale in commencing a stroke, but when the arms are reaching backward and the stroke is nearly finished, a deep breath should be taken. A good thing to remember is that cramp may be overcome when far from assistance if prompt action is taken. The trouble generally is that when seized with cramp one loses one's presence of mind. The first thing to remember is to get to shore as soon as possible. If the cramp should be in the legs one should swim with the hands. If the hands are afflicted, lie on the back and use the legs. When the leg or the arm is afflicted it should be moved as rapidly as possible, no matter how painful the operation may be. Cramp generally is a result of indigestion, and for this reason one should never go into the water soon after eating. Another thing that all swimmers should learn is to undress in the water, so, if they accidentally fall overboard they may not be hampered with clothing. It requires a great deal of practice to do this, but the art may be learned. The coat may be taken off when treading water, and other parts of the clothing may be taken off while one floats or swims on the back. Of course there are many other things that one may learn to do in the water, and several of them will come to one naturally as he becomes more and more accustomed to swimming.

ASHAMED TO DIE.

The late Bishop Peck of the Methodist Episcopal church enjoyed good living, as his massive frame and 300 pounds indicated, says the Boston Herald. While presiding at a session of the New Hampshire conference he was entertained by a Mrs. Brown, who had a high reputation as a cook. She prided herself especially upon her mince pies.

It was at the supper table, and the bishop had done ample justice to a generous slice of the tempting pastry. He was urged to have a second piece, but refused, as he was to make the chief address of the week that evening. Mrs. Brown insisted with feminine persuasiveness, contending that whatever other mince pies might be, hers, at least, were harmless. The distinguished guest yielded at last, till not only a second, but a third equally large portion of the pie had disappeared.

Evening came, and with it a congregation which packed the large churcht to the doors, to listen to the able divine. The hour for service arrived, but the bishop had not appeared. The elders looked anxious. The choir sang, and the preliminary services were well started, when two or three of the brethren went out to look for the absent speaker. They found him at Mrs. Brown's writhing in the agonies of a severe illness, resulting from his indiscretion at the table. As the faithful ministers saw their beloved bishop lying on his bed and groaning with pain, one of them said:

"Why, bishop, you are not afraid to die, are you?"

"No," replied the sufferer. "I am not afraid to die, but I am ashamed to."

CHARLES DICKENS.

One does not read in the literary journals how many volumes of Dickens' novels are sold every year, though they contain much information about the thousands of copies that are sold of "The Foolish Kingdom; or How Billy Jones Swiped the Throne of Noplace." But just the same, people are reading Dickens, old people and young people, and more copies of his books are being sold than there were during the life of the author.

It has been rather the fashion to make light of Dickens; to say that his sentiment is mawkish; that his heroines are wooden and lifeless; that his characters are caricatures; that he is out of date; and that "nobody reads Dickens nowadays." But just the same the ever-fresh and ever-wholesome humor of his novels, the manliness of his heroes, the sweetness of his heroines, the despicability of his villains and the tenderness and kindliness of his Captain Cuttles, his Pickwicks and his John Jarndyces are still appealing to more thousands than there are hundreds reading the works of any other writer of fiction.

Dickens has been dead thirty-five years, yet reports from librarians and booksellers show that he is read more extensively now than he ever was in his lifetime. Not only that, but his "David Copperfield," in which he put so much of himself because it was in a large measure biographical, is the most popular novel ever published. Rev. H. C. Monser, a minister of the Christian church in Illinois, has put in three years in an effort to discover the three most popular novels in the world, his idea being to deliver lectures on the subject. He consulted the records of booksellers and libraries, and used every possible means of ascertaining what he sought. His researches covered not only this country but England, France, Germany and other foreign countries.

His figures show a difference of many thousands between the three leading novels and all others. "David Copperfield" came first, as the most popular novel ever published. Harriet Beecher Stowe's "Uncle Tom's Cabin," in spite of its prejudice and unfairness which barred it from a large portion of this country, came second. Third was Gen. Lew Wallace's magnificent novel, "Ben Hur."

Strong and deep flows the stream of humanity through these three novels. Human passions, human emotions, love, hate, loyalty, treachery, every experience of humanity can be found in them, and that is the secret of their popularity, that and their truth. The gamut of human character is run in "Copperfield;" the tragedy of a race enslaved and debased, with the lights and shadows of its slavery, form the thread of "Uncle Tom's Cabin;" while the greatest tragedy in all time, the sacrifice of a Christ for the redemption of mankind, is the theme of "Ben Hur." There are faults in all of them, faults that carping, flaw-picking mediocrity will discover in a moment. Hundreds of novels have been published that were more faultless. But none have been published that appealed more to humanity, because they tell of humanity simply and truthfully. Man is still the thing of greatest interest to man.

A NOTABLE SPEECH.

The Monroe doctrine means protection of weaker American countries as much from efforts to aggrandize the United States as from efforts to aggrandize foreign countries.

This country's might will be exerted only for the good of itself and its weaker neighbors, and only to the extent absolutely demanded by our self-respect.

No just and orderly government on this continent has anything to fear from us.

These are the salient points of President Roosevelt's speech at Chautauqua yesterday, and they form the most concrete, common-sense and up-to-date expression of the Monroe doctrine on record. Therefore the talk was highly important, sounding as it does the keynote of the administration on this vastly important subject, that all who have interest therein may hear and heed. The Monroe doctrine is law because we have the power to enforce it, and so long as we have that power no foreign power may attempt colonization or self-aggrandizement by improper encroachments upon the soil of the American continent. Yet that does not mean that we shall protect weaker American countries in iniquitous procedures against other nations or ourselves. It is a sort of "big brother" attitude, which means that while we will not interfere between Johnny and his "needin's" if he deserves punishment, it must stop there, and there shall be no bullying.

The president rightly said that we cannot permanently adhere to the Monroe doctrine unless we make it clear to all that we do not intend to make it serve to aggrandize ourselves at the expense of the republics south of us; that we do not intend to let any of these republics use it as a shield to protect them from the consequence of their own misdeeds; and that as we prevent other nations from interfering, we must in good faith try to help our sister republics upward toward peace and order when they need such help.

Not less important in the large, and much more important to the people's more direct interests, were the president's declarations upon the subject of federal control of corporations doing an interstate business. If the arm of the government is to be made effective in preventing wrongs from this source, it must be equipped with suitable legislation to give it power. To the corporations he extends a fair warning that the course they are pursuing will tend to arouse the people to an extent that will react harmfully upon the large interests. They must not kill the goose that lays the golden egg.

Further, it is impossible longer to show leniency toward such offenders as some of the beef trust officers now under indictment. They have gone too far, these and others, and it will be well for them to heed the president's warning. He summed up much of his talk on this subject in these words:

> "Either they will have to submit to reasonable supervision and regulation by the national authorities, or else they will ultimately have to submit to governmental action of a far more drastic type."

MR. BEDE'S PLAN.

Congressman Bede's plan for eliminating the disadvantages caused by the government dams on the upper Mississippi river, which he submitted to the war department the other day, is worthy of consideration, though there appear to be several difficulties in the way of putting it into practice.

He proposes to have the government turn these dams over to the state of Minnesota, which would in that event manipulate them to the advantage of its people instead of to their disadvantage. He believes the state could buy or lease them from the government, and by handling them itself could not only protect the settlers of the Mississippi valley from floods but could arrange to develop water power from them and rent this power to manufacturers.

State control, if it could be brought about, would probably result in better things for the people concerned than government control. Government control is based on a wider view of things, which has in the past involved some inconveniences and often, as this year, downright losses to the settlers. Besides, as Mr. Bede says, the engineers in charge of the dam are changed, and the succeeding engineers have new ideas which they put in practice and develop new inconveniences to the public.

The trouble would come, even under state control, in separating the interests of the people down the river, who want to keep the river levels as high as possible in order that they may get the maximum of power and navigation, and those of the people up the river, who do not care so much about navigation, but who do want to run their mills and prevent their farms being flooded. Northern Minnesota has had to fight for everything it got from Southern Minnesota, and there is no reason to believe it would be otherwise if the state controlled the dams. Besides, Northern Minnesota must ask the state for many things at the next session of the legislature. It wants money for drainage, it wants money for roads, and it wants a more liberal land policy and money to advertise the lands of Northern Minnesota. With all these necessary things to ask for, it is questionable whether the legislature could be induced to grant them all and at the same time to appropriate money to buy or lease and care for these dams.

But something needs to be done. The dams should not be destroyed, but either through a change in the government's policy regarding them or through state control, the dams must be managed so as to be more helpful to Northern Minnesota.

THE MOSQUITO'S INDICTMENT.

The scientific world seems to have accepted the theory that the spread of yellow fever is due to the work of a particular species of mosquito, which bites a sufferer and carries the germs on to another victim. The unscientific public has no recourse but to accept the theory, too, even though some of its members may do it reluctantly. Scientists say that yellow fever is communicated solely in this way, and that the mosquito is a prolific source of malaria also.

If these claims are true, why is it not likely that this energetic and annoying little insect is the means of carrying many other diseases as well? Sir Patrick Manson, the British authority on the causes of disease, says it is and condemns it for carrying on a widespread work of death-dealing. And if it is true that these diseases and many others are spread by mosquitoes, is it not also true that it is a comparatively simple thing to eliminate the mosquitoes?

Even if they carried no diseases at all, and the ideas of the physicians were merely ingenious and interesting theories, there are plenty of reasons why it would not be a bad thing to eliminate the mosquito from human haunts. At the very best, granting him immunity from such charges, he is a nuisance, and one that everybody would be willing to drive out.

It is a difficult task, to be sure, but if everybody worked as hard to drive out the mosquito everywhere as they are working in New Orleans, where they believe him to be guilty of spreading the yellow fever, he would have but short shrift, even with his remarkable agility and incredible powers of procreation.

THE WATER PROBLEM.

It is only occasionally that the people of Duluth appreciate the blessing of ample pure water, which they enjoy as few people in this country do. Usually such times are only when they go away to some other city, where the problem of drinking water is attended by unlimited vexation, danger and expense. In many cities, after immense sums have been spent, the water is still full of fever germs and totally unfit for human consumption.

The Los Angeles Times tells what that city has had to do to get pure water. The city has just secured title to 30,000 inches of pure mountain water, which it will have to bring over a distance of 240 miles. This will cost, it is estimated, about $23,000,000, but pure drinking water must be had, and the city is not grudging this expense, though it means a long period of indebtedness and interest-paying, and a formidable task of engineering and financiering.

An aqueduct will have to be constructed from this mountain reservoir, 240 miles away, to Los Angeles, and about thirty miles of the distance will have to be tunnelled. The fact that gravity will carry the water all the way to Los Angeles will greatly assist in the engineering work, but even with this advantage it looks like a tremendous undertaking, and it is. But even if it cost twice that and had to be brought twice as far and through twice as many difficulties, it would not be extravagance to pay the price, for no sum of money can compensate for the dangers and disadvantages of an inadequate and impure water supply.

Duluth went eight miles and spent within $3,000,000, but she got an unlimited supply of the finest and purest water on earth, water that is like the air the people breath, empty of impurity and full of health and strength. It is an advantage that hundreds of cities in this country would envy, and they would gladly pay many times what Duluth has paid to get the same grade and quantity of water.

THE HERALD'S EXCURSIONS.

The people are having a rare opportunity for outings in the excursions offered by The Herald every Monday, through which, for half the usual price, a delightful trip may be had on the steamer Newsboy up to Fond du Lac and back, with ample time for the luxury of a picnic lunch and pleasant rambles through the sylvan beauties of this famous old suburb up the river. That the opportunity is appreciated is made evident by the crowds that attend each Monday excursion.

Tuesday afternoon a new feature will be introduced, when for the same price there will be an excursion on the steamer America, leaving Booth's dock at 4 o'clock p. m., taking a 30-mile cruise down the lake, and returning by moonlight to reach Duluth at 9 p. m. The excursions are given that everybody may afford to take these delightful outings at a nominal price.

LAWYER IN JAIL.

People are inquiring why there are so many lawyers in jail. The answer is—and it is not intended as a reflection upon the legal fraternity at large—that it is because they belong there, and that the people are beginning to find it out.

That must not be construed to mean that all lawyers belong there, because it does not. The vast majority of them are as enlightened, honest and reliable as the doctors and preachers. But there are scapegraces, black sheep in the legal fraternity, as in all fraternities and professions; more in the legal profession than in the others because there is more opportunity and more temptation.

The question of whether conditions argue a marked moral deterioration in the legal profession is a serious one, and one that some lawyers are answering in the affirmative. In these days of vast financial irregularities, when gigantic schemes of robbery are steered through, just barely grazing the shoals of the law, it is a lawyer who is generally to be found at the helm. He knows the course; he knows just how close to the rocks the business craft may go without being wrecked; he knows the twists and turns it is necessary to take to get the shortest cut to riches without imperiling the safety of the craft.

They are doing this unworthy piloting because they get large pay for it. There has been a craze for getting something for nothing throughout the fabric of society, and as all processes that have this result are looked upon by the law with suspicion, the promoters have need of legal advice that will keep them safely away from the grand jury, while getting as much as possible for as little as possible. So they employ brainy lawyers.

In the county of New York there are sixteen lawyers under indictment, and during 1905 there have been registered on the books of the jails 193 lawyers. There has never been a time before when these figures were approached. Most of the lawyers so situated are pettifoggers, no doubt; some of them have been leaders in their profession. They have prostituted their high office to the purposes of graft, and now they are paying the penalty.

The legal profession is a high and noble calling, but it seems to be suffering from the unworthy ideals of some of its followers.

Hotel Gossip.

"Persistence most generally puts a man where he wants to be, provided there is any possibility at all of his getting there when he starts out," said P. J. Nangle of Milwakee at the St. Louis. "I saw this fact demonstrated in very short time at the St. Paul union depot the other day.

"A man stood talking to a girl, the couple standing fifteen feet from the rear end of the train which he evidently desired to catch. So intent was the man in his conversation that he failed to note that the train was moving slowly away, and it was bout thirty feet from him before he realized that it had started. Without saying a word to his companion he dashed away, but had only begun to get well into motion when his hat blew off and he was delayed in picking it up. Again he obtained a good start, but this time his suit case opened, and another delay resulted in picking up the contents, which were scattered over the platform. And all the time the departing train was increasing in speed.

"But the young fellow was game, and after putting his suit case to rights, dashed away again. This time he looked like a sure winner, but again misfortune met him. This time he fell over a gas hose, and rolled over on the planking. Once more he gained his feet and, after a sharp sprint, finally landed on the rear platform of the last car. The girl laughed and clapped her hands, and the people cheered their appreciation of his gameness."

"It was the first time I was ever in a train wreck," said F. T. Harris of Chicago at the St. Louis, speaking of the Santa Fe train wreck of recent date at Lamont, Ill. "I was in the rear sleeper and escaped injury. I was awakened by about twenty successive stops of the train, as it seemed to me. I had gone to bed and was sleeping soundly, but, of course, the first of the jolts awakened me. Finally the thing came to a stop. I got out in time to see the wrecked train at its worst. All the people in our car were badly scared, but I was too much dazed to realize fully just what had taken place.

"The women climbed out as best they could, in their night apparel, and finally we were gotten together and sent back to Chicago. They then made up a train early in the morning and sent us through on the same line. The wreck seemed to have been caused by the breaking of a truck on the smoker. Another theory is that the rails spread. Anyway, the body of the smoker was wrenched loose and scooted over the trucks about 200 feet. The three forward cars left the track and were pretty badly piled up."

"I don't know as I ever saw crop conditions looking better than they do now," said R. D. Peavey of Fargo at the Lenox. "The reports of bumper crops have in no-wise been exaggerated. The western farmers will be busy this year. They will be able to buy automobiles, and still have enough left to build a new house or barn with.

"All this is going to help out the cities, particularly Duluth and Minneapolis, and St. Paul. These three towns are commercial rivals in the wheat belt, and there is sharp competition between their travelling men. All three have some fine wholesale houses, and all seem to holding their own pretty well. Some of the Duluth wholesale houses have excellent reputations through our part of the country, and they are working hard to get a firm foothold in the towns along the new lines of railroad. All the houses start in on an equal basis in these new towns. With the old ones it is somewhat different, for the older wholesalers were many of them established there before the more recently built houses were in existence."

A girl has to be awful innocent not to think she needs to look it when she comes in from a dark piazza with a man.

It is a lot of fun watching a man who has theories about raising a family try to get back on earth after he has one of his own.

It is just like a fool doctor to recommend exercise for a man who is suffering from spending all his nights walking with the baby to keep it quiet.

With Apologies.

Twenty-two Years Ago

Married, on Aug. 2, at the residence of Rev. D. E. Wells of Minneapolis, Timothy Donovan of Thomson to Miss Mary E. Stewart of Duluth.

The store at present occupied by Miller & Sproat will be opened as a drug store by a Mr. Wilson of Wisconsin as soon as the present stock of crockery is sold out.

The Turf Exchange saloon in the Beckman block has been sold to Mr. Burlingame. The late proprietor, Mr. Granger, had some liabilities to meet, and the sale was inevitable.

Jaykron Walsh, brother of the boilermakers, who has been sick for some time, has been adjudged insane by Judge of Probate Dumphy, and has been sent to the state asylum at St. Peter.

The earnings of the St. Paul & Duluth for the first week in August were $31,939.81, against $23,237.41 for the same week in 1882, making an increase of $8,701.40.

N. B. Conger, the United States weather sergeant at this station for the last two years or more has sent in his resignation, and will leave about the last of this month for Columbus, S. C., where he talks of going into the ice business.

John Flynn, of the popular dry goods house of Flynn Bros. & Co., was married last Wednesday at Salamanca, N. Y., to Miss Helen M. Barker. They are now on their wedding tour, and will arrive here about the first of next month.

Mrs. E. A. McNair's infant child died, yesterday, and grave fears are entertained that Mrs. McNair will not recover from her illness.

Land office receipts so far this month amount to $5,500.

A. Finlander named William Johnson, who works at Gray's mill, attempted to board a passing train. He missed his hold and fell, one of the car wheels passing over his right foot, cutting off four toes. He was put on board the car and taken to Rice's Point, where he resides.

The David Dows brought in a larger cargo of coal than usual this time, in fact the longest ever brought into this port, 2,193 tons.

The Weather.

The showers the weather man predicted for last night scattered all their force on the way somewhere, and though they presented quite a threatening front and blustered and bragged and bluffed with gusts of tempestuous breeze, when they developed they amounted only to a few faint drops of rain, which quickly ceased. Then the moon came out in royal splendor and the night turned into a glorious pageant of imperial beauty to celebrate Luna's passage across a heaven strewn with jewels.

For these are moonlit nights of rare beauty, when it is a privilege beyond price to be able to sit out of doors or to stroll down to the lake and sit on the beach in sentimental appreciation of the beauties of living. Though days be warm, the nights are epochs in human experience long to be remembered.

This morning was the starting of a real summer day, when mellow sun rays struggled playfully with cool breezes and uncommonly beautiful conditions were born of their union.

Cooler weather is looked for tonight, according to the weather man, and it will be partly cloudy tonight and Sunday, with possibly light showers. The winds will be easterly and fresh.

High temperatures prevail from the Mississippi valley eastward. Showers fell during Friday or last night over the Ohio valley, Atlantic and gulf states, Lakes Superior and Michigan, the upper Missouri valley and portions of the Southwest. In the lake region the winds are fresh westerly with mostly cloudy weather. The barometer is low over Arizona, Alberta and Lake Huron

Following were the highest temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Sunday: Wisconsin—Fair tonight and Sunday; cooler tonight.

Minnesota—Fair tonight and Sunday; cooler in east portion tonight.

The Dakotas—Fair in North Dakota, local rains in South Dakota tonight and Sunday.

MIRTHFUL REMARKS.

"No wonder, dear," replied Juno, sweetly, "you had too much nectar last night."

Philadelphia Press: Mrs. Chatters—You don't seem to consider my opinions valuable.

Mr. Chatters—My dear, I consider them so valuable that it shocks me to see you giving them out so promiscuously.

Washington Star: "Of co'se," said Uncle Eben, "de trusts is wrong. But a whole lot of folks wouldn' be satisfied wif a trust unless it come around ev'y day an' presented 'em wif money."

Brooklyn Eagle: The Moralist—There is always room at the top.

The Philosopher—Yes, but you've got to push the other fellow off.

Philadelphia Press: "Miss Roxley," said the foxy fortune hunter, "will you not deign to love me; to marry me?"

"That's a good deal to expect, Mr. Hunter," replied the homely heiress, coyly.

"Yes," remarked he, thoughtlessly, "it will be a good deal if it works."

Detroit Free Press: "Do you think five languages are enough to take me all over the world?" inquired the lady.

"Yes," replied the passenger agent, provided you have the wherewithal to buy the tickets."

Chicago Tribune: "I suppose, Willie, when you are a man you are going to be an auctioneer, like your papa," remarked the caller.

"I expect to be an auctioneer," said the little boy with the large head, "but not one like father. He has neither the vocabulary nor the faculty of unique and original expression that a man in his vocation should possess."

A Mean Trick.

New York Tribune: The bridge at Bayonne, where lovers are said to kiss, is to be brilliantly illuminated. Next there will probably be a proposal to light all "Lovers' Lanes" with electricity. And still people keep on quoting Emerson's remark about all mankind loving a lover!

Always Something Lacking.

Life: Love is like a waltz. It never quite fulfills all one expects of it. Either the man's lead is too fast or too slow—his hold too tight or too loose—he stumbles over your gown or steps on your feet, and if everything else is right it is the wrong man.

SATURDAY NIGHT TALK

This Next Week's Friendliness

I like the grand old Saxon word friendliness. It carries with it the savor of all things sweet and gracious. It stands for that delicate touch of life upon life whereby the sorrow and woe of the world are assuaged and men are lifted into nobleness. I know two young children whose one criterion of strangers—be they of the human or of the brute creation, is: "Are they friendly?" That is the first thing they want to find out about a new acquaintance and other considerations take a subordinate place.

How many persons lack just this crowning virtue! They won't lie or steal. But you would never think of going to them with your burden, and it is difficult to imagine them interesting themselves in other persons when such interest involves any sacrifice of time or ease. And we know other persons like the late Prof. Henry Drummond, for instance, whose very presence radiates friendliness. It distills from the tips of their fingers; it sounds in the tones of their voices; it seems to be the atmosphere by which they they are constantly surrounded.

The trouble with non-friendly people is not antipathy to their kind, but they have walled themselves away from their followmen, and in doing so they have not only stopped the flow of good will from outsiders into their own lives, but they have dammed the stream of kindness that might otherwise issue from them for the refreshment of others. You cannot get within a thousand miles of the inmost lives of these persons. Even with a smiling exterior they constantly disappoint you and frequently irritate you, for you know if you could only once get at them their virtue would do you good. But the citadel of their hearts can only be carried by a long and vigorous assault. You must cross the drawbridge and batter down a number of heavy doors before you can really get at them.

But friendliness is outgoing and outreaching. It does not dwell behind barred gates. Neither is it officious or inquisitive. It is simply the effluence of a spirit sensitive to the needs of men, eager to give help and sympathy. A minister's wife was commended to me the other day as possessing in a rare degree this quality. "She is not such a master hand at prayer meetings," said my informant, "but she does carry on her heart the Christian welfare of every person in the parish."

The summer season offers us rare and abundant opportunities for friendliness as we travel or tarry at resorts or visit our friends or receive visits from them. What is our attitude during the hot weather? Is it one of hauteur and of distance from our kind, of constant criticism and fault-finding, or is it the friendly attitude which leads us, without being asked, to make a seat in the car for someone else, to offer a cup of cold water, both literally and spiritually, to talk with that shy young shop girl who has just come to the boarding house for her two weeks' vacation, to invite her to join our happy social coterie, and in other ways to add to the delight of her all too brief vacation?

What a change it would make in this big, fevered world if friendliness were the characteristic mark of persons as they met with and dealt with one another! The opposite attitude is painfully prevalent. We cannot remedy all at once the situation, but we can, beginning where we are, strive to be friendly—the mistress with her cook, the master with his coachman, the teacher with his pupil, the neighbor with his neighbor, the parent with his child and the child with his parent, the clerk with his employer and the employer with his clerk.

Only we must plan for it. Why not block out the program of the coming week with a view to friendliness? You can show it in places where you have not hitherto conspicuously displayed it. It may hurt your pride to do so, and it may call for some heroic effort? But you will be rewarded over and over again, for it has been well said by a sage of former time, "A man to have friends must show himself friendly."

THE PARSON.

Where Edison's Genius Failed.

Stroudsburg, Pa., Cor. New York World: His electric light, his phonograph, his new storage battery—all his ingenuity and inventive genius were useless to Thomas A. Edison in his dreadful predicament on Sunday.

What he yearned for was a needle and thread.

Edison and a party of friends went to pass the day at the Laurel Inn, in the Pocono mountains. They tramped over the hills in the morning. Edison, climbing a rock, took too long a step—

He had no others.

The great inventor is sensitive, bashful. When he plucked up courage to return to the inn the admiring women crowded around him as usual.

He wore a lightweight sack coat.

There is no shop within miles of the inn. Edison escaped to his room. When two or three intimates went to condole with him he did not rise to welcome them. He took his dinner, supper and breakfast in his bedroom, and he boarded the very earliest train for home this morning.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

Highways and Byways of The Town.

No one appeared to know who the man was, and he didn't volunteer his name. He had the appearance of being a commercial traveler. He was one of a group of men who were smoking their after-dinner cigars in the parlor of the Spalding hotel.

"Fifteen years ago I was in the circus business myself," he said, after the conversation had turned to shows that are now with the carnival company in Duluth, and to circuses in general. "A person meets with some odd experiences in the business, and finds plenty of things to interest him outside of the show itself. I remember one occasion in particular, when a bunch of cowboys tried to make us look foolish.

"We were holding forth in a small town in Texas at the time, with a performance advertised for both afternoon and evening. We didn't expect a very large crowd at either of them, for the place was hardly large enough to warrant such hopes, but we figured that we would be able to attract enough outsiders to a little more than pay expenses, and as we had an open date, thought there was no use of lying idle a day if we didn't have to.

"Things didn't turn out just the way we expected they would. The people began to come in droves an hour before the time set for starting the show. They swarmed in from all directions in wagons, on horses and afoot. It began to look as though the tent wouldn't accommodate the crowd. Of course we were greatly surprised, but it didn't take us long to find out the reason for the immense patronage that was evidently to be accorded us. Fifty or sixty cowboys, it seems, had taken great pains to widely advertise the fact that certain features not down on the program were to be the principal attractions underneath the big canvas. They hadn't announced just what these features were to be, but the people looked for something good, while we anticipated something just the contrary. What would look good to the Texan would look bad to us.

"Knowing that something was going to happen, we didn't know what, we got pretty much worried, and prepared for all emergencies. The men were armed with revolvers by the management, and told to stand by the outfit whatever occurred. This command was hardly necessary, for in those days the average circus man was always ready for trouble, and was rather disappointed if he didn't get in a mix-up of some sort or other about once a week.

"The crowd hung around the tent, awaiting the apperance of the cattlemen. They weren't exactly sure whether the advertised excitement would develop inside or outside, and, to make sure, stayed on the outside, probably thinking it would be foolish to throw away a dollar, the price of a ticket, if the performance came off where they could see it free of charge. This was explained to us by grinning citizens, who also predicted that, when the cowboys got through with us, there wouldn't be enough canvass left to patch up a canoe with. The boys, one man informed us, had gotten tired of hunting wolves and other animals native to American soil, and had come to the conclusion that our entire menagerie was necessary to furnish them sport with the gun. Their game, the accomodating one said, would be to turn all the animals out on the prairie, give them a fair start, and then kill what they could with their six-shooters. This story did not appear at all unlikely, in view of what we had heard of the inhabitants of that particular region, and so we spread the news around, telling the men to rally around the animals at the least sign of trouble.

"All worry on this score, however, was needless. The cowboys were not on the war path, provided we complied with their requests. All they wanted was a little fun at our expense, and enough money to keep the whole town drunk for a week. Their plan was simple enough. The spokesman of the party explained it to us, leaving his band of three score husky men of the plains, fully armed with six-shooters and lariats in the background while he did the talking. They were a formidable looking crew, and it needed no second look on our part to convince us that they meant business, and that trouble would likely result if we didn't do just as they desired.

"The spokesman was very brief. In picturesque language, sprouting with original cuss words, and many that were not original, he said the boys wanted to take some part in the circus themselves. They were willing to bet $2,000 in cold cash against a like sum on our part that they could pick a man out of the lot who could go through with a better riding stunt than any man we had along with us. The riding contest, they said, was to be pulled off at the end of the regular performance. They seemed fair enough, and did not want us to lose any more money than was reasonable on the deal. Or perhaps they figured that if we didn't get our dollars out of the crowd for admission tickets we would be shy when it came to paying over the prize cash. As a matter of fact, we had a good sum of money at our command for the season had been a good one.

"The spokesman guaranteed us protection if we did as was wished of us, but said he would not be responsible for anything that might turn up if we didn't come gracefully to terms. We came to terms, and very quickly. There was nothing else for us to do. Even if we could have gotten out of it we had no desire to do so, for it so happened that we had about the finest rider in the country with us. Never before or since have I seen his equal in the ring when it came to riding horses. He had no business being under contract with such a small outfit as ours in the first place, but we happened along into the town where he had been on a protracted spree, resulting in his desertion of the circus he had ben with, and, as he was broke, he signed with us for the remainder of the season.

"We knew the Texans were mighty good riders, but felt confident that Mike could beat anything they put up. Mike Sullivan was his name. He was a tall, slim fellow, about as lazy-looking a mortal as you ever laid eyes on. Young and smooth shaved, he looked no more than 20 years old, although he was really 30. We told Mike what was up, and he entered into the spirit of the thing right away. He was rather proud of his feats in horsemanship, and announced in his lazy drawl that he wasn't going to let any blamed cow puncher beat him out. This tickled us, for we knew Mike was a regular cyclone when he really wanted to ride. To cinch matters the management gave him a hunch that there would be $500 in it for him and $500 for the remainder of the boys if he won out.

"The crowd greeted the announcement of our decision with ringing cheers, and swarmed into the tent like bees into a hive, only worse. Everything was filled to the limit, and still people were left on the outside. This did not suit them at all. They made a kick, and the result was that we adjourned to the open prairie, still keeping hold of all the dollars we had secured, and giving those who had paid a ticket entitling them to admission at the night performance. From the looks of things we decided that everyone in the country was on hand that afternoon, and that there would be no one around at night, unless we offered some such inducement. They all wanted to see the riding contest, and didn't care a hang for the regular performance, which was cut out entirely.

"A committee to act as judges was selected. There were two native Texans, two showmen, and one outsider, a Chicago traveling man, selected as judges. While this procedure was going on our men scattered in the crowd and began making bets. With hardly an exception they staked their all on the outcome of the affair, and the cowboys were no less willing. As the show money began getting scarce the Texans began to bet two to one, and then three to one on their favorite. This was too much for me. While the other fellows were cursing their luck at not having held out their wads to get odds, I produced $800 and put the bunch up against $2,400. I had not intended betting at all, for I was not as confident as my friends on the outcome, having been tipped off that Pete Granger, a wonder when it came to horses, was to be put up against Mike. Pete had never traveled in professional company, but I had heard stories of his feats, nevertheless, and I knew that Mike would have to go some to win in the contest. But the odds of three to one were too great a temptation to let pass, and so the money was put up.

"About half a mile from the tent there was a dimunitive hill, that was just about high enough to give the people a chance to see over the heads of those in front. This was chosen as a place for the contest to be held. The program was for our trick horses to be used first, and then broncos were to be brought forward. Our horses were led out, and Mike went through with his usual stunts, leaving some of the most difficult out altogether. He did turn a back somersault while the horse was galloping, but, on protest of the cowboys, who well knew Pete couldn't do the trick, this was ruled out on the ground that it was not at all necessary to what might be called good horsemanship. The decision was allowed to rest without any particular objection on our part. We all knew the real test would come when the virtually wild and unbroken horses were brought into the ring, and so it did. Pete went through the circus horses in fine shape, and then called for the first broncho. It wasn't a very large horse, even for its kind, but it had a mighty vicious look about the eye. It was sort of a cloudy mixture in color.

"It took four men to hold the animal while Pete was making ready to mount. He got on all right and then the broncho started to put in his best licks at planting the man over his head and onto the prairie sod. This idea did not meet with the approval of Pete, who stuck like a fly on a daub of fresh molasses. The horse danced about into all kinds of shapes, bucking and ticking to beat the band, but still the man clung to his seat, and finally won out, though he was pretty nearly tuckered when his mount gave in.

"It didn't take very long to finish up the contest. Mike got aboard another horse that was just about as vicious as the first, and in the course of time tamed him down so that he would ride like a farm horse. This surprised the cowboys some, for they were of the firm belief that no man in the circus business could ride a bucking broncho, particularly such a vicious brute as they brought forth for the accomodation of our friend.

"A couple of more horses were tried out with the same result. The fifth mount was the worst in the outfit. He had a specially bad reputation for ugliness. It was on this horse that the Texans looked to end the battle. The agreement was that Pete was to ride the brute three minutes and Mike three. If neither of them went under in that time they were to flip a coin to see who should take the final ride, which, according to the stories we had heard, would not unlikely result in a few broken bones.

"There was even more fuss before in getting Pete mounted. When he did get on and the lasooes were loosened, the broncho shot off with the speed of an arrow. For a full thirty rods he dashed at full speed, and then stopped suddenly and began bucking at a terrific rate. The motions he didn't go through with are not down on the calendar. In just one minute and thirty-five seconds Pete was thrown, and the horse was off across the prairie, with half a dozen cowboys in close pursuit. He was brought back in a few minutes not much the worse for wear."

"It was then up to Mike. He said it would hardly be fair to ride a tired horse when the other fellow had had to tackle him fresh. The cow punchers were fair-minded fellows and they agreed with us that all that was required of Mike was to live up to the agreement, but he only smiled. In spite of all our entreaties, he wouldn't ride under the same conditions as his rival, but insisted on being blindfolded and having his hands tied behind his back. That looked like sure suicide, but there was no getting around it. Mike said he would ride that way or not at all. If he didn't ride it meant a loss of $10,000 or $15,000 to the outfit, and so we didn't use force to keep him off the horse.

"Pete himself helped him into the saddle, and the game was on. The broncho did not adopt his former tactics. He just stood still and bucked, and then he bucked some more. He stodd on his hind legs and on his front legs, whirled around like a top and jumped sideways, but all to no avail. Mike stuck to him like a porous plaster. There was no shaking him. Then the animal tried the combined running and bucking stunt, but when this didn't work he made a supreme effort and fell over backwards. Mike managed to clear himself only partly, and when his mount got up he stayed where he was. His leg was broken. This wasn't enough for the frenzied beast, which turned on him with open mouth and vicious front feet. Something like this was expected, so the men were prepared. About twenty bullets hit the poor devil at the same time and he was dead a moment later. The loss wasn't much, for he was too blamed ugly to be of any possible value, and there was little chance of ever breaking him.

"You got the money all right?" asked one of the crowd.

"All of it, every cent of it. Mike had been on three minutes or more."

"In that case it seems to me that it is up to you to buy."

"Yes, we need something after that," chimed in another.

The story teller looked hurt, then grinned and led the way down stairs.

TAFT TALKS TO FILIPINOS

Will Not Get Self Government Until They Are Prepared.

Manila, Aug. 12.—A banquet given by natives to the Taft party, tonight, attracted great interest as it was expected that Secretary Taft would outline the policy of the present administration. For some time past the feeling among the natives has been that the administration was deviating from the McKinley policy and as a result there has been a noticeable disaffection among politicians with the insular government and also much unrest.

This attitude was met fearlessly by Secretary Taft, who upheld the administration policy. When he finished his address he was loudly applauded. He said in part, in response to the toast, "The Present Administration in the Philippines:"

"President Roosevelt, with the majority of the American people believe that it is the duty of the United States to prepare the Filipinos for self government will be left to the individuals who control the two nations at that time. It follows that the president, and he himself desires me to say this to the Filipinos, feels charged with the duty of proceeding on this policy and maintaining the sovereignty of the United States here as an instrument of the gradual education and elevation of the whole of the Filipino people to a self governing community."

Secretary Taft in forceful language stated that the Filipinos who wish to rule this country must first learn the principles of democracy by sending their children to the common schools before they can invite the United States to transfer the trust which has been thrown upon them to their shoulders. To make a self governing and popular democracy, primary education, habits of greater industry and thrift must always be kept, he said, before the young patriotic Filipinos.

"In a number of provinces," he said, "the people with the greatest difficulty avoid starvation. Now, this is not due to the soil or unfavorable agricultural questions. All these are easily overcome by the industry which is manifest in Java and Japan. The foundation of a great nation like Japan is in the thrift and intelligence of the people."

The secretary affirmed that a popular assembly would be formed if not insurrection exists in April, 1907.

Secretary Taft said in conclusion that it was the president's desire that all must work for their benefit.

AMAZING RESULTS

Dr. D. W. Riesland Conquers Acute and Chronic Troubles.

Evidence That Perfect Health Follows Chiropractic Adjustment.

Each day brings further evidence of the wonderful results following Chiropractic adjustment by Dr. Riesland, whose offices, at 707-8-9-10 Palladio building, are daily besieged by people suffering from every kind of disease, and who do not come in vain. The doctor examines them, tells them their exact condition, and whether or not their disease is curable, though there is no disease, unless it be in the very last stages, that fails to respond to Chiropractic adjustment. Dr. Riesland has cured chronic troubles that were heretofore consideerd incurable, acute troubles he has relieved in a single adjustment. In his office are hundreds of letters from clergymen, merchants, lawyers, and even medical doctors, all testifying to the marvelous work he has done during his four year's residence in Duluth.

The doctor was asked regarding cholera infantum, a disease that yearly carries away millions of children in the United States. "Why," said he, "I have yet to see one case of cholera infantum that I could not cure in from one to three treatments, and in most cases, mark you, the children were not brought to me until they were given up by the family physician. It is the same with other dangerous troubles, they are all caused by a displacement of the vertebra, which produces a pressure on some set of nerves."

Dr. Riesland makes no charge for advice and consultation, and welcomes all sufferers.

DOUKHOBORS OUT AGAIN.

Wanted to March Naked Through City's Streets.

Winnipeg, Aug. 12.—A party of Doukhobors, religious fanatics to the number of about thirty, marched to within a half mile of Yorkton yesterday, where they proceeded to strip themselves naked and burned their clothes. The police were notified and went out with drays and blankets and arrested the entire party of men, women and children. Their intention was to march through the streets of Yorkton in a naked condition. They refused all nourishment by raw potatoes and say they are looking for Christ. Another party is reported to be heading to Yorkton from the northeast.

CREATORE MUST PAY HIS WIFE $7 PER WEEK.

Detroit, Aug. 12.—Creatore, the Italian bandmaster, yesterday demanded an immediate trial of the non-support case brought against him by his wife, Signora Anna Creatore, and the case was brought to a conclusion. Justice St. Aubin ordered Creatore to pay his wife $7 per week for her support, and to pay her expenses on her trip from New York to Detroit. Creatore was held under $800 bonds to fulfill these directions of the court.

RECKLESS AUTOIST IS SENT TO PRISON.

Philadelphia, Aug. 11.—William Henry Myers, a chaffeur, was today convicted of involuntary manslaughter and sentenced to eighteen months' imprisonment for running down and killing 5-year-old Eldon Sarvis. The jury was out all night.

At the trial it was in evidence that Myers was driving the machine in a rapid and negligent manner.

HAS AN INGENIOUS DEVICE

System Perfected By An Indiana Man Will Prevent Railroad Wrecks.

J. E. Steigelmeyer, a member of the city fire department, is the inventor of a system, which, it is claimed by prominent machinists, will successfully prevent wrecks on railroads and in many other ways make traveling safer both for the public, the employes and the railroad companies, says the Indianapolis Star.

The new invention is an addition to the "block" system. The system has been perfected by Mr. Steigelmeyer after several years of hard work, and he has applied for patents. As soon as they are issued he will arrange for a practical test of his scheme, and will then organize a company for the manufacture and sale of his patent.

The new system is one which acts directly upon the throttle of the locomotive regardless of the attention or inattention of the engineer. The patent is so arranged that each time a signal is ignored the engine is automatically stopped, and at the same time a record of the stop is made in the signalman's tower recording the exact time it occurs. At the end of his run the engineer must explain the reasons for the stop. Thus, it is claimed, will the watchfulness of the engineer be increased instead of diminished, as it has been by the former block system.

On the engine is a small wheel which comes in contact with the short wheel B in the center of the track. Here also is what is known as a "pony" truck wheel and a copper disk with an electric brush which is connected with a throttle closing cylinder. The air from the train line pipe is taken up through the cylinder, which is controlled by an electric magnet on top of the cylinder.

With the signals and the engines equipped in such a manner any engine attempting to pass a signal set at "block" will automatically be brought to a standstill. The trolley wheel coming in contact with the short rail in the center of the track and the pony truck wheel coming in contact with the main rail, completes the circuit which charges the magnet and in this way automatically closes the throttle and sets the brakes. On the other hand, when the signal is set "clearance" there is no circuit completed and the train passes the signal post untouched.

Some advantages of the system are that in case the engineer is dead or asleep and the signal is set against him the train is brought to a stop without loss to the company or injury to the train. The system is such that should a train break in two or an air hose break the engine is shut down, as the throttle works in harmony with the breaks, and as the breaks are set the throttle will close. The system also throws a safeguard around the traveling public in the case of a derail, for if the signal is set at block the engine will be stopped before the derail is reached.

Railroad men who have examined Mr. Steigelmeyer's patent are astounded at the simplicity of the mechanism and believe the system a great success. With this system in use, they say, the danger of railroad traveling will be reduced 50 per cent. They also say that it is entirely practical.

COMING OF FIRE CHIEFS NEXT WEEK

Duluth Will Entertain Heads of Fire Fighting Departments.

Business and Entertainment Will Be Pleasantly Intermingled.

Next week Duluth will entertain the national convention of fire chiefs in what will probably be the largest and most representative national gathering ever held in the city.

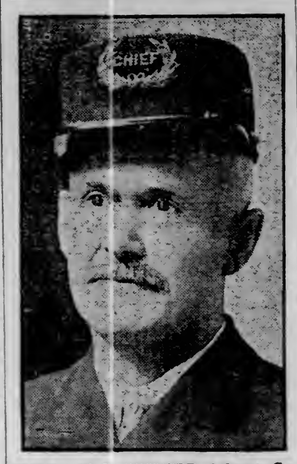

Some large state and local conventions have been held in the city in this and in former years, but the fire chiefs' convention will doubtless be the largest national convention ever held at the head of the Lakes.

CHIEF JAMES McFALL
Of Roanoke, Va., Secretary of Association.

Probably every state in the Union and practically every city of importance in the country, will be represented in Duluth, either by the chief of the fire department or some member of the city government.

The convention will last four days, and the delegates will begin to arrive Tuesday morning. A large number will come in Tuesday night on the North West. More than 100 have already signified their intention of coming up in this manner, and the number will probably be much larger.

CHIEF W. R. JOYNER, Atlanta, Ga.
President of International Association of Fire Chiefs.

The first session of the convention will be held Wednesday morning, and business sessions will also be held on Wednesday afternoon, Thursday evening, Friday morning, and Saturday morning, afternoon and evening.

On Wednesday evening a memorial service will be held in the Lyceum, when Dr. M. S. Rice, pastor of the First Methodist church, will speak.

Thursday morning the Winchester Arms company will burn up about $2,000 worth of cartridges in an exhibition of how a burning building where ammunition is stored, may be entered with safety.

Thursday afternoon the delegates will take a boat ride up the river, and Friday afternoon and evening they will have a drive around the boulevard, followed by supper at Lester Park, and a dance in the evening.

The closing day of the convention is completely given up to business, and during that time some entertainment will be provided for the ladies.

The committee in charge of the entertainment of the visitors, is composed as follows: M. H. Kelley, chairman; H. B. Knudsen and P. S. Anneke, representing the Commercial club; Aldermen Wilson, Waugh, Barnes and Teesman, representing the council; Theodore Hollister, B. W. How and A. R. Merritt of the board of fire commissioners; Mayor Cullum and John T. Black.

The following is a list of the officers of the association: President, W. R. Joyner of Atlanta; vice presidents, John Stagg of Paterson and George M. Kellogg of Sioux City; secretary, James MacFall of Roanoke; treasurer, D. C. Larkin of Toledo; J. T. Mullin of Birmingham, and Fillmore Tyson of Louisville.

SMALL BOY LOSES HIS LIFE IN BAY

Joseph Ouellette Gets Beyond His Depth While Bathing.

Sank Before Companions Could Come to His Assistance.

While wading in the shallow water on the shore near the foot of Fourteenth avenue west, Joseph Ouellette, the 14-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Ouellette of 1430 West First street, stepped into a deep hole and was drowned before help could reach him.

The accident happened about 11 o'clock this morning. About fifteen or twenty boys were swimming in the vicinity at the time, but they had gone out to an abandoned barge, some fifty feet from where the Ouellette boy was wading with his cousin, Arthur Paquette. Neither of the two lads could swim, but they were paddling about in the shallow water near the shore. While walking along in water about up to his hips, the Ouellette boy stepped into a hole where the beach ran off at a sharp angle, and in an instant was struggling in water beyond his depth.

His cousin was unable to assist him, and the other boys, who were diving off the barge, did not hear the cries for assistance until it was too late and the boy had sunk from sight.

The boys made several attempts to rench the body by diving, but unsuccessfully, and the alarm was then given.

The life saving crew responded to the call, and after dragging the spot for a few minutes, recovered the body.

The boy was in the water over an hour, and all signs of life were extinct.

Coroner McCuen arrived on the scene shortly after the body was found. He cross-examined a number of the boys who were present when the accident occurred, and after hearing their testimony decided that no inquest would be necessary, and that death was due to accidental drowning.

The dead boy was one of the regular Herald carriers employed by the West end branch. He would have been fourteen years of age next Monday.

The body was removed to C. O. Nelson's morgue. The funeral arrangements have not yet been made.

Manila, Aug. 12.—Mrs. Dubois, wife of Senator Frederick Dubois of Idaho, who, with the senator, is a member of Secretary Taft's party, was thrown from a carriage today and was taken in an ambulance to a hospital, where she was unconscious for three hours. Her injuries are not considered dangerous. She is, however, badly bruised and jarred, and her condition probably will prevent her going on the Southern trip with Mr. Taft and the other members of the party. Mrs. Dubois was the guest of Dr. and Mrs. Safford, prominent American residents of Manila, and the accident took place while she was driving with the 1-year-old baby of her host and hostess and its governess. The horses ran away, but before she was thrown out Mrs. Dubois seized the baby and saved its life at the risk of her own. The governess was not injured.

Now that the party has been in the islands for over a week, a concensus of opinion of the majority of its members of the free admission of Philippine products to the markets of the United States has been obtained, and it can be stated without fear of contradiction that the attitude of the leaders of the opposition to the policy of a reduction of the single tax on sugar and tobacco has changed since their arrival. Representative Hill, one of the leaders in the house of the opposition to the further reduction of the tariff, declares himself in favor of the free admission of sugar and tobacco from the islands into the United States. Senator Dubois, leader of the opposition to the Cooper bill in the senate, has also stated that he will not oppose free trade, while other members, erstwhile of the opposition, have convinced themselves that sugar and tobacco from the islands will in no wise menace like products of the United States. Representative Shirley, an American tobacco grower, says he will favor the free admission of tobacco, being convinced that the cigars from there will not compete to any appreciable extent with those made in America. It can be stated upon no less authority than Representative Grosvenor of Ohio, that the Cooper bill, which was favorably reported upon by the house committee at the last session of congress, will now be amended, providing for free trade, instead of the proposed reduction of 25 per cent in the prevailing Dingley rates.

Representative Grosvenor says: "An amendment will be offered by Mr. Payne of New York, chairman of the committee on ways and means, providing for the admission of Philippine products, and the outlook for its passage is very favorable."

"Make Hay While the Sun Shines."

There is a lesson in the work of the thrifty farmer. He knows that the bright sunshine may last but a day and he prepares for the showers which are so liable to follow. So it should be with every household. Dysentery, diarrhoea and cholera morbus may attack some member of the home without warning. Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy, which is the best known medicine for these diseases, should always be kept at hand, as immediate treatment is necessary, and delay may prove fatal. UNIQUE SUN DIAL.

The romantic and picturesque sun dial is coming to its own once more, says the Los Angeles Times. Dial making is again an industry reveled in by members of the arts and crafts cycle. Ono wonders that anything so beautiful in itself and associated with so much of pleasing sentiment should have been allowed to die out. Its revival should be hailed as a sign of a new appreciation of the beautiful and fitting.

It was in days when interest in sun dials was lowest that Peter Hamilton of Baltimore conceived an dexecuted the design for a dial unil nakye trehoyp shrdlu sign for a dial unlike any other of which we have any knowledge, and which is now one of the attractions of the celebrated Druid Hill park, in that city.

This dial, beautiful from a narchitectural standpoint, is also a mathematical wonder, for it registers the time at fifteen places, each far distant from one another. From its fifteen faces can be rend the hours at Rio Janeiro, Sitka, Jeddo, Jerusalem, Fernando Po, Cape Cod, Baltimore, Pitcairn's Island, Honolulu, London, Cape Town and San Francisco. The equatorial and polar planes, the latter with the motto, "Sine umbra nihil," make up the fifteen faces of this peculiar dial.

That he had constructed a wholly original sun dial of which there is no duplicate is a fact which surprised Mr. Hamilton, for he believed, while constructing it, that he was producing in essential points the famous dial at Glamis Castle, in Scotland, which is undoubtedly the finest in the world.

This historic timepiece is surrounded by Shakespearian romance and tragedy, and as Alice Morse Earle says in her "Sun Dials and Roses of Yesterday," even a pictured reproduction of this dial "speaks to us of Macbeth, the shadowy Thane of Glamis, and of the charm and magic of Shakespearean play."

There are over eighty dials in all on this famed timepiece, each of its twenty-four faces having from three to four dials each. Again, quoting from Alice Morse Earle: "This dial is certainly three centuries old, as it appears in a print of the castle, behind which it stands, previous to the year 1600, and was named in Earl Patrick's Book of Record of a date previous to 1595."

It was from a description of the Glamis sun dial, which is over twenty-one feet high, and handsomely carved, that Mr. Hamilton drew the plans for the dial which now stands in Druid Hill park. Never having seen even a photograph of the Glamis dial, Mr. Hamilton had only verbal descriptions to work upon, and he concluded that the many faces of the Glamis dial must speak the time at various points. Not so. The Glamis dial tells only Scotland time. Thus Mr. Hamilton's work is not a copy in any sense, but is original with him.

In an article in an old edition of the Encyclopedia Britannica Mr. Hamilton found the formula upon which he worked, as follows:

"If a horizontal dial were transferred from the place for which it was made to any other place on the earth's surface, and fixed there in a position parallel to its original position, that is, with its plane parallel to the horizon of the place for which it was made, its axis as before pointing to the pole of the heavens, there in its new position it will indicate the hour of the day at its original position, precisely as it did before it was removed."

It was in 1875 that Mr. Hamilton constructed his unique dial of sandstone. It stood in his yard for a number of years. In 1882 he presented it to the city of Baltimore. It was first placed in one of the smaller parks, and afterward removed to Druid Hill park near the Eutaw place entrance. As time had begun to wear away some of the inscriptions, the park commission recently spent $500 to cover the surface with bronze plates and engrave them. This has been done under Mr. Hamilton's supervision, and the dial now bids fair to stand for centuries, a picturesque monument to its maker.

THE VALUE OF CHARCOAL.

Few People Know How Useful It Is In Preserving Health and Beauty.

Nearly everybody knows that charcoal is the safest and most efficient disinfectant and purifier in nature, but few realize its value when taken into the human system for the same cleansing purpose.

Charcoal is a remedy that the more you take of it the better; it is not a drug at all, but simply absorbs the gases and impurities always present in the stomach and intestines and carries them out of the system.

Charcoal sweetens the breath after smoking, drinking or after eating onions and other odorous vegetables.

Charcoal effectually clears and improves the complexion, it whitens the teeth and further acts as a natural and eminently safe cathartic.

It absorbs the injurious gases which collect in the stomach and bowels; it disinfects the mouth and throat from the poison of catarrh.

All druggists sell charcoal in one form or another, but probably the best charcoal and the most for the money is in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges; they are composed of the finest powdered Willow charcoal, and other harmless antiseptics in tablet form, or rather in the form of large, pleasant tasting lozenges, the charcoal being mixed with honey.

The daily use of these lozenges will soon tell in a much-improved condition of the general health, better complexion, sweeter breath and purer blood, and the beauty of it is that no possible harm can result from their continued use, but on the contrary, great benefit.

A Buffalo physician, in speaking of the benefits of charcoal, says: "I advise Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges to all patients suffering from gas in stomach and bowels, and to clear the complexion and purify the breath, mouth and throat; I also believe the liver is greatly benefited by the daily use of them; they cost but twenty-five cents a box at drug stores, and although in some sense a patent preparation, yet I believe I get more and better charcoal in Stuart's Charcoal Lozenges than in any of the ordinary charcoal tablets."

COLLEGE BOYS ON STREET CAR PLATFORMS

The Hand That Takes the Nickel Is Often Guided By a Brain That's Filled With Greek—Ideal Vacation Work For Those Fortunate to Get It—Some College Graduates Make Street Railroading Their Profession.

Boston, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Recent utterances of Mayor James P. Baxter of Portland, regarding the debasing character of summer hotel service for college students have naturally aroused interest in this educational center, where each of the colleges and professional schools has its quota of hard-working young men, who must pay their own way in whole or in part. It is probably true, however, that the question raised by the Maine city executive is more of an academic one than it would have been twenty or thirty years ago, when the field of vacation employment for college students was so much narrower than now.

For it would be no great hardship to the average self-supporting college student of today if he were prohibited altogether from the occupations in which the practice of tipping prevails. As a much quoted report lately made by Columbia university shows, a multiplicity of occupations are open in the vacation season. Time was when an ambitious young collegian was virtually limited to hotel service, summer tutoring or book agency. In those days the preference was generally for the first class of work. The best students thought nothing of going into the White Mountains, or to the seaside resorts and taking positions as waiters at $2 or $3 a week, with the expectation that the tips received would normally increase their wages to a respectable amount. Nowadays, although the hotel places are still sought, it is said by those who are in contact with student life that outdoor occupations, which in a certain sense may be regarded as more manly, are much preferred by self-respecting young men.

A good example is the popularity of street railroading among the college boys. In most sections of the country the hand that takes the nickels at this season of the year is as likely as not the hand that a few weeks before was turning the leaves of a Greek lexicon. Able bodied scholars are only too glad of jobs that pay reasonably well and give plenty of exercise and fresh air.

Of course this employment is not always so easy to get. Every street railway man knows that there are certain objections to employing young men who expect to work only two or three months. It takes from two weeks to a month to get a man broken in. Preference, naturally enough, is often given to sturdy, fairly well-educated young fellows who intend to stay in street railroading with the hope of rising from the platform to the better-paid positions. At the same time most of the great street railway companies make some provision for the employment of competent young college men.

A typical instance is that of the Boston Elevated company, which is generally recognized as having the most efficient corps of employes of any street railway organization in the world, and which, as a part of its regular program, takes on every summer two or three score of students from the enghboring institutions of learning. It has always been the policy of Gen. Bancroft, president of the road, who is himself a Harvard man, to give all the encouragement possible to ambitious young men, recognizing that the work, with its responsibility and lack of mental circumstances, is good for them, and, barring the shortness of their service, good for the Elevated company.

And it is largely a picked body of college students who are found engaged in this service in the summer time, for the examinations of the Elevated company, although they exact no knowledge of Greek or higher mathematics, are in their way as stiff as those which the young fellow must pass to get into Harvard or Technology. He must come well recommended. He must be in the best of trim physically, must pass exacting tests for color-blindness and other defects, and must impress himself upon the employment department of the road as a fellow who will be able to take care not only of himself but of others in any ordinary emergency. He is also in competition with other candidates who are husky, intelligent and good-looking.

Once admitted—as a number are each year in the latter part of June or the first of July—the student is assigned to his place as motorman or conductor on some one of the suburban lines of the Elevated company, subject, of course, to just the same rigid but kindly military discipline which has made the Boston Elevated company famous for its effective system of rapid transit. The college boy soon finds that he is engaged in work which taxes his best ability and that he is associated also with a class of high-grade fellow employes—men whose educational advantages in some respects may have been less than his own but who are equally competent for the work in hand.

They are, in fact, the survivals of a winnowing process. The employes of such a street car system as the Boston Elevated's represent only a small percentage of the total number of candidates applying for positions, some of them city boys but even more generally young fellows from the country towns of New England and the Canadian provinces. Many of them already had experience in other cities and are attracted to the New England metropolis because of the higher scale of wages in the Boston Elevated company. The idea has been spreading throughout the country that street railroading offers exceptional opportunities to capable young men and the quality of the service of the Elevated company has consequently steadily improved in the past half-decade. The college boy doing summer work not infrequently finds among his associates former schoolmates in the high school or village academy and sometimes one of his former teachers, for not a few ex-teachers, ambitious to get into something that offers larger ultimate responsibilities and rewards than ordinary school teaching, are to be found on platforms of the Boston Elevated company.

Although most of the college students who secure places as conductors or motormen during the summer months do so simply as a help in gaining their college or professional education, there are always some who find the conditions of the work such that they decide to make street railroading their own profession. They encounter not a little that inspires them with respect for the calling. The annals of the Boston Elevated company, which may, of course, be taken as typical of other street railway companies of the country, are full of the instances of men who have gone up rapidly from the platform. Gen. Bancroft himself began his career as a street railroad man while fresh from Harvard college. A very remarkable case was that of Richard T. Laffin, who twenty years ago was a conductor on a Boston horse car and who now at the age of 43 is manager of the Manila Electric Light & Power company with a salary said to be $40,000 a year. Howard F. Grant, general manager of the Seattle Electric company, is another of the graduates of the Boston street car system who has shown capacity for successful management of large enterprises. Every one of the present superintendents in the Boston Elevated system rose from the ranks. J. E. Rugg, the superintendent of trasportation, was a conductor; Richard Hapgood, superintendent of tracks of the surface system, began as a stable boy in the days of the old horse cars; Herbert A. Pasho, superintendent of the elevated lines, and George Benjamin, train master of the elevated system, both started as conductors. These men, of course, are all in high salaried places and their example is not without its force in inducing many a young college boy seriously to consider if the occupation that he undertakes for the purpose of getting a little money to tide him through his college course does not offer inducements for a life-work.

EXCURSION COMES

Northern Pacific Brings About Five Hundred From Taylors Falls.

Suits By Wholesale Against Western Road By Cattlemen.

Four hundred and seventy-one people arrived in the city this morning from Taylors Falls, Minn., and intermediate points, on the special excursion train run by the Northern Pacific road. This is one of the best crowds ever brought from that district. The train, consisting of seven coaches, arrived on time, 11:20 a. m. It will return this evening at 7:15 o'clock.

The train was in charge of Traveling Passenger Agent Armitage, Conductor Edward Quinn and C. E. Mullen. The heavy travel to the coast, owing to the Portland fair and the tourist season, has been such a heavy drain on the road's rolling stock that it was necessary to use the North Coast Limited equipment for today's excursion, so that the train was one of the finest excursion specials ever run into the city.

The people who came in on it are of a good class, out for a good time. The weather is all right, and far ahead of the usual excursion variety, although unusually warm for Duluth.

WILL SUE ROADS.

Claimed Western Lines Treat Cattle Cruelly.

San Francisco, Aug. 12.—Twelve hundred suits involving a penalty of from $100 to $500 in each case, or a total maximum of fines of $600,000, are to be brought against the Southern Pacific, Santa Fe, Union Pacific and other Western roads for violations of the so-called 28-hour law providing for the humane shipment of cattle. It is at the instance of the secretary of agriculture that this litigation has been taken up by the attorney general, and the suits will soon be commenced by the various United States district attorneys.

The law under which this wholesale suing is to be done has been on the statute books since 1873. It requires railroad companies transporting cattle from one state to another to unload the animals after they have been in the cars for twenty-eight hours, feed and water them, and give them a rest for at least five hours.

LISTED ON EXCHANGE

Doubt as to North Butte's Listing Is Denied.

Some question seems to have arisen as to whether North Butte stock is listed on the Boston Stock exchange. One report has it that the stock is to be listed in September. Paine, Webber & Co., state that the stock was listed on August 9, which was Wednesday of this week. The statement is made at the offices of that firm in Duluth that the official notice of the listing was given to the authorities of the North Butte Mining company through Mr. Paine of Boston, member of the firm.

The stock, today, sold in the market at $35.25 and at the close was $35 bid and $36 asked.

WILL HEAR THEM.

Superior Street Owners to Give Paving Opinions.

The meeting called by the board of public works to give the owners a chance to express their opinions on the kind of material to be used in paving Superior street, from Eighth avenue west to Twenty-fifth avenue west, will be held at the city hall Monday afternoon at 4:30 o'clock. It is desired that all interested taxpayers be present, from the uptown district as well as from the West end.

COMMISSIONER GREENE

To Come to Duluth Next Week For Visit.

Washington, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Civil Service Commissioner Greene leaves next Tuesday for Duluth, to spend a couple of weeks in his home city. Mrs. Greene has preceeded her husband, and Mr. Greene said this morning that he looked forward with pleasure to casting aside official cares for a few weeks and to spending these weeks among his old friends and neighbors of Duluth.

FLAX AGAIN THE MARKET'S FEATURE

Activity Continues and Price Jumps But Later Recedes.

Wheat Weak Under Fine Weather and Good Yields.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 12.—Flax was again the feature of the day in this market and while the volume of trading was considerably less than that of yesterday, the amount traded in was large. October flax opened ½c higher at $1.13⅝, and under good buying in which the American Linseed company participated, advanced quickly to $1.15. Soon after reaching that point the American company dropped out and the market sagged back, selling down to $1.13⅛, shortly before the close, and closing at $1.13½, an advance of ½c. The selling seems to be coming largely from Minneapolis and is supposed to be from elevator interests who are induced to sell the flax by the fine crop prospects. The November option moved in the same course as did the October and closed at the same price. September advanced ⅛c to $1.14⅛.

The wheat market opened considerably lower. The fine weather and good yields in the spring wheat country where harvesting has begun are making the market pretty sick. Added to this was an announcement purporting to be official from Russia that the crops there are above the average.

The Liverpool market closed ¼d lower to ½d higher, Berlin ½c lower and Budapest ⅝c lower.

The September option in Duluth fell ⅛c for the new and 1⅜c for the old, ⅞-1c in Minneapolis, 1⅛-1¼c in Chicago, ½c in St. Louis, 1-1⅛c in Kansas City, and 1c in New York.

Broomhall estimates the world's shipments to be reported Monday at 8,000,000 bus. He also reported the French crop as being above the average for winter wheat and medium for spring wheat.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 4 against 6 last year, and at Minneapolis 115 against 135 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 119 against 175 last year. Chicago received 241 against 119 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 770,000 bus, last year 830,000 bus. Shipments 552,000 bus, last year 421,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 143,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ¼@½d higher. In the Chicago market September corn closed ⅝-¾c lower, September oats closed ½-⅝c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 423,000 bus, last year 260,000 bus. Shipments 912,000 bus, last year 370,000 bus. Clearance were 115,000 bus.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was fairly active. The old September option opened ⅝c lower at 88¾c, sold at 88⅞c in the first 10 minutes, and then fell to 88¾c at 11:35. It rallied to 89¾c at 11:55 and closed 89c. This was a loss of 1⅝c. The new September opened ⅝c lower at 89¼c, fell to 79¾c and closed there, a loss of 1½c for the day.

Oats to arrive fell ⅝c, but on track oats closed without change. September rye closed ½c lower.

Following were the closing prices on the Duluth board:

Wheat on track, No. 1 northern, $1.08; No. 2 northern, $1.06. Durum old, No. 1, 93c; No. 2, 92c; new durum, No. 1, 70c; No. 2, 69c. September old, 89¾c; September new, 79¾c. Flax to arrive, $1.29; on track, $1.13. August, $1.30. September, $1.14½. October, $1.13⅜; November, $1.13½; December, $1.12⅜. Oats to arrive, 29½c, on track, 27. Rye, September, 57c. Barley, Feed, choice.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 4; last year, 45; oats, 10; rye, 1; barley, 9; flax 2, last year 11.

Receipts: Wheat, 2,221; oats, 4,481; barley, 2,07; flax, 570.

Shipments: Wheat, 4,400; oats, 30,000; barley, 20,410.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Clear Weather In Northwest Weakens Wheat Somewhat.

Chicago, Aug. 12.—Clear weather in the Northwest had a weakening effect on wheat here today. Prices were further depressed by a semi-official announcement to the effect that the crop of winter wheat in Russia was above the average. September opened ⅛c to ⅜c lower at 5⅞c to 6⅜c and under general selling the price dropped to 5⅞. Minneapolis and Chicago reported receipts of 200 cars, against 161 cars last week and 537 cars a year ago.

Persistent liquidation forced September down to 5⅞c. The market closed weak, with September down 1⅝@1¾c at 5¼@5⅜c.

Showers throughout the Middle West caused weakness in the corn market. Pit traders and cash houses were liberal sellers. Commission houses were fair buyers of December and May. The September option opened unchanged to ⅛c lower at 54⅜c to 54⅝c and sold off to 53⅝c. Local receipts were 202 cars with 77 of contract grade.

Continued liberal receipts brought out fairly active selling of oats by cash houses resulting in a weak undertone. September opened unchanged to ⅛@¼c lower at 29⅜c to 29⅝@⅜c and sold off to 29⅛c. Local receipts were 450 cars.

Provisions were steady on a 5 to 10c advance in the price of live hogs. Trading was extremely quiet. September pork was off 2½c at $14.25. Lard was up 2½c at $7.52½; ribs were unchanged at $8.57½.

Wheat—August, 89¾c; September, 79¾@79⅞c; December, 80c; May, 85¾c. Corn—September, 53⅝c; old, 53¾c; December, 47⅛@47⅜c; old, 47⅛c. Oats—August, 29c; September, 29@29½c; December, 27c; May, 31@31⅛c. Pork—September, $14.27½; October, $14.30. Lard—September, $7.77½; December, $7.37½; January, $7.35. Ribs—September, $8.07½; October, $8.05@8.07½. Ribs—Cash, 53½@55c; September, 53½c; December, 47@47⅛c; January—September, $3.35; March, $3.60. Clover—August, $12.75. Barley—Cash, 39@53c. Flax—Cash, N. W., $1.13; S. W., $1.08. Cash wheat—2 red, 1 @79c, 3 red, 79½@83c; 2 hard, 82@83½c, 3 hard, 81@83c, 1 northern, No. 2 northern and No. 3 spring, no market. Oats—2, 29½c, 3, 29@29½c. Corn—2, 55@55⅜c; 3, 55@56½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Broomhall estimates world's shipments about 8,800,000, and predicts a moderate decrease on passage. News of all kinds from Russia is eagerly sought and closely scanned. The outlook now is for a big crop of spring wheat and within a short period will be moving to primary markets freely. The market conditions to us seem unchanged. The trade is not at all broad and principal offerings continue to come from cash people. The market seems to have a sagging tendency, but will be subject yet a while to weather conditions in the Northwest and news from abroad. It is a scalping market and we feel purchases can be made on setbacks, but on the bulges we favor the selling side.

Corn—Despite the fact that primary shipments were almost half a million larger than receipts, indicating as this does, a good shipping demand, our market early took on a sagging tendency and prices showing a loss of about ¾c for the day. Trade was active, only by spells. The fact that much of the corn belt received a wetting down effected sentiment somewhat. We still feel we would rather buy the deferred futures on setbacks.

Oats ruled easier almost from the start, with a net loss for the day of ½c to ⅝cc. Trade was fairly broad for this market. Speculative conditions look unchanged. The market is narrow and fluctuations wide, but the deferred futures seem to reflect good buying on the setbacks.

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Splendid weather all over the Northwest and a continuation of damage reports from Russia caused a very heavy volume of selling orders today, which carried prices lower to a weak close. Cables exerted a steadying influence for a while, but the volume of short covering and profit-taking was much slighter than yesterday, and as a result prices sagged heavily. Scattering returns from the threshers in South Dakota indicate a yield running from 15 to 25 bus per acre. If these figures should prove to be the crop average, the government figures indicated by the wheat condition would have to be raised materially. The Price Current advices from Russia were again distinctly bearish, as the correspondents reported that under favorable conditions Russia may have an average wheat crop. The early reports indicated a decrease for wheat in the majority of provinces. News of this character is sensonable at this time of the year and the trade seems disposed to play one set of reports against the other and to govern itself accordingly. Some nervousness is expected in the Northwest tonight and tomorrow. Wheat has had a big break, and we feel that it may go lower and rather favor a scalping position on the short side of the market in case of any material hardening of values.

Following is from B. W. Snow from Grand Forks, N. D.: Yesterday drove through Pierce county from Rugby. Crop heavy, filling well. Weather perfect. Harvest begins next week. Average 16 to 18 bus. Assessors show county has 150,000 acres against 113,000 last year. No reason to stay longer; crop made.

Pringle, Fitch & Rankin, Chicago: Stratford, Ont., writes: The harvest is getting well along here; we are going to have the largest all-round crops this province has ever had. Wheat is turning out all right, and where crops, such as barley, oats and corn, are immense, as well as roots and hay. Exporters only bidding 73c and 74c on cars for fall wheat here. Your firm had better lay aside your bull horns until after the close of navigation.

• • •

Kansas City writes: "Our September wheat closed tonight at about 7c under Chicago September, and we feel that this is entirely too close. The wet weather of the past two or three weeks has retarded the threshing in a great many sections of Nebraska and Kansas, and has prevented farmers marketing their wheat. Our receipts are light. We believe, however, that later on we will receive considerable low grade wheat, and that it will be an easier matter for our elevator people to make contract wheat. The principal buyers in our market for our July wheat were elevator people, and they bought it because we had a good quality of wheat. These people are not now in the market, however, and the demand for cash wheat is coming from scattered sections. We believe that our September wheat will eventually widen out to 9c under you, and advise the sale of it at the present difference under Chicago September.

REMARKS.

Rain fell in all districts except in Nebraska.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster, Weather Bureau.

T. indicates inappreciable rainfall. *For yesterday. †For twenty-four hours ending at 8 a. m., seventy-fifth meridian time.

Note.—The average maximum and minimum temperatures and the average rainfall are made up at each center from the actual number of reports received. The "state of weather" is that prevailing at time of observation.

A STUDENT'S REVENGE.

In one of the Manle colleges the different professors gave lectures in the popular course, often illustrated with lantern slides, says the Boston Herald. A professor of the department of biology and anthropology, when his turn came, gave an illustrated lecture on the "History of the Evolution of Man."

One of the juniors who had a grievance against the president of the college, managed to get hold of the box of slides, substituting a picture of his enemy for that of a South African ape, the "missing link."

The lecture went on smoothly until the professor said: "The next picture is that of the missing link, neither all man nor all beast, an ape from South Africa." Just then the picture of the sedate college president appeared on the screen, and not until the shouts of his audience called his attention to the picture did the mortified professor notice what had occurred.

IRREGULAR TONE

Bank Statement Restored Prices But Close Was Irregular.

New York, Aug. 12.—An upward movement of prices has gained force on the stock exchange during the week after early hesitation and irregularity. The government crop report for August was a prime factor in confirming confidence in the outlook, with its indication of a bumper crop and a wheat crop only second to the country's record. The confidence in the iron and steel trade has been touched with conservatism by the statistical showing of a growth in stocks on hand in July in spite of diminished production. The peace conference at Portsmouth is a restraining influence on speculation. Money has been easy but autumn requirements are not lost sight of. Buoyant flight in quotations for high grade investment stocks is considered evidence of the large reduction of floating supply by investment demand.

Realizing sales mixed with new buying orders made the opening tone of the stock market irregular. The hesitancy in the London market added to the irregular tendency. Amongst the notable gains were Lead 1½, Kansas & Texas preferred 1¼, Great Northern preferred 1 and Pullman ¾. Louisville & Nashville lost ¾.

Liberal selling orders made a substantial impression on prices and a number of stocks that have recently been favored in the rise fell off sharply. Considerable realizing went on all through the list and the decline was uninterrupted until Reading began to climb to 109. Ontario & Western also rose to 55¾. Good rallies were made all around but the market became much quieter on the advance. The early declines were: Central of Jersey 3, National Enameling 2⅝, Northern Pacific, Atlantic Coast Line and Delaware & Hudson, 2; Louisville & Nashville, Canadian Pacific, Chesapeake & Ohio, New York Central and General Electric 1 to 1½. Pullman exceptionally rose 4½. Union Bag preferred 3¾, Chicago Great Western debentures 2 and Havana Electric preferred 1⅝.

The purchases during the second hour and especially after the appearance of the bank statement about restored prices to last night's level. The strength of Reading and Ontario & Western helped the recovery. The former gained 1⅜ and the latter 1¼. Delaware & Hudson rose 2⅝ over yesterday's closing. Evansville & Terre Haute preferred sold at an advance of 6; Long Island 4; Kansas & Texas, Chicago Great Western preferred A, National Railroad of Mexico preferred and Union Bag 1 to 1⅜. Lackawanna, Illinois Central, Great Northern preferred, Chicago Great Western, Consolidated Gas and National Enameling preferred declined to 1 below last night and New York, New Haven & Hartford 1½. Renewed realizing in St. Paul and Amalgamated Copper carried them nearly a point below last night and made the closing irregular.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed generally lower, due altogether to profit taking, which seemed in evidence shortly after the opening, and throughout balance of the session. Opinions on the bank statement were somewhat conflicting, but on the whole it was favorably received. This has been an eventful week in the stock market, and a setback is not to be wondered at. It does not hurt the market, however, merely being incident to which all bull markets are subjected. We feel the setback is timely, and doubt if it will be very far reaching. We still advise the purchase of good stocks on reactions.

• • •

Gates to Pringle, Fitch & Rankin: It is reported that the Harriman interests have placed orders for 10,000 tons of steel rails with the Carnegie Steel company, making a total of 20,000 tons ordered for their roads. Other inquiries for large amounts of rails for delivery later in the year and early part of 1906 are under consideration, and it is estimated that these will amount to about 200,000 tons.

• • •

Walker Bros .to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market at the opening was steady but irregular. Some specialties were taken hold of and advanced, but the general list was inclined to sag off. Traders sold and took profits. Before the close there was quite a good deal of selling, and prices closed at about the lowest for the active list. The market next week will be largely influenced by the outcome of the peace conference, and is more likely to be narrow and nervous until this is settled. In case of an understanding, the foreigners will buy our stocks heavily, and we should have a big strong market.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: Reading made a new high point today of 110 and the other coalers were also active and higher. The rest of the market was inclined to ease off a trifle. United Copper was the feature in Boston selling up to 35 from 33¾ on buying which seemed to come from New York. Another try at making Copper Range sell lower was made today, but it met with very good buying and closed strong at 69¾.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Aug. 12.—The cotton market opened easy at a decline of 9@9 points in response to disappointing cables. Trading was very quiet, continued dry weather in the western belt checking sales, while the weak cables prevented fresh buying for long account with the result that evening up for over Sunday was the chief trading feature and prices fluctuated within a couple of points of the opening figures, able to buy pianos and automobiles, dnd Cotton futures closed quiet; Aug., 10.50; Sept., 10.38; Oct., 10.51; Nov., 10.06; Dec., 10.02; Jan., 10.69; Feb., 10.72; March, 10.78; April, 10.79; May, 10.82. SWEDISH RESTAURANTS.

Few Swedish restaurants flourish in New York, says the Sun. The many thousand Swedes in the city are widely scattered in little colonies throughout all of the boroughs, and few of these little groups are able to support a restaurant devoted especially to their native cooking.

One reason why it is difficult to keep distinctively Swedish restaurants going in New York is that the Swedes are domestic in their habits. Many who have not homes of their own are servants in the homes of others.

An article that is characteristic of the true Swedish restaurant is a fruit soup, usually thickened with cornstarch. A puree of apples or of pears sounds a little odd, but such purees there are; also a puree of prunes. These fruit soups are served cold, and oftener in summer than in winter. Even persons not accustomed to Swedish cooking profess to like the fruit soups.

In the matter of meats and vegetables the Swedish restaurants are much like others. There is among Swedes of wealth a somewhat extravagant tradition as to the table, but most Swedish immigrants bring with them a different tradition, and the Swedish restaurants of New York do not reflect the luxury of Stockholm. Desserts, however, are of many kinds, and rice is much used in making puddings. As might be expected, only a few fruits are much used in Swedish cooking. The banana is usually a curiosity to the Swedish immigrant; he rarely sees it at home.

One berry is largely imported into this country from Sweden—the lingon, sometimes called the Swedish cranberry. It grows upon upland on a low bush, and in great quantities. The berry somewhat resembles our cranberry in color, but is much smaller. These berries are cooked and barreled in their own juice for exportation. Here they are sold in glass jars by Swedish grocers, and are much used in the Swedish restaurants and by Swedish families. They are served as a sauce with meats and sometimes preserved pears are mingled with them. The Swedes prefer the sharp tart of the lingon to the flavor of the cranberry.

There are no native Swedish wines.

VERY DULL WEEK IN REAL ESTATE

Midsummer Finds Business at Its Lowest Ebb, But No Smaller Than the Dealers Look For—Several Large Deals Said to Be Pending But Are Not Yet Closed.

Real estate dealers have no new story to tell this week, very quiet and little doing just now. As one dealer put it, this is the mid-summer madness. This week has probably been duller than usual, one of the dealers saying that it had been the dullest of the season.

• • •

There are a good many inquiries for property, but few sales are being made. Acreage is quiet, there being some demand for small tracts, but none for larger pieces. The chief call in the acreage line is for five-acre tracts.

• • •

The sales this week have been very few and most of them small. There are several large deals on hand, but as they are not closed yet, they are not ready for publication.

• • •

William M. Prindle & Co. report the following sales: An Endion division lot for $1,050, a house and lot in Portland division for $1,250, some acreage in Carlton county for $450, a house and lot in the center of the city for $2,650, and an East end corner lot for $1,050, two houses and lots in Oneota for $1,750, a lot on Seventh street for $375, a West Duluth house and lot for $1,050, two houses and lots in Oneota for $1,000, a house and lot on Jefferson street, for $2,500, a house and lot on Minnesota Point for $750.

Prindle & Co. report an increasing demand for money on mortgage loans, but so far have had no difficulty in supplying the demand.

• • •

J. J. Wagenstein is drawing plans for a five-house brick terrace which S. I. Levin will erect on the lower side of Second street close to Fifth avenue west. This will be a modern terrace and no expense is to be spared to make it complete in every respect.

• • •

Plans are in the hands of the contractors for a three-house brick building to be erected by C. A. Erickson at the corner of First avenue east and Fifth street.

• • •

The contract was let this week for the remodeling of the front of the old Herald building for the Duluth Savings bank. The contract was secured by George H. Lounsberry.

• • •

Transfers for the week were as follows:

The Virginia & Rainy Lake Lumber company has leased the Lesure mill at West Duluth for one year and expects to begin sawing within ten days. The new company will put in two new boilers in order that the mill may be run during the winter as well and will proceed at once to establish a hot pond for winter use.

It is quite possible that by the time the year's lease is up, the Virginia & Rainy Lake company will have purchased the mill as matters are looking toward that end at this time. However, there is nothing definite about that part of the transaction just now.

FUNERAL NOT FIXED ON.

The funeral of Mrs. Thomas Olson of 314 Fifty-fourth avenue west has not yet been decided upon for the reason that her eldest son who is living in Philadelphia, is expected to come. It is likely, however, that the funeral will be held tomorrow afternoon or Monday. Interment will be in Oneota cemetery. Mrs. Olson left a husband and ten children, the youngest of which is about 2 years. The family consists of seven boys and three girls.

WEST DULUTH CHURCHES.

At the Third Swedish Baptist church corner of Fifty-ninth avenue west and Ramsey street, services will be held at 10:30 a. m. and at 8 p. m. Rev. C. A. Aldeen, the pastor, will speak at both services on the subject: "Religious Truth and Error." Gust Silverness will give tenor solos on both occasions, in the morning, "Tell Mother I'll Be There," and in the evening he will sing "The Glory Song." Misses Alma Anderson and Clara Wicklund will sing a duet at the evening service. Sunday school meets at 12 o'clock, and Young People's society at 7 o'clock.

• • •

At Holy Apostles Episcopal church, morning prayer will be held at 9 o'clock, and evening prayer and sermon will be at 8 o'clock, the subject of the sermon by the rector, Rev. Roderick J. Mooney, being "Thou Shalt Not Steal."

• • •

At Asbury M. E. church, corner of Sixtieth avenue and Raleigh street, Rev. F. G. Clark, the pastor, will preach in the morning on "Lessons From the Wind," and in the evening will preach on "Lessons From the Water."

• • •

At the Merritt Memorial M. E. church there will be Sunday school at 10 o'clock in the morning, and preaching by the pastor, Rev. S. G. Briggs, at 11 o'clock, but there will be no evening service. Prof. R. B. George of Chicago, assisted by his nephew, Frank A. George of Duluth will sing at the morning service.

• • •

Rev. John Henry Boose of Rockford, Ill., will preach at Westminster Presbyterian church tomorrow morning at 10:30 o'clock. He is visiting here as the guest of Rev. W. J. Lowrie, of whom he was a classmate at the Chicago seminary and the University of Nebraska.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Miss Kriegel of New York and Miss Marie Mark of St. Paul, who have been visiting Mrs. M. B. Abrahamson of West Duluth, returned to St. Paul today.

H. R. Patterson returned last night from a several-days' trip up the Great Northern line.

Mrs. Carl Bailey returned this morning from St. Paul, where she was visiting her parents.

Mrs. G. H. Forbes of Finlayson is expected up today.

Miss Ethel Wallwork of Minneapolis, who has been visiting with Mrs. Chas. Applehagen, returned home today.

F. H. Wade, William Mallough and Russell Hamilton went fishing up the river yesterday afternoon. They caught the phenomenal string of two bass, and Mr. Mallough's additional catch was a cold by falling into the river.

Rev. W. J. Lowrie and Rev. F. G. Clark spent the first part of the week in Cloquet, the guests of Rev. Mr. Davis of that place. They also went fishing.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Angry Finns Lead a Man Hunt In the Woods.

Bessemer—This whole range is in excitement over the pursuit of Peter Derocio, an Italian and the brutal murder of Sam Stenman at the Montreal mine, some three miles west of Hurley. The murder was unprovoked. Stenman was quietly walking home in the evening with his wife on the main road at the Montreal mine. On passing Derocio and four other Italians they made some insulting reflection about the woman which her husband naturally proceeded to resent.

Derocio pulled his gun and shot Stenman dead, then running for Hurley. He was hid by friends over night, and in the morning started for Bessemer. Arriving here about noon, he was leisurely looking around for an Italian boarding house, accosting several men on the street for directions, when Bessemer's chief of police recognized him. The officer guardedly advanced to nab his man, when the Italian made a dash for the swamp and hills north of the city. The officer shot twice, but failed to hit the fugitive.

By this time pursuers from Ironwood and Hurley had reached Bessemer, and the Finns around the locations, learning that a countrymen of theirs was the victim, started out in pursuit. The swamps and woods toward Lake Superior are now being scoured by hundreds of men, and the chase will be kept until the fellow is brought in dead or alive.

Iron county offers a reward of $100 for his capture, and the Finns have raised this to $500. The four companions of Derocio are in the Hurley jail.

Menominee—Swan Peterson, an insane man, committed suicide by hanging himself in the city jail yesterday afternoon, after being arrested for threatening the lives of several men in the Spies mill, where he was employed.

Peterson became suddenly insane while at work and tried to murder Engineer Becker, shooting a revolver several times at close range and trying to choke Engineer Peterson.

After a long and hard struggle he was overpowered and after it was thought he was secure he escaped and made a run for the river and jumped in. He was recovered after nearly drowning. In the afternoon the jailer went to his cell to find Peterson's body suspended by his suspenders.

Mrs. John Dane, aged 66 years, was severely injured at her home at Menominee by a fall through a trap door into a basement. She broke her leg in two places above the ankle. Mrs. Dane was alone in the house, and some time elapsed before her cries brought assistance.

Houghton—Managing Director John D. Ryan of the Amalgamated is here, and says the Amalgamated production for the current year will be the largest of any since its inception.

Last fall the Colorado smelter at Butte was closed down, while in April of this year operations were suspended at the Butte & Boston plant, with the result that but two smelters—the Washoe at Anaconda, and the Boston & Montana at Great Falls—are treating the company's entire output.

Sault Ste. Marie—Builders and contractors at the Soo are having a busy season. Fourteen new homes are being erected on the South side alone, and much other new work is in progress. There is plenty of work for carpenters and also for unskilled labor. A large force is employed on the construction of the Edison Sault power house.

Crystal Falls—The Sagola Lumber company has decided to extend its railroad a few miles west, towards Mansfield, seven miles east of Crystal Falls, and the material is being shipped there for that purpose. It is probable that before many years the Sagola people will have a road connecting with the Northwestern at Mansfield, a project the concern has had in mind for several years.

PLAY AT HIBBING.

Marshall-Wells Team Will Go to Range.

The Marshall-Wells baseball team will meet the strong Hibbing nine tomorrow afternoon in the range city.

On the last occasion that these two teams met, the game was called off in the second inning on account of rain.

Hibbing has had a clean record of victories this year, and the Marshall-Wells team, with Al Cummings in the box, should give the range men a good game.

"The Pit," the stage version by Chauncey Pollock of Frank Norris's famous novel was presented at the Lyceum last evening, by William A. Brady's company with the renowned Wilton Lackaye in the leading role. It was the initial performance of the play for this season, but the company is almost identical with that which closed in the play last season and there was nothing to mark it as the first production after a vacation except the very long intermissions between acts, required by the placing of settings for the acts. So long were these that it was within five minutes of midnight when the curtain went down on the final scene.

The play of "The Pit," like nearly all dramatizations of novels, leaves the person who reads the work with a sense of incompleteness, of so much lost that is fine that he can hardly feel else than disappointment. Out of the Norris work, a melodrama with much incident and vitality, has been created, but viewed artistically, the play is not of high rank. All things considered, it is really Lackaye, and the impersonation of Curtis Jadwin, the dominant figure, which one remembers, and not the play. It teaches a lesson, or rather two of them, but the subjects are not new. One is the evil of speculation, and the other the danger of neglect of home life in the absorption of business.

This was the first time that Wilton Lackaye has been seen here, in a strong role at least, but so conspicuous has been his name in connection with successful productions during the past ten years or more that it was hardly like welcoming a stranger. The part of Curtis Jadwin is not a great one, and will not add any new lustre to the fame of Mr. Lackaye, such, for instance, as did his great creation of Svengall, but he is intense, vivid, commandign and truthful in his portrayal. There is no staginess, no false note is struck at any moment, and most striking, probably, is the humanness of the part he plays. He is the strong, confident business man of everday life, somewhat more Napoleonic than the average, but a type not at all rare, fighting for the love of the fight and the glory of victory. He loves as he fights, with energy and determination that victory shall be his, but mixed with his direct manner and bearing there is a tenderness that is very winning. The great scene of the play is "the pit," and in this and the incidents leading up to it, when the great wheat deal is raging, Mr. Lackaye does his finest work, and exhibits that tremendous inherent force which is his. Without that the pit scene would fall flat, and even with it, it was rather disappointing last evening, but it never could be failure.

Miss Jane Oaker plays Laura Dearborn. It is a part that one must understand. Without appreciating the character of the woman and understanding and accepting her weaknesses as part of the nature she had been given, one could not find for her much sympathy. She is a woman who loves to be loved and when her husband's absorption in the maelstrom of speculation brings him to unconsciously neglect her, and when a lover of former days with a considerable glamor of romance about him begins to lavish upon her that devotion and thoughtfulness which she craves from her husband, she is involved in a struggle against his pleadings to cast it all off and go with him. The love for husband triumphs but it has a very close call. Miss Oaker plays the part of Miss Dearborn well, being especially delightful in its lighter moments, but hardly rises to the strength required of its heavier passages.

Beulah Watson was a pleasing and vivacious Page Dearborn and Miss Agnes Findlay was very good as Mrs. Wessels. Franklin Ritchie had the part of Sheldon Corthell, the artist lover, and unpleasant as the role is, played it with discrimination and without melodramatic villainy.

The company is a large one and all of the parts are well taken, no especially weak spot being apparent.

An unusual feature and one indicative of the lavish manner in which the production is made is the employment of grand opera singers.

SHE CAPTURES MINNEAPOLIS

Mme. Hellstrom Proclaimed Peer of Army of World's Singers.

The concert which will be given at the Lyceum theater next Tuesday evening will be one of the finest that Duluth music lovers will have had an opportunity to listen to in years. Mme. Anna Hellstrom, the great prima donna of the Royal Opera of Stockholm came to this country comparatively unknown although well known in Europe, but her progress here has been marked by a trial of triumphs. She has set Minneapolis Hellstrom-mad by her singing last Wednesday night. She sang there in the new auditorium which was packed to the doors and was given an ovation which singers rarely get more than once in a lifetime.

Next Tuesday evening she will be assisted by the Orpheus Swedish Glee club and the Arpi club in the chorus work, and Mrs. Carl Sheldon will play several solos on the violin.

Concerning her concert of Wednesday in Minneapolis the Minneapolis Journal says:

"A concert such as that given by Mme. Anna Hellstrom at the auditorium last evening under the auspices of the Orpheus club and the Festival chorus, might well be classed with Lowell's play 'day in June,' so rare is it.

"Naturally, interest centered in Mme. Hellstrom herself, the worthy successor of her famous countrywomen, Jenny Lind and Christine Nilsson. It is difficult to speak of the new star's singing with anything like moderation. She is wonderfully gifted by nature, with a keen intelligence, a perfect physique, a lovely, pliant face full of life and animation and varying in expression with each passing thought and, most attractive of all, she has a winning and charming personality that bubbles over with bonhomie and graciousness.

"Mme. Hellstrom's voice is unlike any other that has been heard here. Its two predominant qualities are a richness and fullness of timbre which satisfy and appeal to the listener, and a clear and bell-like intonation that carries it with ease into the furthest recesses of the room. It is remarkable also in its magnificent range from deep contralto notes to the highest notes of the upper register, and that with a smoothness and finish that are most marvelous. It is rare, indeed, to combine such gifts in one voice, and when such a voice has been trained, as Mme. Hellstrom's evidently has, to the acme of her art, the singer then becomes the 'diva of song.' Mme. Hellstrom is easily the peer of any of the leading singers of the day, and it is inevitable that she shall soon devote her gifts to al mankind instead of to the royal opera of Sweden, where she now reigns."

SUPERIOR'S CARNIVAL

Thrilling Free Acts to Be Presented—All In Readiness.

For the entertainment of carnival visitors in Superior next week there will be a number of free acts which will be presented each afternoon and evening.

The principal attraction is "Diavolo," who will present his thrilling "Loop-the-Loop." This is said to be the climax of human courage.

But Diavolo's daring feat is only one of the many free attractions which the committee has provided. Every afternoon and evening is to have its particular thrill. Free as air will be given the best of aerial and acrobatic acts, and the quaint and curious ceremonies of strange peoples of far-off lands will be enacted upon elevated stages. The free attractions alone will form a big day's entertainment and should not be missed.

Of the attractions which will be a part of the carnival too much cannot be said. The committee was indeed fortunate in securing the big Ferari Bros.' Carnival company, said to be the most gorgeous and most costly carnival aggregation on the road.

The company will arrive in Superior Sunday night over the Great Northern. The outfit and army of attaches will arrive on a special train, and their advent will no doubt be the signal for a big gathering at the railroad yards to witness the unloading. The aggregation carries as much paraphernalia as a circus, and the exciting scenes incident to a circus unloading will be re-enacted.

If the enthusiastic praise accorded the company in other cities is to be a criterion, the big trained animal show is the banner attraction. In a steel arena on the stage fearless men and women will prove their absolute control over the kings of the forest and jungle. The great number of other shows are said to be the best in their respective lines. The carnival opening will take place at 7:30 Monday evening, after a band concert by the carnival band.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Murderer Says Victim Attacked Him Before He Killed Him.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—The most important witness for the defense in the case of the state against Nicholas Steinkamp on the charge of murdering Charlie Dolman, was the defendant himself. He graphically detailed the occurrences of that night and told how, after being beaten by Dolman over the head with a butt of a buggy whip, and kicked in the groin, he struck Dolman a terrific blow over the heart with his pocketknife. The cross-examination failed to weaken materially the story of Steinkamp. Some of the corroborative evidence so far introduced has not been of an impressive nature, but if Steinkamp's story can be confirmed the chances seem favorable to his acquittal.

Aug. 29 will be Fargo day at the North Dakota state fair at Grand Forks. The Fargoans are planning to go in great numbers on that date and help boost along the fair and the attendance. There is a determination on the part of the hustlers of both Fargo and Grand Forks to make the state fair a success, even if they are held alternately in the two towns. A friendly rivalry exists in the matter.

Grafton—Rev. Mr. Christmas, the "divine healer," who spent two weeks in this city, left for his home in Canada. He made several miraculous cures. Hundreds came from miles around to get relief from all kinds of ailments and it is estimated that several thousand persons received treatments. On Sunday afternoon and evening he addressed large audiences at the Opera house. He expects to return to Grafton soon.

Fairmount—Andrew Engel shipped a car of new barley Wednesday—the first car of new grain shipped from this vicinity this year. The harvesting of wheat is just starting. Grain is ripening rapidly and next week will be a busy time for farmers.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sisseton—Sisseton was shocked and horrified by the report of the murder in cold blood of two citizens by an Indian. Deputy Sheriff M. E. Colby and Edward Peterson had gone to the house of an Indian named Zach Flute, who lives about two miles from the village of Peever, to get possession of a team of mortgaged horses.

An altercation took place, and the Indian, according to his own story, went into the house for a shotgun and killed Colby, shooting him at such short range that his lungs were nearly blown away. Peterson started to run through a wheat field, and the Indian reloaded the gun, chased him about a quarter of a mile and shot him three times.

Flute then went to Peever and gave himself up. The sheriff was sent for and now has him in custody.

As soon as the news became generally known crowds of excited men gathered on street corners. Talk of lynching was freely indulged in. The citizens are terribly wrought up, and it is doubtful if the sheriff will be able to hold his prisoner.

The Indians have been drinking heavily of late and making ugly threats. It is feared that a lynching would bring about an outbreak.

The bodies of Colby and Peterson are on the way here.

The Indian is about 30, speaks English and is fairly intelligent. It is said that he was at one time a preacher at Flandreau and Granite Falls.

Peterson resided near Wilmot and had recently been employed as a clerk in a clothing store at Sisseton, and had been collecting from the Indians since the recent Indian payment.

Colby was married and had been living near Sisseton for two years. He came from Iowa.

THE HERALD EXCURSIONS

To Fond du Lac Monday and on Lake Tuesday.

Nothing can equal a sound mind in a sound body. The popularity of The Herald speaks eloquently of the many sound minds in Duluth and the success of the management in supplying them nourishing mental food.

The soundest, sanest minds often become fagged and demand change and entertainment outside of beaten paths and ordinary character. Rest and recreation are indispensable to both mind and body and, in these sweltering dog days, excursions to the leafy woods and on the greatest of lakes fill the bill and do the work. The Herald's delightful and successful boat excursions are a recognition of these facts.

The fourth Herald excursion to Fond du Lac will be given next Monday. At 9 a. m. the popular pleasure steamer Newsboy, in charge of Capt. Harvey D. Clow, will leave the foot of Fifth avenue west, only, and then call at Tower Bay slip, Superior, en route to the beautiful groves up the St. Louis river. It is an ideal trip for the tired mother; the daughter soon to enter college for a year of hard mental toil; the care-free and pleasure-loving children and the sight-seeing stranger within the city's gates. It is an all day trip and one of the most delightful and satisfying on the great American continent. The Newsboy will arrive at 6 p. m. on the return trip. The entire day's outing costs 25 cents for the boat ride.

Next Tuesday The Herald's first lake excursion wil be given. The popular and palatial steamer America has been secured. She will leave Booth's dock at 4 p. m., go thirty miles down Lake Superior and, making a moonlight return, arrive at 9 p. m.

This excursion has been planned for those who do not wish an all-day trip or who cannot get away from business. The hour will enable the man enmeshed in the toils of business to get away from shop or desk or market place, take his family and spend a delightful, refreshing and invigorating five hours on the world's greatest and grandest body of fresh water. The cost of this unique and unusual excursion will be but 25 cents—half the ordinary price for excursions covering the same route and at less acceptable hours.

THE SECRET LEAKED OUT

Escanaba, Mich., Aug. 12.—At a climax to the sensational suit for alienation of the affections of his wife, begun by Albert S. Holtman of Green Bay against Henry Rahr and Mrs. Holtman-Geer, who was granted a divorce, were married here Tuesday night.

The ceremony was performed by Rev. P. F. Ferris of the Presbyterian church and an attempt was made to keep the affair quiet. Both the clerk who issued the marriage license and the minister who performed the ceremony were sworn to secrecy, but at 7 o'clock last night, after several refusals to be seen, Mr. Rahr confirmed the report of his marriage to the woman for alienating whose affections he had been sued for $50,000.

The trial suit brought by Holtman against Rahr was one of the most sensational ever heard in Green Bay. The names of many prominent people were mentioned in the case, which occupied three weeks in trial. The jury failed to reach a verdict and it was later announced that the case was settled.

Mrs. Holtman was awarded a divorce from her husband after a struggle and has since been living in seclusion with her mother. She was for many years a society leader. Mr. Rahr was a bachelor and is head of the Henry Rahr & Son Brewing company of Green Bay and of the Escanaba Brewing company.

Green Bay, Wis., Aug. 12.—The information received here that Henry Rahr, the wealthy brewer, had married Alice Geer, the divorcee, has caused a sensation. Relatives refuse to talk of the marriage. The couple found it necessary to go to Michigan to outwit the Wisconsin law prohibiting the remarriage of divorced persons within one year after securing a divorce.

SUNDAY CONCERT.

Program at Oatka Beach Sunday.

One of the special features of the Sunday afternoon program at Oatka Beach will be the march "Fera," composed by Director Otto Muhlbaur and dedicated to the Minnesota naval militia. This will be the first public rendering of the new march. The program follows:

TOWN CLOCK CAUSED TROUBLE

Goes Wrong and a Georgia Community Is In An Awful Fix.

Mayor Turner of Covington, Ga., has demanded, in the name of the people of Covington, to know what time it is, says the Chicago Tribune. He has appealed to Atlanta to have noon flashed to him on the stroke of the clock in order that the hours, minutes and seconds may be restored.

Just at present no one in Covington is certain whether the time is 10 minutes after 10 or 12 57, except by the sun, and even the old-timers differ as to where the shadow of the town hall spire strikes at noon on any given day. The watches of the town and the clocks from constant setting and resetting and correcting, have become so mixed up that one can walk along a street and hear clocks striking anything from 1 to 3 any afternoon. Arguments as to whose clock or watch is right have led to serious trouble, and each one is going independent, refusing to accept the dictates of any one else's watch at any time. The stores open at different hours, meals are served at all sorts of times, and nobody knows what time it is. So the mayor has appealed for official time to settle the dispute.

The people of the town have for many years been in the habit of regulating their timepieces of all sorts by the time of the great clock in the tower of the courthouse, which was renowned through all that section of the country as a rival of the sun as a timekeeper.

A few weeks ago everybody in town waked up one morning to find that their clocks were eighteen minutes slow as compared with the town clock. Nobody thought of disputing the time of the town clock, so almost everybody, except Sim Martin, changed their timepieces to correspond with the town clock. Two days later everybody's clock was twenty-eight minutes fast again. That time a few were suspicious, but, as they never thought of comparing experiences, they all changed their own timepieces again—except Sim, who declared that his watch, which his father bought for $7 at August in 1872, was right, and that all the others were wrong. Knowing Sim to be confident that he was right about everything, he was ignored.

Two days later everybody's clock suddenly gained another fourteen minutes. That time some changed and some did not. The janitor of the courthouse climbed up and inspected the big clock and found it running away regularly as ever.

The next day everybody's clock gained twenty-three minutes, and the following day fourteen more, and by that time there was a perfect babel of times in town, clocks varying over an hour in houses standing next to each other.

Of course, after a couple of weeks everybody blamed the town clock for setting them wrong, but no two could agree what time it really was, each insisting that his own was the more reliable watch, as is the habit of men the world over.

That state of affairs continued for several weeks, until the difference in time began to disorganize business, schools and even courts. Nobody could tell what time it was, and all a boy had to do when he played hookey was to turn his watch back three or four hours and then show up, claiming he was on time.

The strange actions of the town clock puzzled everybody concerned. Expert clockmakers examined the works carefully and could find nothing wrong with them, and the clock kept running regularly and without a slip. As the courthouse was locked tight at night the suspicion that some practical joker had been tampering with the clock at night was soon discarded.

But Milt Zinc, the janitor, refused to believe that the fault was with the faithful old clock. He determined to find out the source of the trouble, and to this end he hid himself in the belfry of the courthouse one evening last week, determined to solve the mystery. He sat all night in the belfry, and the next morning he discovered that the clock had lost twenty-one minutes. He examined carefully to see if any one else had entered the courthouse, and discovered that they had not.

By that time the negroes of the district were whispering that the big clock was bewitched. But Milt refused to believe any such stories. He declared that somebody was monkeying with the clock, and that he intended to get even. That night he took his perch on a narrow ledge fifteen feet under the clock and sat there gazing up at it.

Shortly after dark he was almost frightening off his perch by a sudden rustle of wigs, and, recovering himself, he gazed upward and saw two big pigeons getting ready for their night's rest.

One of them alighted on the minute hand of the clock and stood there, and then the other circled around and alighted beside it. Their combined weight pushed down the minute hand until they were forced to fly away and find another roosting place—but while they sat there the clock lost twelve minutes.

The next morning the janitor reported to the mayor, and the mayor, while waiting for a glass front to be put over the face of the big clock, telegraphed to get the official time.

So hereafter Covington will be on time again.

QUEER THINGS MAN EATS

Earth, Seaweed, Turtles, Frogs, Nests, Snails and Coal Among Them.

Complaint is often made that the average daily meal in the ordinary household is a monotonous round of mutton and beef, says the London Lancet. In the majority of instances this simple and majority of instances this simple and compelled on the score of convenience and economy, although, with a little more thought and trouble than are usually bestowed on this matter, we are convinced that more variation could be contrived during the nest-building season, but which lose this function afterward. The viscid substance resembles the mucin or albumin excreted by the sublingual gland.

The turtle may be regarded as as odd article of food, since it is the only example of an edible reptile, at least in this country. Frogs' legs, again, are rarely eaten in this country, though they are easily digested, possess a delicate flavor and have about the same nutritive value as chicken. Neither is the shell esteemed as an article of food in this country, though in France it is partaken of in large quantities, and so good is it that it has been called "the poor man's oyster." The edible snail, however, is a particular kind, and is generally collected in considerable numbers from the vineyards of France. In Spain the snail is served in a most excellent and appetizing manner, and in Paris a dish of selected snails is reserved for the special use of the gourmet. Coal would appear to be a strange article of food, but instances are known in which children and cats have been found consuming it in a not negligible quantity. There is no evidence, however, although coal contains an abundance of one of the most important elements of food—i. e., carbon—that in this form it is in the best degree assimilated.

DELICATE APPARATUS A WONDER

Machine For Employing To Practical Purposes a Man's Heart Beats.

I have the acquaintance of a genius who is making a delicate apparatus for employing to practical purposes his heart beats, says the New York Press. Believing that the human heart is the most powerful mechanism God ever created, he wants to use it to run his wife's sewing machine, in addition to maintaining his circulation. The normal heart beat is 72 to the minute in the healthy adult. This man, by smoking a strong cigar, can increase his pulsation to 140 a minute without, figure or any derangement of health, and will use his electric apparatus, which is quite sensitive, to operate a small motor. "The hydraulic ram was constructed on the principle of the heart action," he says, "therefore why not use my extra excitement for the benefit of the home circle? My wife objects to cigars, but if I can run her sewing machine by lying back in an arm chair and taking an occasional whiff I'm sure she will relent."

It is said that E. R. Thomas, who is too long for any bed but that occupied by the earl of Warwick, the king maker, has a pulse of only 46 to the minute. He is about the coolest proposition you ever saw. Doesn't know how to become excited. On the other hand, Col. Abe Gruber's pulse is always 100 or over, and the short but able little lawyer and politician can get redhot in a fraction of a second, sending his beats up to 145. The taller the men the slower the heart beat. That explains why little men are so fiery and pugilistic and very tall fellows are always so good-natured. (This is my own solution of the problem: I don't care what the learned doctors say).

The cause of the heart beat is the most interesting study to which man could possibly devote himself. We now "learn" that radium is at the bottom of it. The general public are so little acquainted with anatomy, chemistry, surgery, medicine, etc., in all their ramifications that any sort of yarn, faked up by a clever reporter, is accepted as a solemn fact. Ambassador Reid twenty years ago developed a most amazing appetite for articles about rare surgical operations, and one of his bright young men filled the Tribune with such astounding tales that the whole world stood aghast. The reporter had just enough anatomical or surgical lore to make his stories "deep" to the masses. Mr. Reid always marked them "Must," which gave them precedence over any other matter in the local news columns.

EXCITEMENT ON THE CUYUNA IRON RANGE AT FEVER HEAT

If Pace Is Kept Up, the Wild Mesaba Boom of Decade and Half Ago Will Not Be In It.

George H. Crosby Is Making History In the Robert Lake Country.

Deerwood, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—If the present pace is kept up, the Cuyuna iron range will soon be enveloped in a boom that will beat anything in Northern Minnesota since the wild Mesaba days a decade and a half ago.

The woods are fairly swarming with dip needle artists. Options and fees are being eagerly sought at prices that would have been considered signs of insanity on the part of the buyer a year and less ago. The old farmers show an excitement almost on a par with a stampede of Texas steers on a Western range, and their prices and terms will be almost prohibitive if they do not cool down soon.

Right here in Deerwood it is almost impossible to get hotel accommodations. Rooms are engaged in advance and, many nights, a dozen guests have to put up with cots and shake-downs on the floor. Even town lots are advancing and several were sold recently to those who expect the village to become the headquarters of the range.

Out at Brainerd interest is standing on tip toe, as it were, and some even entertain fears that so much iron will be found as to destroy its commercial value.

Duluth "knockers" are looking around for a cyclone cellar and scoffers are scouring up their rusty prayers. "Big interests" are hedging by getting choice fees and options. Some of the wise ones even claim that the "Steel trust" is peeking through the "hole." Time will tell as to that, but some of the early birds in the field declare that if the "Steel trust" gets through the door and into the real performance, it will have to pay a handsome admission fee.

Facts and figures will, I think, prove the correctness of the foregoing assertions.

Today, one working shaft is being sunk on the Cuyuna range. Nine drills are actually in operation. I know of seven more that must be in operation as soon as they can be laid down and set up. Reliable information makes it safe to say that certain heavy interests will have to start drills soon. I have no doubt but that, inside of thirty days from date, not less than twenty drills will be actually and steadily at work. What the next three months will see, I venture no prediction.

Practically, all my information is from those actually interested or those entitled to know facts and figures divulged to me. I have no personal interest in exaggerating conditions and common justice impels me to state facts fully and correctly. One giant among local iron men has a son with more money than knowledge of men. He recently stated, in a public manner, that such news as I have written concerning the Cuyuna range was simply to help option holders dispose of their holdings. Personally, I feel no need of defense, but the reading public is entitled to know that facts and opinions furnished by me to The Herald are based on news value alone and not to help some needy negro in the wood pile.

Out in the edge of Brainerd, in the old driving park, Messrs. Lum, Hartley, et al, have started a drill in search of iron. This land is a part of the Schwartz farm and while Brainerd people did not make a success of the race track, those back of the drilling hope to do better with iron.

If iron is found on this land, it may run under homes, stores and vacant lots right within the limits of Brainerd and then on down into Morrison county. Prospectors have told me, too, that some rather favorable formations show up in Morrison county.

Fifteen or eighteen years, ago, there was a small iron boom in Brainerd and a shaft was sunk near where drilling now is in progress. It was a little too far to one side, it is thought, and water, lack of nerve and cash, possibly, stopped operations before anything very encouraging was found.

Pickands, Mather & Co. are busily engaged in sinking a working shaft on the southeast quarter of section 8-45-29, where nine drill holes were put down last winter and spring with satisfactory results.

A 40-horse power boiler has been enclosed and a substantial shaft house erected. Steam hoist and pump are employed and a very substantial shaft is now down fifty feet. It is a double compartment shaft 5x12 feet in the clear, and heavy squared timbers, with iron hangers, have been used.

Thus far, the shaft has gone through a blue clay hardpan, with no quicksand. It is expected that solid rock will be encountered at a depth of sixty or seventy feet. At present, twenty men are employed.

It is proposed to sink to a depth of at least 150 feet, cross-cut the formation and then take out several carloads of ore for furnace tests.

• • •

The Northern Pacific Railroad company is working four drills under contract with Cole & McDonald. One working in section 3-45-29 has struck ore but information as to details is not at hand.

A second drill in the southwest part of section 20-46-28, was started in the foot wall and while no ore was encountered, a very strong formation was shown. Work is in progress there still.

A third drill is at work for the Northern Pacific in the northwesterly part of section 21-46-28, near Reno Lake, and almost in sight of the summer home of E. T. Buxton, a Superior banker. The first hole was started about five weeks ago and ore was encountered at a depth of something over 100 feet. The drill is now down 300 feet, bottomed in ore, thus giving nearly 200 feet of ore at the present time.

Work by Mr. Adam's company, close by, showed that the ore body is at least 100 feet wide.

The fourth drill working on Northern Pacific contract is on the southerly side of section 16-46-28, east of Deerwood a couple of miles. Drilling has been under way but a few weeks and some ore with a very strong formation is the result to date.

On the easterly side of section 20-46-28 Cole & McDonald are drilling on a fee owned by L. L. Brown and others. This is known as the Crone land, and some very fine ore has been encountered, according to information furnished me.

Drilling done north of this, on the east half of the northeast quarter of section 20, a property belonging to Cuyler Adams and associates, showed an easterly and westerly width of 300 feet of ore, somewhat diagonally, of course, across the strike of the ore body. Assays of ore found by that work gave 57 per cent in iron, no sulphur and .02 in phosphorus.

Mr. Adams is operating one drill at present on this belt near Reno lake, making six drills in all on the south range.

• • •

The Rabbit Lake country, through which runs the so-called "North Range," is experiencing a great activity, and George H. Crosby has been making history in there the past week.

For over a year Cuyler Adams and associates have been drilling on section 30-47-28, near Rabbit Lake, with the result that over 3,000,000 tons of ore have been proven with drills. Over twenty holes have been drilled, showing up ore for 2,000 feet in length, over 150 feet wide, and without finding both hanging and foot wall. That drill is running still.

It will be remembered that about a dozen different parties were after lands in sections 29 and 32, 47-28, belonging to Fred and Christ Ehrich. Finally, when George H. Crosby arrived on the scene, three different parties were actually on the premises, striving for an option. One crowd was in the potato patch, a second in the barnyard and a third on the woodpile. Something about the erstwhile dealer in Duluth dirt caught the fancy and confidence of the Ehrich family, and, with one voice, the members exclaimed: "We wish to sign your papers." Mr. Crosby accordingly took them into his carriage, drove off to a notary and left the three different and disappointed gangs of option-seekers scattered over the Ehrich premises.

Mr. Crosby rushed a drill out there, and the first hole struck ore at a depth of 102 feet, after four days' work. That drill, five days ago, was sixty feet in fine, hard ore, with no bottom in sight. This hole is, too, three-eighths of a mile from drilling on section 29, done by Mr. Adams, and on the southwest quarter of section 29.

The ore from this hole, so far as drillings show, look's very fine. It assays from 55 to 60 per cent in metallic iron, with very satisfactory percentages in other constituents. Thus far, in fact, it is merchantable ore.

Mr. Crosby also has a drill at work on section 36, 47-29, on land held under state lease by Richard Long, and for which lease he will receive $10,000 if Mr. Crosby exercises his privilege. A drill started there got down sixty-eight feet and then broke a bit. That caused a delay, but all interested are very hopeful, and confidently expect some good news any day.

Mr. Crosby controls ninety-four forty-acre pieces in that vicinity and at once will send out three additional drills. These will be in charge of Gust Carlson, an experienced drill man.

Mr. Crosby also figures on taking over the entire holdings of the Mineral Lands and Mining company, south of Cedar lake, in sections 7, 8, 17, 18 and 21, 46-27; and section 13, 24, 46-28.

• • •

While my information is not direct from the principals, I am creditably informed that the Shenango Furnace Co., through Mr. Barrows, the Duluth representative, has taken from Messrs. Oberg and Jamieson, lands in section 2 and 35, 46-29, and will put on drills at an early day. The Shenango people also have other lands under advisement and their entrance into the field promises to be very serious and important.

M. F. Kalmbach, only a few days ago, closed a deal with very wealthy men and heavy iron operators that may be more significant than the move by the Shenango people. They take his options and pay for the fees, giving him five cents a ton royalty for his bargains. The deal embraces 160 acres in section 2; 70 acres in section 4; 205 acres in section 9, 46-29, around Little Rabbit lake. Three drills will be sent out there at once.

The buyers require that their identity be concealed and, being men of power and wealth, they are in a position to have their slightest wish respected. They are two of the wealthiest men and heaviest iron operators in Duluth, however.

• • •

The Cuyuna range and the main portion of the Mesaba have an aspiring competitor. For a couple of years W. H. Shea, Sr., the sturdy warrior in the Cedar Lake island fight, has been following up what he considers an extension of the Mesaba, from Grand Rapids to Pine River, on the M. & I. railroad. Others, too, have followed the same lead. In that region, north of the Mississippi river, south of Leech lake, southwesterly of Grand Rapids, clear through to Pine River station, Mr. Shea has prospected and found many surface indications, outcrops, float, etc., of a genuine Mesaba formation. He has taken many options and, ten miles east of Pine River, has been operating a drill in a good-looking formation, but, to date, has struck no ore in place. Minneapolis people are interested with him and just now, I am told, negotiations are on for a sale of a number of his options and holdings. Recently, when in Duluth, he had samples of iron, jasper, taconite and quartzite that looked like the real thing.

• • •

But Mr. Shea is not the only one scurrying around in that region. A month ago, Robert Whitesides sent out an expedition equipped for a two months' trip. It consisted of five men, including a cook. In the party were E. LeDuc, a dip needle artist, John Watt, an experienced woodsman and Mr. Whitesides' nephew. What they are finding no one knows, of course. The party even pretends to be out for pine timber, but there is indisputable evidence that iron is the real object sought.

• • •

It will be remembered that W. P. Lardner took out ninety state leases in one day at St. Paul a few weeks ago. Those lands were in this region and rumor has it that Mr. Lardner represented Louis Rouchleau and that, in fact, he has done so for a couple of years. It is known that David T. Adams and Neil McInnis have visited that region and many believe that both Adams and Rouchleau are interested together. For many weeks, T. T. Hudson has been scurrying around, scanning records, taking options and paying over option money. He is credited with representing Mr. Rouchleau and, in this work, has been seen at Pine River, Brainerd, St. Paul, Minneapolis and Duluth. Only a few weeks ago, a pile of bills almost as high as your hat came into Pine River by express and was thrown into the safe of a local attorney to be used in taking up options on iron lands.

The great question just now is not so much as where iron will be found in Northern Minnesota but, rather, where it will not be found.

GET WELL—KEEP WELL

Distilled Water Often Cures Chronic Rheumatism—Buttermilk Makes Healthy Blood—Milk Should Be Drunk Slowly—Bread and Milk More Digestible Than Milk Alone—Tea Less Wholesome Than Coffee—Taken Without Milk It Injures the Stomach.

BY EDWARD B. WARMAN, A. M.

(Copyright, 1905, by Joseph B. Bowles.)

Distilled water is the pure steam which, having been freed from the impurities of the boiled water, is condensed into liquid form, leaving the refuse in the vessel containing the boiling water. This condensed steam is the hydrogen and oxygen that are driven off and form pure water; that is, pure H. O., exactly like the water in the clouds.

It is often said: "No one past middle life should drink hard water." I believe this, because the average person, after that period, does not take sufficient physical exercise to rid the system of the mineral poisons. As for myself, not having yet reached my middle life (being only 58 years young), I still drink the hard water, but would not do so were my activities to cease.

I would especially recommend the daily use of distilled water or buttermilk (see next subject) for the aged because of the increase of calcareous deposits with the advancing years, and the accumulation of too much earthy salts in the tissues and bones. These are, indeed, detrimental. They bring on premature senility by destroying the elasticity of the blood vessels and thus interfering with the strength and with the circulation of the blood.

Distilled water bathes the living tissues, snatches up obstructions to growth and activity, eliminates poisons and gives to the body the freshness and vigor of youth. It cannot abstract any formed matter from living tissue, but invigorates and energizes it by removing waste matter which in the very nature of things, obstructs healthful activity and development. It is one of the most powerful solvents, acting directly upon the calcareous deposits left in the arteries and joints by the use of poisonous raw water heavily impregnated with lime, thus dissolving and eliminating it from the system, often resulting in the cure of chronic cases of rheumatism.

Health and long life must, therefore, follow its free and continued use. There would not, could not, be a case of calculus or stone in the bladder, if distilled water were regularly used. Think of how much suffering, in this one regard, might be avoided.

BUTTERMILK.

Hygienically speaking, this comes next in order, because, in its results, it is so nearly akin to distilled water. Buttermilk, as a remedial agent, cannot be prized too highly. As a nutriment it is wholly unlike sweet milk. Its food value may be less by chemical tests, but in every other way it is very much more. It tones the stomach and furnishes it the material from which to make rich, red, healthy blood. If you have gout or a gouty tendency drink a quart of buttermilk every twenty-four hours. In this case avoid meat, sweets, pastry, wine, spices, hot rolls, bread of all sorts and everything belonging to the tribe of ferments. Eggs, game, unfermented bread, fresh fruit, vegetables, especially salads, may be indulged in freely. The exciting cause of gout is sluggish excretion, but buttermilk gently stimulates all the excretories—liver, skin and kidneys.

As to the amount of buttermilk to remove these tendencies, I merely mentioned one quart a day as the minimum, but if you have appetite and capacity for three quarts a day, so much the better. My advice to anyone that has a creaky joint or a swollen and aching one is to drink all the buttermilk he can relish, but it should be freshly churned and wholesome.

Lactic acid, the sour of buttermilk, also attacks and dissolves (as does distilled water) every sort of earthly de-

BLEEDING SICKNESS IS A PUZZLE

Is a Very Rare Disease and In Certain Families It Can Be Traced for Generations.

Haemophily, or "bleeding sickness," has been known for more than a century, says the Scientific American. It is a rare disease and is confined to certain families in which it may be traced for generations. It is characterized, as the name suggests, by an extraordinary tendency to effusion of blood. A fall, a slight blow, the prick of a pin, may occasion severe, even a fatal hemorrhage. It is not even necessary that the skin should be broken. The "bleeder" is subject to effusions of blood, in the subcutaneous tissue, often without apparent cause, and is very liable to hemorrhages from the nose, gums, tongue, and the mucous membranes of the stomach and bowels, or from other vital organs such as the kidneys and the brain. So slight a surgical operation as the extraction of a tooth is extremely dangerous in the case of a "bleeder."

These hemorrhages are not due to ruptures of large blood vessels, but the blood flows from the tissue as from a squeezed sponge. In a normal individual a small wound soon becomes covered with a firmly adhering clot of coagulated blood which prevents further bleeding. In a "bleeder" a clot is also formed, as a rule, but it does not adhere to the wound and is soon carried away by the pressure of the escaping blood, which therefore continues to flow.

In internal hemorrhages there is still greater difference between the normal man and the "bleeder." Under these conditions the blood of the latter coagulates very slightly, if at all, while normal blood coagulates within the body as well as without. This fact explains the difference in the adherence of the clot to an external wound in the two cases. In one, coagulation is only superficial, while in the other, the normal man, it penetrates deeply so that the clot becomes firmly rooted in the flesh. But the fact itself, the diminished tendency to coagulation exhibited by the blood of certain persons, remains unexplained. We know that normal coagulation is conditioned by the presence in the blood of certain specific ferments, extremely small quantities of which suffice to effect coagulation. Are these ferments entirely absent from the blood of "bleeders," or does this contain other substances which destroy their activity? The solution of these problems would probably give us an insight into the true nature of the disease and a rational and possibly successful method of treatment.

A most interesting peculiarity of the disease, regarded from a scientific point of view, is the remarkable law of heredity which it illustrates. This law has long been known in a general way, for more than sixty European families of "bleeders" had been recognized and studied twenty years ago, but in no other instance has it manifested itself so clearly and sharply as in the case of the Mampel family, whose history for more than 100 years has been investigated by Prof. Lossel of Heidelberg, and described by him in a recent article in the Deutsche Zeitschrift fuer Chirurgie.

The first of the family of whom anything is known were one Johann Peter Mampel and his wife, neither of whom was a "bleeder." They had eleven children. ("Bleeding families, by the way, are noted for fecundity.) Of the six sons two died in infancy and three developed into unmistakable "bleeders," but neither the remaining son nor any of the five daughters ever showed any symptom of the disease. All the children of all the sons were likewise exempt and so were the daughters of the daughters, but in the sons of the daughters the disease reappeared. The same rule holds in the next and all succeeding generations. All the children, both male and female, of the "bleeding" men have been normal, while the women of the family, normal themselves, have given birth to sons of whom nearly all were "bleeders" and to daughters of whom quite all were normal.

The law of heredity, therefore, as deduced from the 212 members of this family is this:

Though the disease is confined to males it is never transmitted by these male "bleeders" to their children, but only by the (normal) women of the family to their sons.

The women, therefore, transmit a peculiarity which they have never had, or, more properly, have never manifested in their own persons, necessary consequence of this is that no "bleeder" can be found among the ancestors of a "bleeder," though his uncles, grand-uncles, great-grand-uncles, etc., are likely to have suffered from the disease. The law leads to the conclusion that the wife of Johann Peter Mampel belonged to a family of "bleeders," but, unfortunately, documentary evidence is wanting as her ancestry cannot be traced.

The law has been confirmed, in general, by observations on other families. Occasionally, though very rarely, however, a female "bleeder" is found.

DANGERS OF STALKING A LION

How a Hunter Got a Fine Specimen In the African Jungle.

Outing: Fifteen yards from him there was a small tuft of grass, about ten yards wide. Ah! if I could reach that. But before I could place that in a straight line between him and me there were fifty yards of sunbaked mud to cross. I had lost many a shot from trying to approach too close to game, and had sworn, "Never again." But the "Devil of the Stalk" was in my heart. I would reach that grass or forego the shot. I drew, examined and replaced the two cartridges in my 500 magnum, looked at the end of the barrels to see that they were clear of sand, placed the hammers at full cock, and inch by inch crawled from my cover and out onto the stark, naked plain.

The lion's back was turned to me, but I could clearly see the droop of the shoulders as he swallowed the lumps of meat. I was already half way—my hand was slowly pushing the rifle another yard ahead, when my car, tightpressed to the ground, heard a faint noise, followed by a sharp hiss. A puff-adder raised its villainous squat head from the dust, looked into my face with flashing eyes and quivering tongue, and sulkily crawled away. Startled I had quickly drawn back my head, but, seeing it depart, had immediately again lowered it behind my outstretched arm. The lion, however, had caught the movement and instantly turned toward me.

The sun played full upon his face, and I could plainly see the wrinkles on his nose and the blood-flecked slime dripping from his jowl. He took half a dozen steps toward me and then, to my astonishment, returned and resumed his meal. Again I crept forward till at last the patch hid him from my view.

I promptly rose to my feet, and bending low, glided rapidly toward the grass. Fifty yards—forty—thirty—twenty—ten, like midwinter snow my footfalls sank upon the dust. I held my breath. My fingers twitched on the trigger guard. My heart stood still in the last tautening of a frantic strain—yet another six steps and I could peer through that waving bunch of grass—at what?

Our eyes met.

The wondering expression broke into a hideous snarl—and before I could recover from my surprise the lion had gone. Sick at heart, I dashed round the intervening clump; the wide stretch of grass forty yards beyond parted to the rush of a great yellow form; loud spoke my gun; plump came the answer of the bullet speeding home; a fierce rumbling growl, and north, south, east and west the seemingly untenanted world was dan ing in the noontide heat, while a smoke wreath idly drifted down the plain.

MONTE CARLO'S BIG PROFIT

The Great Gambling Institution Yielded $7,204,000 Clear Gain Last Season.

News which concerns great sums of money has a curious way of leaking out into publicity, however tightly guarded; and although Messieurs the directors of the Casino company of Monte Carlo are discreetness itself in this matter, the world has already learned the fact that their wonderful cash-coining machine has, during the season 1904-05 earned for their shareholders the magnificent sum of £1,440,880, an increase of roughly £80,000 on the right side of the balance sheet—the right side for them, at least, if not for the Riviera tripper—over the takings of 1903-1904, says T. P's. Weekly.

What this increase is due to, or supposed to be due to, we are not told; but its significance, to the student of economy not less than to the student of morals, is very considerable. It would appear that M. Blanc, the Napoleon of the roulette wheel, though dead, "yet speaketh," and with a voice which is the sweetest of music in the Monegasque's ears; whose echoes, moreover, are heard not infrequently on the Parisian Bourse, when shares in his modestly styled "Societe Anonyme des Bains de Mer et Cercle des Etrangers" come into the market. It would appear, likewise, that the increase in his "salary" from £ 50,000 per annum to £70,000, which the Prince of the Sunny Promontory recently extorted from the Casino company when he renewed its lease for another fifty years, is not so ruinous a piece of blackmail as was then supposed; and that the £100,000 which was spent on the local theater and orchestra, though seemingly extravagant, has proved a sound investment, notwithstanding the continued loss on these latter attractions.

Does any fly who walks into M. Blanc's parlor, one is tempted to wonder, ever issue thence as fat as when he entered? One would fancy not—to judge by the figures of this paralyzing balance sheet. Nevertheless, the stories of fortunes made at Monte Carlo persistently outnumber those of fortunes lost. Whether this singular phenomenon is traceable to the "press subvention," which in 1901 (the last report in which it seems openly to be alluded to) cost $100,000, it would be impossible to have suspicions. That versatile gossip, Lieutenant Colonel Newnham-Davis, vouches for the truth of an anecdote which credits a Chicago friend of his with scooping 500,000 francs in the Salles de Jeu in a single day, and (greater marvel still!) having the horse sense to "ske-daddle" with the whole sum intact. There is no reason to doubt, too, that in the 1901-02 winter season one of the Russian grand dukes, playing in the Cub Privee, made 200,000 francs.

Probably more money has been lost by the Monte Carlo "Bank" through fraud than through what we must, for lack of a better name, call "honest" play. An institution such as the Casino is a tempting bait for the professional swindler; and there are more such gentry harbored in Monaco's three miles of territory than in any other spot of similar size in the civilized globe. True, the majority of them prey not on the bank, but on the dupes. Stake snatching and various ingenious variants of the confidence trick form their main standby. Still, the bank itself suffers from their attentions.

A Lesson In Culinary Ethics

By Frank H. Sweet.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Hey! nothin' to eat in there yet?" and burly Jake, backed by the other five hired men, lumbered wonderingly into the kitchen. "No fire in the stove? Where's all the women folks? What's up?"

Johnson started, then drew himself together hurriedly.

"My wife and daughter have just run up to Mary Brown's for a day or two," he answered gruffly. "The visit was—pretty sudden, and they had no time to send me word, nor to get dinner. But I guess we can patch up one between us, eh, Jake," trying to pass it off lightly. "Get just as good dinner as the women folks and a might sight quicker."

"Course, we can," cried Jake, with alacrity, and pleased at the thought of so novel a task, "and one we'll like better too. Men folks know just what men folks want. We'll have injuns and taters, and coffee that's strong enough to taste."

"And b'iled cabbage," reminded one of the men earnestly.

"And tripe."

"And baked beans."

"Come, come! We can't have everything at once," expostulated Johnson, impatiently. "Here, pitch in, all of you, and help what you can. That field's got to be hoed before dark."

But in spite of the superabundance of assistance the dinner progressed slowly, and it was 2 o'clock before the men drew their chairs to the table, red-faced and fuming at the stupidity of each other. And in spite of the fact that it was of their own cooking, the dinner did not seem to please them. They tasted suspiciously of one dish and another, and pushed their plates back, and then tried again, grimacing and scowling and at last rose sullenly and left the room.

Johnson glanced at his watch as the last one disappeared. He had work of importance to look after, so the dishes and food were left on the table, and the cooking utensils on the stove and floor, wherever they had been dropped in the hurry. It would be time enough to attend to them when he returned.

But long before that the sun had fallen behind the apple orchard, and the kitchen was so full of shadows as to call for artificial light. He was tired and cross, and this did not facilitate dish-washing and supper-getting. When the men came in from their late chores he was bristling with angry impatience, and his face and clothing were spotted with grease and soot of reckless contact with dishwater and cooking utensils. Again they were called upon for assistance, and again—after some of the unsatisfactory supper had been forced down—the dishes and food were left on the table, to await the time when it would be necessary to remove them.

One day longer the "men folk's" cooking was persisted in, but by that time the pleasant kitchen had been transformed from a place of orderliness to a den of chaotic neglect. Then Jake declared that all the files of the whole neighborhood had come to feast with them, and that if no change was made, he, for one, was going to take his meals henceforth over to Neighbor Gould's; and that the other hired men agreed with him.

So the next morning Jake was sent unceremoniously to Mary Brown's with orders to bring the women folks home, which they did not.

"Just tell them we're too busy with the hoeing now to bother with cooking," Johnson snarled. "If 'twas any other time we wouldn't care a continental whether they come or stayed. It's just their aggravating way to pick out a time like this."

But when Jake returned with the information that Mary Brown had neither seen nor heard of them, his anger gave place to wonder and dismay. What was he to do? Manifestly he was not equal to doing the work himself, much as he disliked to acknowledged it after declaring that womens' work was not work at all, but only play.

In the end he sent for one of the Gould girls to come and attend to the housework, and after two days sent her back and engaged one of the Cady girls. But she was no better.

Then he tried it again himself, but with even less satisfaction than before. He had not dreamed house work was so endless and exasperating, and before the week was out was so far humbled as to acknowledge to Jake in private that he would rather hoe corn sixteen hours a day than prepare a single meal of victuals.

"Then why don't you get the women folks back?" Jake asked bluntly. "If you can run the kitchen cheaper and easier than they, like I've heard you twit 'em, go ahead and do it; if not get 'em back. That's my say."

Another two days brought Johnson to the limit of his endurance, and then came relief in the shape of a letter from the city. It read:

"Dear husband—

We've been having a pretty good time, but things here do cost awful. I wanted to buy some things for Mary but can't, for we'll have only just enough to pay our fare home after staying another week."

"Another week!" groaned Johnson. "How'll we ever get through it?"

Then he continued:

"We went to that machine place number and found 'twas a fraud, just like I warned you. The law's shut it up, and there's a lot of letter's held for their owners. I hired a lawyer and he found it out, and he said one letter was yours and would be sent back. I suppose it's the one with the fifteen hundred dollars you sent."

John drew a quick, hard berath, and then read the postscript.

"I suppose it's pleasanter there without us, and you're living cheaper and better, like you've always said; but it's lonesome here in the big city, and Mary and I will be both glad to get back. We'll come a week from Saturday."

Johnson dropped the letter and leaned his head upon his hands. Thinking was something unusual to him, but this time it was to good purpose, for it ended in his writing in a cramped, laborious hand.

"Dear wife:

I take my pen in hand to answer your welcome letter. We've been having an awful time and want you to come back just as soon as you can. All the men will be glad to taste of your cooking again, and I won't ever say any more about it's being easy. I'm sending a hundred dollars with this to buy some things for Mary, and I'm free to say I think it's a good idea to have a hired girl. We're well off now and can afofrd it, and I'm sorry I didn't see the need of things in the house like I have them outside before this. I won't have anything more to say about the kitchen. Only please come home soon."

SLEEPING OUT DOORS.

Views of Humorist Who Has Done It Himself.

You will never catch cold as long as you sleep out of doors, says a writer in the Brooklyn Eagle. You will catch pneumonia, consumption, dysentery, rheumatism and an occasional centipede in the small of your back, but you will not catch cold or if you catch it, you will not be able to keep it long enough to take home as a trophy. The reason of this is that you catch a new cold every night and the competition is suicidal—for the cold. While the colds are locked in the death struggle you laugh—or maybe, snore.

There is only one illness of any importance to the ordinary sane body, and that is a cold. Pneumonia, grip, cancer and caudacitis may be awkward things in a million dollar mansion or a medical dictionary, but it is the cold that counts. "I caught my death of cold"—wonderful metaphor when you look under it. The man who says it is still alive; he uses the expression unconscious of its aptitude. It trips off the tongue with the lubricity of forty centuries of use by four hundred millions of mortals daily—"caught their deaths of cold," meaning, for a man, that he cannot smoke, for a woman, that she is obsessed by a surreptitious necessity of dusting the most delicate feature of her beauty with a bit of embroidery not as large as a tablecloth. For these reasons the advice of all who love for the solace of all who suffer is, save up your colds and take them out to the woods. They will leave you there. There are too many colds breeding in the bushes, robust colds, rheumatic colds, for an anemic city snivel to have a chance of survival.

You see that although sleeping out in the open is a solemn thought, they can jest at scars who never felt a wound. For the writer—the "moi qui parle"—has slept out for many years (couldn't afford a flat), and wears—it won't come off—the experto-crede smile when timid citizens shiver at the suggestion of a blanket and fir boughs under God's own starlight. He has been there; he has seen the stars—or plausible imitations when rocks have fallen on him—and he is prepared to vouch that as long as he has made his couch in a ditch or hollow convenient for the accumulation of God's own rain, he has never taken cold. He has been content with consumption. Consumption is what we are here for. We are born to consume and be consumed.

What is the secret of this strong pervasive stimulus, noiselessly gathering momentum until you seem a great engine silently cleaving the night? Is it the electricity of the earth pulling your bones? Is it the balm of the woodland, the chemistry of the rocks, invading your veins with subtle medicine? No—or rather they are all part of the something else. What has happened to you that you have recovered your identity? You are again a man, walking with God in the garden created for you. And meanwhile, blotted on the dun shadows of the earth, your body swathed in course blanket and sunk in the rough embrace of fir boughs, lies immobile—or perhaps shivering. Under you are hard knobs and a twig or two that gradually assumes the rigidity of an iron bar. Discomfort, it may be, dread, keep you awake—long enough to receive the message for which nature has ambushed you. But at last, as the stars begin to pale, the dew to settle, and perhaps a distant crow or crepitant bough to pass the signal to the little birds, your vigil ends, for sleep, as strong and gentle as the spirit of the night, firmly presses your eyes. When you awake—one hour at home—the sun is up. The morning breeze is at work, the brook, hushed in the dark, is loudly babbling, and the birds and bugs are busy. And you will need to get busy, too. For if you have failed to catch a cold or even sleep, there is one malady that you will have caught with a vengeance, and that is a healthy appetite.

DAME FASHION AND THE OUTDOOR SPORTS WOMAN

FOR THE GOLFER

Each and every new sport that is introduced brings new fashions in its train, and these are the logical outcome of the necessities of the game. Mere man may smile that Dame Fashion and logic are mentioned in the one breath, but there is not a doubt in the minds of her devotees that the same lady is logical, even in her most fickle moments.

Yachts and the yacht races loom up prominently at all the resorts along the coast, and there is scarcely a seashore hamlet but what boasts of a yacht club, whether its fleet be of painted boats that it takes thousands a week to maintain or a collection of catboats and dories that, truth to tell, often afford far more sport and far more amusement to their guests and owners than do the great ocean-going yachts with their staterooms and captain and crew.

The sailor dress is one that has been restored to full favor this late summer time. The small folks have never denied it their favor at any stage of the game, and now their big sisters are wearing it with a degree of enthusiasm that augurs well for its future. One finds them in the smart shops fashioned of linen, duck, drill, mohair, serge and sicilienne, and one tailor, who caters to the smart set, announces that he can furnish correct sailor costumes of griffonette, a fabric that sheds the water just as the proverbial duck does. This would seem to offer an ideal costume for the practical yachtswoman, she who steers her boat in the teeth of the wind and does not mind one scrap if she ships a wave or two, and takes a thorough drenching as philosophically as may be—it is all a part of the game with her.

The exigencies of golf and tennis have brought about a style of dress that is as practical as it is attractive. The correct blouse for these sports is now one that is cut comfortably full and large, but yet escapes the reproach of an untidy bagginess. The throat is cut down low; in fact, the base of the neck is the collar line all around on these, and there is a turnover collar of the goods sewn on without any intervening band whatsoever. This same loose idea is carried out in the sleeve, which is set in rather low on the shoulder, and is preferably of the full gigot type, ending at the elbow. Here a turnover band cuff catches the fullness and accords well with the turnover collar, and smart link buttons are caught through buttonholes worked in the band. The impression is distinctly negligee, but it is such a smart and modish negligee that one accepts it on sight and with enthusiasm.

In accordance with the latest conceit, the belts must all match the blouse in color, if not in material. A ribbon belt to match the blouse is a pretty idea, and then the cravat—for this novel blouse demands a large cravat to its best wearing—matches the belt.

There are some very smart effects in those Rumchunda scarfs that may be used indiscriminately for belts, cravats and hat scarfs, and it is quite a fad abroad to have these in sets; the cravat drawn under the low turndown collar, and knotted in a sailor's knot, the ends flowing loose and free. The belts are either stayed with featherbone, or else tacked to a boned crinoline frame, and there may or may not be a buckle through which the pointed ends are drawn. For the hat scarf, the Rumchunda is simply knotted at the side and the ends either drawn over the brim to hold it up or else it is tied in a stiff bow directly across the front.

The sweater has come to be an almost indispensable adjunct to outing and outdoor life, and assuredly it has much to commend it. One can treat it with a negligence and carelessness that any other item of the wardrobe would resent, and yet, after being rolled up in a ball, thrust under the boat or buggy seat, sat upon or used as a pillow for one's back, it comes out without crease or wrinkle, ready to be drawn on and looks its very smartest best.

Some of the later sweaters are fashioned after the loose box coat, and are intended to be worn without a belt. Others display a loose cape sleeve that is decidedly attractive, and this goes with a V-cut neck; while still others maintain the close vest shape, ending with a tight ribbing at the waistline, and dispensing altogether with that puffiness or bagginess above the waist that characterized the sweaters of a season or two ago.

But, in spite of a keen and ardent pursuit of outdoor sports, the small items of the toilette that tell for so much in one's appearance are not supposed to be neglected. The short skirt displays the shoe and hose to full sight, and the shiny black shoe must be kept in trim, the skirt edge bound with velveteen or braid, the placket hole guiltless of gaping; one's collars in trim and trig shape, and the coiffure with its restraining hair nets right up to the moment in the matter of style.

Novelties of Fashion.

The newest neck chains and necklaces are conspicuously short, and are intended to encircle the collar without any drooping whatsoever. Some of them are of dogcollar shape and are intended to be closely clasped around the throat in such instances as when a collar is not a part of the toilette. There are some really exquisite examples of this fad in dull wrought silver, inset with huge cabochon cuttings in mock jewels. The star sapphire if well imitated is one of the most effective of these; and the usual amethyst, turquoise, topaz and emerald imitations are likewise seen.

All sorts of "Vanity" attachments are furnished with band and wrist bags of every degree of costliness. The powder book, with its detachable leaflets, has largely replaced the ubiquitous powder puff; and smelling salts are really a sensible addition to the fittings.

One of the newest Parisienne ideas shows a gold chain mesh bag, a gilt vanity case containing the powder leaves, lip rouge and a tiny mirror; a card case that matches exactly the foregoing, and—a cigarette case. These are all mounted upon a large ring that may be slipped over the hand. The grandes dames of Russia and France, as well as Spain and Italy, all use cigarettes freely; and there is no reproach whatsoever attached to their smoking. In fact, at all continental dinners the cigarettes are passed among the guests just as are the olives; and they are likewise passed with coffee and cordials in the drawing-room after the ladies have left the dining-room.

However, we on this side of the water are more conservative, and doubtless these fascinating etuis will be minus the cigarette case.

Comfortable Blouse for the Golfer.

The open throated, short sleeved blouse, is the one that is accepted as correct for golf and tennis wear, and truly, not only does it add a lot to a pretty girl's appearance, but still more to her comfort as well. A very smart mode is that of the illustration in which the throat is cut down low, the collar attached to the base, and deep tucks in the shoulder seem to afford the requisite fullness in the body of the garment. The sleeve is a full, loose leg-o'-mutton pattern, set in comfortably low on the shoulder, so that there is no interference whatsoever with the free and broad swing of the arm, and the fullness is gathered into a turnover band cuff that fastens with smart link buttons. The belt is of the same linen as the blouse, and a smart broad silk is loosely knotted under the collar and hangs down the front to the ceinture. Altogether this design well solves the problem of a smart, loose and comfortable blouse for outdoor sports that shall conform with fashion and a fashionable appearance.

The sailor blouse has come into almost universal favor for general sporting wear; but its original environment, the deck of a boat, is the more correct one, after all. That of the picture shows a white linen, with the characteristic collar and shield, as well as the cuff, in an admirable blue linen braided in white soutache and embroidered with nautical emblems in white. The blouse is so fashioned that the shield may be omitted for very warm weather. The blouse is plain in cut, caught down taut inside the belt, and has the sleeve of very moderate dimensions throughout, the blue cuff being one of the upstanding, close-pointed kind. The skirt is gored and fits over the hips without darts, the back closing in a double inverted pleat. The circular volant that makes a smart finish is cut double, with an interlining, and row upon row of machine stitching serves to hold it in shape through the laundry.

New White Sweater and Sicilienne Skirt.

The manifold uses to which the sweater so well lends itself make it an almost indispensible article for outing and outdoor wear. It can be rolled into a ball and tucked in anywhere without at all injuring its shape or appearance, and it is ready to be put on and look well after the roughest kind of treatment. The recent models in sweaters display a collar that may be either turned over in Byron style or else buttoned up close around the throat. The fronts fit snugly, and the pouch at the waist is dispensed with.

The skirt that is illustrated with the sweater is one of those brilliantly finished siciliennes that seem to shed dust and dirt as the duck sheds water. The hip yoke is continued in panels down the skirt, the space between these panels filled with deeply plaited sections that are stitched down for a short space and then well pressed to the hem. Straps fastened with little gold buttons appear on the yoke with very smart effect.

A Modish Afternoon Toilette.

Lace is in the highest vogue for toilettes to appear at any time after the luncheon hour. A simple oriental net lace fashions the frock. The bodice is on bebe lines with a transparent yoke, and a very deep ceinture of pale-blue silk ribbon that comes halfway under the arms and ends in a very sharp point in front. The waist blouses girlishly over this, and the long sash ends are trimmed with a bouillonne of narrow ribbon of the same tint, the featherbone cordings used in this connection serving to keep the sash ends from curling up. The skirt is plain, shirred at the top, and finished with two lace flounce ruffles at the foot.

The little lace coat is altogether unlined, and is one of those dainty trifles that are worn as a finish to the outdoor toilette rather than as a wrap. The hat is what one milliner terms a converted sailor, is mounted upon a deep bandeau, and the trimmings are ruches of white ribbon with knots of black velvet tucked in at intervals, and big roses likewise fashioned from the same material. The greater part of the trimming is on the bandeau in the back.

Gown of pale green linen with smart little bolero that stands well out from the figure and with a loose pagoda sleeve makes an ideally cool and pretty toilette for piazza wear. The skirt is in 23 gores, with double box plaits all around, and is made in walking length. The silken hose show gauze stripes, silk embroidered; and the smart shiny black pumps are trimmed with a flat, square bow of ribbon at the vamp.

The hat, of white crin, has the underbrim liberally ruffled in narrow Valenciennes lace, a concealed wire pinched to afford a gracefully undulating edge. There is a loose band of white satin ribbon around the crown, with a broad, square Alsatian bow in front, the same effect repeated in miniature on the bandeau, and little bunches of banksia roses are tucked in with telling effect.

Dinner Gown of the New Princesse Point.

The lace robe remains one of the chiefest of fashion's favorites, largely, one suspects, because their cost will always prevent their becoming too popular, and, therefore, common. Waist, sleeves and skirt are all fashioned en forme—that is, the lace is designed and worked exactly to shape, so that there is no piecing or cutting when the robe comes to be mounted.

That of the picture is mounted en princesse, the lace deftly joined at the waistline so that the joining is invisible. There is a layer of soft, white chiffon between the lace and the silk foundation, the latter having an interlining of princess haircloth in the hem, with several chiffon ruffles, so that there is the modish flare at the foot. The throat is cut out somewhat, and the sleeves finished at the elbow with a billowy ruffle of plisse chiffon.

Like the little pouch bodice, the short skirt is making a determined stand against being ousted from the newer fashions. But with the extremely full examples that are coming to the fore it is to be feared that the silhouette of the figure will not stand a conspicuously short skirt with any great degree of grace. Especially is this the case if the new haircloth interlining be employed, and there seems to be not even the faintest suspicion that this feature will be omitted from the dress findings of high-class costumes for autumn and winter wear.

Toilettes of Formal Intent.

Late Summer Functions Demand a Degree of Dressiness.

Fashion demands so much formality in functions that there is really coming to be no season at all expressed in one's clothes that are intended for such uses. Time was when the winter gown could not possibly make an appearance after Easter; and the summer frocks were laid away in camphor, or its equivalent, once the Indian summer had gone—and even that date was looked upon as unduly prolonging the season.

But now pretty much the same materials prevail for formal frocks the year around, and the summer-time dinner gown and dancing frock, if they have withstood the ravages of wear, can well be used for the dinner and the dance in town later. Perhaps velvet offers the only exception to this rule; for one but rarely sees a velvet gown on this side of the water in warm weather, though both the English and French women retain them in wear the year around. But then, the seasons do not run to such extremes over there. Here in June the whole country was sweltering, while the Parisiennes witnessed the Grand Prix huddled up in furs and raincoats and winter costumes generally.

The lace gown is one of the best investments that the fashionable woman can make; and so many kinds and characters and weaves of lace are considered modish that it is quite possible to have some dozen of them in wear at once, and yet not produce an impression of monotony in the wardrobe. There are simple little frocks fashioned from the oriental all-over laces; and the allover German Valenciennes—the title sounds somewhat contradictory, does it not?—are in high esteem for both entire frocks as well as blouses. Ruffings in various degrees of width are furnished for these, and there is much and excellent use of them in the elaboration of the gown.

The bebe bodice is quite a favorite for these, with its transparent yoke, the fulness bloused above a conspicuously deep ribbon girdle. In many instances this feature comes half way up under the arms, taking to itself well-fitted corselet lines. The slender girl may have this quite a separate feature, and vary the frock by different colored ribbon accessories; but her more developed sister must have this feature mounted upon the well-boned and fitted lining of the bodice, so that it retains all of its swell shape undisturbed in the wearing.

Sashes have become such prominent features upon all sorts of frocks, and are being worn by everybody, from grandmamma—the youthful grandmamma of today—down to the littlest toddler of the nursery—that their use really demands a degree of cleverness to attain and retain just the right touch in the wearing. The plain stiff bow, two loops and two ends, is the exception rather than the rule. It is the elaborately made and trimmed sash that is worn. No matter how rich the ribbon, it must receive some touch of trimming of extra adornment. To make the sash retain its allotted shape is the real raison d'etre of many of these devices. Lace is whipped on to the ends with a tiny featherbone cord held or rolled into the ribbon hem. Bouillonnes of either net or lace or a narrower ribbon are fashioned with these same shaping cords; and in some instances the sash takes the form of a cascaded postillon, and then the silk is interlined with a featherweight haircloth so that the pleats are uncreased and undisturbed through all the vicissitudes of wearing.

The dinner frock and dancing frock, which were once almost interchangeable terms, are now fashioned so widely different that there is simply no chance of confounding the one with the other. The dinner gown has taken to itself an air of formality which the dancing frock lacks. The dinner gown displays a stately train, even when worn by the debutante; while in the ball gowns the trains are relegated to the dowagers only; the younger set who do the dancing clinging determinedly to the sensible short frocks that were originally introduced with the Cinderella dances.

There are charming toilettes in linen, lace, French muslins and batiste for the piazza; and these are worn with smart hosiery and shoes to match. Another feature of the matching craze that is surely launched has the hat and the parasol to match, entirely irrespective of the gown with which they are worn. Especially is this the case when both hat and sunshade are fashioned of lace or of ribbons, or some one or another of the clever combinations of both, and in quite a few instances there is a charming little neck or shoulder piece en suite thus completing the harmony of the toilette.

For afternoon wear there are any number of fascinating little wraps pieces that are intended to complete the outdoor effect of the toilette rather than be worn for any intention as a wrap. Of these the little unlined lace coats are easily the leaders, although one sees all sorts of fluffy little capes and mantelettes in silk, ribbon, lace and other "flottant" materials.

DRAMATICAL

ATTRACTIONS AT THE LYCEUM

Lottie Blair Parker's Interesting Story of Southern Life, "Under Southern Skies," Next Friday and Saturday---"The Chaperons" In Week Following.

Lottie Blair Parker, the author of "Under Southern Skies" and "Way Down East" might be called a "revivalist" playwright, inasmuch as the success of both these dramas has been followed by a large crop of plays from the pens of other writers dealing with rural New England and Southern life. The field of rustic New England drama was popularly supposed to have been exhausted, as far as financial returns were concerned, by "Shore Acres" and "The Old Homestead," and interest in plays of Southern life was considered worn threadbare by "Alabama," "Held by the Enemy," "Shenandoah" and "Secret Service." To the surprise of everyone, "Way Down East" leaped at once into a popularity that has not been exceeded by either "The Old Homestead" or "Shore Acres." No sooner was the success of "Way Down East" assured than a score of playwrights rushed to the front with plays of New England rural life. Many of them were received with favor—one notable instance was a revival of a New England play which has been produced with a fine cast, and had met with failure before the production of "Way Down East;" afterwards this same play wase revived and with success. It would seem almost as if "Way Down East" recreated public interest in New England rural drama.

The same thing seems to be repeating itself in regard to "Under Southern Skies." For some years the South had been almost abandoned as a field for drama, when Mrs. Parker launched "Under Southern Skies," a play of Southern life, so original in treatment and so intensely interesting that it was at once accepted by the press and public of New York city, and has been pronounced the most diverting and unhackneyed play of Southern life ever written. The play has now entered upon its fifth successful season, and promises to live as long and as prosperously as "Way Down East." As in the case of the latter paly, "Under Southern Skies" has caused a revival of Southern plays. No less than four plays dealing with Southern subjects having been produced within the past year, and announcements are made of others still to follow. None, however, up to the present writing approach in charm or popularity their forerunner, "Under Southern Skies." This wonderfully successful play will be seen here at the Lyceum, Friday and Saturday of next week.

"THE CHAPERONS" COMING.

The big musical comedy, "The Chaperons," concerning which so much has been heard, will be the attraction at the Lyceum, Monday night, Aug. 21. The merry melange of music and mirth, interpreted by a company of more than fifty people, comes to this city with the flattering endorsement of every large city in the country. The present is its fifth season, and its popularity is greater than ever before. In the entirely new scenic and costume production of the present season, "The Chaperons" is said to display a wealth of gorgeous costumes, some lavish scenic surprises, and to be presented by a company of exceptional merit. Among the members of the company are: Madelyn Marshall, Ruth Lloyd, Doris Goodwin, Harry Ladell, John Price, George Lydecker, Frank Wesley and others.

METROPOLITAN AND THE BIJOU

Will Present Their Patrons With High Class Vaudeville Throughout the Week.

The Metropolitan theater will have a star bill the coming week. The select vaudeville features will be among the best yet put on at this popular house.

George and Laura Lewis will be seen in an original rube sketch entitled "Uncle Hiram's Visit." John Riggs, king of wire walkers, direct from Ringling's circus, will be one of the strongest attractions. J. Howard Maxwell, California's favorite comedian, has some new parodies with which to entertain his audiences. Arthur P. Jackson, who has attained great popularity through the medium of his illustrated songs, will sing "Why Don't They Play With Me?"

Swanzell and Razzell will be seen in a new act in which is introduced some fine trick piano playing. The moving pictures are all new and interesting. "The Ex-Convict's Struggle" and "Meet Me at the Fountain" are their titles.

Children under 14 years of age accompanied by their parents will be admitted free Monday afternoon. Otherwise admission for children will be 5 cents. Matinees daily at 3 p. m. Night performances are at 8 o'clock and 9:30 o'clock.

AT THE BIJOU.

Moving Pictures to Be a Great Feature.

The Bijou will offer its patrons next week one of the best features ever shown in the moving picture line, called "The Great Steeple Chase," which is very thrilling and exciting, and said to surpass anything yet shown in the picture line.

The two vaudeville features include a number of noted acts who come direct from the Orpheum, Keith and Proctor circuits.

Special matinee on Saturday afternoon for school children. Regular matinees are given daily at 2:30 and 3:30, night shows at 8, 9 and 10 p. m.

GOSSIP OF THE RIALTO

New Plays Secured By Charles Frohman—Henry Miller and Margaret Quiglin Join the Shuberts' Forces.

New York, Aug. 12.—Among the new plays which Charles Frohman has secured is a poetical work in four acts called "Mizpah," by Ella Wheeler Wilcox and Luscombe Searle; the dramatization of "Wolfville," by Clyde Fitch and Willis Steele; a dramatization of "The Letters of a Self-Made Merchant to His Son," by Paul Potter and George Horace Lorimer; a new French play, the combined work of Julian Lemaitre and Jerome K. Jerome, which was originally produced at the Renaissance theater, Paris; a new play by the author of "The Marriage of Kitty," called "Paris and New York;" a comedy called "Marjory Strode," by A. E. W. Mason, the English novelist; a comedy by H. V. Esmond; the American rights of the plays Robert Marshall may write in the next three years; a comedy called "Dr. Wake's Patient," which is to be produced at the Adelphi theater, London, in September, and the great comedy success of the Athenee theater, Paris, called "The Heart of a Sparrow," which is being adapted by Cosmo Gordon Lennox.

William H. Crane will be seen this season in a new American play by George H. Broadhurst and C. T. Dazey, called "An American Lord."

• • •

Henry Miller and Margaret Anglin, who recently joined the forces of the Shuberts, will spend the greater part of the coming season at the Princess theater, New York. It is not the intention of this management to install a stock company on Broadway, as was at first announced, but the two stars will appear in a succession of new plays, most of which will have come from the pens of Americans. The first of these pieces is to be revealed on Sept. 18 under the title of "Zira." Mr. Miller, who is one of the two authors of the drama, is not to act in it, but will be seen with Miss Anglin in its successor at the Princess. The entire organization is to go on tour at the conclusion of the season in New York.

• • •

Mrs. James Brown Potter is to make a twenty weeks' tour of the American vaudeville theaters. Mrs. Potter's specialty will consist of a recitation of "Ostler Joe" and other dramatic poems in which she has been heard. She will also give "Constellations," the dramatic readings to music which she popularized in England.

• • •

Two more theaters have been obtained by the Shuberts, in the opposition to the theatrical trust. They are Albaugh's Lyceum theater in Baltimore and the Duquesne theater, in Pittsburg. They will be opened as first-class houses in October. The Belasco theater will henceforth be the name of the Duquesne. This is Shuberts' tribute to their ally, David Belasco. Nearly $50,000 will be spent in remodeling the house and making it larger. None but independent attractions will be played at either the Duquesne or the Baltimore Lyceum. The Shuberts, Harrison Grey Fiske and Belasco will furnish most of them. There are now twenty-two theaters under the direction of the Shuberts.

• • •

Estelle Clayton, who was a well-known leading woman before her retirement from the stage seven years ago, is to return to the footlights by way of vaudeville. Miss Clayton will be most distinctly remembered in connection with the sensational play, "The Clemenceau Case."

• • •

Last season thirty-two new musical comedies were produced. The prospect for the coming year is that about twice that number will have premieres. One of the first of these to take the road will be "The Belle of Avenue A," in which Elfie Fay is to star. A. H. Woods, under whose management Miss Fay is to be for the next five years, has booked Atlantic City for the opening stand, and after a visit to a few of the larger cities, the company will be brought into a New York theater for a run.

Kellett Chalmers who wrote "Abigail" for Grace George and had some success with it, and who did not get a square deal with the really clever farce "Frenzied Finance" which Mr. Brady helped to kill with a bad title, is working on two new plays. Frenzied Finance may be turned into a musical comedy with a new title.

Mrs. Kirke La Shelle is handling her husband's estate with a great deal of skill. There are a lot of people who would like to see her stray in the game. The independents need clever people whether they be men or women.

Wilton Lackaye swears he will have a permanent stock company in New York in another year, and he is willing to play old men or leading characters. He does not like the road although he has made a fortune with "The Pit" and is now fairly established as the "real thing" from the box office standpoint.

"Way Down East" the wonder of our times as far as age and drawing power is concerned, is to have another New York run at the Academy of Music. This drama is said to have made three-quarters of a million dollars in eight years.

Liebler & Co.'s production of Hall Caine's dramatization of his novel, "The Prodigal Son," has been placed in rehearsal. A list of the players reads like the cast of an "all-star" company. In the list are Edward Morgan, Aubrey Boucicault, Ben Webster, J. E. Dodson, W. H. Thompson, Henry Bergman, Charlotte Walker, Dyrina De Wolfe, Marie Wainwright an Ida Waterman. The play is being staged by Murray Carson, who starred last year in "The Trifler." Mr. Carson is an actor of ability and attracted attention in London for his work in staging Beerbohm Tree's production of Stephen Phillip's "Herod." "The Prodigal Son" will have its premier in Washington at the New National theater, August 28.

Bessie Abott, the American soprano, now engaged at the Grand Opera in Paris, is coming to this country in December next for her first professional tour under the management of Henry Wolfsohn. Miss Abott is summering in Switzerland with a party of American friends, including Mme. Ashforth, who was her teacher while Miss Abott was living in this country. Miss Abott will sing with the leading orchestral societies, oratorio societies and in song recitals, and quite possibly with the Conried Metropolitan Opera company, towards which end negotiations are now being carried on.

"Courtesy always pays," said Mme. Rejane, the French actress, to an interviewer. "If we are courteous to people they like us and they try to help us. If we are discourteous to them they hate us and will oppose us. Two women occupied a compartment in a railway carriage with one man, a stranger. They were extremely rude to this man. In whispers that he could overhear they criticised his costume, his figure and his manner. He, to be revenged, did a singular thing. The blackness of a tunnel enveloped the car, and under cover of the darkness the man kissed the back of his hand loudly and repeatedly. Then, when the train entered the light again, he looked from one woman to the other, with a significant smile. They exchanged glances of suspicion.

"'Was it you he kissed?'

"'No, of course not. Was it you?'

"And neither woman would believe the other's denial, and each in her inmost heart was offended to think that the man had chosen her companion instead of herself to kiss. The man looked cool and complacent. When finally he rose to go he said, lifting his hat with a jocular air: "'Have no fear, ladies, I shall never tell which of you it was.'"

Louise Beaton, who was known as "The Female Warfield" when the worthy actor of that name appeared in such pieces as "The Auctioneer," is going about Broadway wearing the typical "smile that won't come off." Her manager, A. H. Woods, has found a play in which she can wear something besides rags. Every actress likes to wear pretty clothes, and when Miss Beaton found there was a scene in "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl," in which she could don real Paris importations, the smile began, and has grown constantly ever since.

Julien Rose has just returned from a few weeks' vacation in Virginia to begin rehearsals of "Fast Life in New York." Mr. Rose, in company with a few friends, got up with the sun one morning to go on a short hunting trip. As the party reached a small stream of water which was bridged by a log hewn flat on one side so as to make it walkable, he noticed a flock of ducks swimming a hundred feet or so further down. Fearing to shoot lest they should belong to some unoffending farmer of the neighborhood, and at the same time nothing a small negro boy perched on the center of the log half asleep, waiting for fish to bite at a stick with a piece of string attached to one end, he stepped up to the pickaninny and asked: "Are those wild ducks, or do they belong to somebody?" The boy remained quiet for a minute, and then replied, without so much as lifting his eyelids: "Dem ain't nobody's ducks, dey ain't; dey's der own ducks, dey is. Dey don't belong to nobody, dey don't; dey belong to demselves, dey does." The party had duck and a very much ried son of the soil for dinner that night. Wild ducks are not to be found in the rear of farm houses.

Melbourne MacDowell will make a tour of the country, playing in the principal cities in a repertoire of Sardou's plays, after his season in St. Louis closes Sept. 1. His repertoire will include "Richard the Third," "Virginius" and "Othello." The productions will be made on an elaborate scale. He will be under the management of Charles P. Elliott.

W. A. Brady has made arrangements with Harper Bros. for a dramatization of Mrs. Humphrey Ward's latest novel, "The Marriage of William Ashe." This novel has reached an enormous sale and heads the list of popular books. Miss George will play the part of Kitty Ashe, and the production will be made about Christmas. The star's tour will open in October in "Abigail."

• • •

In the elaborate revival of "Virginius," to be made by Louis James the coming season, the part of Virginia will be played by Aphie James, who has won conspicuous success as Miranda, Desdemona, Anne Boleyn and in other classic roles. She achieved a notable hit as Louise in "The Two Orphans" last season during the absence of Grace George.

• • •

Max Figman and Lillian Armsby have been engaged by John Cort to support Florence Roberts in "Ann LaMont," the new problem play by Paul Armstrong, which will be produced in Salt Lake City Oct. 2. The entire production is being built in New York and the cast also includes H. S. Northrup, Robert McWade, Clifford Leigh, Norah Lamison, Merceita Esmond, Lucile Yorke and Florence Robinson.

Ethel Sprague Donnelson, granddaughter of Salmon P. Chase, who was a member of Lincoln's cabinet, will soon produce a play entitled "The Last Act," of which she is the author and in which she will assume the leading part. Before her marriage Mrs. Donnelson showed considerable dramatic ability in her support of Mansfield. She is returning to the stage after the lapse of a few years.

Emma Calve, who will make a concert tour of the United States under the direction of Cort & Kronberg, starting in October, is now at her Chateau de Cabrieres par Agnesse, Areyron, France, for the summer, having sung her last in Europe for this year at the Opera Comique, Paris, last week. Mlle. Schmitt-Barnard, the pianist who toured Germany last year, will be Calve's accompanist, while Berrick Von Uorden, the Swedish-American tenor, now singing in Germany, has also been engaged.

• • •

That Madame Modjeska will make another farewell tour is the announcement made by George H. Brennan, who will direct her final appearance on the stage. Her stage farewell was supposed to have been made at the time of her benefit, but it is said the improvement in her health since and a general desire to see her act again have encouraged her to appear. She will be seen in a repertoire consisting of "Macbeth," "Much Ado About Nothing" and "Mary Stuart," supported by a prominent male star.

William Collier says that English audiences encourage the actor more than those of America, and their applause is more spontaneous. "New Yorkers," adds Mr. Collier, "seem to say, 'We dare you to make us laugh.'" He went to London fifteen years ago with the Daly company. He was "Master" Willie then, and the call boy in the company, also playing a small part in the introduction of "The Taming of the Shrew." "But I never saw London," declares Mr. Collier. "I spent my entire time in the theater. That's why it's all so new to me now, and I'm enjoying it so hugely."

May Irwin is going to open her season early this year and close late. Not that she needs the money, but it will be recalled she remained off an entire year, and it is necessary for her to catch up. Miss Irwin is one of the few thorough business women in the profession. She selects her own players, handles all the cash, makes her route with the assistance of her business manager, and when she plays anywhere near New York she goes to her own home on West Sixty-eighth street, and the early morning hours can find her marketing on Columbus avenue. Miss Irwin is just now in the Thousand Islands, and she is going to visit California for the first time in several seasons, and she is a woman of speculative disposition, we will hear that she has acquired an orange grove or two and perhaps bought out a rasin factory.

The dramatized version of the late Gen. Lew Wallace's novel, "A Prince of India," which has been made by J. I. C. Clark, will be produced by Klaw & Erlanger at the New Amsterdam theater in January. It will be a tremendous stage production, rivaling "Ben Hur" in its massiveness. Joseph Brooks of the firm of Klaw & Erlanger, during his recent trip abroad, placed orders for the costumes and ancient weapons with firms in London and Berlin. The music to the production will be written by Dr. Horatio Parker, professor of music at Yale, and one of America's foremost composers. The story deals with the period of the overthrow of the Greek empire by the Turks, under the Sultan Mohammed, culminating in the siege and fall of Constantinople. Among other great characters is introduced the mystic wanderer as the Prince of India. The period, story and locale of scenes furnishes a magnificent opportunity for unusually elaborate musical background. Not only the Greek and Byzantine music, sacred and secular, but the Oriental love music and martial strains of the conquering Moslems of the fifteenth century, are called for.

Miss Helen Lackaye has been engaged by Charles P. Elliott, manager of Melbourne MacDowell, as leading lady for the balance of the summer season and all of next season. She is the sister of Wilton and James Lackaye and has been on the stage but a short while.

Edna Wallace Hopper is to be starred by David Belasco in a new play, but previous to its production she will go out in "The Heart of Maryland."

sail for this country September 20. After two weeks of rehearsals the company will open in Washington on October 23. Miss Nethersole will bring with her several members of the company that is to support her, and others will be engaged here. "The Labyrinth," in which she is to appear, will be partially staged under the direction of W. L. Courtenay, the dramatic editor of the London Daily Telegraph and editor of the Fortnightly Review, who made the translation.

Charles Frohman has arranged with Sir Charles Wyndham and Mary Moore to return to America after the new year for a fifteen weeks' tour. He has also arranged to bring over Sir Henry Irving, who comes a year from next October for his farewell tour. John Hare will also be seen this season in America.

• • •

The company that is to support Florence Roberts in "Ann La Mont" is now completed. In the cast are Lillian Armsby, Max Figman, Robert McWade, Norah Lamison, William Thomas, Florence Robinson, Merceita Esmonde, Clifford Leigh, W. R. Spencer, Wilbur Hudson and Alexander von Mitzel. The last named won more than the usual share of glory a year ago in Blanche Walsh's company.

Although a route is booked for him Charles Hawtrey will not appear on this side the coming season. He had at first intended to bring over a company and play thirty weeks at least, but he has canceled all that and will remain in London. He has been engaged by Frederic Harrison, of the Haymarket theater, for one of the principal parts in the new C. M. S. McLellan play, "On the Love Path," of which Charles Frohman controls the American rights, and those familiar with the situation says this points to a dramatic partnership between Mr. Harison and Hawtrey.

Twenty years at any line of business is a good record, but to have two decades of experience on the road trying to please the fickle fancies of the American theater-going public, and succeeding at it, is equaled by few; but when Al G. Field, the well-known minstrel, inaugurates the coming season it will be his twenty-first tour at the head of a minstrel show.

NEW YORK THEATERS

Dancing On the Stage Is Not All Fun and Pleasure—Its Danger and Fatigue —The Modern and the Old Dances and Their Dancers.

New York, Aug. 12.—"I'll give you a tip to win twice," said a showman; "see Fantana tonight, and The Rollicking Girl tomorrow night."

"Why should I see them again?" I asked, "and why at those times particularly?"

"Because they will be performed better than ever before. Lee Shubert is to watch Fantana to decide who shall be sent with it to London next winter, and Charles Frohman is to get his first view of The Rollicking Girl, which was produced in his absence. The companies have become lax during the hot weather, but they'll get tense for these occasions. There'll be a big money's worth at both places."

The tipster's point held good. Of course, Jefferson de Angelis wasn't afraid of being dropped from the trans-Atlantic trip, yet, especially in the dancing, he set a pace for his companions in Fantana to follow. You are wrong to think that De Angelis is no more than a comic man by night and mate alone; he is an artist—sometimes. And one time is when, in a Darby and Joan song, after representing Darby as a lusty lover of jean, he comes out for an encore as Darby grown old. His dance for this was fine art in pantomimic characterization, just as truly as his looping through a loop in a caricature of an athlete, a few minutes later, was knockabout clowning. And the ballet chorus for Darby and Joan! How hard it tried to get on Shubert's list gor exportation. In a temperature a hundred degrees hot, too.

Comfortable weather favored the Rollicking Girl the next evening, and there was a big audience to encourage the extra vim. I found it easy to locate Charles Frohman behind the drapery of a box. President Roosevelt wasn't among its visible occupants, nor Envoy Komura, nor anyone else to account for Sam Barnard playing directly at it. He knew where his manager had hidden from the audience. So did Hattie Williams, who followed Barnard's example, and so probably did Joseph Coyne, although he didn't betray it. The minor folk took their cue from Sam and Hattie. The dancing girls had been so worn by work and weather that the house had been shut half a week. No doubt their spirited activity merit thank you, Mr. Frohman, for the respite under pay, as well as a desire to advance themselves on his roll. So well was everything done that encores made the show forty minutes longer than it had been the night before.

How most of us do dote on stage dancing! And who ever thinks of fatigue for the dancers, much less of danger that may become deadly? I thought of it, though, when I saw Gertie Moyer gasping and palpitating from the violence of a dance that had looked as easy as a ballroom belle's waltz. She smiled with lips so dry that she moistened them with her tongue, and continued to make the spectators believe she enjoyed a repetition of the exhausting exercise. But I remembered that Gertie's sister, Estelle, her former mate at Weber & Fields, had died of heart disorder, brought on by such dancing as that. They had matched up Gertie Moyer with Flossie Hope, a girl so very limber and quick that Gertie, to equal her, has to strain every fiber of herself, no matter what may happen to her heart.

Do you recall the Angells sisters, Leah and Aimee, who used to dance for Charles H. Hoyt in his farces? They went from him to Weber & Fields, for whom Estelle Moyer danced herself to death, and from whom Leah Angells retired at the end of a season.

"But Leah didn't die out of the business," said one who knows her; "unlike Estelle Moyer, who had to dance for a living, the Angells girls have a rich mother and Leah could quit when she'd had enough of stage life. But Aimee sticks to it for fun."

To know anything about stage performers personally is a doubtful aid to the enjoyment of what they do professionally. Perhaps, I was more diverted by the Angells girl's dancing for the knowledge that she was having a good time, too; but surely I took less pleasure in the Moyer's girl's dancing for knowing that she probably risked her life in it. The grin of one looked as happy as the other's, and I was sorry to be aware of any difference between them.

Carmencita and the Domino Rouge are dancing like mad this week, because they are in Paradise Garden and Wistaria Grove, up in the air at opposite sides of Broadway and so near that each can hear the applause that the other gets. Carmencita comes back after eight years of absence; and it was twice as long ago that she was first shown in New York; so her age figures up something above the safety line drawn by the Gerry society. But she is still a beautiful woman. Her case is an illustration of how a mere incident may turn upward or downward the career of a stage performer. She was imported by the Kiralfys for a reproduction of "The Black Crook," which had staled at Niblo's Garden, which had molded. Under such circumstances she passed for mere than a fine dancer of the unvaried Spanish type. At the end of her engagement she would have gone back to Madrid and been forgotten by us sagh—if there hadn't been a lucky incident. John S. Sargeant, then in the height of his fame as a portrait and figure painter, thought her the final thing in beauty of pose and motion. He had her dance at a reception at his studio, and announced that he was going to make a picture of her. Just at that time, fashion was making a fad of Buster & Bial's music hall. The managers seized on Carmencita and in a jiffy she was worth $1,000 a week, where before she had no more than earned $100.

The Domino Rouge is the dancer whom I described, six weeks ago, as having been exploited by sending her into public places—hotels, restaurants, theaters, on Fifth avenue drive, and even to a mass in church—with the upper half of her face covered by a red scarf. At her debut the audience asserted its sophistication by declining to be thus hustled into the slightest excitement. So the Domino Rouge started worse than Carmencita, and no happy chance put up her value suddenly. The appreciation has come about, however, and she has danced down the error of her introduction. If, now, she were to take off her mask and show a pretty face? Probably that isn't possible.

Carmencita and the Domino Rouge are exponents of extreme contrast in dancing. The woman from Madrid is precisely the Spanish siren that, time and again, you have seen clandestinely in the Latin Quarter and throw hilherself into attitudes of passion—the Carmen of the drama and opera distilled into a few minutes of the essence of feminine devilry. The woman from Paris is quite another sort of dancing devil. In the idiom of the stage, she is a toe dancer. She makes you wonder if she ever walks flat-footed. Not only are her heels off the floor all the time she is in sight, but not once does she rest on her soles, and the tips of her two big toes are all she uses. And, unlike Carmencita, her manner is original and eccentric.

Pessimists deplore the degeneracy which they perceive in stage dancing, as they do in the drama generally. Those who are old enough like to talk of Taglioni's wondrous grace in skirts to her ankles, of Fanny Elsler's poetry of motion draped to her knees, and of even Bonfanti, for, though her legs were disclosed to the hips, she wore the quite legitimate though rudimentary gauze of the Italian ballet premier. It was in "The Black Crook," forty years ago, that Marie Bonfanti was the last of the old-school celebrities. She married into the rich Hoffman family, gave dancing lessons to fashionable girls and boys after she became an impoverished widow, and died not long ago bewailing the fact that the ballet of the palmy days can no more be found except in grand opera.

Optimists in dancing, if such exist, seems to me, if they regard a woman toddling stiffly on her tiptoes as being a less pleasing sight, a smaller satisfaction in plastic art, than a woman who limbly flings her feet over her head or even devotes her suppleness to cakewalking. By the way, why can't men learn to dance with something like the gracefulness of women? Henry E. Dixey is the only actor whom I have known to do it. I am reminded of him by recalling his sister-in-law, Amelia Glover, as the first American dancer who distinguished herself in the manner now familiar—in what may be termed symmetrical contortion. Amelia dates back about twenty-five years. The violence of her activity looked so easy that she was called the Dancing Fawn, and it wasn't till she retired with an incurable injury that the severity of her work was understood. She was the originator of the American style of dancing now seen in all of the extravaganzas. The methods which she evolved intuitively have been systematized, and now they are taught in ballet classes not only, but also as practiced in dramatic schools.

A distinct gain in sightliness has come in with the going out of the toe dancers. They had to be trained in childhood, when it couldn't be known what they would look like when they grew up and so a beautiful danseuse was exceptional. Our agile flat-footers are adult girls, selected for pretty faces and elastic figures, put through an arduous, but rapid course of instruction and given to the public at their best condition. Simultaneously, they are taught to sing—for strong voices are another requisite at the beginning; and from the rank and file of these almost machine-made chorus ballets have emerged some of our cleverest comediennes.

Of all the dancers I have seen, none lives with me so vividly as Mary Anderson. I have not forgotten her gentle maiden in Ignomar, of her classic statue in Pygmalion and Galatea; her passionate bride in Romeo and Juliet or her rugged witch in Meg Merilies. She gave differingly appropriate action to all of her characters, as well as wondrous eloquence of speech. But her Perdita, who danced in "A Winter's Tale," was more memorable to me than any other. That dance was startling at first sight, for it broke out as suddenly as an interpolated specialty in a musical farce; and it was overwhelmingly dramatic, for the beautiful creature, six feet in height and proportionately long-limbed, came down the center of the stage flinging her legs as freely as her arms in carefully prepared disorder. That was a new spectacle in Shakespearean representation of a serious nature. If Miss Anderson had dared it early in her career, when her art was raw and her standing unauthoritative, the carpers would have denounced it. But by that time she had developed a facility in acting commensurate with her natural gifts of voice and beauty. London had decided that she was a great artist, and so New York did not hesitate to admire the astonishing dance of Perdita.

The Habit of Health

Many people have a habit of ailing. How much better it would be to learn to keep well. For health, after all, is largely a matter of habit, which all may acquire with a little practise.

BEECHAM'S PILLS

teach good habits to Stomach, Liver, Kidneys and Bowels. If you are subject to Bilious Attacks, suffer from Constipation or are troubled with Indigestion, Nervousness or Headache, Beecham's Pills will reform all these bad habits and set an example of good health, which the body will quickly follow. You can break up all sickly habits by occasionally using the health suggestions transmitted by Beecham's Pills.

"REAL MONEY" SALARIES

What Present Day Favorites Got In the Past and Gone—Dan Sully Was Satisfied With $25 Each Week and Gus Hill Asked For Only $40.

New York, Aug. 12.—When the successful vaudeville team of today can't get a contract for a week's work at some figure approximating $250, said team considers itself trod under the heel of the merciless manager. A young woman who has had the slightest of stage experience, but who can sing some, said the other day in considering the situation:

"I could have been busy every week of the season if I had been willing to accept pauper's wages. They only offered me $35 or $40 a week, and I'd rather sit in my little hall room and spin than take that money."

It was not so in the olden days.

B. Baruch, the old watchman at the Majestic in New York, throws an interesting light on salaries of the past, whenever he feels like turning over the pages of his scrapbook and discussing their interesting entries.

Men and women of the stage, whose reputations extend over several countris, were willing, a quarter of a century ago, to work for what they could get, and be glad of the chance. Baruch was a watchman at the old London, on the Bowery, when Jim Donaldson was the arbiter of stage fashions on the East side.

Here's one of the first of the letteres pasted in an 1881 scrapbook, and bearing the signature of a woman who in recent years has been able to write her own ticket—up to a reasonable amount—in the amount of salary demanded:

Detroit, Jan. 21, 1881.

"Manager Donaldson, London Theater, New York.

"Dear Sir: Can you play me one or two weeks at your theater commencing February 7? Bus., semi-comic vocalist. Salary, two weeks, $50 (fifty dollars); single week, $30 (thirty dollars. Played for you before and have closed a twelve weeks' engagement with Wood & White's Electric Congress. Been absent from New York fifteen months. Satisfaction guaranteed. An immediate reply will greatly oblige. Yours respectfully,

"MISS ANNIE HART."

Dan Sully, who later attained eminence, didn't place his salary figure so high, when on April 17, 1878, he wrote from Baltimore:

"Dear Sir: According to your wish, I write you again and would like to open with you as soon as possible to do my new specialty. Songs all new, and on the topics of the day, and sure to make a hit. I also have afterpieces. Terms, $25 a week for two weeks. An early and decided answer will greatly oblige. Yours truly, DAN SULLY."

Gus Hill, who is worth a few thousands, or millions, or billions today, set forth his terms on August 4, 1881, thus:

"Can you play me at your house the week of September 12 at the small salary of $40 per week in my new novelty and wonderful act? By reading my margin on the other side you will get a good idea of what it consists of. For next season I have everything new—new clubs and wardrobe, etc. By booking me for this week you will oblige me very much. If not, please let me know what week you can give me, also if you can fix a few weeks through the season for me. I am the only one doing an act of this, and have the reputation to do the first act. By answering this you will oblige, yours etc., "GUS HILL."

A program of the Theater Comique in Cleveland, bearing date of March 1, 1880, shows the officials to have been M. J. Kelleher, proprietor; B. C. Hart, manager; E. F. Barnes, stage manager; Billy Fielding, treasurer. The Russell brothers were the topliners on this particular bill, their announcement reading:

It wasn't quite so soft for John and James in those times as it is today when they want and get a salary in three figures—and three mighty big figures at that. —Ed. Hart act. From Milwaukee, on Jan. 20, 1880, they wrote:

"Can you book us for two weeks, commencing April 26? That will be our first appearance in this city for three months, and we shall open with new business. Salary the same as before, $50 per week, jointly. Hoping that you will favor us with an early reply we remain yours,

"THE RUSSELLS (John and James.)"

Dan Daly, who shortly before his death was able to command a salary in vaudeville nearer the $1,000 mark than most entertainers reach, was willing to take $20 a week as his share when he worked with his brother Bobby. Witness:

"Boston, May 2, 1881.—Can you put us in for one week—the 23rd May? Would like to play there with my sister, Lizzie Daly. Salary same as before, $40. Hoping that you can, we remain your respectfully,

"THE DALY BROTHERS (Bobby and Danny)."

"Atlantic City, Aug. 11, 1880.—Friend Donaldson: Lizzie informs me that the position of stage manager is vacant, and as I have had some years of experience in that position I feel competent to fill it, also the position of straight man or general business, having worked with the best performers in the profession, among them our mutual friend Hart, and as I well know that man and wife detracts in the eyes of the audience I will bill myself as George Converse. Salary $25 a week. Waiting a favorable reply, I remain, yours truly, "GEORGE CONWAY."

"P. S.—I always allow my wife a free foot in the theater, and if a man is jealous of his wife he should not have her in one, but I guess you know that I am no crank."

In 1880, J. W. Kelly, afterward famous as "The Rolling Mill Man," and Lew Hawkins, a headliner of today, were partners. They wrote from Chicago in August, asking for time:

"We having played the Western country pretty well and having Chicago by the suspenders, thought we would like to face an audience in the sweet-scented town or village of New York. We received a letter yesterday from Ed. Baker, and in it he informed us that he had been speaking to you about us and told us to write, which accounts for this letter, a little sooner than it would have otherwise been. Now, what we do is done by no one else in the business—the old gag. We imitate the banjo, guitar, violin, bass viol, trombone, base drum and cymbals. We don't say we do it, but we do it, and as near to the instrument itself that you'd have to stand in with us pretty close before you'd get on to us. It is done only with the mouth, no mustache, etc., and as singers we have no superiors in the profession. We do an act in which we change from Irish to Dutch, and introduce three original songs, "Waiting for the Parade," "The Census Taker" and "The German Boys in Blue." The date we want is September 6, two weeks at a salary of $75 per week.

HAWKINS & KELLY."

A yellow sheet of note paper, with the indication that it comes from Hartford, March 2, 1880, explains Press Eldridge's position in those days:

"Can you name an early date for me at your theater to do my turn of pathetic ballads, parodies, etc? I have not played in New York since last September, and at that time made the most pronounced hit of any single performer on the Bowery. In proof of what I say I refer you to Mr. Moreland, your stage manager, who is well acquainted with my abilities as a performer. My lowest salary is $35 per week. I have a lot of new stuff to open in New York with which has never been done, and a sure hit.

"PRESS ELDRIDGE."

This modest request bears the managerial annotation, "salary too high," and Press didn't play the London that time.

When Fred Hallen and Enid Hart were doing their specialty Mr. Donaldson received this interesting communication:

"Inclosed you will find pictures. I have also drew a desine for the cut. In the picture of Pinafore I had on red stockens, and they look black, so that they dont show; so please tell the man that makes the cut not to forget to put legs on me.—Enid. The rest is all right.

"HALLEN & HART."

It is understood the man who made the cut obligingly supplied Enid with the desired extremities.

Henshaw & Ten Broeck have a Broadway reputation now in musical comedy, but the Bowery and $50 a week apiece looked good to them twenty-four years ago. From Detroit they wrote, May 19, 1881:

"Would like to open at your place June 20 for one or two weeks. Salary, $100 per week. If this meets with your approbation an early reply will oblige.

"JOHN E. HENSHAW AND MAY TEN BROECK."

Bryant and Richmond also placed their services at a small figure about the date last mentioned, when they wrote:

"If you will give myself and wife April 4, one week, we will make it at $70. This is the best I can do, and lower than we get any place. Business comedy sketches, which will prove satisfactory to you, I am positive. Very respectfully, des Joueurs de Roulette et de Trente-et-Quarante"—lies before the writer, and contains a full, tru and particular account of one of the most famous and most amusing of the many attacks on the bank which have been planned within recent years. The prime mover in the plot was the magnificent "swell-mobsman" Ardisson, who had successfully "worked" nearly every pleasure resort on the continent, and who now, for thea first time, turned his attention to the seemingly unassailable fortress of wealth by the Tideless Sea. Ardisson, it seems, "spied out the land" at Monte Carlo a month or more before he attempted operations; and, clad in an unassuming disguise, made a particular study of the gaming tables and the methods of play. Like many wise folks before and since he came to the conclusion that roulette was unworthy of his attentions. Its companion game, trente-et-quarante, then, he saw his opening.

"W. T. BRYANT AND LIZZIE RICHMOND."

Vanishing for a space from the neighborhood of his blissfully ignorat victims, he returned eventually, accompanied by a friend of his own sex (and profession) and a couple of beautiful and well-dressed ladies. The party ranged themselves, two on each side of the trente-et-quarante board, and while the cropier was shuffling the cards preparatory to starting a fresh set of deals ,the lady on one side engaged the umpire in ingenious chat—asking explanations of how the game was played, and so forth—while she on the other requested umpire No. 2 to supply her with gild change for a bank note. At the precise instant when the croupier was ready to begin one of the ladies dropped 50 louis on the floor, where they rolled noisily hither and thither, creating a most unseemly diversion and attracting all eyes from the cloth. Attendants gathered up her gold; whereupon the game proceeded.

The Ardisson quartet, as the Gallic chronicler playfully has it, "attendit leur acquereusement par paquets de mille la rouge et la couleur," and, behold, "Rouge gagne et couleur' no less than three times running. And, to cut a long story short, whichever way the quartet stake (and they have the privilege to vary their staking more than once), they win. After eight coups, "la societe se retire majestueusement," carrying with them 180,000 francs of the bank's money. At the door of the Casino a smart carriage awaits them, and in five minutes they are whirled across the frontier.

The secret of M. Ardisson's staggering success only tranpired when too late. Horrified at the loss to the bank which the eight abnormal coups had caused, the umpires ordered the cards to be re-examined. There were eighty-four too many in the pack. The croupier had been bribed to insert a specially shuffled slab of cards at a given signal, and the disturbance caused by the fall of madame's gold pieces had drawn all eyes from his deed. Two months' imprisonment was his sentence, a period of discomfort he could afford to disregard when weighed against his personal profits.

It is more than probable that there will ever be another Ardisson. It is quite certain that there will never be another Jaggers. Jaggers is the only Britisher who figures at all outstandingly in the annals of Monte Carlo. He was a Yorkshireman, and after weeks of watching and record keeping he discovered that one of the roulette wheels had a bias toward a certain number. He and his assistants persistently backed that number, and with the aid of a large capital contrived to make a substantial income. The trick was eventually detected by Casino inspectors, and nowadays the wheels are not only very perfectly constructed, but their parts are interchangeable, so that even if there exists a bias in any wheel it shifts from number to number daily.

A bomb, arranged to explode in the gasmeter cellar of the Casino and extinguish the lights, formed the crux of another carefully schemed attempt to rob the tables. These are now illuminated with enormous six-burnered oil lamps, as well as electricity; so the plan would be futile. Thousands of false counters—in the day when counters were played with instead of coin—are another disagreeable memory for the Blanc heirs. The counters were, many of them, redeemed; but never again will a croupier accept anything but solid metal and notes. Of false money there has, of course, been plenty; but that (it is perhaps not unfair to hint) is as easy to foist on the player as on the bank—if not easier. Even the paper-wrapped "rouleaux" of five-louis pieces ("placques") must be torn open nowadays when placed on the cloth.

The improbable at Monte Carlo is that a player should extract money from the bank's coffers; and it is safe to assert that this event does not "happen in due proportion." From which it is evident that neither roulette nor trente-et-quarante are true games of chance, and that the £1,440,500 which they have earned this year might, with a good deal more fairness to mankind in general and the traveling public in particular, have found a resting place elsewhere.

A New Baby.

A New Baby! What magic, what mystery, what charm these words have for us. Yet, how infinitely more they mean to the mother. A new life; short, to be sure, but full of possibilities. Some one must be patient, hopeful, watchful, proud and never discouraged. That "some one" is the mother. She has heard her baby's first cry, and whether it be her first or tenth, the feeling is the same. Her feeble arms are out-stretched; those arms that will never desert it as long as the mother shall live. And that hand which supports the head of the new-born babe, the mother's hand, supports the civilization of the world.

Is it any wonder, we ask you, mothers, that with all these responsibilities resting upon your all too weak shoulders, we urge upon you the necessity of selecting the babe's medicine with utmost care; the necessity of protecting your babe from worthless, unknown and narcotic drugs as you would protect it from the fire?

WAYS OF LONG ISLAND NATIVES

Their Don't Care Attitude Has Cost Them Their Stores, But They Still Have the Boarding Houses and Liveries.

New York, Aug. 12.—The Long Islander is not holding his own as a shopkeeper in the towns that are given over to the summer invaders from New York, but the best of the hotels and boarding houses are kept by natives of the villages. Only on the north side of the island, and in a few of the places nearest to the city have the foreign-born landlords proved serious competitors of the men and women who were born and reared in these towns, and who have seen them gradually turn into summer resorts that are certain to be crowded at least two months of the year.

In other commercial relations with the summer visitors the natives have been less successful. There is a steadily increasing number of foreigners in all these island towns who can adapt themselves so much better to the point of view of persons who come from the city. Take the fruit stores, for instance. Once they were all in the control of men born on the island. About five years ago Italian names began to appear on the shops; now the Italians keep nearly all the stores.

It is easy to understand why.

"Why havent' you got your fruit store?" asked a visitor to one of the Long Island towns who was surprised to find that the name of a son of Italy had taken the place of this descendant of the early settlers.

"Oh, it was too much trouble," he answered. "There was too much kicking all the time. Once the fruit was too green, and then it was too ripe. I couldn't listen to that all day from these people."

There was some inquiry as to what the state of the fruit usually was.

"Perhaps it was one way or the other every once in a while," was the answer. "But I couldn't stand all that complaining. So I sold out to the Dago, who doesn't mind how much they call him down."

In the same way the shops for all smaller wares are going gradually into the control of others who don't mind giving the sort of attention that persons expect. It is not suited to the genius of these Long Islanders to be other than themselves even to make a living.

There are some branches of industry that they still control absolutely. They have the livery and all mechanical work. If it is anything connected with a bicycle or an automobile, for instance, only the natives are able to supply it. One day last week an applicant for a wheel went to the largest shop in the village. The youthful proprietor was seated at his desk.

"I'd like a wheel if you have one that would fit me," said the stranger, who had never seen the proprietor before.

He kept his eyes fixed on a bottle of patent medicine that stood before him.

The visitor repeated his question. There was no answer.

"Suppose that medicine's any good?" he asked, lifting up the bottle. "It's for rheumatism. Is it all right?"

The visitor was compelled to admit that he could not tell. "Got rheumatism terribly in my left arm," he went on, "and this did me a lot of good last year. Drummer from Jersey City gave it to me. What I mean is, do you think it's any good after a year?"

There was no reference to the wheel.

"I guess I'll try it anyhow. You wanted a wheel." Here he lifted himself up and craned his neck over the top of the desk to look over the shop. "Say, ain't this wonderful rubber for tires. Can't tear it. Only got that sample last night."

Then the subject of the bicycle was finally reached. Any person unacquainted with the Long Island way of doing business would never have waited to get down to cases with a person so much interested in other matters. He was not intending to be anything but polite in his own way. He was concerned about his rheumatism, however, and he wanted to talk about the medicine to the first person that came along. Then there was not much use in resenting his apparent indifference. He had the only decent wheels in the town, and to leave his shop was to go without one. Besides, he would have been shocked at any imputation that he had meant to be unbusinesslike.

Some of the liverymen press into service in the summer time all the members of their family, in addition to the extra help they hire. Thus the women of the family often act as coachmen in an emergency. Strangers in the village arrive and find a gray-haired woman in a runabout waiting to drive them to their destination. If they are shy men, they are likely to be somewhat embarrassed at this singular kind of Jehu. But the woman soon puts these inexperienced persons at their ease. She chats amiably with the stranger, and out of this habit an almost disastrous misunderstanding once arose at Quogue.

A young woman spending her first summer there was visited every few weeks by her husband. He was carried there by one of these feminine drivers, and in the course of events was seen on the street by his acquaintances in the village. Luckily, he had few. But one who came several times through the town in an automobile from Southampton always told about having seen Mr. X driving with some lady in Quogue who was not his wife. The story was told so many times that by the time it reached the wife the woman was beautiful, young and even dashing in appearance. There was electricity in the air until it was discovered that the Long Island habit of women coachmen was at the bottom of all the trouble.

Even in the livery business they are not enthusiastic in manner, although it supplies one of the most profitable sources of income. It is customary, for instance, for some sort of conversation as this to go on whenever a rig is to be ordered:

"Will you send down my horse in the runabout at 3?" asks a summer visitor who is paying a high price for stabling her rig.

"Why, yes, Miss Smith," answers the woman member of the family. "I'll speak to my husband about it. At 3 o'clock. Yes, all right; we'll see about it."

She could not be more patronizing in manner if she were keeping the horse and rig for nothing. But it was not meant to be anything but polite, with a certain emphasis that city people were perhaps not all that they thought they were and had to be kept in their places, even if they did supply all the money.

Something of this attitude is suggested by the demeanor of the landlords who let rooms, as well as the keepers of the boarding houses. They are, to be sure, taking money for their rooms, but they are not doing by that anything to lower themselves in their own opinion. They are co-dwellers in their own houses with strangers in every respect their equals. Most of these families have back of them a genealogy which can be readily traced several centuries further back than those of their lodgers who happen to have the money to rent the rooms.

The independent attitude is not in the least objectionable to most persons who go to these places. They admire the sturdy Americanism that it represents. Others who have passed their summers in Europe or in places where foreign landlords and landladies prevail sometimes object to this point of view.

Illustrative of the extent in which the small industries are leaving the hands of the natives is the appearance of the peddlers of Indian goods this year. They are not natives of Long Island. They come, indeed, from the Ghetto and speak with its unmistakable jargon. Yet they are selling the products of the Indians who used to be at home in these places.

A swarthy gent named Green who uses a sharp inshoot, a slow tantalizing out, and a supercilious smile, smeared a coat of white paint over the Champs in yesterday's pleasant little session at Athletic park, and furnished some large chunks of joy for the baseball fanatics in the boom city of the king's domain.

The gentleman with the verdant name had the heavy hitting Sox tearing their lungs out at his benders. The ball floated over the plate looking as big as a balloon, but the Champs kept popping it up in the air, and dumping it into the fielders' mitts.

If it hadn't been for the labels on their shirts the fans would never have known the peggers for the same team that allowed themselves to be trampled over in Thursday's game. The Maroons played fast, snappy ball with plenty of pepper, and gave their pitcher the kind of support that warmed the cockles of his heart.

A grass-cutter by Menefee past the final sack was the only single secured by Duluth in the entire game, and but two men reached first on balls. If it had not been for the three errors of the Winnipeg team not a man would have passed first base. Powell was also pitching good ball, and the batting averages of the Canucks did not grow very obese at his expense. Only five hits graced the column of the goes from across the border, and if it had not been for Weller's two fumbles, only one red-shirted player would have joined the joyous throng of run-getters.

The king's minions showed their first tendencies to circuit the bases in the second. After the great Zeider had retired on a fly, Tucker rapped out a single into left field, and went to second on a wild pitch by Powell. Leighty's timely two-bagger scored him. The Winnipeg cast-off took third on a passed ball and attempted to score when Claytor dumped a little one to O'Dea. The Duluth captain caught him by ten feet at the plate, and while the Champs were engaging in a little game of tag with him between the bases, Claytor tore around to third. Rogers struck out.

For four innings it was one-two-three with the Canucks, but more trouble started in the seventh, when Zeider drew a base on balls. Claytor struck out and Leighty smashed out another two-bagger. Nehr fielded the ball and threw to third to hold Zeider, but Weiler let the ball go through him and Zeider scored. Leighty going to third. Claytor smashed a hot one at Weiler and the third baseman juggled it long enough to let Leighty score and Claytor reach first. Rogers hit, but Green struck out, and Claytor was caught trying to steal third.

Only nine men faced Green in the first three innings, but in the fourth the Champs had a chance to score. Newman struck out and Si reached first on Gatewood's error. Menefee rapped out the only hit of the day, and Si went to third. He tried to score on O'Dea's hit to Leighty, but was caught at the plate.

During the rest of the game they were never within hailing distance of the plate, and in the seventh Green retired the side by pitching but four balls.

The feature of the game was a running one-handed catch by Neighbors, which robbed Green of a two-bagger and saved a score in the fifth.

TIGERS WIN.

Take Second Game of the Series From Superior.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Stanchfield's Tigers took the second game of the series from Superior by a score of 8 to 3. Treadway was in the box for the Tigers and was in excellent form. He allowed the visitors just three hits and struck out six. Sorenson was in the box for the strangers and pitched fairly good ball, but was wild at times. The locals took nine hits, and nearly all came in bunches. He was not given the very best of support, and fielded a poor game himself.

The features of the game were the beautiful stop made by McShane, in the third inning, when he robbed Spanton of a hit; Anderson's long run in the fourth inning, and Spanton's high jump in the sixth inning. Harris' profanity was one of the uncalled for features of the game.

The visitors scored in but two innings. Treadway's carlessness in the fifth allowed the strangers to score, and two hits in the seventh gave the visitors the other two scores. In the fifth Treadway weakened. The first man up, McShane, sent a long drive to Anderson. Hansen drew a pass, and White was hit by Treadway. Howell went out from Hanrahan to Spanton. Hanson scored on a wild pitch. Sorenson was issued a pass, but was caught between first and second. In the seventh the visitors took two more. Hansen and White led off with clean hits. Howell went out to Varco on a fly, Hansen scored on Mullane's throw to third, and White came home on Sorenson's put out. The other seven innings Treadway handed the visitors a bunch of goose eggs.

The Tigers scored in the third, fourth, fifth and seventh innings. Anderson led off with a three bagger in the third, and sent home by Varco's hit. Varco stole home after he had gone to third on McShane's error, which gave Chandler his base. Leach sacrificed, and Hanrahan took a hit, and sent Hanrahan home. Spanton and Caldwell each falled to see first. With two men on bases in the fourth, White made a costly error, and Anderson and Treadway scored. In the fifth Caldwell and Mullane came home on a hit by Treadway. In the seventh Caldwell scored on Sorenson's error.

FARGO WINS.

Crookston's Winning Streak Is Broken By Farmers.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Pete Hanson held Crookston to two hits yesterday afternoon and won with little effort. He gave three bases on balls and hit one man. His support was rather ragged, Meil being the chief offender, with errors on three of his chances, two of which came in a bunch. The little fellow rarely has such an off day and the fans found ample excuses for his intractions. Traeger's hit in the third was the batting feature.

In the first Baker fanned, Schlatter perambulated and Livingston swatted the ball. Olson knocked a short one to Donovan, who threw to second to catch Livingston and make a double, but Mehl dropped the throw and Schlatter raced across the pan. But worst of all Mehl had started a throw for the home plate and reconsidered. In his effort to check the ball it got away and went out toward the Fargo players' bench between first and home and before Stripp could round it up Livingston had scored. Ludwig died on a pop-up foul that Hanson took. Hanson made a poor throw on Johnson's dump and the batsman registered at Dolan's corner. Wing ended the business with a fly to Warnish.

Fargo scored in the third when Fitz singled and came across on Traeger's magnificent smash to right center for a double. Rose hit and Wing played with the ball long enough for Traeger to score. Dolan flied to Wing and Stripp drove one so hard at Livingston that it caromed off the second baggman's shin thirty feet and Rose scored all the way from second. Warnish finished the inning with his out from Baker to Schlatter.

In the sixth Fargo added another pair of scores. Warnish started the fun by hitting a lobbed ball safely. Mehl bunted one between Spicer and Schlatter so successfully that he beat it out and Warnish made two sacks on it. The double steal was started and Warnish was apparently surrounded by the enemy between third and the coveted station. He chased around so long that Baker finally threw the ball into his back and gave the runner the chance to score. Mehl had gone around to third on the play and came home on Sperry's wild pitch.

GAMES ARE TRANSFERRED

Crookston Will Have But Few More Home Games.

Crookston, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Crookston will not, during the remainder of the season, see much of the "tail enders," as an arrangement has been made with the league whereby the team will play the greater portion of the remaining games away from home. Zeider, the wonder, and Leighty, who did a stunt of heavy slugging for the home team at Winnipeg last week, which was phenomenal, have been sold to the Winnipeg aggregation for a big consideration and in exchange for two of the Winnipeg players, Messrs. Johnson and Malony, shortstop and pitcher respectively. The drubbing which the tail-enders gave the peggers last week, lowering them to fourth place in the procession, was enough to make Manager Lamb do almost anything to pull himself together and the money received in the trade by Crookston will do considerable for the backers of the team. Zeider and Leighty did not want to accept the transfer to Winnipeg and at first rebelled, but without avail.

How many games will be played here before the close of the season has not yet been announced by the league officials, but the number will not be large. The games this week were transferred because of the carnival, which is on here and which would detract greatly from the attendance at the ball games. In selling Zeider and Leighty to Manager Lamb of the Winnipeg team, Manager Davies of the Crookston organization reserved his preference rights for next season and will have first choice on both men. Zeider is acknowledged the whirlwind pitcher of the league this season and is reported as having received several flattering offers from big league team managers, including Watkins of Minneapolis.

CURIOUS GOLF.

Eccentricities Grafted on to the Royal Game.

Two incidents have occurred in the golfing world recently, drawing attention to eccentricities that have been grafted on to the royal and ancient game of golf from time to time, says London Tit-Bits.

In the first place, it was recorded that a member of the Saint Andrews Golf club ascended Ben Nevis with a club shortly before the meteorological station was closed, and from the summit drove off six golf balls in the direction of the Tower Cliff. When last seen the balls were resting peacefully on the snow, where probably they will remain until the summer heat melts the snowy mantle and brings down the balls to a lower altitude in the resultant stream.

The second incident of note was a novel match played at Barnton, Edniburgh, when Angus McDonald, one of the leading members of the Edinburgh Burgess club, playing with a full set of clubs, beat Arnaud Massey, the famous professional golfer, whose only club was a cleek, by five holes up and four to play. Mr. McDonald was evidently playing an exceedingly fine game, for until quite recently the amateur record for the links was 78, whereas he went round in 73, a score that would have made the professional play up to his best form even in the event of his enjoying the use of the full complement of clubs.

This is not the first time by any means that a player has been handicapped in this fashion; indeed, such a match was witnessed on the North Surrey golf links at Norbury in the early autumn of 1903. On this occasion the club professional, A. Thomson, selected the putter as his implement, while his opponent, H. S. Leuwn, who is a consistently long drive and a better than average player, had the use of all his clubs. How brilliantly the professional played with his single club can be gathered from the fact that he went round the eighteen holes in 81 strokes (as against 83 in the case of his opponent), which compares most favorably under the circumstances with the par score of the course—81.

A few months ago a very similar match was played at Cannes by Charles Hutchings of the Royal Liverpool club, who was amateur champion in 1902. Mr. Hutchings, who played with his putter throughout, took the whole course of eighteen holes in 87 strokes, and the nature of his play can be gathered from the fact that at the seventeenth tee he drove his ball 87 yards, a distance that many players would only be too glad to attain with their drivers.

That the real novice would be most unwise to back himself to win against an expert player, even if the latter was given nothing but a billiard cue or a kitchen poker to play with, was made apparent early last winter, when a workman who was watching a golfer at practice on the Mid-Norfolk golf links vaingloriously remarked, "I could do as well as that!" Somewhat nettled by the criticism, the golfer challenged the other to a match, the latter to use the golfer's driver and the golfer the workman's spade and hammer, with the result that the ignorant critic retired a sadder and wiser man.

Apropos of the Ben Nevis freak it is interesting to note that two Edinburgh golfers played a match in 1818—twelve years before old Tom Morris stood in the quarry beneath the famous bridge at Ballochmyle and drove golf balls to a pathway that was at the same height above him as the ball of the cross on Saint Paul's cathedral is above the pavement—from the Bruntsfield links to the top of Arthur's Seat, a well-known landmark of Edinburg's scenery that rises to a height of 827 feet above sea level.

Amnog the eccentric matches that have been played, which include a fixture between a golfer and an archer—the former playing with his usual paraphernalia and the latter with a bow and arrow—a match ending in a victory for the archer, there has recently been added a contest between a player using all his clubs and an opponent who used his arm solely and wholly as a means of propelling the gutta and rubber spheroid.

The match in question took place on the links of the Brighton and Hove Golf club rather over two years ago, the opponents being Archibald Ramsden, a well-known Yorkshireman, and F. W. Sears of Hove. As the average eighteen holes ran to about 5,900 yards (those at Brighton are 5,500 yards in the aggregate), it follows that to get round in, say, 85 throws requires an effort ranging from 62 to 65 yards, a not overwhelming distance, but one demanding a fair amount of stamina in order to keep it up throughout the round, especially in view of the fact that in order to hole out every green a number of short throws would be absolutely necessary.

It is interesting to note that Mr. Ramsden, who lost the match in all probability on account of his lack of knowledge in respect to the course he was throwing over, never exceeded seven efforts at any hole, while his card showed a return of seven fives and one four—striking testimony to the accuracy of his aim.

Unnecessary Expense.

Acute attacks of colic and diarrhoea come on without warning and prompt relief must be obtained. There is no necessity of incurring the expense of a physician's service in such cases if Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is at hand. A dose of this remedy will relieve the patient before a doctor could arrive. It has never been known to fail, even in the most severe and dangerous cases and no family should be without it. BASEBALL GOSSIP

Pretty Race In Progress For American League Pennant.

With but three weeks of the Northern league season remaining, the Duluth team has what looks like a comfortable lead in the race for the 1905 pennant, and the White Sox should once more end the season with the title of Champions.

The last week was a disastrous one for Grand Forks, and the Duluth series took a decided crimp in the aspirations of the Tigers for first place honors. For two weeks previous to the series here, Anderson's aggregation was trailing the Champs, and for one day held first place in the league race by three points. It was the only time the Duluth team has been headed this season, but it was not for long. The next game put Duluth back in the lead and the White Sox have been steadily opening the gap.

The Sox have played like real champions on the present home series, taking two straights from Fargo, five out of six from Grand Forks, and one out of two from Winnipeg up to the present time, making a total of eight games won out of ten played.

The team has made 75 hits in the ten games out of 329 times at bat, making a team batting average of about .227, and an average of over seven hits a game.

A total of 26 fielding errors have been made in the ten games, or an average of 2.6 errors to the game.

The visiting teams have made nearly as good a batting record, making a total of 71 hits out of 327 times at bat, but they have fallen off in the fielding averages, scoring no less than 37 errors in the ten games, or an average of 3.7 to the game.

Since coming home Si Bennett has been outhitting any man on the team, having the phenomenal batting average of .408 in the ten games. Your Uncle Si has been coming up with a rush in the batting list, and if he isn't careful will head the league at the end of the season, where his batting was looked on as a joke at the opening. He has rapped out 13 hits out of 31 times up, giving him an average of .408. This will probably put him among the .300 hitters.

Capt. Artie still continues to smash the ball when it is needed, and his average has also improved during the home series. He has had 13 hits out of 34 times up, giving him an average of .382.

Neighbors has had 12 hits out of 38 times up, giving him an average of .320, and increasing his total average.

Nehr has been hitting the ball pretty regularly since he joined the team, getting 8 hits out of 30 times up, and having an average of .268.

Menefee has slumped off, and has been hitting at only a .250 clip, with 10 hits out of 40 times up.

Newman has had but 5 hits, but has probably reached first base as often as any man on the team unless it is Bennett. The little shortstop plays a star fielding game, and draws more bases on balls than any man in the league. McAleese has had 7 hits out of 33 times up, and Weiler 7 out of 42.

The Winnipeg club has been strengthened this week by the addition of Zeider and Leighty, two of the fastest and best hitting infielders in the league. The Maroons are due to take a great big brace in their play, and the knowing ones among the fans pick them to win out at least third place, and possibly second, especially if the Tigers continue the slump they took last week.

Crookston came up with a rush last week, largely at the expense of the Maroons, and they have a show to climb out of last place which they have occupied all season. The management probably secured a neat sum for the release of Zeider and Leighty, who were the mainstays of the team, and took this method of pulling themselves out of a hole financially. The team has been playing in hard luck all year, and deserved a better standing than it has.

In the big leagues at the present time, the feature is by long odds the wonderful race that is being made for the American league pennant. Philadelphia, Chicago, Cleveland, New York, Boston and even Detroit are all possible winners. The beautiful spurt that has been made by the New York and Boston teams has been the feature of the last month's play. The New Yorkers won thirteen straight games and the Boston trailed them closely throughout the spurt. Both teams are now over the .500 mark and the leaders are well under the .600 point. With such a close race it is of course impossible to pick winners at this stage of the game. Cleveland is taking another brace after the slump caused by the crippling of several of her players, and with all her men in good shape Lajoie's bunch are probably the pick of the league. It is anybody's race as yet, however.

* * *

The Chicago Nationals have been holding the Giants in good shape in the present series, but it is hard to see anything but New York in the pennant race. Pittsburg still has a fighting chance to nose the New Yorkers out of first place, but the Giants will have to take a slump to make it possible.

* * *

In the Association the Columbus team has been making a runaway race of it during the last two weeks, romping away from Minneapolis and Milwaukee. Louisville has been coming up with a rush and is looked upon as a very likely candidate for second or third honors. The Minneapolis team has been woefully crippled, and seems to have hit the toboggan slide.

SUPPORT NEEDED

Of Old-Time Players By League That Would Succeed.

Boston, Aug. 12.—I have always contended that sentiment counts for much in baseball. The baseball league that has the support of the once great stars of the profession is pretty sure to come out a winner, while the league or club not in favor with the old players must suffer in consequence.

In cities with one club the old player is often passed up and seldom recognized at the gate. But the ex-National league player is always a welcome guest at the American league grounds in Chicago, Boston and Philadelphia, where the National league clubs of the same cities fail to offer the old player the freedom of the grounds. On my last visit to Chicago I had the pleasure of meeting several old-timers seated in a front box at the Chicago American grounds.

* * *

There was Emil Gross, the famous old Providence backstop, looking as rugged and happy as an Ohio farmer; Fred Pfeffer, the famous second baseman of the Chicago club, an artist and a winner; Joe Quest, another old Chicago second baseman, in appearance not a day older than when playing with "Silver" Flint, and the only Nolan at Indianapolis in 1878; "Sadie" Houck, the clever shortstop with Philadelphia and Boston clubs after breaking into the business from the open fields in Washington. Houck was a fierce hitter, and at times put up a great fielding game. These old players are now making Chicago their home, and informed me that they never went to the National league grounds to see baseball, as the old club extended no favors, and never was asked for any.

Charley Comiskey was also there to meet the old players, and to welcome them to his grounds, for Comiskey, having risen from the ranks himself, has a great veneration for the pioneers of the great game. Ben Shibe and Connie Mack of the Philadelphia athletics make it a point to welcome the old players to Athletic Park in the same city up to this season has notoriously turned down the retired members of the profession.

* * *

In Boston it is a noticeable fact that the old players seldom attend the games at the South end grounds, while they flock to the American league park, many holding complimentary season tickets from President Johnson.

At Detroit they never lose sight of the old favorites, while at Cleveland, President Kilfoyl has the reputation of turning down the old-timers. I met Pete Houghteling in that city a few weeks ago, and he informed me that no old ball players were recognized at the gate in Cleveland. Houghteling was a member of the famous Stars of Syracuse in '77, and for a dozen years after was a fine player at Boston, Cincinnati and other cities.

* * *

In New York the American league has the sympathy of the ex-ball players living in that vicinity. John A. Brush, however, has always appreciated the benefit of a good word from the oldtimers, and all are heartily welcomed at the polo grounds. The result is that the New York National league club has no knockers among the ex-players. Then, too, John J. McGraw is ever anxious to favor an old player, which materially adds to the friends of the New York club.

Washington idolizes the men who have made fame in that city on the diamond. The names of Jack Lynch, Phil Powers, Charley Snyder? "Dummy" Hoy, Paul Hines, Sam Wise and scores of men who first gained laurels in Washington are well remembered by the local fans.

Few great players have settled down to make Pittsburg their home after quitting the diamond. How different in Cincinnati! Here the retired player feels at home, and he always finds a ready smile on the face of the local manager. With the veteran Frank Bancroft at the gate, he must indeed be an old bird to pass unrecognized. With President August Herrmann as full of sentiment as an egg is of meat and the clever Bancroft in charge of the club, the ex-ball players of Cincinnati find great pleasure in booming the game in that city.

I believe a well-regulated society of ex-players could ruin any baseball league in existence.

It was the influence of retired players that gave the Players' league the upper hand in 1890, and John M. Ward fully appreciated their help to him in the greatest fight ever known in baseball. Charley Comiskey won his way to the front in Chicago through his baseball personality, and the extra good wishes of former ball players. The Union association of 1884, the Players' league of 1890, and American association of 1891, and the American league of the present time, all opposed to the old National league, were made successful in Boston through the influence and good work of the retired ball players in this section of the country.

I think President Ban Johnson of the American league fully appreciates the support of the retired ball players. His long experience as a baseball writer on the Cincinnati Commercial gave him the chance to become well acquainted with the players, especially during the time of the Players' league war. He was a warm friend of the men at that time, and practically through their influence drifted into the game as an executive. This, no doubt, counts to a great extent for the favors shown the old players at the American league parks outside of one or two cities.

Harry Pulliam has clinched his chances for re-election. His open hand against the childish actions of Barney Dreyfuss gave the first real evidence that the Kentucky colonel was not the meek, frightened official that many baseball men tried to make him out.

E. E. SMATHERS

Going Back to Trotters on Big Scale.

New York, Aug. 12.—There is no doubt that Mr. Smathers is going back into the trotting game on an extensive scale.

In Detroit last week, when Sadie Mac trotted a mile in 2:06¼, George Spear, who had been Smathers's trainer in the light harness game, is said to have offered $20,000 for the 5-year-old daughter of Peter the Great. The offer was turned down. Spear, it is generally believed, was acting for Smathers. In addition to this he made a $10,000 offer for Bonanza, who forced Walter Direct to pace a mile in 2:06¼ in the Chamber of Commerce stake. The offer is said to be under consideration by the owners of Bonanza.

The readvent of Smathers into the light harness game means a good deal for the sport in general, for he will pay almost any price to get the best horses.

COLLEGE MEN

Less Interest Than Usual Taken In Championship Meetings.

Ralph Rose Is Reported to Be Going to Yale.

New York, April 12.—College athletes of the East have taken less interest than usual this year in non-college championship meetings. On the other hand, the university men of the Middle West have been exceptionally active. This was evidenced by their remarkable showing in the amateur championships at Portland, Or. during the week. The team, which represented the Chicago A.A., was one of the strongest that organization ever got together. It included the pick of the college-men of that section and was in strong contrast to the team sent out by the New York A.C.

The rather poor representation of the East was not due to any fear of a defeat at the hands of the Western men, but was caused largely by the attitude of the Eastern faculties. Four or five years ago all the athletic club teams of the East were made up largely of college men while still undergraduates. At present all this is being changed. Cornell University has taken the initiative and has refused to permit its students to compete for athletic clubs at all during the college years, and at the present only during the months of July and August. They probably would not be allowed to compete even at this time, except for the fact that the university being closed, the faculty has no control over the students. The movement to keep college men off the athletic teams is being done in the interest of amateur sport, the sponsors claiming that competition on club teams is professionalizing college men.

A different idea seem to prevail in the West, especially at Chicago and Milwaukee, whose athletic teams are composed of the best college men in their section of the country. In both cases their university year had hardly closed before their athletes began to gather from the different institutions and have been in training almost constantly until the present.

Yale University's athletic authorities continue to have great difficulty in securing a suitable successor to Mike Murphy, who has returned to the University of Pennsylvania. Ever since Murphy announced his intention to leave the Yale authorities have been on a hunt to find a man big enough to fill his shoes. The two men first considered were Mike Sweeney of Holy school at Pottsville, Pa., and Acton Fitzpatrick of the University of Michigan. But Yale's experience with them was the same as that of Penn a year ago, when they were offered princely salaries to take charge of the Quaker athletes. Sweeney now receives a salary of at least $5,000 a year, while Fitzpatrick gets $7,000, of which $3,000 is furnished by the state. Had either Sweeney or Fitzpatrick showed any inclination to quit their institutions for Yale, their salaries would have been increased in an instant. The victorious teams which these institutions have been able to turn out year after year mean much more to them than the salaries their trainers receive.

With Fitzpatrick and Sweeney out of the running the chance of the Yale authorities has been narrowed down to Steve Farrell of Rockville, Al Copeland of New York, and Bowler of the Dartmouth college. Although these men are experienced in their work they do not measure up to Murphy's standard. That this is so is shown by the fact that Yale has decided to engage another man to look after the conditioning of the football men. When Murphy was there he attended to both the football and the track squads, coaching the latter entirely. He will perform a similar service at the University of Pennsylvania.

If signs are read aright Princeton University will this fall make a gigantic effort to compete with New York and Philadelphia, as well as New Haven and Cambridge, in the matter of football crowds. Heretofore the Tigers have been handicapped by the smallness of Princeton and its distance from New York and Philadelphia. The Princeton authorities, however, have set out to correct this. They first secured the Army-Navy football game for their field and with this as a drawing card they secured the co-operation of the Pennsylvania railroad, which is now double tracking its road from Princeton Junction to Princeton. The length of time it took for the crowds to get from the junction to the city has been one of the drawbacks, which Princeton has had to contend with. But with it removed the Tigers expect to draw tremendous crowds.

Of equal importance to better railroad facilities is the action of the authorities in deciding to construct a magnificent stadium to surpass those now possessed by Harvard, Pennsylvania and other universities. It will not be ready for use this fall, but the authorities hope to have it completed by 1906. When finished it will seat 50,000 persons, fully 15,000 more than that of Harvard will accommodate. The Tigers do not expect to fill it very often during the year, but they think that the Yale game and the Army-Navy contest will about tax it to the utmost.

The Tigers are already making arrangements for a large number of extra seats to accommodate the visitors to the Army-Navy game to be played there on December 2. This will be the only really big game of the year at Princeton as the Yale game is to be played at New Haven this fall. There is some difference of opinion as to whether or not the Army-Navy crowd will equal that which has annually attended the games played on Franklin Field. The ground for this year is the distance of Princeton from New York and Philadelphia and the poor hotel and restaurant facilities. Unless the Tigers can obviate this difficulty as well as arrange for larger stands it is feared that the removal of the game from Philadelphia will be a mistake.

Although all the members of the Big Six are opposed to the preliminary football practice, there is undeniably much activity in evidence at several of these institutions. Coach Glen Warner is already on the field at Cornell, making preparations for his fall campaign. At the university of Pennsylvania there have been several meetings of the board of coaches who are said to be preparing something radical for this fall.

Unusual interest is being attached to the plans of Harvard and Cornell. After a series of gridiron reverses, Harvard has resolved once more to begin all over again. To this end Bill Ried was installed as head coach last spring with plenipotentiary powers. Ried has been making good use of his time, and during the spring practice he has taught the candidates for the Crimson more up-to-date football than they have been able to learn during the two years he was away. The new coach has also secured the practice of several preparatory stars of note to enter Harvard, and with the really good material which Harvard holds over from 1904 he is expected to have little difficulty in turning out a first-class eleven, which may be able to turn the table on Pennsylvania and Yale this fall.

At the university of Pennsylvania there are rumors of radical changes to be made in the style of play. In fact, it is said that about the time of the Harvard game the Quakers will spring a style of football as revolutionary as the famous guard's back which lifted them out of obscurity into the front rank of the intercollegiate world a decade ago. Additional color is given to this report by the fact that George Woodruff, who invented the guard's back and the quarter-back kick, has held several conferences with the Red and Blue coaches and has already been announced as an adviser in football at Penn. Several weeks ago Woodruff was in consultation with the Pennsylvania football authorities, and the next day had several of the Pennsylvania players on the gridiron instructing them in a new play which he had evolved. Whether or not Woodruff's new play will be utilized is not known, but the Quaker supporters will be disappointed if they are not able to present some novel play this fall.

The latest news concerning Ralph Rose, the former university of Michigan shot-putter, is that he is going to Yale. This statement is made because Rose has been seen in the company of two Yale men of late, and they are said to have been trying to induce him to matriculate at New Haven this fall. After the mottled career of Rose since he left California it is very doubtful whether or not any Eastern college would accept him. He failed to secure an honorable discharge from Michigan for his failure to keep up his studies there and for his disobedience of faculty orders concerning outside competition. This prevented his entry at Cornell and Vanderbilt universities, and would undoubtedly bar him from Yale. Rose himself says he is planning to go to Leland Stanford university. Many of his former friends think that too much athletics spoiled his promising career.

KNOCKED OUT IN EIGHTEENTH

Ruhlin Defeats McCormick In a Very Poor Contest.

Colma, Cal., Aug. 12.—About 2,200 sporting enthusiasts came to Colma last night to witness the scheduled twenty-five-round go between the two big fellows, Gus Ruhlin, the Akron giant, and Jimmie McCormick. McCormick was knocked out in the eighteenth round in one of the poorest contests ever witnessed in this ring. McCormick was very slow and did not show to advantage at any stage of the game. The bout all through consisted mainly of sparring and clinching. Very few effective blows were struck at any time. The honors were fairly even up to the fourteenth round. After that McCormick was at the mercy of the Akron boy, but the latter did not have the force to his blows necessary to wind up matters until the eighteenth. In this round Ruhlin landed a succession of short-arm blows to the body and jaw. McCormick went down for the count of eight, but on getting up was floored again with a left to the jjaw and was counted out.

RECORDS IN LOW NOTCHES

Both Trotting and Pacing —Sadie Mac Creates Sensation.

New York, Aug. 12.—The records for the year, both trotting and pacing, have been placed in low notches, considering that there has been but one mile track meeting of note. Among the trotters the records stand as follows: Three-year-old colt, Ambush, 2:14¼, by Zolock, 2:05¼, dam Mountain Maid, by Cresco; 3-year-old filly, Princess Louise, 2:19, by Coronado, 2:07¾, dam Princess Louise, by Woolsey; 4-year-old mare, Titara, 2:10½, by Binger, 2:06¾, dam Nowaday, 2:11¾, by Lockaway; aged stallion, Glenwood M., 2:08¾, by Bobby Burns, 2:13¾, dam Nelly Bly, by Idol Wilkes; aged trotting mare, Sweet Marie, 2:04¾, by McKinney, 2:11¼; dam Lady Rivers, by Mambrino; aged gelding, Tiverton, 2:05½, by Galileo Rex, 2:12¾, dam Polly, by Arragon; green stallion, Dandino, 2:13½, by Direction, dam Clarita W., 2:10½, by Grattan, 2:13, dam Bonnie Josie, 2:24¼, by Bonnie Castle; green gelding Pat Rose, 2:12¾, by Patrose, 2:19; dam by George Wisslington.

The records in the pacing division are: Two-year-old colt, Rockaway, 2:15½, by Stoneway, 2:23¾, dam not traced; 3-year-old filly, Derlessa, 2:11, by Diablo, 2:09¼, dam Clara H., 4-year-old filly, Dorcas H., 2:10¼, by Wiggins 2:19½, dam Suetta, by Time Onward; 4-year-old colt, Cresco Wilkes, 2:10¾, by Nutwood Wilkes, 2:16½; dam Allie Cresco, 2:13¾, by Cresco; aged stallion, Locanda, 2:06, by Allerton, 2:09¾, dam Kathrina, by Alcyone; aged mare, The Broncho, 2:06¾, by Stormcliffe, dam Luxora, by Autocrat; aged gelding, Baron Grattan, 2:05¾, by Grattan, 2:13, dam by Gamaleon; green stallion, Walter Direct, 2:06¾, by Direct Hal, 2:04¾, dam Ella Brown, 2:11½, by Prince Pulaski. Jr.; green mare, Virginia, 2:09¾, by Bob Mason, 2:27½, dam by Grandee; green gelding, Bolivar, 2:07¾, by Wayland W., 2:12, dam by Harry Wilkes. The Wilkes family occupies the leading place in this table, nine of the performers being descended from George Wilkes in the male line. The Electioneer, Dictator and Strathmore families are represented by two each, while Happy Medium and Aberdeen families have one each. Seventeen of the sires of these recordholders have records below 2:30 while five of them are out of record mares.

Sadie Mac, 2:06½, the daughter of Peter the Great, that George Spear, presumably for E. E. Smathers, offered $90,000 for a few days ago, promises to be the sensation of the trotting turf this year. She is faster than Sweet Marie was a year ago, is just as perfectly mannered, is as sound as a dollar and is as near being a two-minute trotter as any horse that can be mentioned. She was bought by Alonzo McDonald, when two years old, and as a 3-year-old won the Kentucky Futurity for him, taking a record of 2:11¼ that year. Mr. McDonald sold her to Mr. Smathers at the close of the season and last year as a 4-year-old, while she was not raced any in professional events, trotted a mile to wagon in 2:08½, driven by Mr. Smathers in a matinee race. Last fall, when Mr. Smathers decided to get out of the harness-racing game Sadie Mac, along with his other trotters and pacers, was sent to the sale ring and was bought by her present trainer, Harry Stinson for Miss K. L. Wilkes, of Galt, Ont., for $15,000. Miss Wilkes is a very wealthy woman and owns Cruickston Park Farm, the most extensive breeding establishment in Canada devoted to trotters and pacers. Her refusal to take $90,000 for Sadie Mac is due to her desire to have a winning stable, which she is sure to do if the great daughter of Peter the Great stays sound.

A new 2:10 performer to add to the long list of such horses bred at Village Farm is the black pacer. The Friend, that took a record of 2:09¾ over a half-mile track a few days ago. This fast pacer is a black stallion, little more than a pony in size and was sired by Heir-at-Law, 2:05¾, dam Winnifred Chimes, by Chimes, second dam Daisy King, by Mambrino King. This little stallion is racing over the New England tracks and good judges declare he is the best pacer that has appeared in New England in some time. He is in the stable of Herman Tyson of Philadelphia, who appears to be racing him oftener than would seem to be good for his chances to improve his record, as during the recent Saugus meeting he started him twice in one week, the horse winning both starts and following by his double appearance up by winning again the following week.

CHANGES IN FOOT BALL

Rules for 1905 Contain a Number of Changes.

The changes in the football rules for 1905, of which there are quite a number, for the most part bear upon more strict interpretation rather than anything that will affect the detail of the play itself.

Under Rule 9, relating to a scrimmage, a distinction has been made between act of the snapper-back and act of any other player of the side in possession of the ball. If the snapper-back make a motion as if to snap the ball, whether he withholds it or not, the ball is regarded as in play and the scrimmage begins. If any other player of the side in possession of the ball makes an attempt by a false start to draw the opponents off-side, and the ball is then snapped, it shall be brought back and not be regarded as in play or the scrimmage commenced.

Legislation has also been directed at any players who are out of bounds at the time when the ball is put in play, and a rule has been made that no player shall be out of bounds at the time when the ball is put in play, except the man who is holding the ball for a place-kick.

Instruction is given to the referee to blow his whistle immediately when the forward progress of the ball has been stopped. This has been done in order to lessen the tendency to fight for the ball after its progress has been stopped, or to steal it from a player who has practically had it "down."

A rule has also been made that when a substitute is sent in he can not run on to the field and get into the line-up, but must go directly to the referee and report himself before he can be permitted to take his place. This is to do away with the tendency at times when a substitute was sent in of having both the substitute and the man he was to replace playing in the game at one and the same time.

Coaching from the side lines is now to be penalized by the loss of ten yards instead of five.

In order to make definite what a captain might request in the way of the giving of time, a note has been appended to the rule which states that the linesman shall notify the captains of the time remaining to play not more than ten nor less than five minutes before the end of each half, to the effect that there is no objection to the linesman giving the approximate time to the captain who asks for it at any time during the game. He may not, however, be asked for this time more than three times within the last five minutes of the half.

The full text of the rules officially promulgated by the rules committee is published in Spalding's Official Football Guide for 1905, published by the American Sports Publishing company, 21 Warren street, New York.

SEVERAL RULES

In Baseball Are in Need of Revision.

There are several rules in the national game of baseball which need revising next season, according to some of the most prominent baseball managers. One especially refers to an umpire being hit by a fair ball. The rule is all right as long as there are no runners on bases, but if there happens to be a runner on third and second base and the batsman hits a terrific liner toward second base and by accident it strikes any part of the umpire, the man at third is not allowed to score on the hit, although the batsman is credited with a safe hit and is allowed to reach first base. A hit of that kind would score even the two runners nine out of ten times, but in this case not one run is permitted to score. The intention of the makers of the rules no doubt was to give the infielders, that is, the shortstop and second base, credit for any possible chance they might have of getting such a hit, as sometimes the infielders will play near second base for certain batters and they might have a chance of making the play and preventing the run from scoring. It is a rare chance, but the fielders are given the benefit of the doubt. Such well known managers as Frank Selee of Chicago, Joe Cantillon of Milwaukee, John J. McGraw of New York and Mike Kelly of St. Paul are in favor of having the rule read so that the men can score on such a play.

WISELY UPHELD THEIR LEADER

Managers of American Association Take Action —Mc Graw Talks.

The magnates of the American association did some tall thinking before they went into session at Columbus, Ohio, the other day to consider matters pertaining to the welfare of the organization. They were faced with threatened injunction by Manager Dexter of the Louisville club on account of a fine of $100 imposed by President O'Brien, similar to the McGraw case in New York, and the magnates wisely reached the conclusion that to mingle with the laws of the land would be like putting their heads into a noose, so they got together and for once harmony prevailed. They not only upheld the action of the president of the league in fining Manager Dexter, but they also upheld a new fine of $100 against Manager Cantillon of the Milwaukee club for a much less offense. By this action the owners of the league gave the managers to understand that they would not stand for any interference with the laws as laid down by the organization, and that they would do all in their power to avoid any conflict with the courts of the country. They showed their good judgment and it will be a good tip for managers and owners in other leagues to follow. Even George Tebeau, who owns the Louisville club, and who has been looked upon as a trouble maker of late, got into the band wagon and voted with the other magnates for the protection of the league. Mr. Tebeau also showed that he was not utterly opposed to the rules of the league by turning over his claim to Second Baseman Farrell to the Indianapolis club after the league had decided that the player really belonged to him. Tebeau said it was a case of principle with him. In that event he is entitled to considerable credit for the act.

According to Manager John J. McGraw of the New York Giants there would have been no trouble between Barney Dreyfuss, president of the Pittsburg club, and himself had Barney been able to take a joke the same as most baseball men would. Manager McGraw is not the terrible tyrant that some of the papers try to make out; in fact there are few baseball managers who are more thoughtful of their players and who are always willing to discuss matters pertaining to the game than the same Johnnie. In discussing the recent trouble at New York Manager McGraw said while in Chicago the other day: "There was really no necessity for such a row in the league. During the New York-Pittsburg series of games at the Polo grounds there was great rivalry of course, in fact that is natural where two teams are evenly matched, and you know the Pirates have always been pretty hard to beat. The players were kidding one another and perhaps some of them indulged in shots back and forth that would not do for parlor conversation, but then that is all in baseball. Now Mr. Dreyfuss occupied one of the boxes and it so happened that I had a chance to give him a good natured shot. He could not take it in a joking way and I may have shot a couple at him which sounded mean at the time, but I had no such intentions as it was done merely in a teasing way and intended as a little scrap between ourselves. Why the fact that the umpire did not see fit to put me out of the grounds shows plainly that there was very little doing and Mr. Dreyfuss would have done better to have forgotten the affair entirely if he took offense at what was said. Under the laws of the league there was no excuse for fining and suspending me and when it was announced that I had been fined $150 and suspended for fifteen days, and which would mean a loss of about $800 to me, why naturally I made a kick as Mr. Dreyfuss would have done himself. President Brush looked into the matter and when he became convinced that I was in the right he backed me up in my stand, although I know he is not the kind of man to do it if he thought I was wrong.

"I think President Pulliam acted hastily in the matter, otherwise he would not have done as he did. I also believe that he acted on his own judgment and thought he was in the right and I do not hold any grudge against him for it. Of course the injunction proceedings were not good form on our part for baseball, as I know the two laws do not work well together, but under the conditions I was obliged to act as I did. I have often been called hotheaded and all that, and perhaps I am at times, but I have always sought to protect my own interest, the same as I did at Baltimore when I was in the American league, and they tried to hand me a bad package. I was roasted then for protecting my own interest. Of course, it was all right for the other fellows to make a howl and tell how bad I was for wanting to quit them, but they were not the ones to dig down in their pockets and reimburse me for the losses in store. I have endeavored to give New York a first-class baseball club and I think the fans of that city will agree that I have pretty nearly succeeded. To have been away from the team during a trying Western trip would have worked much harm to the club, and as I am paid for taking care of the club's interests from a paying standpoint why I was forced to take the action as mentioned above. I am not resting on what I have now and if there is any opportunity at any time to strengthen my already strong team why you will find me there with the goods to get the men. If it is possible for the Giants to land another pennant this season they are going to do it and I think the prospects are very bright indeed."

SYSONBY WINS OVER $100,000

Third From Same Stable to Attain the Honor.

Lexington, Ky., Aug. 12.—When the mighty Sysonby won the Brighton Derby he crossed the coveted line which places him among the winners of $100,000 or over on the American turf. This year's sweltering turf earnings this season to $68,850, and with the $40,698 he won last season he has to date won $109,453 on the turf. He has won $13,635 more than his sire, the derby winner Melton; but must yet win $53,187 more to equal the record of his dam, the sensational Orme, which was son of the unbeaten Ormonde, winner of $142,325 on the turf. Ormonde's sire, Ben d'Or, won $97,028 in rich English stakes, so Sysonby is close kin to an array of remarkably money-making horses.

The English bred colt is the twentieth horse to earn $100,000 winning honors on the American turf. James R. Keene is the only breeder who has a trio of $100,000 or over turf winners in his possession, he also owning Kingston and Delhi. J. B. Haggin once enjoyed such a high honor, but his two great mares, Firenzi and Miss Woodford, are both dead, and though Africander has filled in the gap of one, Salvator is the only other horse he now owns whose turf earnings reach the $100,000 line. Sysonby is the only performer entirely of English blood which has earned $100,000 in this country, and he was foaled on this side of the Atlantic. America has in return sent a performer to England that won $100,000 in Iroquois, the winner of the Derby and St. Leger. He is classed with American $100,000 winners, though he won all his turf trophies abroad. He is, however, an American production, and so twenty-one horses have now been foaled in America which have won $100,000 or over on the turf.

DELAYED GAMES

Absence of Players Prevented Golf Finals Being Played.

Entries For State Tournament Will Close Next Saturday.

Owing to the absence of several of the players from the city, the finals in the three flights for the Hopkins cups at the Northland Country club, have not yet been pulled off.

The play has reached the finals in two flights, and will be brought down to the last round in the third, today.

In the first flight Ward Ames, Jr., and E. P. Towne have reached the final round and will play off as soon as a satisfactory date can be agreed upon.

The third flight lies between George C. Stone and A. B. Black, and this game will also be played off in the near future.

This afternoon W. G. Hegardt and W. E. Richardson are playing off in the semi-finals in the second flight, and the winner of the match will meet Morton Miller, Jr., in the final round.

The three matches will have to be pulled off some time during the coming week, as the committee is anxious to get all club tournaments out of the way before the state tournament is held on Aug. 21, 22, 23 and 24.

Next week the greens will be rolled and the grounds put in the best possible condition for the big meet, when from fifty to seventy-five of the best golfers in the state will play for the state championship.

The entries for all competitions in the tournament will close at 6 o'clock next Saturday. All entries must be made through the secretaries of the different clubs, to E. P. Alexander, secretary of the Northland Country club.

The program of the tournament will be as follows:

MONDAY, AUG. 21.

Morning, 10 o'clock—Team match, 18 holes: team play against Bogey for the A. G. Spalding Bros.' trophy.
Afternoon, 2:30 o'clock—Four-ball match, 18 holes, medal play for the Pioneer Press trophy.

TUESDAY, AUG. 22.

Morning, 8:30 o'clock—Qualification round, 18 holes; medal play.
Afternoon, 2:30 o'clock—First match play round, 18 holes, for championship and second and third flights.

WEDNESDAY, AUG. 23.

Morning, 9:30 o'clock—Second match play round, 18 holes for championship and second and third flights.
Afternoon, 2 o'clock—Third match play round, 18 holes, semi-finals, for second and third flights.
2:30 o'clock—Third match play round, 18 holes, semi-finals for championship.

THURSDAY, AUG. 24.

Morning—Medal handicap competition, 18 holes. (Scores for this event must be turned in before 8 p. m.)
10 o'clock—Finals for the second and third flights, 18 holes.
10:30 o'clock—Finals first round state championship, 18 holes.
Afternoon, 2:30 o'clock—Final round for state championship, 18 holes.

THE GALA DAY

Yacht Club Will Celebrate Opening of New House.

Boat Club Has Program of Water Sports Arranged.

For the second time this season the Duluth harbor will present a gala appearance, with both the Yacht club and the Boat club pulling off programs of sports on the water.

The Duluth Yacht club will hold the postponed formal opening of the new clubhouse, and will celebrate the affair in a most elaborate manner. The day will be known as ladies' day, and every boat belonging to the club members will be entered in the race program. Each boat must be sailed over the course by a lady, in order to qualify, and the members will have to content themselves with holding the sheets.

In the evening every craft the club can secure will be lighted with Japanese lanterns and will take part in a Venetian parade past the clubhouse.

A huge bonfire will be lighted on the shore, and under the light of a full moon the scene should be a most beautiful one. The members will also give an informal dance in the clubhouse, and La Brosse's orchestra will be in attendance to furnish the music.

The Duluth Boat club will present as its attraction a novelty in the way of water sports. The members will take part in a game of water baseball in front of the clubhouse, and during the afternoon the second club regatta of the season will be pulled off.

The regatta program will include canoe races, tilting matches and a race between several four-oared crews.

The double bill will doubtless attract nearly all the small craft in the harbor, and the bay should present a very gay and festive scene.

Amateur Game.

The Gophers and Cascades will cross bats tomorrow afternoon on the grounds at Tenth avenue west.

There has been considerable friendly rivalry between the two teams, and a good game is looked for. Makowski, the college pitcher, will be in the box for the Cascades, and Hancock will twirl for the Gophers. The Gophers has issued a challenge to meet any amateur team in the city or the range towns, averaging 18 years of age. Duncan Brown of 115 West Third street is the manager.

The Herald excursion to Fond du Lac, Monday, on the Newsboy, will leave dock at foot of Fifth avenue west at 9 a. m. Be on hand with your lunch baskets.

MOST FAMOUS HAND IN POKER

It Contained Five Aces, and Player Got Them All Honestly.

"I once heard Day Seymon speak of some remarkable hands and wonderful draws he had seen in his experience, which, by the way, reaches from the rudest mining camps to the most luxurious clubs of Paris and London," said an old poker player the other night, says the Chicago Inter-Ocean.

"When I speak about great draws and hands I refer, of course, to square games. Nothing is strange in a crooked game, for every man around the table would hold five aces if you dealt them to him, and there would be nothing remarkable about that, but, speaking of five-aces, I know of five aces being held in a square game.'

"In New Orleans, you know, there's big poker going on every night, and there are only gentlemen in the game. At the beginning of the game each man takes $500 worth of chips. No money ever passes at the table, and the game is unlimited. Well, it has a limit—$5,000—but $5,000 is about the same as no limit.

"They always play with two decks of cards, and while one is dealt, the other is shuffled, ready for the other deal.

"About four years ago four gentlemen were playing in the game. One had a straight flush pat, and another held three aces.

"They soon exhausted their $500 worth of chips, and then their thousands, until finally the man with the three aces called for the draw. In the draw he got two aces, making five in his hand. He showed his hand right away, saying there was evidently a mistake in the deck. The man with the straight flush claimed the stakes.

"The two left the decision to the other gentlemen about the table, and the referees decided the bets off.

"By a mistake the extra ace had been shuffled from one deck into the other.

"Now, perhaps it wasn't so remarkable that one card should get into the wrong deck, but think of that ace being next to another ace, and that these two aces should be dealt to a man who already held three aces in his hand. All over the South that hand is famous.

"At one time," continued the same narrator, "Seymon crossed the Atlantic on the Teutonic, and he had a game of poker before he was two hours out with a man who was using his own cards and chips in his own state room. One young fellow, an employe of a New York stock firm, lost $3,700, every cent he had in the world, and he had saved it up to make the trip.

"After the game he came to Seymon with tears in his eyes and told him that he was broke, and asked Seymon to help him in some way.

"Seymon made him a proposition to give him $500 cash and one-third of what he would win if he would get up poker games for him on the ship.

"It lasted until after dinner, and at that time Seymon had $6,200, while the young fellow had $3,100.

"Before the voyage was over Dan Seymon gave the young fellow $4,100 more—more money than he had ever possessed in his life before."

The author of "The Story of the Congo Free State," just issued by the Putnams, has a particular interest in this state because its author is a former Minnesotian. Henry Wellington Wack, F. R. G. S., and member of the New York bar, used to be a Minnesota newspaper man, having been employed on the St. Paul Globe years ago.

But the book has an interest of its own, aside from any proprietorship Minnesota may claim in its author. As its name implies, it is a history of the Belgian creation of the Congo Free State, in equatorial mid-Africa, together with ample descriptions of the country and its people. It is more than that, however. It is an argument for the defense in the case before the bar of world opinion of certain individuals, suspected of British sympathies, against the good name of Leopold, king of the Belgians, and the Belgians themselves. Stories have been circulated freely, largely from British sources, that the Belgians have been cruelly oppressing the black people of the Congo, and some of the most hideous tales have been set afloat about atrocities alleged to have been practiced by the Belgian oppressors of the blacks.

That is the case for the prospecution. Mr. Wack comes along with the case for the defense in his book, and he makes out at least an excellent prima facie case, and makes it appear altogether probable that the stories that have been circulated had their base in political jealousies rather than in fact. However, doubtless somebody would have to write a book for the prosecution to make it altogether certain, so that both cases could be thoroughly balaned one against the other.

Mr. Wack pictures the motives of Leopold II and the Belgians as being almost purely humanitarian. It is not denied that there was hope that substantial returns to Belgium and the Belgians would repay this humanitarism. It is freely admitted that Leopold hoped to create a suitable colony where Belgium's surplus population could be sent, and where a market could be worked up for Belgium's products. But also, it was desired to help the negroes, to stamp out the hideous slave traffic, and to confer the benefits of civilization upon the black men not incidently, but primarily.

The author of "The Story of the Congo Free State" claims that this has been done; not completely, of course, because there was much to do and there have been many handicaps and disadvantages. But he asserts thoroughly pure motives and the best intentions, and claims accomplishments that tend to prove these assertions.

More interesting to the general public, naturally, than the controversial side of the book, are the admirable descriptions of the Congo country, amply illustrated with 125 engravings and maps, and the detailed description of the natives and their habits and customs. The story shows how schools and churches have been built for the natives, and altogether Mr. Wack has made, while performing his primary function of presenting the case of the Belgians, an interesting, readable book of travel and colonization.

The dramatic scenes at Odessa with Russian mutineers in command of a battleship, and the spread of revolution through Russia seem to have been foretold in A. Cahan's remarkable book "The White Terror and the Red," a novel of Revolutionary Russia, published recently by A. S. Barnes & Co., and already in its third edition. Mr. Cahan's story of the revolutionary movement in Russia describes scenes like those at Odessa, Warsaw and elsewhere, and it has been pronounced the most vivid and truthful picture that has been afforded of the spread of revolt in Russia.

Mrs. Elizabeth Willard Brooks, the author of "As the World Goes By," one of the new novels published by Little, Brown & Co., was married late in June to Prof. Maximilian L. Kellner of the Episcopal Theological school, Cambridge. The bride was the widow of Rev. Arthur Brooks, late rector of the Church of the Incarnation, New York, a brother of Phillips Brooks. She is well known in social circles in New York and Cambridge. "As the World Goes By" has been favorably received as a fine philosophic novel with a dramatic and musical interest. The heroine is the daughter of an actress who has separated from her husband.

Col. Clark E. Carr's successful book on early Illinois, "The Illini," has just gone into a fourth edition, which is a remarkable record for a book of this character. But the work deals with a period of immense importance and interest, and its depiction of men famous not only in the annals of Illinois but in those of the nation are alone enough to give it a lasting vitality.

Among the books planned for fall publications by Messrs. Dodd, Mead & Co. is "The Artist's Way of Working," by Mr. Russell Sturgis, the editor of "The Dictionary of Architecture" and author of "Classical Architecture on the Shore of the Mediterranean." The new work is to be illustrated with over 200 illustrations. It is a volume addressed not to artists or to students, but distinctly to the art-loving public. It attempts to disclose in an untechnical way the methods by which the artist produces his effects, thus enabling the reader to enjoy and appreciate art works much more fully than ever before. The illustrations will be a special feature of the book.

Never before in the experience of D. Appleton & Co. have they published a book, which, after the first few thousand, had an exclusive sale in one place and but little in all the rest of the country. After the first rush of sales of Margaret Potter's latest novel, "The Fire of Spring," was over, the demand for the novel abated everywhere except in the Waldorf-Astoria. There the demand has not only not diminished, but it has increased. Over 100 copies have been sold there at the news stands in the last few days. The publishers are racking their brains over the demand in that locality. Do none but Chicago people live at the Waldorf? The book is by a Chicago writer, and the scene of it is in Chicago and its suburbs. Have the people at the Waldorf news stands read and enjoyed it? Is it the personality of the Appleton salesman?

Doubleday, Page & Co. announce for publication in August what they believe is an unusual first novel. It is called "The Missourian," and is by Eugene P. Lyle, Jr. It centers about a French girl, intriguing on behalf of Louis Napoleon at the court of Maximilian, in Mexico, and a Confederate officer, who tenders to the ill-fated Mexican ruler the swords of the Confederates under Joe Shelby, who never surrendered. It reveals a dramatic and hitherto untouched aftermath of the Civil war, and it gives an intimate picture of the harrassed Hapsburg, who paid for his folly with his life. Mr. Lyle has been a frequent contributor to the World's Work. He lived in Mexico for many years.

Before she sailed from Boston for her annual trip abroad, Louis Chandler Moulton read "The Breath of the Gods," and penned the following lines to the publishers of this new novel: "It is even an advance on 'Truth Dexter.' Not only is the personal element full of interest, but it makes me feel that I understand Japan—and the book is especially timely just at present. The last part of the book fairly holds one breathless, the interest of the story is so compelling; but above all I care for the insight it has given me into the ideals and the life of Japan."

Emerging from that garden spot of poesy—Box Hill, Surrey, where Keats and George Meredith did their best work—H. Hayden Sands of Haydenville, Mass., has committed his first volume of poems to his publishers and is cruising in the less frequented and land-locked waters of Scotland. This traveler-poet, heretofore known chiefly by his contributions to the magazines and by his explorations of Hudson bay, has committed his philosophy of life to verse in "The Valley of Dreams," and is publishing the poem with a collection of his other verses. The volume has been illustrated by Adolfo de'Nesti and will shortly be issued from the press of T. N. Foulis, Edinburgh, and Alfred Bartlett, Boston.

The author of "The Wing of Love," which McClure-Phillips are publishing, is "Johanna Staats," who will be remembered as the author of "Drumsticks" and a number of stories brought out in the magazines. Mrs. Meredith is a descendant of the New England pedagogue, Ebenezer Cheever, and though she is known as a Nebraskan, is neither a native of that state or a present resident there. She now spends most of her time at her Long Island home.

Fox, Duffield & Company announce for early publication a story by Clarence S. Darrow of Chicago, entitled "An Eye For An Eye." Mr. Darrow, who is special counsel for Mayor Dunne in the matter of municipal ownership, and also counsel for the Teamsters' union, has been in the very thick of recent sociological developments in the city on Lake Michigan. "An Eye For An Eye," which is only the second book he has ever published, tells the story of a murder and the murderer's explation of his crime, the narrative taking the form of a long talk between the murderer and a friend who visits him in prison the night before the hanging.

A good story of a recent conversation between Mr Howells and Mark Twain is going the rounds. Mark Twain was relating some of his experiences before he became famous. "My difficulties taught me some thrift," he observed. "But I never knew whether it was wiser to spend my last nickel for a cigar to smoke or for an apple to devour."

"I am astounded," returned Mr. Howells, "that a person of so little decision should meet with so much worldly success."

Mark Twain nodded very gravely. "Indecision about spending money," he remarked, "is worthy of cultivation. When I couldn't decide what to buy with my last nickel I kept it, and so became rich."

Booth Tarkington's new book, "The Beautiful Lady," is announced by McClure-Phillips. This new novelette has the qualities of brilliancy, whimsicality and speed that characterized his earlier success, "Monsieur Beaucaire." The scene of the story is laid in several European capitals; and the characters are a beautiful American girl, a delightfully ingenious Italian, his villainous and tricky brother, and a young and energetic American. The three men are in love with "The Beautiful Lady," each in his own characteristic way; the young American winning in the end, after a most original courtship, which comes to a glorious close at Naples. The publishers are making of the "The Beautiful Lady," an especially fine gift book. There are illustrations in tint by Blendon Campbell; decorations, end papers and a cover design by William Jordan.

The meeting of the czar of Russia and the German kaiser off the coast of Finland recalls another meeting between these monarchs which is described in Henri de Noussanne's "The Kaiser As He Is," published by the Putnams. On that occasion the Russian squadron paid a visit to the German fleet at Danzig. After the czar's departure William II sent him this telegram, "The Admiral of the Atlantic greets the Admiral of the Pacific." To this extravagant salutation Nicholas II signaled from the top of the mainmast of his yacht, the Polar Star, the simple message, "Bon Voyage!" it was on the same Polar Star that the czar sailed a second time to meet the German monarch.

Thomas C. Platt, the senior senator from New York, remarks, on his 72nd birthday, that he has had many days and months and years, "some of them fruitful, some barren, but none of them worth while." Being in a philosophical mood, he now realizes, or says he does, that his life might have been "so much better or so different from what it is." He adds that he does not mean that his life "was not worth while," but that "the political game, as I played it, was not worth while, and that if I could do it all over again I would play different politics."

It would almost seem that the estimable senator took his text for this interesting dissertation from "The Plum Tree," a book which he has been recently reading. Says the great political boss, who is the central figure in Mr. Phillips' story:

"I suddenly had a clear understanding of my absorption in this wretched game I had been playing year in and year out, with hardly a glance up from the table. That wretched game, with its counterfeit stakes; and the more a man wins the poorer he is."

BOYS OF Y. M. C. A. ARE READY FOR THEIR ANNUAL OUTING, TO BE SPENT IN CAMP

Youngsters Leave For Deerwood Early Monday Morning.

Tents Will Be Pitched On Shore of Lake.

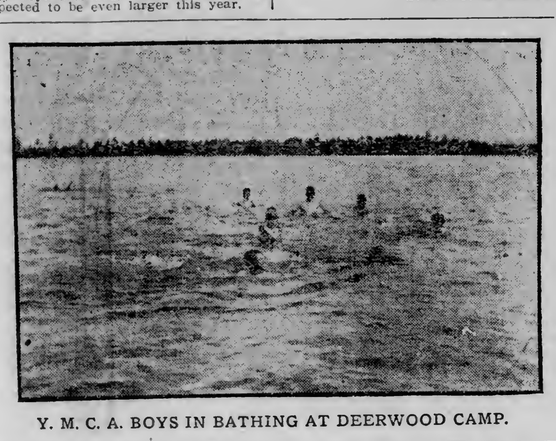

Monday morning fifty or more lighthearted boys will leave the Union depot in a special car for Deerwood for the annual summer camping expedition of the boys' department of the Y. M. C. A.

This outing is always looked forward to throughout the season by the boys who are able to attend, and it has become one of the most popular features of the Y. M. C. A. work.

Eight years ago the first boys' camp was established in Duluth, with an attendance of but twelve, and since then it has steadily grown, until last year over fifty boys attended, and the number is expected to be even larger this year.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS LINED UP BEFORE SUMMER CAMP AT DEERWOOD.

Y. M. C. A. BOYS IN BATHING AT DEERWOOD CAMP.

BOYS IN CAMP AT Y. M. C. A. SUMMER CAMP AT DEERWOOD.

Last year a permanent camping ground was secured at Deerwood. The tents are pitched on the shore of the lake and the boys have free access to a fine bathing beach and opportunity for all kinds of water sports. They are within easy reach of the village and within a few hours ride from Duluth by train.

At this season of the year the mosquitoes and flies are not troublesome there and the camping site is, on the whole, almost an ideal one.

This year special preparations are being made for the comfort and convenience of the boys. There will be seven sleeping tents, with seven boys and a leader in each tent, and in addition to these there will be a large dining tent, a kitchen tent and a headquarters tent, which will be supplied with magazines, books and stationery for the use of the boys.

The leaders will have the responsibility of caring for the sleeping tents, with the boys to assist them, and a prize will be given for the best kept tent.

Rules in regard to swimming will be strict and will be enforced by the leaders, the secretary and the physical director. The boys are allowed but three periods of the day for swimming, and are not to go into the water at any other time. The first period is before breakfast in the morning. The second is at 11 o'clock and the third at 4 o'clock in the afternoon. During the swimming hours the leaders, who are chosen from the larger boys in the association, and the physical director and the secretary are all present to guard against accidents and to teach those who are backward in the art of swimming.

The boats will be in charge of a camp commodore, and will be allowed out only when he considers it safe, and under his directions.

Beyond these rules, and those forbidding tobacco or profanity in the camp, the boys are placed under no restrictions.

The camp is in the heart of a forest at one of the most delightful spots on Sergent lake, and from it the boys will go on expeditions to all the points of interest in the vicinity. The excursions will include a hay rack ride around the lake, and a visit to the gypsy camp near Deerwood.

During the time the boys are in camp there will be a field meet, and a day devoted to all kinds of water sports. Prizes will be given to the winners of these meets, and there will also be prizes given for the largest fish caught during the trip, and for the best collection of photographs.

The grub tent will be in charge of a chef and the boys will be divided into squads of three, who will take their turns at dishwashing. This hated occupation is not likely to fall to any one boy's lot more than twice during the stay in camp.

The list of boys who will attend is not yet complete, as several boys cannot be certain that they will go until tomorrow. Several names may yet be added to the list, but as nearly as it is known, it is as follows:

posits in the blood vessels. Either buttermilk or distilled water will keep the veins and arteries so supple and free running that there will be no clogging up, no deposit of irritating and calcareous matter around the joints, nor of poisonous waste in the muscles.

It is the stiffening and narrowing of the blood vessels which bring on senile decay. But this condition, I verily believe, may be postponed anywhere from 10 to 20 years by the free use of either buttermilk or distilled water.

MILK.

Milk is sometimes called the one perfect food, containing all the constituents in their right proportions. This is true for the requirements of a baby. In other words, milk is a perfect food for the young of the species of animal producing it. Human milk is a perfect food for the new-born babe; cow's milk is a perfect food for the new-born calf; but cow's milk is not a perfect food for the human infant.

The only time that milk contains its full nutritive power is while it is received perfectly fresh and warm from the cow; not only warm, for this it may be for several minutes, but it should be of the same temperature as that required by the stomach for perfect digestion—98 deg. Fahrenheit. But this degree of heat exists only at the moment the milk is received. Heating the milk may bring back the degree of heat, but it can never bring back its degree of strength, nor restore its full nutritive value. Again, milk is such a ready absorbent of odors and impurities that, unless Pasteurized, it is unfit for food.

Milk is in reality not a drink, but a food. However, the majority of people do not consider it. It should never be gulped down as one would drink a glass of water, but should be thoroughly masticated; that is, mixed with the saliva. This can be done only when sipping it. (The same applies to the drinking (?) of all fruit juices.)

Milk, when consumed in quantity, coagulates in the stomach, and the masses are not sufficiently broken up in their passage through the intestinal canal so that the digestive juices can act upon the whole mass. But, if bread is consumed with the milk, the particles of bread prevent the formation of large masses of casein in the stomach, and the material is in better mechanical condition for digestion; that is, consuming bread with milk increases the digestibility of the milk.

When milk is taken into the stomach it is speedily curdled by the action of the pepsin and acid of the gastric juice. Human milk differs from cow's milk in the way in which it curdles when taken into the stomach. The casein of the former is not precipitated in so large lumps, but is more flaky and is thus more easily digested and does not cause irritation. This explains one reason why woman's milk is better than cow's milk for infants.

While milk alone cannot be considered as a perfect diet, at least for adults, it is of especial value, if pure, as a food for invalids. It is, as a rule, easily digested, does not irritate the alimentary tract (if properly taken) and the diet is more readily under the control of the physician, both as regards quantity and quality, than when other foods are used.

TEA.

Mountain climbers and harvesters are very strong advocates of cold tea. It is with drink (that is non-reactive stimulants) very much the same as with food; viz., one who takes vigorous exercise in the open air can eat and drink with more or less impunity, if the eating and drinking take place at proper times.

Tea, according to my way of thinking, is not so wholesome a beverage as coffee. (Of this more anon.) Tea is an astringent, and, as is frequently made, it is detrimental in its effect upon both the stomach and the intestines. The most harmful results come from the tannin when the tea is allowed to draw more than a few moments.

Tea should not be used without the addition of cream or milk (the exact opposite as applied to coffee). I know this is diametrically opposed to generally accepted opinion; but there is a physiological reason. The lining of the stomach of an habitual tea drinker (when milk is not used) is like parchment. In confirmation of this theory, which I have held for years, I will quote from an able article which appeared in the New York Press.

"Why do you take milk in tea? Most persons would answer, because we like it that way. But the scientists have discovered a deeper reason, placing the custom on purely scientific grounds. These learned ones discourse as follows: We use milk in our tea to prevent injury to the coathng of the stomach. Whenever tannic acid and albumen meet, they fall desperately in love with each other, get married without bans and live together ever afterward as tannate of albumen, or leather. Now, there is tannic acid in tea and a lot of albumen in the coating of the stomach. The tannic acid weds as much of this as is allowed by the laws of chemistry and so far injures the stomach.

"But milk also contains albumen. Therefore, when milk is added to tea, the molecules of tannic acid select their albumen partners from the milk, and peace and harmony reigns. A divorce is unknown to tannate of albumen, the albumen of the stomach remains single, and thus the lining of the stomach is uninjured."

Nature, as I have said before, never mistakes. It is our duty to see that our tastes are not perverted. Just as there is a physiological reason for the use of milk in tea, there is also a reason —a chemical reason—why we use the juice of lemons on salads, lettuce, etc.; and vinegar on beans, cabbage, etc.; butter on bread; spices or condiments on various foods; salt on meat, etc., etc.

Just a word of caution regarding tea. It will do less harm if taken by itself, as it does not mix well with other foods. This is especialy true as regards tea and meat. The tea toughens the fibre of the meat and renders it indigestible, a condition not desirable.

In my next I shall consider the pros and cons of coffee drinking.

HOCH MAY HANG SOON

Probability That His Case Will Not Be Appealed.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—"Bluebeard" Johann Hoch's case may not be appealed and his second reprieve may have been in vain. The sum requisite to pay for the printing of abstracts and briefs required by the rules of the Illinois supreme court is stated today to be still short. The $400 said to have been raised by subscription in St. Louis is reported to have been returned to the donors.

Winners In the Third Round For Golf Championship.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—When W. C. Fownes, Jr., of Pittsburg, and W. J. Travis began play in the third round of the United States golf championship here today, the prospects were good for the hottest and most sultry day of the season. But a big gallery of keen critics braved the heat. Ned Sawyer, the local survivor, and A. L. White of Boston were sent away second, and Champion Chandler Egan and his rival, Fred Herreshoff of Ekwano was next.

W. C. Fownes defeated Travis at the nineteenth hole, one up.

Sawyer defeated White, 3 up, 1 to play. H. C. Egan defeated Herreshoff, 2 up and 1 to play.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

Washington, Aug. 11.—The death of Rear Admiral Andrew E. K. Benham, retired, at Lake Mahopac, N. Y., was reported to the navy department today. He was a member of the Schley court of inquiry.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 11.—Peter Hale, one of the pioneer residents of Butte and Anaconda, and one of the best known men in Montana, is dead here. At one time he was a well-known business man of Brooklyn.

MOTHER MURDERS HER TWO LITTLE BOYS.

Grayling, Mich., Aug. 11.—Mrs. Nomi Aldrich of Frederick, a little town north of here, was arrested last night and is in the county jail charged with the murder of her two little boys, aged 10 and 12 years. The theory is that the boys were murdered to obtain $500 life insurance that was carried on the lives of each.

BUCKET SHOPS RAIDED.

Chicago, Aug. 11.—A number of alleged bucket shops were raided by the police today. Both men and women found in the places raided were placed under arrest. Today's action followed recent rulings of the Illinois supreme court and the reported denial of service by the telegraph companies to the alleged gambling concerns.

Married Women

Every woman covets a shapely, pretty figure, and many of them deplore the loss of their girlish forms after marriage. The bearing of children is often destructive to the mother's shapeliness. All of this can be avoided, however, by the use of Mother's Friend before baby comes, as this great liniment always prepares the body for the strain upon it, and preserves the symmetry of her form. Mother's Friend overcomes all the danger of child-birth, and carries the expectant mother safely through this critical period without pain. It is woman's greatest blessing. Thousands gratefully tell of the benefit and relief derived from the use of this wonderful remedy. Sold by all druggists at $1.00 per bottle. Our little book, telling all about this liniment, will be sent free.

Majority of These Men Stay Night and Day in the Uncomfortable Corridors of the Federal Building.

LINE-UP BEFORE DOOR OF UNITED STATES LAND OFFICE IN DULUTH—WAITING FOR OPENING OF LANDS IN FOND DU LAC RESERVATION NEXT TUESDAY.

The opening of the Fond du Lac reservation—or the ceded lands thereof—will occur next Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock and it is estimated that by that time fifty or more people will be in line for filing at the land office. The first man to get into line was E. C. Osborn of Schroeder, Minn., who took position No. 1 at the land office door last Monday morning and has maintained his position since.

The opening of the reservations in Minnesota have been attended with much more civilized and peaceful methods for securing homesteads than in the cases of those in the Far West, such for instance as the Rosebud agency and other places in Indian Territory. There the homeseekers lined up at the edge of the reservation and when the word was given for the opening, a free-for-all race ensued, those on horseback having the advantage. "Prairie schooners" carrying household goods and material for the houses would be in the race and where the owner of the schooner would locate he would immediately establish a home. Many of these rushes resulted in murder where more than one chose the same piece of ground.

In Northern Minnesota the homeseeker peacefully lines up at the land office and awaits his turn, filing on the description which he has chosen if nobody else has filed before him, and if there is any difference the matter is settled before the land office officials in the nature of a contest, the land officials deciding who has the prior right. Squatters have no right over the man who files and are even in a worse position for they are liable to prosecution for trespassing.

It has been declared by several who have gone over the Fond du Lac reservation that the land is for the most part, unfit to file on and fit for anything but homesteads. If such is the case it is then passing strange that so many are on hand to file for claims on the waste of swamps as it is pictured to be.

The acreage in the ceded lands of the Fond du Lac reservation to be opened for settlement on Tuesday, amounts to 24,842.15 acres, and of this the state has prior right to all swamp land contained therein and also the Northern Pacific railway's right of way across the reservation is to be respected. It passes through sections 4, 5, 6, in 48-17 west, and sections 1, 6 and 3, 48-19 west.

The earning of a home by an ambitious settler on these lands is by no means easy. It has been said by persons who have experienced the strain that waiting in a line-up as those now in the corridor of the government building are doing, is well worth the homestead. They have to sleep in chairs or on the tile flooring with a coat, grip or something else equally as uncomfortable for a pillow. Unless by agreement among themselves, they cannot go out of doors until after the filing is over and must depend upon the air from windows to relieve their tired lungs. Walking up and down the hard floor is the only exercise they can obtain and to a good many of them who have been accustomed to walking on soft ground, this treading on hard floors is nothing short of agony.

Then after they have filed on their land, the real work of the whole affair starts. They must use the land for agricultural purposes but before doing so the grubbing of roots, and clearing away of stumps and stones must first be attended to. Then they get down to the proposition of making a living on new land. The land is usually about half cleared and they must take off the rest of the timber, which in itself is no gladdening job. It is work from the time the homesteader lines up at the land office until he finishes his quota of services for the land.

The line-up at the Duluth land office has its duplicates at the Cass Lake and Crookston land offices where land openings are also to take place on Tuesday morning. A goodly part of the population of Minnesota is looking for farm homes.

IN COPPER CIRCLES

Output of Lake Superior District Has Exceeded Estimate.

A Much Larger Increase Is Predicted For the Future.

Houghton, Mich., Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—Only three years ago it was thought by some of the most careful students of the Lake copper business that the ultimate productive capacity of the local mines would be about 300,000,000 pounds per annum. This figure was exceeded last year and will be largely exceeded in 1906, barring serious accidents of an unforseen nature. Not only have the figures of ultimate output been reached and passed, but work now under way assures a still larger increase in the production of the future. Just how large this will prove depends upon a number of factors that cannot be accurately estimated at the present writing, but there is enough of a positive nature known to afford a sound basis for predicting a steady increase in output for several years to come.

The properties of the district may be divided into five classes, so far as present and future production are concerned, these being as follows: First, the old producing mines; second, the new producing mines, third, the developing mines; fourth, the active prospects, and fifth, the inactive mines and prospects. Of the first class, it may be said with safety that practically all of the old mines should at least hold their own in output for the next five years, and the aggregate production of this group of properties should show an increase rather than a decrease at the end of the five-year period. Of the important old producers, the Calumet & Hecla has work under way which should result in increasing its production to approximately 100,000,000 pounds per annum within the next few years. With all allowances made for decreasing values and other adverse factors, an increased output for the Calumet & Hecla seems certain. The Tamarack has been a declining property for the past six years. If anything there should be a small gain during the next few years. The Quincy should show an increase. The northern end of the mine is showing marked improvement at depth and the prospects of the property are much brighter than for many years past. The Osceola Consolidated may be included in the list of old properties, though its principal mines are comparatively new. This property should show a substantial increase. Atlantic should about hold its own, as should Wolverine. On the whole it will be found that the old mines of the district show large possibilities for increased production and may make 30,000,000 more copper in 1910 than they will make in 1905.

Among the new mines there are excellent prospects of increased output. The South Range mines, controlled by the Copper Range Consolidated Co., offer the greatest prospects of enlarged production. These three mines, the Baltic, Tri-Mountain and Champion, will make more than 40,000,000 pounds of fine copper this year, and each should be making at least 20,000,000 pounds before the close of the present decade, which means that each of these great young mines will be another Quincy by that time, while it is by no means sure that even this size will mark the ultimate capacity of the three mines in question. On the north range, the Mohawk, which is now making approximately 10,000,000 pounds per year, is to be given increased capacity, and within five years should be making 18,000,000 to 18,000,000 pounds yearly. The Michigan is another mine that is quite certain to double or more than double present production within the lustrum, and the Adventure gives promise of also doubling its output.

Of the developing mines the Allouez and Ahmeek should each be making 10,000,000 pounds or better within five years. Both are producing in a small way at present, carrying drift-stopes, which afford a limited tonnage of stamp-rock for the mills, it being felt by both managements that the mines should obtain some benefit, during the period of development, from the very favorable copper market now ruling. The Superior, lying next north of the Baltic, is a producing property and should be heard from during the next five years.

Among the prospects there are enough properties of promise to guarantee that from the number several good producers will be secured. The Globe tract, lying next south of the Champion, is under option to the Copper Range company, and in view to its immediate contiguity to the Champion, which is the richest of the South Range mines, cannot be regarded as other than a property of exceptional promise. Unfortunately the overburden is very heavy and very difficult of penetration, but the Copper Range company has ample funds to overcome all unfavorable features surrounding the early stages of development. About midway between the Globe and the Winona mine is the Erie-Ontario prospect, on which steady work has been performed for some months past. The results, while insufficient to predicate the certainty of making a mine, are strongly favorable, and if a mine is made at this point, it is almost certain that adjoining mines will be opened on adjoining properties. To the northward the Makwabik has a promising property, apparently carrying the northern extension of the Kearsarge lode. The Tecumseh has cut a very rich drill-core from the Kearsarge lode and this is full of promise to the Rhode Island, where six years have been spent in opening a series of pearl-breaksingly hungry amygadaloids. The little drill-core in question also promises well for the Franklin Junior, where a careful and intelligent management is occupied in getting a new dollar for an old one upon a normal market, with a few cents those change profit when copper is 15 cents per pound, as at present. The Arcadian—even the utterly-damned Arcadian—may come in for some of the pie, if the Kearsarge lode reaches that far south, with workable values—and it must be said for the Kearsarge that it yet has to be shown unworkable at any point opened.

Among the developments of the next five years should be the opening of a mine on section 16 of the Atlantic company. The work of the past eighteen months at the Baltic and Superior properties has thrown much light upon the hitherto puzzling geology of the section 16 tract, and the location of the extension of the Baltic lode upon the tract in question is closely approximated.

In Keweenaw county there is much activity in the extreme southern end, at the Allouez, Ahmeek and Mohawk properties. As a matter of fact the southern end of Keweenaw county is merely a continuation of the Calumet district, from which it is distant but a few miles, with continuous producing mines from the Osceola to the Mohawk at present. Further north the Keweenaw Copper company has secured eight old mines, and many have been opened and pushed will explore its property. At present the mining end of the work is held in partial abeyance, efforts being concentrated upon the completion of the Keweenaw Central railway, under construction by the company, as it is obvious that the work of development can be begun and pushed to far better advantage after rail communication is established. In addition to the work planned by the Keweenaw company, two other interests have plans for the future, these being the Calumet & Hecla company, which has been a very extensive purchaser of Keweenaw county mineral lands during the present year, and the Fitzgerald interests, controlling the Arnold, Ashbed, Humboldt and Meadow properties. The Arnold was tried out several years ago, but could not make a success, lacking rail connections. In the present day only the very richest mines can hope to prove profitable if lacking the advantage of railroads.

In Ontonagon county the National mine may arrange to resume work. The National adjoins the Michigan and carries the continuation of the ore bodies of the latter.

Within five years the Lake Superior mines should be making at least 275,000,000 and possibly nearly 300,000,000 pounds of copper yearly, the maximum figure being an increase of almost 50 per cent over the output of 1904.

DUN'S WEEKLY TRADE REVIEW

Some Adverse Factors of Temporary Character Appear In Trade.

New York, Aug. 12.—R. G. Dun & Co.'s weekly Review of Trade says: Trade reports are less uniformly favorable, but adverse factors are of a temporary nature, and the net results for the week is satisfactory. Numerous strikes have occurred, exerting the customary pernicious influences over business, and the epidemic of yellow fever is restricting Southern trade. On the other hand, conditions have facilitated retail trade, crop prospects have greatly improved, and out of town buyers are numerous in all the leading markets. Manufacturing plants are increasingly active; textile mills still occupying the strongest position, while shoe shops are not making concessions to get business. Iron furnaces and steel mills make progress, but less rapidly. Lumber mills and dealers are having an exceptionally busy season. Railway earnings in July were 7.4 per cent greater than in the same month last year and foreign commerce at this port for the last week showed an increase of $3,917,439 in imports, while exports decreased $1,969,227.

Little change has occurred in the financial situation, rates ruling easy, while prices of securities have risen close to the highest point on record. Bank exchanges for the week were 47.8 per cent larger than last year, and at other leading cities the increase amounted to 14.0 per cent.

Recovery in iron and steel industry comes more slowly than was anticipated, yet there are numerous indications of a better tone. Quotations are practically unchanged. Export trade is expanding, and several important contracts are pending that will add a large tonnage to the business of the mills when satisfactory terms can be arranged.

Textile markets have had the stimulus of an increasing amount of Western buyers. At present the only event that might weaken the position of cotton manufacturers would be the cancellation of Chinese orders, as many mills have withdrawn them from the market on account of export trade. Woolen goods are meeting with steady demand.

Raw materials of the footwear industry continue strong, hides commanding the highest position since the Civil war, and showing no indications of reacting. Footwear markets respond to the upward tendency of materials, in so far as any changes are recorded, but Western shoe jobbers have not placed the customary amount of spring orders, owing to the disagreement as to values.

Failures this week numbered 220 in the United States, compared with the same number a year ago, and 19 in Canada, against 33 last year.

THE BIGGEST GOLD BRICK THAT WAS EVER CAST

Is Evidence of the Untold Wealth of Nome—One Foot Long, Four Inches Deep, Five Inches Wide and Weighs About Ninety Pounds.

Portland, Or., Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—The biggest gold brick ever cast, nearly as large as two building bricks placed end to end, which contains $25,000 worth of gold that is purer than the gold in a twenty-dollar coin, has just arrived at the Lewis and Clark exposition and is being exhibited by the Nome district of Alaska as evidence that Nome is still a great gold-producing region. The gold brick is a foot long, four inches deep and five inches wide, and it weighs approximately ninety pounds.

The city of Nome, on the Seward peninsula, in the extreme north of Alaska, beyond the string of islands that stands out like the bill of a snipe, contains a population of from 2,500 to 3,000 people in the winter time, and ten time as many people in the summer. The town has an enterprising chamber of commerce, which, in fifteen days, got together the most wonderful mineral exhibit ever displayed by ore region, and it has other elements of civilization that take the place out of the mining camp class and puts it in the list of live, prosper us, progressive cities. Last week a Portland man was called to Nome to be its superintendent of schools. A former magazine editor, J. J. Underwood, who has had the unusual experience of editing a newspaper in the far North, is Nome's representative at the exposition. Nome is booming and wants the world to know it.

While the gold brick which Nome is showing has attracted more attention than any other single article in the United States government building at the fair, three nuggets, worth in the aggregate $8,000, stand second in popularity. These are exhibited in a small wire cage, and a man who wears in his belt a revolver of the size common to melodramas and Wild West shows stands guard over them. The biggest nugget of the three, which weighs 182 ounces, is worth $3,276. There is a hole in one side of the cage, big enough for one to put his hand through it, but not large enough to enable him to take out the nugget. Over the chunk of gold there is a legend which reads, "You can lift the nugget, but don't take it away," and all day long people crowd one another for a chance to hold $3,276 worth of gold for just a fraction of a minute.

The nuggets and the gold brick constitute Nome's most interesting gold display. They are owned by the Pioneer Mining company, and were found on Anvil creek, near Nome. Near the nugget cage is a table, on which, under glass, are small boxes of pay dirt. This display is not so spectacular as that in the nugget cage—which, by the way, includes a host of smaller nuggets in addition to the three big ones—but it is remarkably interesting. The pay dirt shows no gold and looks like ordinary, gravelly soil.

One box of it is labeled, "Pay dirt from Anvil creek. Average value, $1.20 per bucket." One at once begins to figure how many buckets an ordinary man could fill in a day, and the figures are startling. Another box contains broken rock, and is labeled: "Portion of bed rock from Portland Bench claim—$44,000 result of work of seven men for sixty days."

But gold is not the only mineral resource of the country round about Nome. Some 150 miles from Nome, at a place called Cape York, on Buck creek, there is a mountain of tin, where $25,560,000 worth of the metal is in sight. The tin is found in a substance called cassiterite crystals, which contains seventy-two per cent of metallic tin, and from 40 cents to $1 worth of gold to the ton. There is a whole mountain top, ten miles long by two miles wide, of this cassiterite, which is worth $441 a ton, at the present price of tin, 30 cents a pound. Last winter 500 tons of the ore was taken out, and the magnitude of the industry is hardly to be conceived. Then again, at Ears mountain, on Shismaroff Inlet, 180 miles northwest of Nome, there is a ledge of cassiterite. The ledge is exposed to a width of fifteen feet, and runs 1,000 feet up a mountain, reaching an elevation of 400 feet. From this it is presumed that the ore vein is 400 feet deep.

And then there is quicksilver, another new proposition, and a very profitable one from all appearances. Quicksilver ore is found on the Kuskokwim river, distant 800 miles southeast of Nome. Some of it runs $400 worth to the ton, but $100 is probably the average. The ore is found on the surface. It is burned in an immense caldron, so that the quicksilver vapors rise and are afterwards precipitated or condensed into liquid quicksilver by being immersed in cold water. At the Lewis and Clark exposition, the richness of the ore is demonstrated by a piece from which the quicksilver has been smelted. The rock is honeycombed like a pumice stone.

It costs 20 cents a pound on the average to transport coal from the mines in British Columbia to Nome. Hence the importance of the discovery of a coal mine which produces a fairly good grade in the far North. The coal mine is located on Chicago creek, which flows into the Kugruk river, which in turn flows into Lotzobue Sound. At the surface, three tons of the coal were found to be equal in heat-producing power to one ton of Wellington coal. Now a shaft has been sunk 300 feet, and two tons of the coal at that depth are worth one of Wellington. By means of this coal, which is essential to winter mining in the far North, $250,000 worth of gold was taken out last winter. The discovery of the coal thus opens up immense possibilities in winter mining. It assures a regular, year-round population for Nome.

Nome people do not intend that their city shall suffer the fate of Dawson city, which was entirely destroyed a few years ago by fire, and they have precluded the possibility of such a catastrope by painting their houses and stores with a fire-proof paint which is made from a substance called magnesium talc, found near at hand. Magnesium talc is similar to asbestos ore, and may be used for the manufacture of commercial asbestos. It also furnishes the basis of talcum powder; but more important is its value in the manufacture of fire-proof mineral paint. It has not proved profitable as yet to ship the talc to the states, but it may prove so some day, and even if it does not the mineral will rejoice that by means of it they are protected from the fire scourge.

Such are a few of the things exhibited by the enterprising city of Nome. The exhibit from the far North composes only a small fraction of the Alaska display, which is remarkably interesting. Alaska and the Philippines share one of the wings of Uncle Sam's big exhibit palace at the fair. The government buildings and displays are worth $800,000.

THE MAN OF THE FUTURE

He Will Be an Earless, Noseless and Hairless Creature, According to One Professor.

In the prehistoric period, even, man's mouth had ceased to be an instrument for grasping food; it is still growing less prehensile, his front teeth are smaller his lips are thinner and less muscular, he has a new organ, a mandible not of irreparable tissue, but of bone and steel—a knife and fork, says the Metropolitan Magazine. There is no reason why things should stop at the partial artificial division thus afforded; there is every reason, on the contrary, to believe my statement that some cunning exterior mechanism will presently masticate and insalivate his dinner, relieve his diminishing salivary glands and teeth, and at last altogether abolish them.

Then, what is not needed disappears. What use is there for external ears, nose and brow ridges now? The two latter once protected the eye from injury in conflict and in falls, but in these days we keep on our legs and are at peace. Directing his thoughts in this way, the reader may presently conjure up a dim, strange vision of the latter-day face: "Eyes large, lustrous, beautiful, soulful; above them, no longer separated by rugged brow ridges, is the top of the head, a glistening, hairless dome, terete and beautiful; no craggy nose rises to disturb by its unmeaning shadows the symmetry of that calm face, no vestigial ears project, the mouth is a small, perfectly round aperture, toothless and gumless, fawless, unanimal, no futile emotions disturbing its roundness as it lies, like the harvest moon or the evening star, in the wide firmament of the face." Such is the face the professor beholds in the future.

Of course parallel modifications will also affect the body and limbs. "Every day so many hours and so much energy are required for digestion; a gross torpidity, a carnal lethargy, seizes on mortal men after dinner. This may and can be avoided. Man's knowledge of organic chemistry widens daily. Already he can supplement the gastric glands by artificial devices. Every doctor who administers physic implies that the bodily functions may be artificially superseded. We have pepsine, pancreadine, artificial gastric acid—I know not what like mixtures. Why, then, should not the stomach be ultimately superannuated altogether?

Chisholm

Chisholm, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald.)—One of the worst storms of the season raged in this vicinity from about 9 o'clock Thursday night till some time after midnight. The thunder and lightning were appalling. The Leonard mine is completely tied up because the open pit formed an immense tub which caught enough rain water to flood the lower part of the pit to a depth of 8 feet. The steam shovel which digs out the iron ore was covered all except the frame over the machinery. The Drake & Stratton company suffered equally as much, for their tracks are made around the terraced sides of the pit. The water washed down the sides of the pit covering the tracks with boulders and sand. It will take a day or two to prepare the mine and the stripping part for work.

The Monroe mine is in just as bad a condition, for their pit is larger and the shovels are completely covered with water and the men are sitting around waiting for the pumps to empty the pit. As strange as it may appear to the ontsider the underground part of these mines are not completely flooded for the reason that the chutes have not been made between the lower part of the pit and the drifts in the mine proper.

Superintendent Wearne of the Leonard spent Thursday in Duluth on business.

The firemen's tournament which has been holding forth here for the past four days has been a most successful one. The weather has been perfect, sunny bright days with only one shower and that at night. The course on Adams avenue is in fine condition, the crowd good natured, and excellent music from the Eveleth and city bands, and the Eveleth firemen as well as every Eveleth citizen just trying in every way to make the affair a success by courteous treatment and by process of providing every means of entertainment. Tuesday, the opening day, was devoted to welcoming the departments which kept arriving on the different trains. The following sent teams to contest: Ely, Cass Lake, Park Rapids, Sparta, and the following have representative firemen here, Virginia and Grand Rapids. Wednesday morning at 10 o'clock the parade formed, headed by the Eveleth band and Mayor Maxwell on horseback. Ely received the first prize of $25 for the company presenting the best appearance, their company being the best drilled in marching order. The following Ely men marched under Chief Matt Gleason, George Holmes, George Holcomb, F. C. Miller, John Goose, William Desjarders, John Glode, Charles Quigley, John Columbo, Harry Chinn, Richard Hodge, Joseph Seraphine, Louis White, Jacob Skoglund, William Le Beau, Martin Skala, Thomas McLaughlin, Edward Powers, Iver Wistedt, Peter Schaefer, Peter Bergeline, John Seraphine, C. J. Mott, John Wheel, Louis Ersenach, Townsend Childers and Ike Cox. Cass Lake received the prize of $15 for the greatest number of men in line. The most important race of Wednesday was the hose race at which Park Rapids won the first prize of $50, running 200 feet and coupling the hose in 34 seconds. Cass Lake, Eveleth, Sparta and Ely took 35 seconds, thus making it necessary to run this again in order to decide who shall receive second and third moneys. Edward Hatch of Eveleth won the prize for ladder climbing contest, running 25 feet and climbing a 74-foot ladder in 8 seconds. Cass Lake was second in 8½, and Park Rapids third in 9⅝. Thursday

Ellsworth was second in 10 3-5, and Weston Trevanon was third. The judges are: N. B Arnold, Dr. P. D. Winship of Park Rapids, Thomas H. Hennessey of Grand Rapids, Dr. E. K. Wedlar of Eveleth, Dr. Rutledge of Cass Lake. Timers: W. P. Velteh of Eveleth, M. Miller of Cass Lakt, Edward Johnson of Virginia.

A huge iron key, which was made by Chief William Murray, was presented to the visitors after a speech of welcome from Thomas P. Ferry. Dr. Winship of Park Rapids responded in a happy manner. Friday morning the hub and hub race was won by Eveleth, first; Park Rapids, second, and Sparta, third.

Many Eveleth ladies are attending the afternoon party being given today by Mrs. W. J. Moore of Virginia for her guest Mrs. Brown of Lansing, Mich.

The infant boy of Mr. and Mrs. P. E. Dowling was buried Monday afternoon at Virginia cemetery.

Virginia

Virginia, Aug. 12.—(Special to The Herald)—That Virginia is about to become the home of another big saw mill there seems little room for doubt. The matter has been hanging fire for over a year and it was not until after the meeting of the Virginia Lumber company in regards to the future holdings in the concern, held at Duluth the first of the month, that the matter became one of immediate speculation. As soon as the case was presented in a pointed way and it was found to be up the citizens of this city to do something for a site and for piling room, a special meeting of the Commercial club was called for last Saturday afternoon, and a committee of twelve was appointed to look up a proper way to go after what the company wanted. This committee met and it was decided to send two of them to Duluth to see the owner of sely of the sely of section 7, 58-17. The committee was composed of Messrs. Griggs and Freeman. They have reported that the land could be purchased for such a purpose for $3,000, that is, the surface rights, the lease being for a period of twenty years. Mayor Fay and Dr. Lenont were appointed as a committee to wait on the officials of the Northern Pacific and ascertain whether or not the lease already obtained from that company on lands in S. 58-17, could not be used for lumber purposes instead of park purposes, and no decisive answer could be obtained until next week. Mr. Griggs reported to the city council last Tuesday night that the Myers Bros. forty could be had for $3,000, and the council immediately took steps to that end. The mill is planned to occupy the old Moon & Kerr saw mill site and the lands to be used for piling purposes lay immediately south of the proposed site. The mill will have a capacity of 50,000,000 feet a year, will employ in the neighborhood of 400 men, and will be operated day and night, winter and summer. It is also the intention of Mr. Cook and his associates to operate a box factory and perhaps a pulp mill in connection with the concern. The present large planing mill at the north of the present mill will be ample for finishing the product of both mills. This is an important deal for Virginians to have come up before it, and the Commercial club has been an important factor in blazing the way for the landing of the institution.

MAY LAST THROUGH FALL.

Telegraphers to Arrange for a Long Campaign.

St. Paul, Aug. 11.—(Special to The Herald.)—There were no new developments in the railroad telegraphers' strike today. No statements of conditions were issued by the Great Northern or Northern Pacific officials today. President Perham, of the Order of Railway Telegraphers, said that he had the usual batch of reports from his men showing that the railroads were not doing much business. "It is a case of where the public suffers from the inconvenience of disturbed traffic. Representatives of some of the commercial bodies of the Northwest called on me today to learn our side of the trouble. I have an idea that unless some sort of an agreement is reached before long it will be a fight which will last through the fall, and unless I see encouraging signs in a few days, I will arrange my lines to that end and start a campaign to raise a big sum of money to help us give the railroads a big fight."

Interest today centers in the meeting to be held at the state capitol late this afternoon between the state railroad and warehouse commissioners and representatives of the railroads involved in the strike for the purpose of inquiring why a number of railroad telegraph offices remain closed.

ALL BUT TWO POINTS

Will Be Accepted By Russians As Basis.

Portsmouth, Aug. 11.—The Associated Press learns that the chief feature of the Russian reply to the Japanese peace term, to be submitted by M. Witte to Baron Komura at the conference tomorrow morning will be an agreement to accept all except two of the conditions as bases for decision. The two points to which a non-possimus will be returned are the indemnity and the cession of the island of Sakhalin.

Little Tim O'Hara.

BY MAUD WALKER.

Little Tim O'Hara was sick. His sickness was caused from neglect, so said the doctor who doctored the poor. And when the doctor said "neglect" he covered a vast ground by the one word. The neglect, however, did not come from willfulness or selfishness on the part of Tim's mother. It was a different sort of neglect. Never in all his 10 years had Tim had enough to eat. And the insufficient food he did get was not of the wholesome kind on which a boy might wax big and strong.

Little Tim's mother took in plain sewing, and did darning and mending for bachelors. The work was not very well done for poor Mrs. O'Hara was not clever at anything unless loving her little man might be called cleverness. In that case she was more than clever—she was a real artist, for she was most devoted to her little, thin-legged, hollow-chested, gaunt-eyed boy with whom nature had been stingy in all respects save the bestowing of a plentiful supply of freckles and a generous, loving heart.

But if Tim's mother's work was badly done those for whom she worked should have made no complaint, for the work was as badly paid for, those employing her services beating her down to the lowest possible penny—and then obliging her to wait for her money a long time after the work was done.

But, perhaps that is another story.

As has been told, little Tim was sick—sick in bed, too. And the August days were sweltering hot, hardly a breath to

"Ma, when I grow up big I intend to take the best care of you."

"If I could only sit by the window and look out," said Tim one afternoon, growing so tired of the corner in which the bed stood.

"Wy, I tell you what I'll do," said his mother, rising from her sewing machine. "I'll drag your bed over across the window and you can sit propped up on your pillow. But I don't reckon, honey, that you'll find much to see, for nobody comes in the street a day like this if they don't have to. It's blisterin' out."

"Yes, and I feel as if I was cookin'," sighed the child, as his mother drew the bed across the open window that looked out on a dry, burning street. "I'd love to have a cold lemonade with a little chunk of ice in it," he went on.

Tim's mother did not answer, for a lump in her throat choked off articulation. Neither did she look at the little fellow, for she did not want him to see the tears that stood in her eyes. This poverty punishment was cruel—cruel, she felt, for it prevented her from gratifying the simple little wants and needs of her child. She bent over the sewing machine, determined if possible, to finish by 4 o'clock a piece of work—a house waist—she was doing for a rich, stingy old lady who lived in an elegant home situated in the fashionable quarter of the town. If she could deliver the work she would have some money, then Tim should have his lemonade and ice. What little money she now had was to go for the food absolutely necessary to keep life in their bodies and not a cent could be spared for "luxuries."

Promptly at 4 o'clock Mrs. O'Hara drew out the last basting from the waist, pressed it seams with an iron heated over a smoky coal oil stove, wrapped the garment in a bit of newspaper and prepared to carry the work home.

"If I was only well, ma, I'd take that waist to old Mrs. Brown's for you. I hate for you to go out in this heat," said little Tim from his pillow.

"You'll be all right after a little," assured his mother, stooping and kissing the child good-by. "I'll bring something home for you—a surprise, maybe," she said cheerfully. She had the lemons and ice in mind. Then she kissed him a second time and was gone with the bundle under her arm. The walk ahead of her was a long one, but she bent to it, anxious to get back to her child as quickly as possible, to fix the surprise for him—the lemonade. The streets fairly radiated the white heat, but on hurried Tim's mother, not allowing herself to look at the comfortable street cars that dashed past her and which could have carried her to her destination in such a few minutes had she been able to afford the price of the ride.

After an hour, which seemed much longer to Tim in his restlessness, his mother returned heavy-hearted, carrying under her arm the bundle she had departed with. In answer to Tim's inquiry the poor, exhausted woman dropped on the door by the bed, and laying her head against Tim's pillow she burst into tears. Then, brokenly, she told Tim the cause of her grief. "Mrs. Brown said the waist don't fit and that I've got to rip it all up and do it over. She was awful cross, and said I ought to be made to pay for the goods for fretting her on such a hot day. She is going to the country for the remainder of the summer, and she says I must fix the waist and send it to her by mail. She didn't even offer to give me the money for the postage and to buy thread with, though she knows I need the money awful. I told her you was sick. But she didn't seem to care. Oh, Tim, you don't know how your mother did hate to come home without the ice and lemons. We've got a little sugar, you know, and I intended to make such a nice lemonade for you this evening."

Tim gave no answering word but then, but he reached out his little wan hand and caressed his mother's cheek, wiping away the hot tears. He sat with his own big, pale-blue eyes closed, but tears squeezed through between the lids. After a few moments he spoke, his voice full of subdued rage.

"Ma, when I grow up to be big enough I intend to take the best care of you. You shan't do nothing but rest and ride on the street cars whenever you want to. You shall have silk dresses, too, finer'n anything old Mrs. Brown ever saw. And I'll pay the poor women what do the work a lot of money, so I shall. But, listen, ma, I'll go up to that old Mrs. Brown's and I'll bent her nearly to a jelly for the way she has treated my mother!"

"Hush—hush!" said Mrs. O'Hara. "You must not talk so, Timmy. You wouldn't ever think of striking a woman, child." And Tim's mother tried to soothe the excited boy.

"Yes, I will," stoutly declared Tim. "I'll bent her and bent her—the heartless old monster! And while I'm at that kind of work I'll go down to old Peter Packer's law office and I'll flog him till he yells 'nough! The old skindint!—coming here with his old socks for you to darn and his old shirts for you to mend and when you ask him 50 cents for work what kept you busy all day long he gits mad and says 'taint worth it; and he pays you 35 cents. He's meaner'n old Mrs. Brown, so he is. Wish I could punch his head right now." And Tim clinched his fists angrily. "But I'll fix him when I git to be a man, I will!"

"That's right, my boy," came a man's voice; and, looking toward the door, Tim and his mother saw old Peter Packer, the rich, miserly old bachelor that Mrs. O'Hara mended and darned for, entering the room with a small parcel under his arm. Mrs. O'Hara sprang to her feet, much confused. She feared the man had overheard all that Tim had said against him, and she knew that it might mean the withdrawal of his work. But Tim raised himself on his elbow and looked at the intruder defiantly.

"Now," said Mr. Packer, walking deliberately into the room and placing his bundle on the table, "I must plead guilty to the offense of eavesdropping. When I approached your door I overheard you, madam," nodding towards Mrs. O'Hara, "speaking between sobs to your son. Not wishing to interrupt you till you were calmer, I stood beside the door and waited. Of course, I overheard everything you said, and also the remarks your little son made concerning that old Mrs. Brown, who, let me say, must be a most contemptible old woman to say the least. As for that old skindint Peter Packer——"

"Oh, sir," broke in Mrs. O'Hara, thinking Mr. Packer was speaking ironically and was angry, "please don't pay any attention to what little Timothy says. The child is sick, you see."

"Well, if he can show such spirit when he is sick he'll be a dandy after he gets well. And he'll get well all right, for a boy with his heart owes it to his mother to get well and strong so he can carry out his threats and protect her. If ever a tight-fisted, flint-hearted old reprobate lived that same Peter Packer is—or was till this minute—one. In fact I've been too mean to notice my meanness till this little chap showed me to myself naked." Then turning to Tim as he fanned his perspiring face with his hat the old man continued to speak: "It's too bad you are not able to punch my head for the way I beat your mother down in her price for doing my mending. But I've conceived a way in which I can make some amends. I want just such a boy as you to come in my office and learn my business. I'm getting old and need young shoulders to lean upon. You have this day taught me a lesson that I could not have afforded to miss learning—before going to meet my Maker. In fact, you have taken me back to my boyhood and recalled my own mother to me, and the precepts she taught me have come swarming to mind. I'd forgotten her and her training for years and years. Now I remember all."

Peter Packer wiped the perspiration from his brow and a mist from his eyes. "Yes," he went on, "I want to keep such a fellow as you near me to keep my hard heart thawed out. But, in the meantime, and in order that you may get well the faster, I shall send you and your mother out to the Great Sulphur Springs for a month. You'll board at a nice old lady's cottage, where you will have as much lemonade as you can drink."

"But, Mr. Packer——" began Mrs. O'Hara.

"Never mind about any 'buts,' Mrs. O'Hara. I want this boy in my office. It is a duty you owe him to advance him in the world. Here is Opportunity knocking at his door. You can't afford to refuse it admittance. So, pack up your few belongings and tomorrow morning at 10 o'clock a carriage will call for my future partner and his mother to take them to the railroad station, where I'll be waiting to complete arrangements. In the meantime, here is some money I owe you, madam, for past work that was underpaid. Go at once and get lemons, ice and anything else this partner of mine wants. Good day."

And before Mrs. O'Hara or Tim could speak a word of thanks old Peter Packer was gone. Mrs. O'Hara looked at the bill that Mr. Packer had thrust into her hand and saw it was $5. "I don't know whether I should use this or not, Tim," said the poor woman, doubtfully.

Tim thought for a moment. Then he said: "Well, if Tim to go to work for Peter Packer as soon as I am well, ma, I guess we may call this some money on account. I'll deduct it from my first month's wages. So, I reckon it's all right. But what a change in that old man, wasn't there, ma?"

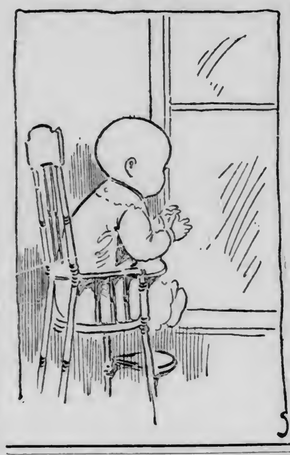

"Yes, Timmy, and it was your love for your poor mother that touched his hard heart. You see it made him think of his own mother, and of the time when he was a little, loving-hearted boy like you. Oh, Timothy, I hope success and money will never make you a cold, heartless man."

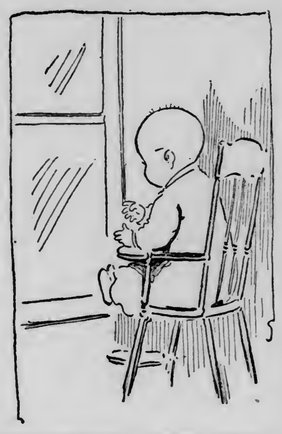

"Never while I live," said Tim, with determination in his voice. "will I forget my dear, dear mother. And I couldn't be mean when I think of her, even if I wanted to ever so much—which I never shall."

"And now the lemonade, then the packing to take my Timmy to the fresh country where he will get strong and well!" And Mrs. O'Hara kissed Tim in her gladness.

"And you'll send that old Mrs. Brown's waist home without touching it again," said Tim. "Write and tell her your son is to go to work in a lawyer's office, and if she ever dares to be cross and mean towards you again he'll put the law in force." And Tim nodded his head emphatically, showing that his promised success had not robbed him of his Irish temper and ideas of justice.

That Queer Little Man and The Dear Little Miss.

Who watches our house every day:
We've a dear little Miss who watches him back,
And you'd think the neighbors might say
That these two were flirting—at least, acting gay—
Our dear little Miss, and he over the way.
But the queer little man is as bald as a bat,
And he hasn't a single white tooth:
And the language he speaks is so very strange
You'd mistake it for French—that's the truth.
Or you might think it German, Spanish or Latin,
But no word of English speaks he, that is certain.
And strange as it seems, our dear little Miss
Is as bald and as toothless as he:
And she speaks the same tongue, tho' we understand;
(You may wonder how that can be).
For she is our baby just six months old,
And the queer little man's a month younger, we're told.

Grandma's Wisdom.
-or-
Stella's and Maggie's Luncheon.

BY HELENA DAVIS.

"Oh, dear me! What do you think, grandmama? Nancy has just sent word to mama that she is ill and can't come for several days. Now, isn't it too provoking?—and just at a time when we need her services most! You know Mag and I are to have Ethel Andrews and her brother Tom, who has just come home from abroad, where he has been in school, for luncheon tomorrow. And Mag and I are particularly anxious to have a swell spread, for everyone of the girls are going to entertain Tom Andrews, and we don't want to fall behind with our luncheon. Really, I don't believe Nancy is sick at all—she's just pretending so that she may stay at home this hot weather. It's downright mean of her, so it is." And pretty Stella Rogers puckered her fair forehead into a horridly unbecoming wrinkle, and pushed her lips out in a pout.

Grandmama Rogers sat sewing beside the window and patiently waited till her 15-year-old granddaughter's temper had spent itself; then the dear old lady put down her needle and said in a very calm voice:

"Stella, dear, you must not be too quick in doubting the genuineness of Nancy's sickness. After all, servant girls are flesh, bone and blood like other mortals, and are not proof against the ills that afflict the human family. You must be more charitable toward those who are kind enough to relieve you of the household tasks which seem to you so difficult."

"But, grandmama," Stella contended, "Nancy is paid for her work, and she ought to be thankful that she has such a good place as ours to work in, for she never has to leave the kitchen at all. Mama, Mag and I do all the chamber work, as you know."

"Well, dear, we've a chance now to test the hardness or lightness of Nancy's work. Since Nancy is sick—and I don't doubt the truth of her sickness, either—we'll be obliged to play cooks and prepare the luncheon for your friends tomorrow."

"I'm afraid we'll find the task a difficult one, grandmama," sighed Stella. "Oh, why did Nancy go and play off on us now of all times? I feel like I could shake her—so I do! And she does fix the loveliest salads I ever ate. She's a treasure in the kitchen."

"Well, since your friends are coming tomorrow, and Nancy is sick, I see no other alternative than to go ahead and make the best of it. Surely, all of us together should be able to perform the duties that Nancy can perform unaided." And grandmama rose from her chair and started toward the stairs. "I used to be successful with certain kinds of salads," she continued. "I'll try my hand now. At any rate, we've got to set something before your young girl friend and that Beau Brummel of a brother of hers. If I am not wrong, girlie, it's that young gentleman who is causing all this anxiety." And grandmama looked knowingly at Stella and smiled. Stella blushed a pretty pink and laughingly answered: "Well, I'm quite sure, granny, that when you were a young girl and a fine young man like Tom Andrews was coming to luncheon you were just as anxious as could be to have everything go off in the best of style."

"To be sure I was," confessed grandmama. "But if I found myself in such straits as you are now complaining of I went to work with a will and made out, somehow, alone. 'Where there's a will there's a way,' you know. But come, we'll go to the kitchen and see what we can do towards the preparation for tomorrow."

"Granny, you're worth a dozen of such as I," warmly declared Stella, putting her arm about her old grandmother's neck as they descended the stairs. In the reception hall they found Mrs. Rogers, Jr., and her younger daughter, Maggie. Both were declaring that they were in "a perfectly deplorable dilemma," and like Stella, they were inclined to condemn Nancy for choosing this particular time for indulging in a sick spell.

But dear old grandmama had a way of quieting nervous and excitable people, and soon she had her daughter-in-law, Stella and Maggie around her in the kitchen and pantry where preparations were begun for the morrow's luncheon.

And so the afternoon wore away, and soon everything was done that could be done so far in advance of the time for the luncheon. "Now, it's time to start dinner," said grandmama, the only one of the four who remembered that Mr. Rogers would be home at 6:30 as usual for the evening meal with his family.

"Oh, goodness! I'd quite forgot that we must all eat before 2 o'clock tomorrow," exclaimed Maggie. "And so bad I," shake her—so I do! And she does fix admitted Stella, laughing. Strange as it may have seemed to the young girls and their mother, things were moving along finely under grandma's instructions, and the preparations so far promised a fine repast.

"Well, I guess we are in for getting this evening's dinner too," said Mrs. Rogers, Jr. "I'll admit I'm pretty tired, though, without further work."

"And I'm half dead," cried Maggie, who was nauseed to any exertion save the care of her own room and that of outdoor sports (which, of course, could not be called work). "Let me add my lamentations to yours, mama and Mag," said Stella. "I wouldn't be a cook for a thousand dollars a month, so I wouldn't."

"Think what it means to Nancy," reminded grandmama. "Do you wonder she gets sick occasionally?"

"Not a bit of it," answered Stella. "I'm sure that if I had to do people's cooking for them 365 days in the year I'd die before the first week was got through."

"And I'd go clean-spank daffy," laughed Maggie, "before the first day was got through—maybe before the first meal, if I had such particular people to serve meals to as this Rogers family. Indeed, I would." And the jolly girl stamped her slippered foot on the floor to emphasize her words.

"Well, well, we've got to begin the dinner," sighed Mrs. Rogers. "The question is, what shall we have?"

"Cheese and crackers!" suggested Stella. "Milk and bread!" cried Maggie.

"Oh, come girls, be sensible," commanded Mrs. Rogers. Then she turned to see what grandmama was doing that she had not offered her advice. The old lady was pulling the vegetables out of the ice box, looking them over to order to select something to cook for dinner. "Here's some lettuce and some fine, green pease," she said. "Now, let's order lamb chops from the butcher's and——".

But grandma was interrupted by someone opening the kitchen door. To the surprise and pleasure of all present Nancy came walking in.

"Why, Nancy, we thought you were sick!" exclaimed Stella and her mother in one voice.

"I was sick this mornin', ma'm," said Nancy, addressing Mrs. Rogers. "An' I ain't all-fired well yet, but when my brother, he come back from tellin' you all at I was sick, he said as the young ladies—meanin' Miss Stella and Miss Maggie—was dreadful worried, for he said they had done gone and invited some company for tomorry to lunch. Now, I jus couldn't make up my mind to lay in bed an' let them dear girls fret about gittin' lunch. I won't be able to cook dinner tonight, ma'm, but I'll——"

She did not get to finish the sentence, for Stella ran to her, throwing her arms around the good woman's neck, cried out: "You dear, dear old Nancy! I wonder if you can forgive me for mistrusting you in regard to your being really sick? I cannot forgive myself—never! You are a noble soul, Nancy, and I have been most ungrateful to you for what you have done for us. But—listen! I'm going to turn over a new leaf. You shall receive the greatest consideration from the members of this family after this. It is no small matter to cook—is it, everybody?" And Stella turned to her mother, grandmother and sister for an answer.

"Well, I guess it isn't," emphatically agreed Maggie, wrapping up a cut thumb. She had been trimming some cheese for dinner and had trimmed her thumb, too.

"Oh, bless you, children!" laughed Nancy. "I don't mind cookin' when I'm well. But—inwsey!—don't you all see it's gittin' late? Mr. Rogers will be home for dinner an' there won't be none for him. Clear out—everyone of you 'cept grandma; she can stay an' help me fix the dinner."

"But you are too ill"— began Mrs. Rogers; but Nancy interrupted her with "I'd git a good deal sicker if your good man should come home and find no dinner. No, I reckon I won't have to do much if grandma helps me. So—out with you, and set the table, if you really want to do something."

Mrs. Rogers, Stella and Maggie went out of the kitchen, laughing. "Nancy is one girl in a thousand," said Mrs. Rogers.

"I am not so sure of that, mama," said Stella. "See how we all, except dear, generous grandmama, condemned Nancy today?—and how we wronged the good soul. I'm heartily ashamed of myself, so I am."

"Them's my sentiments, too," said Maggie. "And I think if we understood the servant-girl problem rightly it would develop into the 'mistress problem' instead."

"Well, I feel content on one score, now," said Stella, laying the dinner cloth. "We'll have a luncheon tomorrow that will make Mr. Tom Andrews open his eyes. Nancy will take care of that."

"What about Ethel?" asked Mrs. Rogers, slyly. "You girls seem to have forgotten her in the interest you take in that handsome brother of hers."

"Oh, Ethel doesn't expect to count when Tom's around," admitted Maggie. Then they all laughed merrily.

And in the meanwhile dear old grandmama and Nancy in the kitchen were planning on what delicacies they would fix for Mr. Tom Andrews—and the others, too, incidentally.

Soliloquy of the Geography.

BY MAUD WALKER.

Well, the Children are not the Only Happy Things because of this Vacation. We poor School Books have cause to Rejoice at it.

During the school season we are the most Abused Lot in all the Dominion of Child.

Why? Because the very little urchins whom we do our Best to enlighten in All Things use us in the most ungrateful manner.

Now what I say is True. I can prove it by the Grammar, the History, the Reader—and All of Them. They, like myself, suffer the most Leaf-rending torture at the hands of Bad Boy and Bad Girl.

To begin with—don't the Children bang us about regardless of our Feelings? Don't they chew off our Square Corners and sever our Backs? Don't they soil our nice, artistic Covers without a thought of what it means?

Don't they smear us with ink and stick quids of Gum all over us till we feel that we are doomed to remain stuck together Forever?

Now, let me recall some of the rough handling and ignoble abuses I have been forced to Suffer.

I am the property of a Bad Boy. The other day after he had been studying (or pretending to study) his Geography lesson, Teacher asked him to recite. "Which is the longest River in the world?" she asked.

Teacher just loked at him a minute—a most withering look—then asked: "Does your Geography teach you that the Potomac River is the longest in the world? And does it teach you to pronounce it 'Pot-o-mack'?"

Think of how I felt. There on the desk beside me lay the Grammar and Speller. Although the Grammar is always so proper it could not bide a Laugh. The Speller looked at me and winked, whispering: "You'd better keep tab on your Rivers, Old Friend, or they'll run all over you."

Well, I was never so embarrassed since leaving the Printing Press. I felt that I would enjoy being torn leaf from leaf—anything to end my misery through this Bay Boy's misrepresentation.

Well, after that break Bad Boy was bidden to sit down and study. He began obeying Teacher's order by writing on one of my mangled and stained Fly-Leaves a note to one of the other Bad Boys. This done, he tore the Fly-Leaf from me, wadded it up, bit his teeth into it and tossed it over against the head of the Bad Boy to whom the note was written.

And that is not the half of my wrongs. All over my splendid maps Bad Boy has drawn hideous pictures of Monkeys chasing Irishmen up the Andes Mountains and Africans hunting Lions on the plains of Kansas.

Oh, oh, these things are almost too much for a Poor Book to bear!

It is no wonder that I am Happy to lie imprisoned in a hot School Bag throughout three long months—is it?

RIDDLE.

Riddle, riddle, as you may see;
I have many legs, but never a knee;
I've a back without shoulders,
And arms, but no hand;
I never grow tired,
Though forever I stand.

Shook his old head
And winked at the owl
In the tree top and said:

Hey-diddle-de-diddle. My son John.

Hey-diddle-de-diddle,
My son John,
He had a coat with
No buttons on.
He fastened it up
With mending glue,
So he wore it all day
And all night, too.
He wore it to eat,
He wore it to walk,
He wore it to sleep,
He wore it to talk.
The fact of it is
The glue was so stout,
That the coat he did wear
Till he wore the thing out.

The Ant-Eater.

The ant-eater is a curious animal, which inhabits Brazil, Guiana and Paraguay. It feeds upon ants and termites mainly. Its short legs and heavy, long claws would cause one to suppose that it was a slow-going animal. But such is not the case, and if pursued the ant-eater often outruns the ordinary running horse.

The ant-eater's tongue resembles a great red worm, and as the animal gathers up its food with this tongue it is quite interesting to watch the process. The tongue is so quick of movement, dashing here and there with such lightning rapidity that it would seem that it went in all directions at once.

DEATHS FROM THE FEVER AVERAGING FIVE TO THE DAY

This Was the Record For the First Month of the Plague.

Minnesota Doctor to Test Arsenization Theory on Himself.

New Orleans, Aug. 14.—With nearly one-half of August gone and with total deaths since July 13, one month, of only 154, an average of five a day, the marine hospital service has today began the second week of their fight against the yellow fever here. There was a drop of cases on Sunday, as is usual, because Sunday inspection is not as rigid as that on week days, but Dr. White had his inspectors out early today in each of the wards and it will not be surprising if today's list shows some advance over that of the preceding twenty-four hours. In spite of all the appeals that have been made by the press and the federal authorities there is still suppression of cases. One instance is that of a daughter of a well-known lawyer. She is said to have had a typical case and to have been treated only by a nearby druggist When discovered by a doctor her condition was hopeless. Yesterday she died. The consequence is that steps are to be taken to compel druggists to make prompt report of all cases of illness that come under their observation.

Some friction has existed between doctors and the authorities growing out of resentment on the part of the former to the visit of inspectors to patients whom the doctors have reported. Dr. White, however, has taken steps to remove this trouble, declaring that the federal authorities will interfere in no way with physicians who make known cases of illness in their practice.

Dr. Leach, who came here from Minnesota to try his arsenization theory, is making arrangements to have a test independent of the doctors. The New Orleans Medical society has declared the use of arsenic as unsound in theory and unproven in practice, but there is a popular feeling here that Dr. Leach ought to have an opportunity to make his experiments. In this connection all sorts of theories are coming here concerning the treatment of yellow fever, and the city has been flooded with prescriptions that are guaranteed to be sure cures. Reports from lumber mill men through this section say that the fever has made little impression on their business, though some of the mills close to New Orleans have suffered from the arbitrary regulations of towns here and there against the shipment of freight of any kind. The Southern Cypress association has taken up the matter with Dr. White, and the doctor has written a letter, in which he expresses the opinion that it is almost an impossibility for lumber to carry yellow fever infection. The federal authorities have begun the room to room inspection of the whole city. That has already been done in the original infected area, but it is now being done in every ward, and it is expected to turn up every concealed case of fever that exists.

STRIKE SITUATION REMAINS THE SAME

Yesterday two detectives and one policeman were on guard at Central avenue station, Superior, where a non-union telegraph operator is employed by the Northern Pacific. These precautions were taken, it is said, not because there was any fear of violence on the part of the strikers, but because of the fact that a baseball game between two Superior nines was to be played in the field in front of the station. A week ago Sunday a game was played there and the crowd made it so very unpleasant for the non-union man that he is said to have been glad when an opportunity presented itself a day or two later allowing him to change positions. The crowd yesterday, however, was quiet, making no demonstrations.

The situation locally appears to remain about the same. While the railroads claim the strike is broken, and that traffic is moving in a normal manner, the telegraphers assert that things are coming their way, and that it will be a matter of only a short time before the roads will have to come to their terms. The strikers say that the statement of Superintendent D. M. Philbin of the Great Northern on the wage question, published in Saturday's Herald, is entirely misleading, and J. H. Hogan, local chairman of the strikers, has prepared quite a lengthy statement setting forth his claims of where Mr. Philbin is in error.

At the present time there are said to be fifty strikers in Superior. All of them, with a number from the outside, held a meeting at German hall in Superior Saturday night. Members of other railway organizations were present and offered their sympathy and encouragement, assuring the strikers of their support. Chairman Hogan advised the men to do nothing rash and to avoid violence. Col. C. H. Stivers, president of the Superior Labor assembly, addressed the strikers on behalf of the assembly. He said the organization he represented was in hearty sympathy with the strikers and that it would support them wherever possible.

"A man is not a scab simply because he is not a member of one of our unions," said Mr. Stivers. "The scab is the man who, for his own personal gain, will undertake to break down the just demands that may be made by labor, and who will accept the position of another worker for that purpose."

"Many portions of Mr. Philbin's statements are absolutely without foundation, and are made in such a way as to mislead the public," said Mr. Hogan. "He cites an instance where one man has the postoffice and makes $10 a month from this source. What bearing has this on the case? Did the railroad company give him the postoffice? Doesn't he do $10 worth of work for this, and if he gets overtime doesn't he work for it?

"Mr. Philbin mentions several small stations wheer the express business, he claims, pays the agent from $20 to $40 a month. The money derived from the express is from $15 to $20 a month at these stations, and never runs as high at $40. He says the stations from Brook Park to Coon Creek earn up to $100 a month. This is incorrect. To my personal knowledge there is not a single

ILOILO WELCOMES TAFT JUNKET

Iloilo, Philippines, Aug. 14.—The United States transport Logan, with Secretary Taft, Miss Roosevelt and party on board, arrived here from Manila this evening. Tugs with the local governor and a large reception committee, consisting of officers of the army and navy and leading citizens with bands playing met the Logan down the bay. The reception committee went on board the transport and formally welcomed the party, the members of which will remain on the vessel until tomorrow morning. A great reception awaits the party here tomorrow.

The viceroys of the Chinese provinces of Kwantung and Kwangsi have cabled Manila inquiring as to when the secretary and party will visit the capitals of their respective provinces and saying that preparations for their suitable reception are underway.

The federal party has accepted Secretary Taft's statement of the attitude of the United States government towards the Philippines as given in his recent speech at Manila and will reconstruct its platform in accordance therewith.

THOUSANDS KICK ABOUT INSURANCE

New York, Aug. 14.—Thousands of letters from persons who are dissatisfied with the treatment they have received from organizations in which they or their relatives are insured are being sent to the legislative committee appointed to investigate the New York insurance companies.

These epistles are being sent to the office of James McKeen, counsel for the committee, and each complaint will be tabulated, with the name of the company criticized, for use in the coming investigation.

Chairman Armstrong of the committee will return to New York today, as will also Mr. McKeen. They will go over the Frick and Hendricks reports on the Equitable Life Assurance society and determine on the method which they may supplement the information contained in those documents.

THE PEACE ENVOYS DISPOSE OF ARTICLE FIRST OF JAPS' TERMS

MISTAKE AT START

Government Began to Dig Canal Without Preparation For Employes.

First Efforts Now Will Be For Care of Workmen.

New York, Aug. 14.—The care of 20,000 employes to work upon the Panama canal was declared by Chairman Shonts of the Panama canal commission, who arrived on the steamer Mexico today from Colon, to be of first importance and to have precedence over the actual work of digging. Chairman Shonts was accompanied on his return by Col. Oswald H. Ernst. Chairman Shonts said:

"We went to Colon with Mr. Stevens, the chief engineer, to see what had been done and what should be done. We found the first thing of importance to be the housing and supplying 20,000 men. When our government first took hold of the canal every effort was directed toward making the dirt fly. I think this was a mistake. Time should have been given towards preparing for the task by making arrangements to take care of the employes.

"It is true, also, that the laborers were not promtly paid and that matters were becoming congested on the railroad and steamers. The people of the isthmus are not forchanded and with the large addition to the population caused by the influx of the canal laborers, the supplies for living were exhausted. This caused the prices to rise and so the laboring classes found that they could not earn enough to support themselves. To offset this subcommissary stations were established to feed the laborers. I made an arrangement with the president of Panama that until prices became normal on the isthmus to continue this system of supplying the laborers. At Colon a large refrigerating plant is now being established, from which all supplies will be issued promptly, so that shortly all American employes will be able to obtain the same fare as they would at home."

MAKERS OF TROLLEY CARS

To Hold Convention With Object of Forming Big Trust.

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—Eight hundred of the heads of the largest firms in the country engaged in the manufacture of trolley cars have engaged rooms in a local hotel for the second week in September for a convention that is looked forward to with deep interest by the business men, as being the possible forerunner of one of the greatest consolidations of recent years. K. C. McQuinlon, superintendent of the Westinghouse Electric company, and F. H. Gale, president of the General Electric company, have each engaged thirty rooms. The National Air Brake company has thirty rooms, and dozens of firms that appear as competitive bidders in making the body of trolley cars are settling down in adjoining apartments, in engaging which demands have been made that they must adjoin those of some other firm. Members of the J. G. Brill company of this city, one of the largest manufacturers of car bodies in the world, decline to discuss consolidation rumors, but it is an open secret that members of this firm have held numerous conferences during the last six months, with representatives of other large car concerns, and that by absorbing works at St. Louis and Elizabethport, a beginning at least has been made toward a general consolidation.

Among other firms that have engaged more than ten rooms for their officers are the Blain-Scholtz company, the Lorain company, the Massachusetts Chemical company, the Consolidated Car Heating company, the Diff Manufacturing company, the Standard Paint company an dthe Louisville Railroad company.

APPEARANCE OF NEGRO

At Saratoga Hotel Caused a Wild Sensation.

Saratoga, Aug. 14.—Booker T. Washington's appearance at dinner yesterday, in the great dining room of the United States hotel, caused a mild sensation among the diners. Mr. Washington was the guest of John Wanamaker, former postmaster general, and acted as escort for Mrs. Barclay Warburton, Mr. Wanamaker's daughter, while Mr. Wanamaker walked to the table with J. R. Roberts.

Mr. Washington preached here three times yesterday. First in the Presbyterian church, then in the Baptist church, and late in the evening in the African Methodist church.

PORTSMOUTH NAVY YARD AND VICINITY.

The above diagram shows the isolated position of the navy yard, and the ease with which privacy is secured. There is a bridge from the island to Kittery, which is in the state of Maine, the navy yard also being on Maine territory, and with this bridge guarded, the only approach to the yard is by water. The envoys have made most of their trips to the yard in automobiles, leaving the Hotel Wentworth, which is their headquarters, going through Portsmouth and across the interstate bridge to Kittery, and thence across the bridge to the navy yard. Some of the secretaries and other attaches go across in launches, which is a much shorter route.

ALARMED FOR THE PRESIDENT'S SAFETY

Railroad Officials Sent His Car By a Round About Way.

New York, Aug. 14.—That Erie railroad officials were alarmed for the safety of President Roosevelt on his way from Chautauqua to Jersey City on Saturday is shown by the fact just made known that the president's car did not come in over the main line. Instead, the Chautauqua special was broken in two at Suffern, N. Y., and the presidential party was brought in by a roundabout way over two small branch roads.

President Roosevelt objected to the unusual precautions taken, but acquiesced when positive orders from President Underwood of Erie were shown him. These orders were issued as a result of a letter received by the Paterson police, which said there was a plot to blow up the president's train near Ridgewood, N. J.

The Chautauqua special was stopped at Suffern early Saturday night. There was a consultation over the telephone, followed by a consultation of railroad men at which it was decided to send the president to Sparkville, a small town on the Hudson, three miles below Nyack, by a little single track road, known as the Piermont branch, and thence into Jersey City on the Northern railroad, a branch having its terminus in Nyack.

President Roosevelt was awakened and told of the change in the schedule, as the officials did not like to take the responsibility without his consent. The president, after discussion, said that he was "in the hands of the Erie" and he would do what the railroad men thought best. Slow time was made over the Piermont branch and the Northern railroad and extra men guarded every part of both roads.

PRODUCTION OF COKE IN 1904

Washington, Aug. 14.—Including the production of coke from by-product retort ovens, which in 1904 amounted to 2,608,29 short tons, the total output of the coke ovens of the United States was last year, according to a report made the United States geological survey by Edward W. aPrker, 23,621,520 short tons, against 25,274,281 short tons in 1903. The decrease in 1904 as compared with the preceding year was 1,652,761 short tons, or 6.54 per cent. The total value of the product declined in much greater proportion from $66,498,664 in 1903 to $46,472,481, or 31 per cent.

"The decline in production was a natural one," says Mr. Parker, "due to a slump in the iron trade during the summer months, which was in turn caused for the most part by the unsettled conditions that usually attend a presidential campaign. And while these conditions also affected prices, the great difference between the values of the production in 1904 and 1903 was due to the abnormally high prices which prevailed in the early part of 1903, when, because of the fuel famine induced by the antracite strike of the preceding year, manufacturers of coke were able to obtain almost any figure they might demand. The average price for all the coke made and sold in 1904 was only 9 cents less than that in 1901, and was higher than that of any year from 1893 to 1899, inclusive."

At the close of 1904 there were under construction 4,430 new ovens, of which 832, or 18.8 per cent, were of the retort or by-product ttype.

The number of completed retort ovens has increased from 1,165 in 1901 to 1,663 in 1902, to 1,956 in 1903, and to 2,910 in 1904. The output from retort ovens has incerased from 1,179,900 tons in 1901, to 1,403,588 tons in 1902, to 1,882,394 tons in 1903 and to 2,608,229 tons in 1904. In 1902, 5.5 per cent of the total output was from by-product ovens; in 1903 the by-product coke was 7.4 per cent of the total; in 1904 by-pr duct coke made up 11 per cent of the total output.

Counting each bank of ovens as a separate establishment the returns for 1904 show a total of 506 establishments, as compared with 500 in 1903. Eighty-two establishments were idle throughout 1904 as compared with forty-one idle plants in 1903. There were also ten new establishments with a total of 1,265 ovens, which were not completed and put in glast at the cvlose of 1904.

Mr. Parker's report is published as an extract from the forthcoming volume "Mineral Resources of the United States, 1904." It may be obtained on application to the director of the United States geological survey, Washington, D. C.

ENGLISH FOOTBALLISTS

Will Visit America In the Coming Fall.

New York, Aug. 14.—On top of the announcement that the tour of the Corinthian Association Football club of England has been declared off comes the news that a picked English team of association players will visit this country in the fall. This team will be under the management of G. H. Murray of London and will include such well-known players as Sir Charles Kirkpatrick, Dr. Roose, Victor Fitchie, P. Hornsfield, the Farnfield brothers, Fred Mills and G. B. Fry.

Sir Edward Cochrane, a keen supporter of the game in England, has donated a silver cup valued at $500 for a game to be played by the visiting team and a picked Canadian eleven. The Metropolitan Association Football league has received an offer for a game to be played in New York on Sunday, Oct. 14. It is the intention of the visiting teams to play games in Quebec, Montreal, Ottawa, Peterboro and Winnipeg, in Canada, and Chicago, Boston, New York and Philadelphia, in the United States.

MAN IDENTIFIES ALLEGED MURDERER.

Detroit, Aug. 14.—Headwaiter Merrifield of the Russell House cafe, today, at the county jail, saw Harry Parker, who, with Harry Johnson, was arrested at Cleveland charged with the murder of Pawnbroker Joseph Moyer, in this city, July 28. Merrifield insisted that Parker, under the name of Harry Soper, worked under him a year ago in the Lenox hotel at Buffalo. He said that Parker, or Soper, had been an Episcopalian divinity student, whose home was at Toronto, and that the prisoner lost his eye about three years ago in a fire cracker accident.

BELIEVED TO REFER TO STATUS OF KOREA

No Intimation Given Out as to the Agreement Reached.

Ideal Weather Puts Plenipotentiaries In Better Humor.

Portsmouth, Aug. 14.—The following official communication was issued at 1:30 o'clock:

"In the morning session of the 14th of August, Article first was disposed of and the envoys proceeded with the discussion of Article 2. The meeting adjourned at 1 o'clock to be resumed at 3 o'clock.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 14.—The sitting of the peace envoys was resumed today under ideal weather conditions. The excessive heat wave which has almost driven the foreigners to distraction during the first days of the conference was broken by yesterday's storm, and after a good night's rest the envoys and the members of their entourage appeared this morning bright and cheerful.

The change in the weather affected their tempers and as they looked out across the rippling bay dotted with green islands and shining white yachts, the universal exclamation was "How charming."

Baron Komura and Mr. Takahira both appeared in frock coats. They entered their motor cars shortly after 9 o'clock, smiling and bowing to the hotel guests, who were already on the veranda to witness their departure. Three minutes later, M. Witte and Baron Rosen came out of the entrance of the annex, where the Russian headquarters are located. There also a little crowd collected. So cool was it, that M. Witte wore a light overcoat.

Both greeted the assemblages of guests which were awaiting them. The secretaries of the respective missions had left a few minutes before the principals, the Japanese in a tallyho, the Russians in a launch.

The conference began at 9:50 o'clock, the discussion being resumed on the conditions relating to the status of Korea, M. Witte continuing to urge that the language of the clause should explicitly show what he contended was the true Japanese intention regarding the hermit kingdom—namely, to make of it a province of Japan.

Among the delegates of the respective sides, who remained behind at the hotel today, it was insisted that each side was sincerely anxious to conclude a treaty of peace, and it is evident if there is to be a rupture, as the best informed believe there will be, each side will maneuver to place the responsibility on the other. The Japanese seem disposed to throw out the intimation that M. Witte is trying to wear out his adversaries and compel them to break off the negotiations. This intimation is indignantly repudiated by the Russians, who contend, as does their principal, that Russia is ready and willing to have the fullest publicity given to the proceedings in order that the world may judge between them.

It will be several days at the present rate of progress before either of the alleged crucial points of difference is reached. The exact order of the conditions is not yet known, but it is practically certain that the demand for the reimbursement of the expenses of the war precedes that for the cession of Sakhalin.

Relentless method is behind the Japanese system in the peace negotiations, as in their military and naval operations. When they formulated their conditions of peace, the origin of the whole struggle between Russia and Japan was kept steadily in view. Korea, which was the real bone of contention, Korea, first the subject of an agreement in 1896; Korea, which formed the basis of the request for the negotiations preceding the war, comes first. Second, it is safe to say, is the evacuation of Manchuria, the continued occupation of which by Russia, Japan claimed, threatened the importance of Korea and the safety of Japan. In support of this claim she took a leaf out of the book of arguments used by Russia in 1895, when she was compelled by Russia, supported by France and Germany, to abandon the Liao Tung peninsula and the Shimonoeseki treaty, on the very ground that the possession of the Port Arthur and Liao Tung threatened Korea's independence.

These are the two main objects designed to "protect the safety of Japan," for which Japan has fought. Then might come logically Port Arthur and the Liao Tung leases, to satisfy the desire for revenge which the Japanese nation felt on account of being despoiled, as they claimed, of the fruits of their victory over China in 1895. The question of the Chinese Eastern railroad might come next. And, then, before the "spoils of war," Japan's bill for the cost of the war.

The only reason why the cession of Sakhalin might precede the bill for the cost of the war is the fact that Japan has always felt that the island belonged to her by right of discovery and conquest, and that she had been compelled, when too weak to defend her rights, to yield it to her adversary.

Preparations for luncheon were begun at the naval stores building shortly before noon, indicating that the session of the peace conference will continue in the afternoon. There is an entire absence of formality in partaking of refreshments in the lunch room, which is across the hall from the general conference room. The plenipotentiaries have several times sat down together at the lunch table while the members of the suites have mingled freely on those occasions. Secretary Peirce joins the lunch party also, as does his assistants in the quarters which the United States government is maintaining in the naval stores building.

It was the original intention that separate lunch rooms should be provided, one for the Japanese and one for the Russians, but from the first the envoys have eaten together at their noon meal.

AGREEMENT TO SECRECY

Was Made In Washington Before Envoys Arrived.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 14.—The Japanese version of the origin and history of the decision of the plenipotentiaries to observe the strictest secrecy regarding the proceedings of the peace conference differs materially from the Russians. From an authoritative source the Associated Press is informed that secrecy was one of the conditions preliminarily arranged between the representatives of the countries at Washington before the plenipotentiaries arrived in this country. One of the chief reasons advanced by Count Cassini for not desiring having the conference held in Washington was that public sentiment in America was hostile to the Russians and that the proceedings could not be kept out of the press. Therefore, he insisted if the conference was to be held in the United States, it was essential that the most rigid secrecy be observed. The matter was the subject of an exchange of views between Count Cassini and Mr. Takahira, conducted through a medium which is not disclosed as a result of which secrecy was agreed upon as a condition precedent to the conference.

"Moreover," said this Japanese authority, "all international precedent and usage favored the rule of secrecy. It would be manifestly improper for a great international issue to be tried in the newspapers day by day and hour by hour. Publicity would necessarily hamper and embarrass the negotiations. In the peace conference at Paris following your Spanish-American war, that rule obtained and it was not until sometime after the conference ad-

THE GULF STREAM DELAYS THE PROGRESS OF OCEAN STEAMER

New York, Aug. 14.—That the gulf stream is active 600 miles east of this city, at a point in the Atlantic ocean, where, according to the best authorities, it should be hardly discernible, and with such a flow as to hold back, to a serious extent, the steamship Moltke, on her Western way, was asserted by Capt. Ruser of that ship, when she arrived at Hoboken yesterday, from Hamburg, Bologne and Moville. This activity was observed on Thursday. On Monday the midday speed reckoning showed 404 knots, the next day 397 knots, then 389 and 382 on the following days, and Capt. Ruser began to seek for the cause. The water suddenly began to grow warmer, and in streaks, and there were high temperatures that were startling. When at noon, on Friday, the day's run was computed, it was found the ship had logged only 367 miles.

"I have never before witnessed the gulf stream active in so high latitude," said Capt. Ruser. "When we felt its full strength we were approximately in north lat. 41 deg., or the same latitude as New York, and in 60 deg. west long.

"I have no theory to account for the current we met. If it keeps up the speed that it had when we crossed it, it will be heard of again on the other side."

BOARD OPENS PAVING BIDS

Contractors Submit Estimates For Improving West Superior St.

Barber Asphalt Paving Company Raises a Technical Point.

Bids for the paving of West Superior street from Eighth avenue to Twenty-sixth avenue west were opened at the meeting of the board of public works this morning.

The contract has not yet been let, and will not be until after the property owners have decided on the kind of pavement they desire. A meeting of the property owners interested in the improvement will be held this afternoon in the office of the board of public works and the selection of a pavement will be made at that time.

There are several propositions to be considered. One plan is to divide the contract and pave Eighth to Fourteenth with one kind of pavement and the western half of the proposed district with another.

One plan is to pave the eastern half, over which there will be the greatest amount of traffic, with sandstone blocks, and the western half with tar macadam. Others favor asphalt for the western half, while all three kinds of pavement are favored by some for the entire job.

Just what pavement will be selected it is impossible to surmise as the property owners appear to be pretty evenly divided on the matter.

All of the bids have been submitted in such a form that any part of the contract may be let to the successful bidder on any kind of pavement.

It was nearly noon before the board completed the work of opening the bids and reading the items, and the clerks did not commence the work of figuring up the totals until shortly before 12 o'clock. The work must be carefully done and it will not be entirely completed much before the property owners hold their meeting.

Charles M. Carpenter, representing the Barber Asphalt Paving company, attempted to have the board throw out all bids but his, on a technical point, this morning. He claimed that all the bids were void and illegal, because the other bidders had not submitted samples of asphalt and bitumen, as called for in the specifications.

The members of the board, however, claimed that the specifications were not a part of the contract, and that the city could accept any kind of asphalt that was passed upon favorably by the city engineer. They did not give Mr. Carpenter much encouragement, claiming that they would not consider such a technical point, which might cost the property owners thousands of dollars, unless compelled to do so. It was finally agreed that the matter would be submitted to the city attorney for an opinion.

At 3 o'clock this afternoon the bids for tar macadam and for asphalt had been totaled, but not yet checked over and verified by the clerks of the board.

According to the unverified figures, Hugh Steele was low on the tar macadam, with a bid of $88,718. With a concrete foundation his bid was $96,516.90.

The next lowest bidder was S. A. Mallette of Geneva, N. Y., who submitted a bid of $93,119.45. He submitted no bid for the pavement with the concrete foundation.

P. McDonnell was third with $97,084.50 and $102,166.50 with the concrete foundation. The other bidders were Sang & Preston, Fitzgerald & Norris and George R. King, all of whom bid under the city engineer's estimate of $111,000.

On the asphalt paving P. McDonnell was the low bidder, his bid being $111,591.10. The only other bidders was the Barber Asphalt Paving company, whose bid amounted to approximately $127,000.

The bid for asphalt is thus $31,000 higher than for the ordinary tar macadam and $15,000 higher than tar macadam with a concrete foundation.

KEEFE IS HERE.

President of Longshoremen's Union Arrives In City.

Daniel J. Keefe of Detroit, president of the International Longshoremen's union, and Mrs. Keefe arrived in the city this morning and registered at the St. Louis.

"This is just a vacation trip," he said, when seen in his room this afternoon. "Everything is working smoothly between the men and the employers, so far as I know, and there is no business connected with my trip to Duluth. I simply came up for a few days' vacation, bringing Mrs. Keefe with me."

LIEUT-GOV. DAVIDSON RENTS MADISON HOUSE.

Madison, Wis. Aug. 14.—Lieutenant Governor Davidson has rented a residence on West Gorham street, the lease to begin early in September, thus indicating that La Follette will shortly resign as governor.

CANADA TO BUILD FORT NEAR KINGSTON.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 14—The Canadian militia council has decided to build a modern fort near Kingston to protect the passageway to the Great Lakes. Powerful fortifications are planned five miles below Quebec to guard the entrance to the St. Lawrence river.

BOUT AT EVELETH.

Two Events End In Early Knock Outs.

Some Duluth followers of the squared circle who have returned recently from Eveleth, tell some stories concerning a bout that was pulled off there Friday night before about 300 sporting men, between Curley Uhlrich of Chicago and Sig Thompson of Minneapolis.

SHEA SECURES ENDORSEMENT

Of Chicago Strike to the Criticism of Many Delegates.

Philadelphia, Aug. 14.—In a manner which was severely criticised by many delegates, President Shea of the International Brotherhood of Teamsters today secured the convention's endorsement of the Chicago strike. President Shea refused to have the roll called on the motion, insisting that a viva voce vote was sufficient. Although there were many nays, President Shea declared the motion carried. The motion to approve Shea's actions and the course pursued during the Chicago strike by the executive board was made by A. J. Dean of Chicago George Innis of Detroit made an address demanding the roll call. Shea ignored the demand and forced an immediate vote, resulting in the endorsement of himself and the executive board.

A resolution was unanimously adopted vesting authority in the general president with the sanction of the executive board to appoint in any city or town where conditions will warrant, some representatives of a local union who shall receive a weekly recompense of not more than $10 for the international organization for the purpose of securing the members. The resolution was drawn up by President Shea.

NINE HURT IN WRECK.

Lincoln, Neb., Aug. 14.—Six passengers and three trainmen were hurt in a Burlington wreck at Utica today. They were brought to Lincoln hospitals. Ban Wright of Hyannis, B. Harner of Lincoln, and Conductor Estelle of Lincoln, are dangerously injured.

OLD INDIAN PIPES.

It need scarcely be told that in the pipes of long ago, each feather appended to the stem represented an enemy slain, says a writer in Outing. If one doubted the record of the war-eagle feathers, the warrior then showed the scalps of the enemy, which were kept as a sort of a sacred proof of his word. Such pipes were used only on occasions of peace and war. Speaking roughly, the best pipes of Eastern tribes were in moulded clay, the best of the Western tribes in slate pipe stone taken from the famous quarry west of the Mississippi. Before the great buffalo and antelope hunts, when herds of game were driven into a pound, or an inclosed area of snares, it was customary for the Indians to waft the incense of propitiation to the spirits of the animals about to be slain, explaining that only the desire for food compelled the Indians to kill and that the hunt was the will of the Master of life or "Master of the Roaring Winds," who would compensate the animals in the next world. The pipes used for this ceremony usually show the figure of a man in conference with the figure of an animal. Others show the figures of Indians with locked hands. This typifies a vow of friendship to be terminated only by death. It was usually between men; but sometimes between a man and a woman, in which case the Platonic bond not only precluded but forbade the very possibility of marriage. After that who shall say that the stolid Indian has no vein of sentiment in his nature?

One of the most curious pipes I have seen I bought from a Cree on a reservation east of the refugee Sioux. It is in the shape of a war hatchet, of a metal which I do not know, though I suspect it is galena mixed with clay, the edge being sharp enough, but the back of the ax being a bowl and the handle a pipe stem. The odd lines in Indian carvings and woven work are not without meaning. Fighting Mistah could read a legend where we saw nothing but bizarre markings. There were the circular lines, hollow down, meaning clouds; the cross, meaning the coming of the priest; the tree, a type of peace with its branches overshadowing the nations; the wavy lines, signifying water; the arrow, war. The ordinary Indian can read a tribal song or chronicle from obscure drawings on the face of a rock, or crazy colored work on a scraped buffalo skin.

WAS SARCASTIC.

The Rev. Milton P. Braman, D.D., for thirty-five years pastor of the First Church of Danvers, retiring in 1891, was widely known as preacher and theologian, says the Boston Herald. He was, however, conservative to the point of bigotry, and eccentric withal. One of his eccentricities was his determined opposition to instrumental music in church, which he seemed to regard as little short of sacrilege. Therefore, it may readily be understood that when the parish introduced a first and second violin and bass as accompaniment to the singing of the choir, the doctor's ire was aroused, and he took no pains to conceal it.

On the Sunday after the introduction of the carnal instruments, when the preacher rose to announce the first hymn, he did it in this wise: "The choir will now please to fiddle and sing to the glory of God the 100th Psalm."

HIS MAIDEN NAME.

When the writer first taught in a Southern college she was much interested in the negro problem, although not connected with a school for the blacks, says the Boston Herald. Meeting a shiny-faced little ragamuffin on the college campus one day, I said: "Well, my little man, what's your name, please?"

The miniature Hottentot pulled off his tattered hat and replied: "Dey calls me Pete, missis, but my maiden name's Moses."

STRUCK HIS FANCY.

The sultan of Turkey recently granted an audience to Senator Bacon of Georgia, and was so charmed with that genial American citizen that he incontinently conferred upon him the Grand Cordon of the Chefecat and gave Mrs. Bacon a lot of porcelain manufactured in the imperial potteries.

OLD, BUT GOOD.

This story, which is perhaps very old to many, really had its origin with Rufus Choate:

A pompous young man hustled into his office, saying, "This Mr. Choate?"

"Yes," responded the distinguished lawyer, with his blandest smile.

"Well, I'm Mr. Wilberforce of Wilberforce & Jones."

"Take a chair, sir," said Mr. Choate.

"My father was cousin of Bishop Wilberforce, and I——"

"Take two chairs," said Mr. Choate.

LICENSES ARRIVE

County Auditor to Soon Begin Issuing Hunting Permits.

The Game Commission Omitted Important Item From the Form.

The St. Louis county nimrods may soon procure their hunting licenses. It was expected that the auditor's office would have begun to issue them by today, but owing to the fact that the state game commission neglected to have printed on the license form one of the most essential things called for under the new game laws, the applicants will have to wait a few days until the auditor can get the proper forms printed.

No provision is made on the license forms for the applicant's affidavit of residence, age, height, etc., a point that is even more essential than last year, for the reason that a person securing a hunting license for big or small game must swear he or she is a resident, not only of the state, but also of the county.

The new license forms are much different than any which have before been received, though not, perhaps, any larger in size, they still have the appearance of a blanket ballot at a municipal election, and will make a comfortable pocketful for the person possessing one of them.

Attached to the licenses this year are five coupons for shipping purposes. One is for moose, two for deer, and two for game birds. These shipping coupons permit the shipping of moose, deer, or fifty birds from any point within the state to any other point within the state.

Although there have been a number of applications made at the aditor's office for licenses, none have yet been issued. It is expected when the affidavits are ready there will be quite a rush of people for hunting licenses. Last season there were days that the auditor's office was crowded with persons after hunting licenses. So much clerical work is connected with the making out of proper forms that the process is necessarily a slow one.

In issuing a license this year the auditor or his deputy will have, in addition to filling out the license, to write the number of the license thirteen times, the name of the county seventeen times and the applicant's description four times. When it is remembered that the county usually issues from 2,500 to 3,000 hunting licenses in a year, some idea can be had of the clerical work entailed.

The licenses cost $1, are non-transferable and expire Dec. 31, 1905. There must be a personal application for every license issued. This means that a person residing away from Duluth cannot procure a license by proxy or through the mails. He must present himself in person to "be sized up" by the auditor or deputy when the description is written. This description includes height, weight, color of the hair and eyes, complexion and any distinctive marks.

Quite a number of people do not yet understand that license to hunt both big and small game is included in the one form issued by the county auditor. To hunt birds in this county a person does not need a license, but the resident of one county must have a license if he desires to hunt birds in another county of this state. Then, too, no birds can be shipped, even within the county where they were shot, without the shipping coupon found on a hunting license.

VICTIM OF JOKERS.

Duluth Young Man Does Carrying Stunt.

Several hours walk over a sandy road with a hot sun pouring down and with a heavy packsack is not supposed to put a man in a particularly happy frame of mind when he finds himself the victim of a practical joke, but a party of Duluth young men who returned from a short fishing trip and outing on the St. Croix river at Gordon are telling a story on one of their number that indicates that he has a decidedly even temper.

The party comprised of Gilbert McCarthy, Claude H. Hare, A. B. Loud and W. S. Taylor had excellent sport on the river and made a big catch of pike, pickerel and black bass. When it came to make a trip of several miles to the railroad station to get a train to Duluth, it was suggested that the members of the party take turns in carrying the big pack containing the fish. It fell to Mr. Hare's lot to carry the sack for the first half hour, which he did gamely, without a complaint, although it seemed to weigh about sixty pounds. When the second member of the party picked up the sack for his half hour stunt he caused a look of surprise and chagrin on Mr. Hare's countenance by first throwing from the contents several large stones which would weigh about twenty-five pounds. The subject of fishing trips and packsacks is a particularly tender one at the Hare domicile just at present.

VOTE FOR DISSOLUTION PRACTICALLY UNANIMOUS.

Christiania, Aug. 14.—The returns from the national referendum on the dissolution of the union show that out of 321,358 votes cast, only 161 are against the dissolution. The storthing has been summoned to meet Aug. 21 to take the next step toward the repeal of the act of union in agreement with Sweden.

ADVICE TO ENVOYS

Reaches Them From All Parts of the World.

Many Letters Contain Arguments For Arranging Peace.

Portsmouth, Aug. 14.—The peace envoys have been fairly deluged with mail from all parts of the United States, and now letters are beginning to arrive from the other hemisphere. Thousands of letters reach them each day. Most of them are addressed to the chiefs of the missions, Baron Komura and M. Witte. They are of every description, friendly tenders of advice regarding the negotiations, requests for autographs and photographs, words of welcome, words of promise, advertisements and invitations to visit various cities of the United States. Some of them contain elaborate arguments from the partisans of each side in support of the convictions of the writers. Others offer easy solutions of the problems the envoys have come here to try to solve, but the majority, so far as the negotiations are concerned, only express the hopes of the world for peace. Then there are the usual crank letters—some of them threatening in tone.

M. Witte got a letter yesterday which made him laugh heartily. It was dated from a little town in Indiana, and in it the writer asked this question: "If you did not come here prepared to pay Japan an indemnity, and give her Sakhalin, what did you come for? You knew you would have to do it."

Baron Rosen is the only one who mingles freely with the hotel guests, although he knows few of them. The ambassador selects a cool corner on the veranda as soon as the newspapers come in and unless there is some official business to attend to, he sits there by the hour, carefully scanning the papers and marking here and there a paragraph which attracts his attention.

Article one as agreed to by the envoys at the morning session was not in the language submitted by the Japanese. It had been modified to nearer meet the wishes of the Russian envoys, but to what extent cannot be definitely stated. M. Witte had insisted that Japan's purpose was to make a dependency of Korea and he wanted the language of the article to conform to Japan's real intentions. M. Witte was prepared from the beginning to accept the article, his only object being as to the form. He wanted the language at least to show that Japan intended to establish a protectorate over Korea.

The peace conference resumed its session at 3 o'clock. None of the envoys left the building during the luncheon recess. A secretary from each mission made the trip from the Wentworth and returned before the second session began.

COL. SYMONS VISITS CITY

Is Prominent Government Engineer on President's Staff.

Col. Thomas W. Symons of Washington, D. C., a prominent government engineering officer, accompanied by Mrs. Symons, were among the passengers arriving on the Juniata this morning, and this afternoon are guests of Maj. Charles L. Potter, on the government steam launch Vidette, for a sight-seeing trip about the local harbor. Col. Symons was formerly engineer in charge of the public buildings and grounds at Washington, the president's receptions, and numerous memorial statute commissions. By special act of congress, in April, 1904, at the request of the state of New York, he was granted leave of absence and was detailed to have supervision of the Erie canal construction. Before his appointment to the presidents' staff Col. Symons was in charge of the government works at the Buffalo harbor, and was thoroughly familiar with the Erie canal project.

WOULD SETTLE.

Southern Pacific Would Pay Kentucky $48,000 Taxes.

San Francisco, Aug. 14.—The Examiner says today: Since the arrival of President Harriman of the Southern Pacific company in this city it has become known that he has offered the Kentucky authorities $48,000 to settle the tax dispute of the company with that state and with Jefferson county, in which Louisville is situated and in which the company maintains an office. The claim of the state and county is for unpaid taxes amounting to $11,857,902 for the years between 1900 and 1905 inclusive.

Mr. Harriman claims that all taxes up to two years ago were paid to the then state auditor and that the present auditor, A. J. Bipot, is demanding taxes dating back into a previous regime.

THOSE WHO HAVE DIED

St. Paul, Minn., Aug. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Edward H. C. Taylor, for twenty years auditor of freight receipts of the Northern Pacific, died almost instantly yesterday afternoon while seated in an easy chair at his home. Death was due to valvular disease of the heart. Mr. Taylor was born in New York state sixty-five years ago. He went into the service of the Northern Pacific railway on the Pacific Coast while still a young man. He was promoted frequently, and twenty years ago was appointed auditor of freight receipts at St. Paul.

La Crosse, Aug. 14.—C. L. Jenks, a pioneer Wisconsin lumberman is dead at his home here, aged 65. He has been one of the most extensive lumber operators on the Mississippi and its tributaris in Wisconsin and Minnesota since 1850 when he first began business here. He leaves a large fortune.

Madison, Wis., Aug. 14.—Rev. C. H. Wilke, for thirty years pastor of the German-Lutheran church at Madison, and for twelve years president of the Wisconsin synod, died today of heart trouble. He was born in Germany sixty years ago.

A DEMONSTRATION

Made By the Japs Against Russian Troops.

Godzyadani, Manchuria, Aug. 12.—(Delayed.)—The Japanese began to advance against the Russians at Yangda pass and at Soumosi in the Outsigou district at 9:30 in the morning. Their forces were not very numerous, there being only two battalions in each column. The movement had every appearance of a demonstration. The Russians fell back in good order. The Chinese in this vicinity are again significantly leaving for the southward.

Godzyadani, Manchuria, Aug. 13.—(Delayed.)—The Japanese advance of yesterday proved to be only a demonstration. After an exchange of rifle fire between the outposts the Japanese column retired.

COUSINS OF PRESIDENT

Seriously Injured In a Runaway Accident.

Salville, L. I., Aug. 14.—Gladys and Eugenie Roosevelt, cousins of President Roosevelt, were injured in a runaway here today, Gladys probably fatally. The girls are daughters of John E. Roosevelt, an uncle of the president, Gladys being 16 years old and Eugenie 18.

Both are accustomed to handle spirited horses, but during their daily drive today their horses, drawing a high cart, ran away and struck the vehicle against a tree. Gladys, who drove the horse, was thrown against the tree head first and was picked up unconscious. Physicians who worked over her for an hour were unable to revive her and believe her skull is fractured.

IS DRIVEN NORTH

C. L. Gilham Forsakes New Orleans In Favor of Duluth.

Day Bros. Lumber Company Establish Headquarters Here.

G. L. Gilham, vice president of the Day Bros.' Lumber company, which, up to two years ago had its head offices in Duluth, arrived in the city today from New Orleans, and, with his son, H. L. Gilham, registered at the McKay hotel. They were driven from the Southern city by the yellow fever epidemic. They will remain in Duluth until Dec. 1, conducting the business of the company, which has had its offices in New Orleans since leaving Minnesota, from here. Day Bros. are extensively interested in Southern timber just now.

"The quarantine at New Orleans is not nearly so strict as the newspapers would leave one to believe," said Mr. Gilham, in speaking of the fever situation in the Louisiana city. "We left the town a week ago last Saturday, Aug. 5, and had no difficulty whatever in getting out and coming north. The quarantine was not as strict then as it was the week before, but at no time since the yellow fever developed has it been impossible for the citizens to get out of the place. We did not even have to pass through a physician's hands. We boarded special screen cars in the city and were conveyed seven miles before the regular sleeping cars were reachd, then we were transfrred to thm and came on north without any hindrance. The sleepers are not run into the city proper.

"Hundreds of people have left and are leaving New Orleans and making their way north, east and west. As fast as business shapes itself so that it can be left those who are able to do so desert the city. Many well-to-do persons are forced to remain in New Orleans owing to the press of business, but they would get out in a minute if there were a chance for them to do so. Residents of the city are pretty well scattered through the North and East.

"Texas has taken more precautions against letting in people from the infected city than has any other state. A person is not even allowed to pass through the state on his way to California without first remaining in the detention hospital at the state line for a period of six days.

"There is no getting around the fact that New Orleans is a dirty city. It is probably the most filthy of any of our American cities. These epidemics which occur every seven or ten years, start from afflicted passengers from the South, who come in on ocean vessels. As far as the climate of New Orleans is concerned, I like it very well. The nights are cool, and there is always a breeze blowing. The days are pretty hot in summer time, but with the assistance of the shade and breeze a person may keep fairly comfortable. This does not apply to guests in the big brick hotels, which heat up like ovens and retain the heat over night, roasting the occupants while the people in smaller buildings are comfortable.

"The French quarters, below Canal street, is the dirtiest section of the city. All kinds of filth is to be seen lying around there. A person does not necessarily have to be able to see to be aware of its presence, either. Up to the present time there has been practically no sewer system, because New Orleans is on such low ground. Everything in the nature of sewage has been allowed to run off in surface ditches, dug alongside of the sidewalks, much to the disgust of the visitors to the town. In the better residence portions of New Orleans these gutters were frequently flushed with city water, but these precautions were not taken in the cheaper part of the town.

"But an expensive sewer system, to cost $18,000,000, is now in the course of construction. Six years are required to complete the contract. Three of these have already passed. The city is pretty well covered with this new ditch work ,and the digging through the various layers of filth gives rise to numerous offensive odors.

"New Orleans is enjoying, or was enjoying, quite a boom. Up to the time the epidemic started there was a lot of building going on. Property values had more than doubled in a single year. The fever will prove a hard blow to the town."

Speaking of timber, Mr. Gilham said there was still a large amount of it left through the South, and of good quality, but that it has now practically all of it passed into the control of large corporations. Logging in the South is not difficult, he said, except for the cypress, which grows in regions where it is not easily gotten at.

TWO MORE CAUGHT.

Alleged Blind Piggers From Aurora Are Arrested.

Further results of County Attorney McClintock's raid on the alleged blind-piggers on the range, were noticeable in the municipal court this morning, when Mary Zgonz and Mrs. Jane Fauche of Aurora were arraigned in the municipal court this mornihg on the charge of selling liquor without a license. They were held to the grand jury, their bail being fixed at $50 cash.

These two additions make a total of eight prisoners who are waiting trial for the same offense.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

West Vulcan Miner Instantly Killed By Fall of Rocks.

Norway—While at work in the West Vulcan mine, near Norway, John Hicks, a Cornishman, aged 29 years, was instantly crushed to death by the sudden fall of a ledge of ore. His working partner, Edward Anderson, was slightly hurt. Hicks came to this country a few months ago from Cornwall, where his wife and two children survive.

Menominee—Sheriff Packer discovered Sven Peterson dead in his cell at the Menominee county jail, he having choked himself to death by twisting a heavy cord around his neck. Peterson was night watchman at the Spies sawmill and a few hours previous to killing himself had attempted to make away with Nick Becker, the engineer at the mill, firing two shots at him from a revolver and then grappling with him in a hand to hand struggle. When other employes of the mill interfered Peterson ran out on a dock, plunged into the bay and tried to drown himself. He was quickly rescued and taken to the county jail, where, as noted, he was shortly successful in ending his life.

Anton Arnold, who resides about thirteen miles from Menominee, up the bay shore in the town of Ingallston, was arraigned in Judge Van Den Berg's court on a charge of assault and battery preferred by his wife, who alleged that her husband had struck her. The man was found guilty and sentenced to ninety days in the county jail. The woman stated that her husband was lazy and shiftless and that he did not properly support the family. On the occasion of the recent trouble she stated that while she was at work around the house the cow, which was tied out in the yard, became entangled in its hitching rope. She called to her husband to loosen it, but he flew into a passion and struck her in the face.

Sagola—E. L. Graham, the missing cashier of the Sagola Lumber company, is ill in a hospital in the East, and is in a very serious condition. He is reported to be improving slowly, however, and as soon as he is able to make the journey he will return to Sagola. Mrs. E. L. Graham, wife of the cashier, was in Iron Mountain, and said that at a recent auditing of the books, held at Sagola, it was discovered that Mr. Graham was not short in his accounts, but that because of overwork his mind became unbalanced, and that is the reason why he left Sagola so mysteriously.

Iron Mountain—John Forestrom died at St. George's hospital, Iron Mountain, as the result of injuries received at Channing. Forestrom was employed on the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway as a carpenter. He had worked at the Iron Mountain round house, and went up to Channing to do some work there. When through, in company with two other carpenters, he boarded the caboose of an ore train, expecting to return to Escanaba. He was standing on the platform, and the train was switching about. The swith engine backed several cars up against the caboose and smashed the platform. Forestrom was caught between the cars and the caboose and both of his legs were crushed off. He was picked up by his fellow workmen and the crew and brought to Iron Mountain. While he was too weak to make a statement, it was learned that he was 30 years of age and a resident of Galveston, Texas, single, and has no relatives in this country.

PUBLIC IS AROUSED.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 546 St. Clair Ave., Columbus, O., writes: "For several months, I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak, from useless doctors' drugs, that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed at all druggists; price 50c.

GRILLS ROCKEFELLER.

La Follette Says Oil King Poisons Life of Business.

Dixon, Ill., Aug. 14.—Talking in his shirtsleeves and without a collar because of the intense heat, Governor La Follette of Wisconsin addressed 6,000 people at the Rock River assembly Saturday. His subject was representative government, and the most of his time was spent on the subject of railroad rates, Standard Oil and corrupt government.

Referring to Rockefeller he said in part: "John D. Rockefeller has done more than all the men in the history of the country to poison the life of our business and destroy business integrity. He it was who first taught the railroads the trick of the rebate system."

TEMERAIRE WINS THE SECOND RACE.

Charlotte, N. Y., Aug. 14.—Today's yacht race for the Canada cup, between the Canadian challenger Temeraire and Iroquois, the American defender, started at 11 o'clock in a strong breeze and rough sea. The course was four miles to windward and return twice around, with a time limit of five and one-half hours.

At 11:45 the Temeraire turned the outer stake boat. The Iroquois followed at 11:48. The Temeraire appeared to have a lead of a quarter to a half a mile and was footing fast. The wind was blowing about twenty miles an hour and freshening.

At 12:09½ Temeraire turned the home mark and started on the starboard tack for her second beat to windward. The Iroquois turned at 12:12:15.

The Temeraire won the race, finishing at 1:20. Iroquois crossed the line at 1:25:15.

IN FAVOR OF DISSOLUTION

Norway's Vote Shows Great Majority Against Union With Sweden.

Christiania, Aug. 14.—The Norwegian people in a referendum vote pronounced in favor of the dissolution of the union with Sweden with remarkable though not unexpected unanimity. Of the 450,000 voters, 320,000 cast ballots.

While the full results are not known returns showed that about one person in 3,000 voted against the dissolution. The difference between the total number of votes and the number of votes cast is attributable to absentees, such as sailors abroad and others who are out of the country.

The weather was favorable and there were scenes of the greatest enthusiasm everywhere. Thousands of women, who did not have the right of franchise, signed petitions in the streets endorsing the dissolution. In Christiania and other cities, the total population turned out, every one wearing long streamers of the national colors and pitcures of Premier Michelsen.

A member of the cabinet said to the Associated Press:

"The result surpasses the most sanguine expectations. The next official steps will be taken after the storthing meets on Aug. 21, when the result of the plebiscite will be communicated to Sweden, through the Swedish cabinet and the riksdag. The storthing will repeat the request that the riksdag declare the riksakt inoperative and the union dissolved.

"The strothing will also express a willingness to negotiate concerning the details of the dissolution. It is the earnest desire of Norway to conclude the dissolution amicably. Norway will never retract, but everything will be done to meet the wishes of Sweden in other directions. If peace depends upon abolishing the forts they will be abolished. Norway must remain a monarchy; the people do not desire a republic."

PATTERN MAKERS MEET AT PITTSBURG.

Pittsburg, Aug. 14.—The eleventh convention of the Pattern Makers' League of North America, convened here today in the St. Charles hotel with 100 delegates from all sections of North America in attendance. President James Wilson of New York addressed the convention today. This is the first meeting since the convention held in Chicago in 1902, when it was decided to abolish holding conventions and transact business by the referendum system. The arrangement was a failure.

One of the most important questions to be considered is that of raising the weekly dues from 25 to 50 cents. The convention will be in session all week.

INVITE MANY.

Modern Samaritans Plan Good Time at Festival.

Invitations are being sent broadcast over the state to the councils in the Modern Samaritan organization to attend the big festival and jubilee, to be held in this city, Aug. 24, under the auspices of the three local councils, Alpha, Beta and West Duluth. A joint committee is working on the program, and many prizes will be offered in various events. One of the most interesting of the athletic events is likely to be the tug-of-war, in which various councils will contest. A handsome trophy will be provided for the team winning it three times. Each team is to pull against every other team represented. Another of the features will be a buckboard ride on the boulevard.

A Brilliant Singer.

The musical critic of the Minneapolis Times said of Mme. Hellstrom, who will appear at the Lyceum tomorrow evening: "Mme. Hellstrom has a wonderful voice. It is one of rare individuality, one to which the critic does not at once give his approbation. It is so different from voices of other great singers that a separate mood must be found in which to give one's self over to a full enjoyment of its rare qualities. There is a velvetiness to all her tones that is perhaps the greatest technical charm of her singing. There is to her entire register an evenness of tone that is remarkable. All her tones have the same velvety quality, and there are no breaks in her register.

"But it was her high notes that make her voice really remarkable. There is never a hint of screaming, yet Mms. Hellstrom finds no difficulty in obtaining either the softest pianissimo effect o ra brilliant tone on the highest notes."

Superior Free Street Fair.

A large crowd was at the Great Northern depot last night, at Superior, to meet the Ferari Bros.' carnival train. The train was immediately unloaded and all the wagons were taken to their respective locations ,the same reaching from Sixth street to Fourteenth on Tower avenue. It is undoubtedly the largest carnival company that ever visited the Head of the Lakes. Besides the large number of paid shows there are a number of free acts of a sensational order. Superior extends an invitation to the people of Duluth to join them in their celebration and they have made every day a Duluth day. The fair opens tonight at 7:30 o'clock.

LARGE DEAL IS REPORTED

John McAlpine and Henry Turrish the Selling Parties.

John McAlpine and Henry Turrish of this city are reported to have sold their St. Louis county pine timber holdings, north of Pelican lake, for $1,700,000. The deal is said to include what is known as the White and Friant timber, Mr. McAlpine owning a half interest in part and Mr. Turrish owning and controlling the remainder.

There has been some speculation as to who are the purchasers in the reputed deal. William O'Brien and W. H. Cook have denied having any connection with the transaction, although the fact that the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake road passes through the sections where the timber is located and the railroad interests would be supposed to have picked up the stumpage that is on the market.

Some rumors have it that the Weyerhaeusers have bought the pine. Neither Mr. McAlpine or Mr. Turrish are in the city, so that the report of the deal is not yet confirmed.

An especially interesting feature of the races at the Yacht club Saturday afternoon was the condition of the sailing race, that each boat was to carry a woman, as mascot or Jonah could not, of course, be determined until the finish of the race, and then it was a lovely courtesy for the winning boat to call their fair passenger the mascot, and likewise she provided a a timeworn excuse for the less successful crews, but one which has satisfied man throughout the ages, "It was the women's fault."

There has been little boating by the women of the city beyond a little paddling and rowing, but to the devotees of the sport the entering wedge has been entered, and perhaps by next year trig, taut and graceful boats will be sailed around the bay by trig, taut and graceful maids. There is heaps to learn in sailing, but if the men are going to sail, few women will be content to be simply and entirely a passenger, but will gradually, or maybe suddenly, acquire the art of managing a boat. After she has learned which is port and which is starboard, where windward is and leeward also, and that to "port some" is to do exactly what you wouldn't expect to; which side of a boat carries a red light and which the green, has straightened out confusing terms, and ropes and things that must be managed just so, she realizes confidently that she herself is not nearly so hard to understand and manage, in spite of literary gentlemen galore who insist that a woman and a boat are alike, hard to understand, but she would not for the world pass the hunch along. If man can be bamboozled into believing that one is half so interesting and confusing as a sailing boat, well, much is accomplished with small effort.

The affair at the Yacht club Saturday was one of the most delightful of the past week. In addition to the races the club observed the formal opening of the club, and in the evening a parade of boats on the water, and an informal dance at the club house made upone of the most charming of social events.

Calumet Baking Powder

A wonderful powder of rare merit and unrivaled strength.

AS IT WAS DECREED

By Lola V. Hays.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

He had been watching her for nearly half an hour as she sat beneath the perfumed, tossing purple lilacs. Her face was upturned, a rapt expression rested in her wide blue eyes. Her thoughts seemed to be seeking beyond the skies. He muttered impatiently as a procession of perambulators propelled by a chattering group of nurse maids passed between them. The next instant he caught her in his arms as she sank forward unconscious.

"Case of starvation," said the physician tersely. "Go and get a bowl of broth." They had carried her into one of the small park pavilions and she lay like a broken lily, her blue silken draperies trailing about her, her golden hair about her face.

Halley ran for the soup and held her frail body in his arms while the physician fed her, cautiously, small spoonfuls. Her lips opened gratefully for the food, and after a while she opened her eyes languidly. With a quiet wonder she gazed from the doctor to Halley, mutely asking a question.

"You fainted, ma'am," said the doctor bluntly.

"Yes? I wonder why—" her voice was low and sweet.

Her eyes fell on the bowl.

"What was in that?" she whispered, her eyes staring affrighted.

"Beef soup— Confound it, she's gone again," for she had given a convulsive gasp and fainted.

"All for nothing," she gasped, as she came back to life again, "all for nothing."

It was exactly three weeks later that he sat beside her in the parlor of her home, gazing deep into her beautiful eyes, love and reproach mingled in his expression.

"And you don't love me?" he cried, in unbelief.

"No, it is not that," she said, turning her eyes upward to the stars, winking bravely upon his suit, "I may not love you. My fate is, has been and will be again."

He gazed into the beautiful face, intent upon the stars, in puzzled amazement. She had been a source of bewilderment to him since the day in the park, when he had picked her up, half starved, taken her home and discovered that she was an heiress. The bewilderment had not been so deep but that through it had struggled, rapidly, the certainty that he was hopelessly in love with her.

"What do you mean, Lilith, with your 'is, was, and will be?'" he cried, forgetting to remove his arm from her slender waist. "I believe, I know that you love me." Almost roughly he turned her face from the stars toward him.

"Ah, Theodore, love, earthly love, is not for me. Long, long ago, when the world was young, my love story begun. Lilith the first lived, loved and died. Born again in another century, she again lived her little life, her little dream of love, and so on, on through the ages, she has ever suffered the loss of her loved one. He has been sacrificed, martyred, assassinated. Ever new, perennial has that love been born again in the cycles of the past. Now I, I, Lilith, doughter of the gods, live and love again."

"And where," he said fiercely, "is this ancient lover? I'd like an introduction to him."

"As yet I know not," she said dreamily. "But he will come, come soon," clasping her hands in ecstacy.

"I would think him pretty well done up by this time, sweetheart," he said coaxingly, drawing her closer. "I honestly don't believe there will be enough left of him to keep another date. Forget him and come to me."

"No, no," she cried tragically, "he will come, and soon. For this I have purified my body by fasting. I have felt my soul float high, high above the world of flesh, and have almost touched the infinite."

"No joke," he muttered savagely, sotto voce, "and almost failed to come back again."

"That day—the day I met you in the park—I had almost achieved the heights, and you, you, Theodore, with that horrible bowl of broth, destroyed weeks of preparation and brought me back to the grovelling earth again."

"Sweetheart," he said masterfully, "come to me. Why fool your precious life away waiting for an assassinated shape of a man, when I, I, full of life and love, hold out my arms to you," attempting to draw her entirely into their clasp.

"Theodore," she sighed softly, drawing away from him, "he has loved me for centuries. "No, no," vehemently, "say no more. It is written. It is fate. I wait, I wait," she cried, rising in an ecstacy of passion, throwing her arms to the silent stars. "I wait longingly, lovingly for Tsistenes."

"And is that his name?" he began aggressively, then a great light flooded his worried brain. Swiftly he turned toward her, in dulcet tones he cried:

Drawing away from him in alarm, she half pushed him away.

"Theodore," she faltered, "what is the matter—"

"I am Tsistenes," he cried, sinking at her feet.

"Why, your name is Theodore," she said, pitifully. Was he gone mad with love?

"My middle name is Tsistenes," he declared, "dearest, didst thou not know it?"

"I thought your middle name was Thomas," she said crisply.

"Thomas. No."

"But you said so."

"Only, dearest, because I did not wish to reveal my name until I met my soirit bride."

"But you wanted to marry me, and did not know that I was anything to you," she said, coldly drawing away.

"Did not my heart speak?"

"Yes, and if I had not been your soirit bride, it would have spoken again to some one else."

"Never," he cried fervently; "it has been, it is, it could not be otherwise."

"It is very strange," she said critically, "that all this developed so suddenly."

"Ah, my dearest, my soul had not yet risen to the blue ether to which you have attained."

She burst into wild weeping.

"And I was starving myself, purifying myself to meet the first, the last, the lover of eternity, and you say that you are that lover and you have made no effort to uplift yourself to make ready for that meeting.

He sprang to his feet and caught her to his breast.

"I'll starve myself to death, if it will please you, my Lilith," he cried dramatically, "if you want to wait another century for me, but it looks a little foolish when we are here and all right and might as well fill out another chapter in the legend."

"The legend. Ah, Theodore," she sighed, "Theodore, are you telling me the truth? Are you my Tsistenes?"

"I swear it," he cried, pointing to the twinkling stars. "Dearest," coaxingly, "are you so very much disappointed?"

"No-o," she confessed, hiding her head upon his breast, "for since I met you, I—I rather fancied he would resemble you, Tsistenes—or—or—Thomas."

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Former Fargo Official Arrested For Abandoning His Children.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Wahpeton—A. E. Sunderhauf, formerly register of the Fargo land office, is in jail here charged with abandoning his six minor children. Four years ago he left the children in Lidgerwood and went to New York, and it is claimed they have heard nothing from him since that time. His father-in-law, Adolph Bessie, brought the children to this city and began a search for their father. About two weeks ago Sunderhauf was located in New York city, and Monday he was arrested by Sheriff Robbins of this county, who was sent from here armed with requisition papers. The sheriff arrived here with him Friday night. The crime for which Sunderhauf is charged is a penitentiary offense, the extreme penalty being one year and six months and a fine of $500 for each offense. As he has six children it will likely go hard with him if the charge is proven.

Ellendale—W. D. Potter of Dickey county is milking thirty-five cows this summer, and his creamery checks average $125 a month.

Oakes—Marshal Hyatt was fined $10 and costs for shooting a dog which he caught in his yard, and which had slain two of his chickens. The trial was a spirited one, but the dog was of high pedigree and the officer had to pay.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Sisseton—All fears of the prisoner being lynched ended when Zake Flute, the Indian murderer, made a statement regarding the shooting of two well-known citizens of this city on Thursday.

"Two white men, Mr. Colby and Ed Peterson of Sisseton, S. D., collectors, came to my house about 6 p. m.," he said, "to take a mortgage on my property. A son of mine, 12 years old, got mixed up with the collectors, when I ran in the house and came out with a shotgun. As I came out Colby shot at me and missed. I shot at Colby, killing him. Peterson started to run away and I jumped into the collector's buggy and caught him, and shot him three times, killing him also.

"I then went into Peever and gave myself up."

Yankton—Miss Christine Summers, while visiting the cement works, went too close to a shaft and in a second her waist had wrapped around the whirling bit of steel and she was drawn into the machinery. The engineer saw the danger at once and shut down promptly. Her arm and chest were badly lacerated.

Elk Point—Tom Gordon, alias Charles Grey, arrested a month ago for highway robbery, made a desperate attempt to break jail early today. In some way he obtained a file and a caseknife and, making a rough saw, he sawed a 6x9 hole through two floors into the clerk's office above, getting his head and one arm through. There he stuck and could get neither up nor down, and the jailer had to be called to release him. He is now kept in the cage, in spite of the hot weather.

Aberdeen—Mrs. Augustus Strutz, a pioneer resident of Dickey county, N. D., died at her home after a lingering illness, aged 44. She went to Dickey county with her husband in 1885. She was the mother of nine children.

Deadwood—Mrs. James Tifton of Dento, Texas, died on the incoming Burlington train. She was accompanied by her three children, a boy of 14, and two girls, both younger, and was on her way to Palouse, Wash., where she expected to meet her husband.

Lead—Mrs. R. M. Merrill, who has been in charge of Mrs. George Hearst's free kindergarten in this city for three years, has resigned and will be succeeded immediately by Miss Marie Gorum of Chicago.

Spearfish—The Black Hills Traction company has advertised for sealed proposals for the construction of five and a half miles of canal nine miles from this city. This will include the construction of 200 cubic yards of dry stone culvert.

EXCHANGE OF TEACHERS

Talked Over By Kaiser and American Educators.

Kassel, Prussia, Aug. 14.—The audience of Emperor William held for President Nicholas Murray Butler and Dean Burgess of Columbia university, New York city, at the castle of Wilhelmhoe, Saturday, lasted for two hours, and was concerned mainly with the subject of the interchange of professors between American and German universities. Baron Speck Von Sternberg, the German ambassador to the United States, arranged the audience through the foreign office. Although President Butler and Prof. Burgess represented Columbia alone, the audience covered generally the universities of the United States. It was agreed that it were better that any professors who know German well should lecture in German universities, and in that way German professors knowing English should lecture in American universities. No decisions, however, were arrived at.

Dr. Studt, Prussian minister of ecclesiastical affairs, instruction and medical affairs, will visit the emperor at Wilhelmshoe, and President Butler and Dean Burgess at Kassel this week to continue the consideration of the matter. The emperor, Dean Burgess says, was most kind, and surprised them by his frequent use of every day American expressions.

When Physicians Fail
Cooper's New Discovery Cures.

After being told by her physicians that an operation would be necessary to effect a cure in her case,

THE COOPER MEDICINE CO.:

Gentlemen—For nine years I have been afflicted with kidney and stomach trouble. I have treated with some of the best physicians in my home city, who after consultation, advised me that an operation would be necessary to remove the cause of my trouble.

My stomach was hard and bloated, with a continual heavy feeling. I had no appetite and could not digest what little I did eat.

I had a continuous headache, which at times nearly drove me insane. After taking one bottle of Cooper's New Discovery my appetite has returned and I can eat a good meal with satisfaction. My stomach is in fine condition, the bloating and heaviness has disappeared, and I have not had the headache since I began taking the medicine.

I think Cooper's New Discovery the greatest medicine I ever used, and I will verify this statement to any one who calls at my home.

(Signed) MRS. A. M. HUNT,
No. 1179 Teutonia Avenue, Milwaukee, Wis.

And yet there are people who go on suffering for years because of doubt and prejudice.

If you are tired of sickness, tired of paying doctors' bills, tired of the old method of treating disease, and really wish to get well quick and at small cost, try Cooper's New Discovery.

Cooper's New Discovery costs $1.00 per bottle, three for $2.50, six for $5.00. Cooper's Quick Relief, the assistant remedy, costs 50c per bottle. Buy from our agent, or where we have no agent send the price of the medicine you wish direct to the Cooper Medicine Co., Dayton, Ohio, and the medicine will be forwarded to you, charges prepaid.

NEPOTISM GRAFT

Is of the Most Common Kind In Washington.

President Prepares to Chasten Those Who Practice It.

FROM THE HERALD WASHINGTON BUREAU.

Sons of great men all remind us
We may make our lives sublime,
And with father's push behind us
We can get there every time.

Washington, Aug. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The next role assayed by the "Big Stick" will be to chasten those in high official place who have been practicing nepotism.

One phase of the recent "graft" disclosures in the agricultural department was that Secretary Wilson had retained in the position of private secretary, for nine years, his son, Jasper Wilson, and that last summer he sent the latter on a mission to Alaska, ostensibly to investigate certain alleged violations of the game laws, but when one considers that it was a delightful summer trip, at government expense, and that Jasper was enabled thereby to give personal attention to a private investment in mining property, all the while drawing his salary as private secretary for duties supposed to be performed in Washington, the conclusion is inevitable that Father Wilson was good to son Jasper. The expense of young Wilson's jaunt was about $600, which the government paid.

Nepotism although a petty species of "grafting" is the commonest kind in Washington. It has grown to be something at once ridiculous and deplorable. President Roosevelt is going to have his Keep investigating committee look into it and see if the Big Stick cannot be brought into play. In every branch of the government service the sons, daughters and other relatives of men influential in official life may be found safely ensconced in paying jobs. In some instances as many as five relatives of one department chief have been put upon the pay roll, in cheerful disregard of the alleged limitations of the civil service rules.

One prominent foreman in the government printing office—a hotbed of graft—has three relatives appointed under him. Congress can hardly be expected to correct the evil, for nepotism is more prevalent on Capitol Hill or as much so, as in the executive departments. President Roosevelt's investigation cannot reach congress. If it did, he would read some interesting disclosures.

For example, the vice president of the United States, Charles W. Fairbanks, signalized his introduction into office by appointing his son as his private secretary, at $2,220 a year. The son was sworn in three hours after his father, so that no time was lost in starting his salary. He has been traveling over the country with the vice president while the latter has been campaigning for the presidency, and a messenger to the vice president, at $1,440 a year, has been doing the work of the office.

The vice-president has had two of the members of his household staff on the government pay roll. One, a woman from Southern Indiana, who draws a salary in the war department, secured for her by the vice-president, and who performs the "stunt" of social secretary mornings and evenings, outside of office hours, for Mrs. Fairbanks and receives no private compensation; the other is the case of a negro in the District of Columbia who enjoys a messenger's salary in the bureau of engraving and printing, secured for him by the vice-president, and who acts as a servant in the vice-president's household nights, mornings and evenings.

But this article is to deal with nepotism and the president's impending investigation. The congressional directory discloses in part the prevalence of the graft of nepotism in the capitol. For example, President pro. tem. Frye of the senate had his nephew as private secretary when he presided over the senate. Senator Cullinger of New Hampshire had his son as clerk until recently; Senator Cockrell had two sons on the pay roll at one time, and when he left the senate to go to the Interstate Commerce Commission he took one of them with him as private secretary. There being only one appointment at Mr. Cockrell's disposal in the commission, one of his sons had to return to private life. Senator Berry of Arkansas, appointed his son clerk of his committee, and B. R. Tillman, Jr., acts as committee clerk for B. R. Tillman, Sr., senator from South Carolina. Senator Lodge's son, George Cabot Lodge, is assistant clerk of his father's committee, and Senator Knox's son, Reed Knox, is messenger to his father's committee at $1,440 a year. Senator Gamble of South Dakota has not been able to provide for all his relatives, having only two places, but he did the best he could. He gave one of the places to his nephew and the other to his son who is a student in a college at Port Deposit, Md. Senator Simmons of North Carolina has no son, so he made his daughter clerk of his committee. John Warwick Daniel, senior senator from Virginia, has John Warwick Daniel, Jr., as clerk of the committee of which he is chairman. Senator Burton's committee has U. S. Burton as messenger. The relationship is not clear, but the name is suggestive; as is also the case of John Mitchell Handy, who is on the pay roll of the senate committee over which Senator Mitchell of Oregon presides. Senator Foster of Louisiana has a relative on the pay roll of the senate, for nepotism knows no politics, and Senator Warren of Wyoming has his son and namesake on the roll of his committee.

The most remarkable case of "senatorial courtesy" is that of Senator J. F. Allee of Delaware, who appointed his son as his committee clerk and then, having another place as messenger at his disposal graciously gave it to a relative of his colleague, Senator Bell. The favor has extended to the officers of the senate, Sergeant-at-Arms Ransdell having appointed his son to a paying place in his office, while Financial Clerk Nixen, one of the old and tried officials of the senate, has worked his son in upon the roll of the secretary of the senate.

SCHEDULE CHANGED

Duluth Team Will Take No More Trips This Year.

League Makes Effort to Cut Expenses of Travel.

Copies of the revised schedule of the Northern league for the remainder of the season have been received in the city.

Under the new arrangement the White Sox will not take another Western trip, but will remain either at home or in Superior, until the season closes on Sept. 4.

Superior will take one more Western trip, playing four games in Winnipeg during the fair there, and will return to finish the season with the White Sox.

The changes will save the Duluth and Superior teams about $600 in railroad fares, and should enable the Superior management to pull itself out of the hole and finish with a balance on the right side of the ledger, if the attendance is up to expectations.

AUGUST 14, 15, 16.

Duluth at Superior.
Winnipeg at Fargo.
Crookston at Grand Forks.

AUGUST 17, 18, 19.

Superior at Duluth.
Fargo at Winnipeg.
Crookston at Grand Forks.

AUGUST 20.

Duluth at Superior.
Crookston at Grand Forks.

AUGUST 21, 22, 23.

Winnipeg at Grand Forks.
Crookston at Fargo.
Superior at Duluth.

AUGUST 24, 25, 26.

Crookston at Duluth.
Superior at Winnipeg (two games).
Fargo at Grand Forks.

AUGUST 27.

Crookston at Duluth.
Grand Forks at Fargo.

AUGUST 28, 29, 30.

Grand Forks at Winnipeg.
Fargo at Duluth.
Crookston at Superior.

SEPTEMBER 1, 2, 3, 4.

Fargo at Grand Forks.
Crookston at Winnipeg.
Superior at Duluth.

The Champs have thus twenty-two more games to play, fourteen of which are with Superior, five with Crookston and three with Fargo.

Grand Forks has seven games with the tail-enders, six with Winnipeg and eight with Fargo.

Neither Duluth nor Superior will meet the Tigers again this season, nor will Duluth play Winnipeg again.

STRIKE SITUATION REMAINS THE SAME

station on that line paying any such amount. Such statements are misleading, and are made merely to mislead the public. Every day the railroad officials are making claims that are ridiculous and utterly without foundation."

In his explanatory statement, Mr. Hogan takes the town of Foxboro, twenty miles from Superior, as a sample showing the conditions, wage and otherwise, which the operators are forced to work. He says:

"The statement referred to shows Foxboro, a small town, twenty miles from Superior, furnishing an aggregate salary of $75 per month as follows: Salary as agent and operator, $35; overtime, $8; express commission, $2; postoffice, $30.

"This all sounds well. The station is only twenty miles from Superior, but one who knows the location will admit that it might as well be twenty miles from nowhere. There is not a single road where a man could drive and milk in a buggy or even walk one mile in comfort. There is no store at this place, no opportunity to secure any of the luxuries or even all of the necessaries of life, without having the same shipped in at an excessive cost. There is no church at this point and the school house is one mile from the depot and only a five-month term is held each year. Surely there is no inducement in this for men with families.

"There is not a well within one mile of the depot and all the drinking water must be carried from that well or from the creek, an equal distance. The company, after numerous complaints, put in a small tank or reservoir at the station and instructed the local train crews to fill the tank from their engines when it became empty, thus providing water, filthy with germs, for their employes at this place to use. The employes found it impossible to drink such water and retain their health, consequently they continue to carry it for one mile. In order to earn this $55 per month, the agent works seven days of twelve hours each per week and from one hour to one hour and thirty minutes each week day beyond his regular hours for which he is granted the over-time compensation mentioned.

"The agent is also granted, as they say, commission on express business handled, but this commission never exceeds two dollars per month and has run as low as 46 cents a month. He is compelled to pay a premium on security bonds for handling express and is held personally responsible for the care of all express matter. He is given no safe in which to keep valuable packages or money orders, but if anything should happen to be lost or stolen, the company will see to it that he pays for the same.

"The statement also shows that he is granted commissions on commercial telegraph business. This comes from the Western Union company and not the Great Northern and amounts to an average of 20 cents a month at the Foxboro station. This concession was granted July 1, 1905.

"The statement also shows that the agent lives in the depot and has free rent, light and fuel. This is an error as the section foreman lives in the depot, which is also the section house, one 12x12 room being set off for the depot, and the agent lives in a house owned by himself. As for free light and fuel being granted I would say that it would not be well for any of us station employes to be caught getting free light and fuel, because our positions would be immediately filled by some one more honest."

Mr. Hogan says that he referred to this station in particular because it is acknowledged to be one of the best positions between Coon Creek and Central avenue, and because of the fact that he was agent there for two years and is therefore thoroughly acquainted with existing conditions.

"If a man has any desire to lead a hermit life," he said, "such stations as this and its neighboring stations are the places to go, but a man with a family who has any desire to worship God and to keep his family in civilization should remain away."

The strikers report today that three non-union men who have been working on the Great Northern were this morning persuaded to quit work, and that two more non-union men have promised to leave their positions.

"Reports from the Superior and Mesaba divisions show that we are continually gaining strength," said Mr. Hogan. "The companies have been able to hire a few operators and clerks to fill our places, but they remain only long enough to learn the true situation and then quit. Positions in the telegraph line are plentiful enough so that when the few men the companies secure who desire work can get it elsewhere.

"It is an acknowledged fact that we are the most poorly paid class of labor in existence. A man to become a competent operator must serve as an apprentice at least two years and receives absolutely no compensation for this, in fact he is compelled to pay for his tuition. In order to be competent to handle an agency a man must have a good education, and in order to secure bonds from the security companies must be able to show a spotless record for ten years from the beginning of his employment.

"He must also be able to refer to various business men of his acquaintance in order to prove himself reliable and honest. You will see by this that they want no one in their employ who is not an experienced operator, a competent accountant and of an honest character, but in return for all this they are not willing to pay us as much as is paid to common laborers and men with doubtful characters. As Mr. Hill says, 'ours is a position of trust.'

"This is true, ours is a position of trust, but we retain that position only so long as the railroad companies are secured by bonds, consequently as individuals we are not trusted.

"Mr. Hill would have been more correct if he had said 'ours is a position of trusts.' We are not asking for what we deserve even, but we only ask for a fair living wage and recognition as men."

Local railroad officials say they have nothing new to report today. They claim that everything is running smoothly and that victory is already theirs.

PEACE ENVOYS DISPOSE OF ARTICLE FIRST.

journed that the proceedings became public."

But in view of the world-wide interest in the negotiations and in the known "enterprise" of American journalism, Count Cassini and Mr. Takahira decided that it would be proper to make to the press at such times as were deemed advisable brief formal statements agreed by both sides. All other statements published were to be considered unauthenticated. It was to secure the possibility of secrecy that the United States placed at the disposal of the plenipotentiaries the building upon a government reservation where, to the public, entrance could be closed.

"It would be rather remarkable," said the Japanese above quoted, "if M. Witte had not been apprised before his arrival of this preliminary arrangement as to secrecy entered into upon the particular suggestion of Count Cassini. At any rate, when the question was raised by our plenipotentiaries, at the first session of the conference, he assented, and has not since protested."

M. Witte, however, still insists that he courts on behalf of the Russians the widest publicity of the proceedings. He said, in response to the Japanese statements:

"I am not acquainted with the understanding which may have taken place before I was appointed plenipotentiary for the peace negotiations. What I said, and what I repeat, is that the initiative of keeping the deliberations of the conference secret was taken at the first meeting by the Japanese plenipotentiaries. It is true that the Russians made no opposition to it, because they did not come to America to defend the rights of the press. There are so many differences on serious questions between Russia and Japan that we would not undertake to add more or less important affairs. What I wish to have clear is that if the Japanese have nothing to the contrary, I am ready at any moment to publish the full text of all the documents concerned of the peace conference, as well as the record of the proceedings."

NO PROGRESS

Was Made By Peace Envoys Saturday Afternoon.

Portsmouth, Aug. 14.—The meeting of the envoys Saturday afternoon resulted in a four hours' discussion on the Russian reply which refused to pay indemnity or cede Sakhalin. By agreement these two points were left for the present, and the remainder of the Jap terms taken up. So far as known no progress had been made at the hour of adjournment.

No progress was made with the peace negotiations over Sunday. The session of the plenipotentiaries which was to have been held Sunday afternoon was postponed by mutual agreement out of reverence to the fact that it was the holy Sabbath, which is universally observed in Russia as a day of rest.

The Russians had not been anxious for a session Sunday, and yesterday morning the Japanese took the initiative and through the intermediary of Mr. Peirce, it was decided to postpone the sitting until Monday morning. It would perhaps not be too much to say that the general feeling is more hopeful in spite of open predictions made by personages connected with both sides of the negotiations that before next Sunday the plenipotentiaries will reach an impasse where a rupture will become inevitable. This pessimistic view is based upon the fact that so far as known the two big barriers to an agreement—indemnity and Sakhalin—remain as high and insurmountable as ever.

AN ACTIVE VOLCANO FOUND IN NEVADA.

San Francisco, Aug. 14.—A special dispatch to the Chronicle from Reno, Nev., says:

A volcano throwing off molten lava and in active operation has been discovered in Nevada by Messrs. McClure, Wheeler and Somers, cattlemen of Lovelock.

The volcano is located in Rye Patch, Humboldt county. Although that section has been traversed for years, the crater has just been found for the first time. The men were in search of cattle when they came on the stream of lava, and tracing it to its source, located the volcano. The rocks for some distance around were so hot that they could not touch them with their bare hands. The volcano is active. This is attested by the fact that distinct rumblings accompany the flow of lava.

West Duluth.

Richard Schell of West Duluth visited Robert Whitesides' island in St. Louis river, opposite Ironton yesterday and expresses surprise at the fine state of cultivation which Mr. Whitesides has attained with the land. The island is known as Big Island and is a splendid place for a summer home.

This year he has seventy acres in oats and Mr. Schell says the oats are breast high with good full oats and almost ready for harvesting. There are about twenty-five acres in wheat and Mr. Schell predicts that it will yield twenty-five bushels to the acre. The island is in charge of Mr. and Miss McCoy and they have the place in excellent shape. The place is a beauty spot besides being productive and will be one of the finest places along the river.

BIRTHS ARE NUMEROUS.

A number of births have taken place in West Duluth during the past few days. Sons have been born to Mr. and Mrs. John St. Marie of 2032 Halifax street and to Mr. and Mrs. Molmberg of 5113 Wadena street, and daughteres have been born to Mr. and Mrs. F. Burnhard of 4031 Halifax street, Mr. and Mrs. Albert La Flamme of 5513½ Redruth street, and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Skelin of 203 North Fifty-fifth avenue west.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

The funeral of Mrs. Thomas Olson will take place tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock from the Plymouth Congregational church. Interment will be in Oneota cemetery.

The Westminster Presbyterian church will hold a lawn social on Tuesday evening, Aug. 15, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. William Towner, 6205 Wadena street. Ice cream and cake will be served.

A fishing party consisting of F. H. Wade, Alderman L. A. Barnes, Mr. Boutin, Russell Hamilton, John Schinlaub, Ike Deatherage and several others were up the river Saturday night and yesterday. They got a fair string.

William Leach is on the sick list.

Wanted—Fifty couples to come and enjoy themselves during the big social dance Friday evening at the Great Eastern hall. Tickets, 50 cents a couple.

Cholera infantum is quite prevalent among children at West Duluth just now. The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Roller of Fifty-eighth and Wadena and the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dan McKinnon of Fifty-third and Ramsey street are sick with it at present.

The West Duluth A. O. U. W. team consisting of William Burdick, E. D. Nickerson, Charles Ehle and Charles Ellis have returned from Cloquet, where they helped to initiate a large class.

ATTENTION

We have proved to the public of West Duluth and vicinity that we are making and selling more ice cream than was even sold by a firm in West Duluth before.

WHY? Because it's Murray Bros.' famous "NON-EXCELLED" Ice Cream, and it is much better than that soft sticky kind that you pay more for just because it comes from uptown, and your dealer tells you it is just as good as ours. Yours for good Ice Cream and Fresh Milk, and Butter and Eggs. MURRAY BROS.

NOBODY SAW ACCIDENT

Holston Fell While Others Were Looking Toward Bow.

"Nobody in the boat saw Mr. Holston fall," said one of the members of the party who was in the sailboat when yesterday's sad accident occurred.

"A cushion had fallen out of the boat, and one of the boys had untied one of the rowboats and had gone to recover the cushion. We were all looking at him and did not notice Mr. Holston fall. He may have stood up to watch, and lost his balance.

"As soon as the accident happened, and we heard the splash, Phillip Smith, who was in the bow of the sailboat, ran back to the stern, untied the other rowboat, and pushed off to try to rescue his chum, but it was too late.

"None of us can do more than guess how it all happened, as nobody saw him fall."

The life saving crew is not searching for the body owing to the choppy condition of the water in the bay, but will as soon as the wind goes down.

A VALUABLE SAFEGUARD.

The branch laboratory for the investigation of contagious diseases which has just been opened in Duluth is an important addition to the city's institutions, and one that will be of great value to those who seek to guard the city's health.

In the past, when there was reason to suspect a case to be something against the spread of which it was necessary to take precautions, and a microscopic examination of the germs in the case was necessary to determine their nature and the nature of the disease, it has been necessary to send cultures to the state board of health at St. Paul, involving a vexatious and possibly dangerous delay. Now the examination will be conducted right here in Duluth, and there need be no delay whatever.

This means that a person suspected of being afflicted with a contagious disease will have a speedy hearing on his case, and will not be unduly subjected to annoyance and restraint if it turns out that his trouble is not a public menace. On the other hand, if the laboratory examination shows him to be suffering with something which may spread, the danger will be known much earlier than it will where it is necessary to send to St. Paul, and the necessary precautions may be taken much more promptly. And often, in the incipiency of an epidemic, a few hours gained may be worth many lives and certainly will prevent many cases of illness.

Under the new plan cultures will be taken every afternoon at 3 o'clock, and at 9 o'clock the next morning the result will be found and announced. Branch offices will be established in drug stores throughout the city, where physicians may leave specimens for examination at any time, which specimens will be promptly examined and returned with the result.

St. Paul and Minneapolis maintain, at great expense, their own laboratories, but Duluth is the first city in the state to receive a branch of the state laboratory. The city's share of its maintenance will be small, and altogether out of proportion to the value of the institution and the additional assurance of safety from contagious diseases it will afford.

Much credit is due Health Commissioner Murray and those who were responsible for securing the location of the branch laboratory here.

TRUE HEROISM.

It is the hardest thing in the world to pick out a coward in advance of the test by which some men fail and others come out triumphantly. Many a man has sailed into action bold as brass, and slunk away as tame as a kitten. Many a man has gone into danger with his knees trembling, with nervous perspiration beading his forehead, with his mouth dry and his tongue palsied, and has dragged his reluctant feet up the heights of heroism.

A pathetic incident down near Baltimore a few days ago illustrates this curious anomaly in humanity. A young man named Cook was one of a party that was spending a day with a picnic party upon a river, and while some members of the party were out rowing a little girl fell overboard.

Cook could not swim, and furthermore he was known to be particularly timid when on the water. The danger to the child caused him to shed his apparent cowardice, and forgetting his own safety, mindful only of the child's peril, he plunged into the river. He went down in seven feet of water, and in his excitement is supposed to have caught hold of some sea grass and held on.

The little girl was rescued by others, but in the confusion which ensued Cook was forgotten, and he was drowned.

Though wasted, it was an act of heroism, and from a most unexpected source. But it is from the most unexpected sources that heroism comes. A woman will go all to pieces over a mouse or a headache, and bear up like a heroine under a crushing calamity. A man who is as timid as a girl, and who is the laughing stock of his fellows because of that timidity, often blossoms out into real heroism. The heroism of a coward is the highest type. It is the man who goes into battle in spite of his fear, who commands his trembling limbs, that bid him run, as best he may, and who stays and confronts the danger though his whole being cries out that he should flee to safety, that is the real hero.

Cook knew he could not swim, but in all probability the only thought in his mind was the peril of the child, and he cast all care of himself to the winds when he fruitlessly sacrificed his life in the hope of saving her.

SMART YANKEE TRADERS.

The British Trade Review in a recent issue calls attention to some American "tricks of trade" that are tricks only in the most worthy sense, and that are giving American goods a great advantage over British goods in foreign markets.

The "tricks" are simply ingenious devices to make American goods appear more attractive than others, and while they appear more or less astonishing to the British tradesmen, there is nothing at all unusual in them to American merchants or their customers.

Though the goods may be no better, American products placed alongside British products in foreign markets will outsell the English wares every time, because they are arranged in an ingenious manner that makes them more tempting to the eyes of the purchasers. Not only this, but the American packers suceeed also in saving freight, storage, cartage, wharfage and duty by packing their goods in smaller compass.

In many cases duty is guaged by measurement instead of weight, and in such case the American merchant has to pay less tariff on his goods than does the British merchant, and the additional profit enables him to compete to better advantage. Besides, the American tradesmen have generally adopted the practice of making up articles into neat, sightly packages that can be bought and sold in the cases in which they are imported. The British send cases of irregular size that are designed only to convey the goods. These packages have to be broken, and it is small wonder that dealers often prefer to handle the more conveniently arranged American goods. The Americans, too, have a habit of using cardboard boxes that make a neat appearance on the shop shelves, while the British pack their goods in unsightly brown paper parcels that tempt no purchasers though they may contain goods as worthy as those in the smart cardboard boxes of the Yankee merchant.

In short, the American merchant has adopted the plan of making his goods attractive and tempting, while the British merchant is content to let them go out with no regard for appearance, letting the customer find out for himself whether or not the goods are better than they look to be.

ITS BLIGHTING TOUCH.

The Herald has referred frequently to the niggardly policy of the state of Minnesota—or of its officers—in the matter of its public lands, and in fact it was the first newspaper in the state to call attention to the blighting effects of delaying land sales in the hope of securing better prices later.

The manner in which other newspapers and individuals in Northern Minnesota have taken the matter up has been gratifying, and while much is yet to be done to bring about more enlightened policies, something, too, has already been accomplished.

The Littlefork Guardian, published in Northern Itasca county, is in a position to observe at first hand the effects of the policy of delay, and its scathing arraignment of the state's land policy is based upon what it actually observes, and is fully justified by the facts. Here is what it says about its own home territory:

"Take the Little Fork valley for illustration. Here the state owns two-thirds of all the lands and never pays a dollar in taxes, never builds a road, never does any act for her people but has a despotic hue. A poor man takes a claim for the reason that poverty does not permit him to buy a home, but he must get to that claim the best he can. He has to cross state lands and must cut out and build roads for the state or follow a deer trail. When, by the grace of Uncle Sam, he receives his patents, the state exacts about $50 a year taxation. That tax money has various offices to fill, but practically none of it ever comes back here to improve the country."

This is exactly what The Herald has pointed out as the result of the state's land policy, and it is a concrete example of what is going on to a greater or lesser degree in many localities of Northern Minnesota. The state will hold land sales this fall and next spring, but most of the land to be sold lies near settled communities, and the sale will relieve such conditions as that complained of by the Guardian but little. It is a real wrong, a real injustice, a monumental piece of shortsightedness. When a private land speculator holds lands back from cultivation in the hope of higher prices, he still has to pay taxes and help build roads and school houses. When the state does the same thing it is worse, because its lands pay no share of local expenses and stand as an almost impassible bar to progress.

Northern Minnesota is an empire whose greatness and richness even its own citizens realize but faintly. When it is fully settled and developed it will be one of the greatest agricultural, stock-raising and dairy regions of the world. But before that condition can materialize, there must be a radical change in the state's policy, and it is such agitation as that being made by the Guardian and other newspapers that must bring about that change.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

Drainage, immigration, good roads and a more liberal state land policy would make a great platform for Northern Minnesota men ambitious to become statesmen and stand well with the people.

Hotel Gossip.

"Advertising, in any form," is a mighty good thing, but in some forms it is better than others," said P. A. Knox, a Chicago traveling man, at the Spalding. "It is the opinion of many of the largest advertisers of the United States that what is called poster advertising is a very doubtful way of reaching the public. The best advertising authorities are reaching the conclusion that painting the name of their ware on roofs and rocks, sticking up in fields or on bill boards and otherwise endeavoring to force it upon the public whether the public likes it or not, is hardly the way to get the best results for their money. It pays to a certain extent, but better returns might be obtained if the money were expended in some other way.

"Newspaper and magazine advertising is about the most effective yet devised, and in a country where everybody that spends money reads the papers and magazines it is hardly necessary to mar the beauty of out-of-doors with the flaring sign boards. The more an advertiser gets his name before the public the more apt is he to succeed in business, and, this being true, the bill boards of course help some, but the same amount of money expended on newspapers and magazines would bring better results."

"During the last two or three weeks there has been a marked decline in the prospects for a large apple crop in certain parts of the East this year," said L. Holmes of Syracuse, N. Y., at the St. Louis, "and the indications now point to a very light yield. Some of the experts say this is due to the excessive rains earlier in the year. The wet weather at the setting time of the fruit prevented the pollen from floating in the air and fertilizing the blossoms.

"The late varieties can almost be called a total failure. Chief among these are the Baldwin and the spy, which form a large percentage of the crop. The early varieties yielded better. The brightest spot in the apple crop is the Hudson river valley. The plum crop should be fair, cherries fair and pears not so good. Pears are spotty. In the same orchard there will be loaded trees beside barren ones. Vegetables and grains are looking pretty good."

Wrote Just Like Papa.

Cincinnati Enquirer: Charles J. Bonaparte, the new secretary of the navy, writes a neat and beautiful hand.

A reporter, on a hot afternoon not long since, complimented Mr. Bonaparte on his chirography, and to the compliment the secretary replied:

"At the seaside I once heard a little girl make a remark about her father's writing that would not have applied to mine.

"The little girl was reading with her mother in the hotel office. On the table before her was an ink bottle and some clean stationery, and as she read a fly got in the ink. The fly, after a hard struggle, emerged from its black bath, and in an exhausted and draggled condition it trailed itself slowly and with great difficulty across a sheet of snowy paper.

"'Oh, mamma, look. Here is a fly that writes just like papa.'"

Tesla Has Another Spell.

Baltimore American: Nikola Tesla is at it again. He has just told of a startling invention, which, however, like most of Tesla's inventions, is not just yet in practical working shape. With one of his invented appliances he declares that it would be possible to "throw this planet out of its orbit." In other words, Mr. Tesla seems to be claiming that he can ungear the universe and stampede the orderly ways of nature. This scheme is ambitious, but even Harry H. Rogers and the system could not float the stock of such an enterprise if it were incorporated.

The Weather.

Disappointed in your Sunday? Well, it really was not quite all it ought to have been, but it was bearable, and perhaps its worst effect was that its threats prevented you from carrying out plans which you afterwars found you could have just as well carried out as not. The wind blew freshly from the northeast from some time Saturday night up to this morning, and the partly cloudy condition of yesterday grew into a wholly cloudy condition of last night and this morning. There was every symptom of a real, June northeaster, except the rain, and everybody expected that to come every minute. Early last evening it began to sprinkle a bit, and people settled themselves for an all night rain, but sprinkle was all it amounted to. The same thing happened this morning, and just when the earlier birds were going to work it certainly did look like an all day rain was setting in. But again it was little more than sprinkles, and as it was not cold there was nothing to complain about at all. It did not even suffice to keep people away from The Herald's Monday excursion up the river.

The weather man did not take quite the optimistic view of conditions people would like to see him take. He forecasts showers tonight and Tuesday, and moderately high northeast winds, which would mean a continuation of the northeaster. But it has had quite a run already and should break soon.

Low pressure areas overlie Eastern Nebraska and southwestern states. Showers fell during Sunday or last night over the Red River, Missouri, Mississippi and Ohio valleys, western lake region, south Atlantic and eastern Gulf states. Warm weather continues in most districts to the eastward of the Rock Mountains, except near Lake Superior. In the lake region the winds are fresh easterly with cloudy to showery weather.

A Good Thing.

Chicago Record-Herald: Once there were two boys who applied for jobs in a dry goods store. Henry had sandy hair and projecting teeth and large ears, and when he stood up he didn't seem to know what to do with his hands.

But Harold was a very different kind of boy. He possessed a handsome face and was graceful and easy in his movements. His hands never seemed to be in the way; he didn't blush every time a woman happened to look at him, and his face was pleasing.

The manager of the store looked the boys over, and, being an excellent judge of people, he declared that Henry ought to be kept back somewhere out of sight, while Harold was put in training at the muslin counter.

In the years that ensued Henry went from one desk to another, always toward the top, and at last he became the managing partner of the establishment.

But where was Harold? He had not been employed in the place more than a year and a half before he became a floorwalker in the dress goods section, where he was very popular. Women frequently went in to buy things, not because it made them glad to see Harold, to receive a bow or a smile from him, or to hear the music of his voice as he asked them if they had been able to find what they wanted.

Many times Harold hinted that he would appreciate a promotion, and always the ones above acknowledged that he ought to be advanced, but as floorwalker in the dress goods department he was so valuable to the firm that they couldn't think of putting him anywhere else.

And there he grew gray and at last served the granddaughters of the women who had deemed him charming in his youth, and when he died Henry sent flowers and paid him a glorious tribute by informing his widow that the firm had lost its most valued floorwalker. Moral: A good thing may be too good for its own good.

A Hot Weather Danger.

New York Tribune: Ptomaines are poisonous products formed in fish, meat, milk and other articles of food by a process of decomposition that leaves little other trace of its action. Bacteria probably promote their formation, but on that point there remains some doubt. The taint develops in consequence of a failure to cook the food properly. At this season the duty of promptly reducing the temperature of milk at the dairy farm from which it is derived is often slighted, and as a result the fluid may come to market in what is a dangerous condition. Consumers buy it without suspicion, and when sickness is caused by its use it is usually too late to trace the original source, and consequently impossible to fix the responsibility.

Money Will Not Do.

Floresville, Neb., Chronicle: Give a man a 10-cent cigar and he will beam all over and love you for six hours; offer him the 10 cents with which to buy it for himself and he will throw it in your face. Give a man a pass to a show and he will call you a good fellow for all the languages at his disposal; offer him the money to buy a ticket and he will call you a fool. Ask a man to your home to take "pot luck" and he will jump at the chance; give him $2 and tell him to get a good meal at a cafe with your compliments and he will knock you down. The dollar is mighty, but it isn't warm. Nothing chills hospitality and good fellowship more than the touch of cold metal. You may spend money on a friend, but you must not ask him to touch it. Silver isn't a good conductor and you can't transmit half as much cordiality and hospitality to a friend through the medium of a dollar as by means of a bad cigar. Money substitutes for good looks and good sense with great success, but it can't take the place of good fellowship worth a toothpick.

The Next Cotton Report.

Washington Post: The next government cotton report will probably be issued by the grand jury.

Taken From the Columns of Duluth Papers Twenty-two Years Ago.

A new jewelry store is to be opened in the Opera House block by Montague & Susswilch.

Work is being rapidly pushed forward on D. G. Cutler's new residence, on Third avenue west and Third street.

Norton, Thomas & Atwater cut 52,000 feet of lumber and 55,000 shingles on Friday last, and they were running on small logs at that.

J. S. Pierce has completed a residence for himself on Lake avenue, between Fourth and Fifth streets, and expects to move into it this week.

E. F. Krelwitz is to open a grocery store on Fifth street, between Second and Third avenues east.

Hamilton, the champion jumper, and Cusson (colored) had a foot race on Superior street, Saturday last, for a bet of $10 a side. Cusson was the winning man.

A. B. McLean and Capt. Surls of the tug Oneida have made a contract with the Nemadji Boo mcompany to run the boom, assort the logs, and do all the company's towing for a term of five years.

W. S. Warren, who is said to be one of the best boot and shoemakers in the West, is located in H. Stevens' old stand in the basement of the Hunter block.

A young man named Hunter met with a painful accident at the Northern Pacific warehouse. He was engaged with a number of others in loading a large flywheel, weighing almost a ton, on to a flat car, when somehow it slipped and fell on his foot, crushing it in a horrible manner. Dr. McComb, who dressed the foot, thinks amputation will be necessary.

The station agents of the Northern Pacific railroad are to be dressed in uniforms hereafter, and a tailor has been sent along the line to take measures of the lads.

It is rumored that the Northern Pacific has purchased 2,000 acres of land, near Superior, paying therefor $300,000, and that extensive enterprises will be inaugurated.

FLASHES OF FUN.

Philadelphia Ledger: "He hasn't been in politics very long, has he?"

"No, but how did you know?"

"I was walking with him today just as a police patrol wagon dashed up behind us, and he didn't start guiltily or look nervous at all."

Cleveland Leader: Mr. Snooks—To what, sir, do you attribute your success as a salesman?

Mr. Sellem—If a customer doesn't see what he wants, I make him want what he sees.

Washington Star: "I wanted to be rich," said Mr. Dustin Stax, "so as to be relieved from the ordinary worriments of life."

"And do you find such relief?"

"Yes. After I tried to endow a few philanthropic institutions I found that my worriments were all extraordinary."

Houston Post: "Are your constituents inclined to be vindictive?" was asked the senator.

"Well, I should say so. Not content with seeing me sentenced to the penitentiary, they actually seem to expect me to go there."

Regular Frequenter—Oh, that's too dry. Give me a novel.

Cleveland Leader: Outsider—If your party should lose its power, and you should be thrown out of office, would you be discouraged and take to drink?

Politician—No, sir; I'd change my politics.

"Worked wonders, eh?"

"No; worked suckers."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Crookston Journal: The agricultural department will let Hays cleanse the numerous drones in the Federal crop bureau. Washington calls on Minnesota when it wants a man who does things.

Anoka Union: If the Republicans fail to put up the right kind of man, Johnson will be all right for two years more, as sure as fate. Chew on this, you long whiskered heathen, who can see nothing good outside of Republicanism.

Le Sueur News: Congressman McCleary is in Europe and he still writes letters to his constituents, but not so many, as he cannot frank souvenir cards.

Albert Lea Standard: Long use of power leads to its abuse. There should be frequent changes of both government and state administration, and disregarding party, the people, if they know what is for the best good of the country, will see to it that this is accomplished.

Ortonville Herald-Star: A Minneapolis newspaper refers to the proposition to do away with the five delegates at large in Republican state conventions as a "healthy sentiment." If the political health of Hennepin county is meant it is.

Princeton Union: While the agricultural editors who interviewed the potato bug and the rust parasite and looked upon the prairie and the hillside will doubtless do their best to bring settlers to the state, a better procedure, in our opinion, would be the drainage of more swamp lands and the united ettorts of the country press.

Brainerd Dispatch: Boost your own city, even if you can't figure out how it is going to help you. Don't be a knocker just because you are down on your luck. The world at large hates a man of that stamp.

Fairmont Sentinel: Governor La Follette is going about the country telling the listening thousands to cut loose from party and vote for good government. That's the stuff!

Madison Independent-Press: Ex-Gov. Van Sant seems to have tumbled into the waste basket.

Madison Independent-Press: The Albert Lea Enterprise refers to Gov. Johnson's election as a joke. The Enterprise will find, a year from now, that some jokes stand repeating.

Brainerd Tribune: The Fergus Globe wants elections held on Sunday, as they do in some of the European countries, so that "the electors could find time to go and vote." The man who can't take time to go and vote on week days is a very poor citizen.

ECHOES OF HARMONY.

St. Peter Free Press: And now some of the Dunn Republicans are mean enough to insist that Johnson is better than Collins anyhow. The blow almost kills father.

St. Hilaire Spectator: The man who can unite all the warring elements in the Republican ranks in Minnesota on the gubernatorial question does not appear to have arrived.

Rush City Post: When an Iscariotten newspaper mentions Ell Torrance as a candidate for governor wonder if they remember his high-falutin mightiness during the Dunn campaign. Torrance won't do, might as well mention Van Sant.

Thief River Falls News: This talk of harmony upon the part of some so-called Dunn Republican papers is getting rather tiresome. They want none but Dunn delegates to attend the state convention, but, while this would undoubtedly make it a harmonious convention, it would not be one that would represent the majority of the Republican party.

Anoka Union: It is nip and tuck between the Collins and Dunn newspapers as to which are acting the meanest. If kept up, no possible chance of unity.

Anoka Free Press: It is amusing to note how the Demo-Reps who bolted the Republican nominee for governor last fall keep assuring one another that they are good Republicans still. Judging by the persistance with which they are repeating the assurances it is evident that they are in doubt about being believed. And in this they are right.

Milaca Times. As long as the minority of the Republican party in the state refuses to abide by the decision of the majority there is small prospect of harmony.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Nearly every girl captivates herself with her beauty.

A girl can't learn to swim in a bathing suit that is made to go in the water.

Riding in an automobile makes a women almost as proud as it makes a man to have a millionaire bow to him in a street car.

You can tell when a girl is not engaged by the way she pretends to be, and when a man is married by the way he pretends not to be.

A Conundrum.

A sea,
A beach,
A man
In reach,

A maid
Stands by Afraid
To try

The waves
That land
Upon
The sand.

He notes
Her fear,
And drawing near,

He says
"aFir maid,
Be not Afraid,

But come
With me
Into The sea."

She goes
With him
Though he Can't swim.

And yet
The maid
Is not Afraid.

Now, can
You say
Why she's
That way?

Olives and Champagne.

Los Angeles Times: George Von Lengerke Meyer, the American Ambassador to Russia, was graduated from Harvard in 1879, and a '79 man said of him at Narragansett recently:

"Meyer at college was a humorist. His humor was always taking an odd turn. One day, when he was on a walking trip, two farm hands befriended him—he had lost his wallet, or something of that sort, and they loaned him the money for lunch—and in return for this kindness Meyer invited the young farm hands to dine with him in Boston.

"He gave them, for a joke, the most foreign and outlandish dishes he could think of. There were cods' tongues, frogs' legs, real Russian caviar, Japanese ginger, Prague ham, truffled goose liver, and so on.

"The rustics, if you'll believe me, enjoyed all these foreign viands immensely. It was only the olives that they stumbled over. When, with a dish of olives, a bottle of champagne was brought on, they sipped a little and munched a little, and then, with a wry face, the leader said:

"'Meyer, I like yer cider, but darn yer pickles.'"

Wants to Start Something.

Helena Independent: Why shouldn't a man wear a Leghorn hat and a shirt waist? What's the use of being a man if you can't do anything you please? We go around with coats cut like a gunnysack and hats that look like tar buckets and then we wonder why the women, love 'em, don't gaze upon our masculine splendor. Splendor? Why we look like Chinese cheap labor. We are unfit for publication. Men always look as though they should be ashamed to be seen.

Let's get away from our narrow traditions. If need be let us go in for shirt waists, flaring ties, corsets, drop-stitch stockings, jeweled garters and lace stocks. The women do. On the other hand if the girls want to adopt knee boots, cigarettes, range saddles, highballs and absinthe, let 'em. Down with traditions. Let's get all mixed up.

FEW SALES MADE

Lumber Prices Show No Tendency to Come Down.

Edward Hines Company May Purchase Another Sawmill.

Lumber sales are small at the present time for the reason that all the large lots have been cleaned up and there is little but odds and ends for the buyer. This condition, however, is likely to be somewhat changed before the end of the season as the new lumber is coming into the market in some quantity, though many of the mills have sold pretty well up to the close of navigation. Some inquiries are already being made for next years' stock and one or two mills are said to be closed out for two or three years to come, at good prices. Prices remain quite stiff with very little change for the past month. The No. 3 and better stock is being quoted, wholesale, at from $19 to $20, depending on the quality.

Shipments continue very heavy, more in fact than had been anticipated by those who were not familiar with the operations of the interior mills. The sales of these concerns this summer have been enormous. One day last week five boats were loading at one time from one of the local docks lumber manufactured at the Brooks-Scanlon company's mill at Scanlon and shipped in here by rail.

The Northern Pacific road is bringing immense quantities of lumber from the Weyerhaeuser mills at Cloquet, and there are heavy shipments over the Missabe road from the Virginia mill, amounting to about 400,000 feet per day. At Two Harbors the docks are handling about 350,000 of lumber per day from the Fall Lake and Tower Lumber companies. It was expected that the St. Croix Lumber company would enter the trade this year, but at the last moment the company is said to have sold its whole stock through a Minneapolis office. Lumber shipments from this harbor are running about 70,000,000 feet per month, while the total shipments from Lake Superior are from 125,000,000 to 140,000,000 feet. The July shipments ran even a little higher, being 145,495,000 feet.

One of the things that has been of special interest to the lumber interests this month was the action of the county board of equalization in making a sharp raise in the tax values of lumber and timber stocks, and the value of railways engaged in the business of hauling forest products. The increase in these particular items, over the county, was about $250,000. This included not only the mills and operations at Duluth, but those at other points, and companies owning pine in St. Louis county.

There is a lively rumor to the effect that the Edward Hines Lumber company of Chicago, which recently purchased the entire holdings of the White River Lumber company at Mason, Wis., is also negotiating for the purchase of the Alexander & Edgar Lumber company's plant at Iron River, Wis., with a view of sawing some of the timber lately purchased at Iron River instead of at Mason. This rumor evidently gained ground from the fact that representatives of the Hines company were in Iron River within the past few days looking over the entire sawmill plant. A large part of the timber purchased from the White River Lumber company is said to be much nearer Iron River than Mason and it is understood that the operation by the Hines company of the sawmill at that point will do away with the necessity of taking any of the timber to Ashland or Superior for sawing.

The delivery some days ago of a large raft of green spruce at Grand Marais is likely to revolutionize the methods of handling pulpwood on the north shore. It had been thought that spruce, when green, was too heavy to raft and that much of it would be lost in bad weather. The experiment was very successful and it is probable that much pulpwood will be rafted to the harbors and there loaded on the scows. As there are immense quantities of pulpwood along the north shore important developments are being anticipated for next season.

The Cook County Manufacturing company, operating a small mill at Grand Marais, has made a number of improvements this year and is turning out more lumber. In addition to the sawmill the company has put in lath and shingle mills with a daily capacity of 100,000 lath and 50,000 shingles.

TOO MUCH MEDICINE.

THE excessive and indiscriminate use of medicines, in these days, cannot be too strongly condemned. The food you eat, if properly digested, is all the tonic you need.

The system is continually wronged by over-eating and over-drinking, and the debilitated condition aggravated by dosing with harsh, nauseous drugs and medicines.

Only common sense is needed. The food MUST be digested and the bowels MUST NOT BE allowed to clog. Preserve your health by preventing these conditions.

Constipation surely leads to Indigestion, Biliousness, etc., and these conditions when neglected affect the condition of the blood, debilitate the system, rendering it susceptible to more serious ailments, and less able to resist such attacks.

CALIFORNIA PRUNE WAFERS if taken as directed, will positively cure the most obstinate case of Indigestion, Torpid Liver, Constipation, Biliousness, etc., so as to stay cured. 100 Wafers 25 Cents. Sold by

OGLE WAS IN WEST INDIES

Buck Says Alleged Forger Was on Isle of Pines.

Mankato, Minn., Aug. 14.—A. A. Buck, who was brought from Cuba by Sheriff Williams Saturday, gave out the information that Judge J. B. Ogle, who is wanted in this city on the charge of forgery and against whom several other charges have been made, left the Isle of Pines in haste after Buck's arrest there in July. Ogle procured the service of a man to take him off the island to some place of concealment, it is believed. This was learned by Sheriff Williams in Havana, and Buck now confirms the report. Ogle's present whereabouts are unknown. The officers suspect, however, that Buck is in possession of knowledge that would lead to the immediate arrest of the alleged forger, and assert they have reason to believe that Ogle will be captured soon in the semi-tropics.

Ogle had a narrow escape from injury in a runaway accident on the Isle of Pines. He and another man were on their way to a sawmill for a load of lumber and in going down a hill the mules became unmanageable, and after running a short distance broke the pole and got away. Both men were heavyweights and were badly shaken up.

Ogle, Buck asserts, went under the name of James Orcutt on the Isle of Pine. He did not sojourn at Neuva Gerona, where Buck was conducting a hotel, but came there twice, the second time on July 4, while a great celebration was in progress. Buck was chairman of the committee in charge of the celebration.

Buck will take up the matter of furnishing bail as soon as Judge Cray returns to the city. A physician has examined his ankle and finds that the bones have not knit, probably owing to a couple of falls that he had on his trip to Mankato, and says that it will be six weeks before he can use his foot. His ankle was broken while practicing jui-jitsu with a newspaper man on the Isle of Pines.

Buck states that no matter how long a term he gets he will never ask for a pardon. However, his friends will take the steps necessary to this end.

SANGER PULLMAN BADLY HURT.

San Mateo, Cal., Aug. 14.—Walter Sanger Pullman, son of the late George M. Pullman, has been thrown from a buggy while driving on San Mateo, and sustained injuries from which he may die. There is a severe injury to the jaw, and another on the upper portion of the head, but his physician has not yet been able to determine whether he is suffering from concussion of the brain or has his skull fractured.

RIDER MAIN BREAKS

Ten-Inch Pipe Near Lester Park Gives Way.

Leak Quickly Located and Shut Off By Wooden Plug.

A break occurred in the 10-inch rider main, in the first ravine east of Lester Park, shortly after 1 o'clock this morning and approximately 2,000,000 gallons of water escaped before the leak was located and the water shut off at that point, by plugging the pipe.

The first intimation received by the water department of the leak was a telephone message from Chief Engineer Palmer at the Lakewood pumping station that the water pressure had dropped from 126 pounds to 24 pounds and that the engines were running away. Mr. Case immediately notified Superintendent Johnson and his crew to get everything in readiness to start. The water pressure remaining indicated to Manager Case that the leakage was near Sixtieth avenue east and he started for that point from his residence, after directing the men to go out there as soon as possible.

The break was found in the frost box over the ravine where the rider main enters the 42-inch main, and just above the elbow. The force of the escaping water had partially torn away the frost box.

The 42-inch main is provided with check valves that prevents a backset of the waters and, as soon as the leak was located, the valves in the rider main were closed and a large wooden plug was put in at the break and securely chained. The water service was then continued after brief interruption.

Manager Case examined the reservoirs and found that the water in the new reservoir had 5,000,000 gallons, the two reservoirs combined having a water supply for three days had it been necessary to stop for that length of time to make repairs.

The rider main which parallels the big supply main is connected to it at a number of places from its present terminus in the ravine to the western terminus at Fortieth avenue east. All water connections are made to the rider main instead of the large steel main.

As there is another connection of the rider main with the 42-inch main at the edge of the ravine the department has deemed it unnecessary to repair that portion out over the ravine beyond putting a permanent cap over the end of the broken pipe. Manager L. N. Case says there is plenty of feed from the other cross pipes.

GIRL BOUND OVER TO THE GRAND JURY.

Owatonna, Minn., Aug. 14.—Wilda Johnson's preliminary hearing on a charge of attempted poisoning came to a close Saturday and the young woman was bound over to the grand jury in bonds of $1,500. Very little testimony was introduced by the defense. Miss Johnson's mother and brother testified that on the night of the alleged crime the prisoner was not absent from home.

BABY'S INSTINCT

Shows He Knew What Food to Stick to.

"The enclosed picture shows my 4-year-old Grape-Nuts boy.

"Since he was 2 years old he has eaten nothing but Grape-Nuts. He demands and gets this food three times a day. This may seem rather unusual, but he does not care for anything else after he has eaten his Grape-Nuts, which he uses with milk or cream, and then he is through with his meal. Even on Thanksgiving day he refused turkey and all the good things that make up that great dinner, and ate his dish of Grape-Nuts and cream with the best results and none of the evils that the other foolish members of the family experienced.

"He is never sick, has a beautiful complexion, and is considered a very handsome boy. May the Postum company prosper and long continue to furnish their wholesome food!" Name given by Postum Company, Battle Creek, Mich.

There's a reason. Read the little book, "The Road to Wellville," in every package.

DROWNED IN BAY

Gray Holston Slips From Stern of Sail Boat.

Was Unable to Swim and Sank Almost Immediately.

G. Gray Holston, the son of D. E. Holston of Hunter's Park, was drowned yesterday morning about 10 o'clock while sailing with friends in the harbor.

The young man, who was 23 years of age, slipped from the stern of the sailboat owned by John C. Swan, when the boat came about on a different tack and being unable to swim sank before assistance could reach him.

Mr. Holston, Philip Smith, son of Principal Smith of the high school, and James Ferguson had been camping on Park Point below the end of the car line.

The young men had planned to attend church in the morning, and as they were preparing to start, John C. Swan passed with a party in his sailboat and offered to give the young men a sail.

They rowed out from their camp and clambered aboard the boat, in which were seated about a dozen members of the Y. P. S. C. E. camping party, Miss Martha Swan, Miss Fannie Lippett, Miss Cecil Holden, Albert

G. GRAY HOLSTON,
Young Man Drowned in the Bay Sunday.

Ehrens and Walter Lippett.

Young Holston seated himself on the fan tail of the boat, with his knees doubled up and his back to windward. He failed to change his position as the boat came about on the tack and as it heeled over the other way he lost his balance and fell into the water.

The young people were so excited by the accident that they scarcely knew what course to take for a moment, but finally cut loose one of the rowboats. The sailboat had been traveling at a rapid pace, and by the time the rowboat was manned the young man had disappeared from sight, and scarcely a ripple marked the place where he sank.

After searching and watching in vain in the hope that the body might come to the surface, the members of the party continued on their course to fulfill the hard duty of notifying the young man's family. The life-saving crew was also informed of the accident and a search for the body will be made today when the water calms.

Mr. Holston is a native of Duluth and has lived here all of his life. He was interested with his father in the lumber business and was preparing to assume the active management of the concern.

SHIELDS LOVER WHO SHOT HER

Mysterious Young Woman Seriously Wounded, Will Say Nothing.

New York, Aug. 14.—Lying on a Bellevue hospital prison cot, with two bullet wounds in her breast and laughing hysterically at Coroner Scholer and Police Captain Thompson, "Mary Hall," mysteriously shot by an admirer in Riverside drive, is still baffling the officials in their efforts to find out who tried to kill her. They have failed even to learn who she is.

All day the girl's eyes flashed in anger or hysterical mirth at the devices of Capt. Thomson and the coroner to trick her into admission that would reveal her own identity or that of the man who shot her. Every artifice known to the police has been brought to bear on the young woman. Capt. Thompson left her bedside for a few moments and conceived a new plan with the view to making the girl divulge the name of the man. He came back hurriedly, placed the "baby" hammerless revolver to the girl's breast and shouted. This sudden action did not shake the remarkable young woman in the least.

"Oh, you can't fool me that way," she said. "I tell you I was shot by a man in Riverside Park. That is all you shall know."

"The man was a coward," exclaimed Capt. Thompson, in a desperate effort to get "Miss Hall" to speak.

"You lie," came from the white lips that trembled in pain and anger.

"He is one of the best men that ever lived and I love him. While I have breath in my body, I'll defend him. He shot me, but that doesn't make him a coward."

Norman Selby, known to the prize ring as "Kid" McCoy, was brought prominently into the mystery surrounding the girl. From the prison ward in Bellevue hospital she sent a letter to Kid McCoy, begging him to come to her.

Acting Police Captain Thompson said last night: "I have sent out an order to hold 'Kid' McCoy and take him to Bellevue hospital to confront this girl. I am satisfied that he knows her whole history and the story of the shooting."

An alarm was also sent out for the arrest of a friend of McCoy, who, it is believed, was with the girl. McCoy is said to have left town on an auto trip.

The girl's composure, despite her critical condition, makes her the most remarkable prisoner-patient the police have had in many months. She has been staying at a hotel, where she registered Wednesday as "Mary Hall of Syracuse, N. Y." She received no mail, had no callers and appeared to be well supplied with money.

While the girl's life has been hanging in the balance, a man has been calling up the hospital at frequent intervals and in excited tones inquiring about "Miss Hall's" condition. The attendant who answered the phone inquired the man's name.

"I won't give you my name. I just want to find out how she is," he answered.

Search of the girl's clothing and suit case gave no clue to her identity. She wore at the time of the shooting a black taffeta silk skirt, white embroidered shirt waist, with elbow gloves and a white lace hat. In her purse was $12.50 and a return ticket to Paterson, N. J.

The police of Syracuse were unable to identify the girl from a telegraphic description and the police of Paterson were equally in the dark. The wounded girl's description corresponds somewhat with that of a Mary McNulty, who was reported on Aug. 5 to have left her home in Madison, N. J.

MAKES RUN FROM DULUTH

W. J. Stevenson's Automobile Reaches St. Paul In 16 Hours.

William J. Stevenson, president of the Duluth Automobile club, accompanied by Mrs. Stevenson and their 4-year-old son, reached St. Paul at 2 o'clock Saturday afternoon, after sixteen hours of actual running time from Duluth. The Sunday Pioneer Press contains a picture of Mr. and Mrs. Stevenson in their automobile on arrival in St. Paul, together with an account of their trip.

The account follows:

"Mr. Stevenson left Duluth on Tuesday. He stopped to visit one day on the way and lost one day at Rutledge, where there is no bridge across the Kettle river. The river is three feet deep there at the shallowest fording place.

"The roads from Duluth to Rush City were in bad shape on account of half-covered corduroy and freuent mud holes. Almost all the way from Rush City to White Bear bad sand hills were encountered. Mr. Stevenson left Duluth in a drenching rain storm, but was not bothered with rainy weather afterward.

"There are forty members of the Duluth Automobile club. It was planned to have a club run to St. Paul last week, but several of the club members are now away on their vacations and the majority of the others are wheat men, whose busy season is just opening.

"Mr. Stevenson and family will visit over Sunday in the Twin Cities and tomorrow will go on to Mankato and St. Charles."

TERRIFIC LANDSLIDE NEAR ASHCROFT, B. C.

Winnipeg, Man., Aug. 14.—At 3:20 p. m. yesterday a tremendous landslide came down about half a mile west of Spencer's Bridge, near Ashcroft, B. C., sweeping the waters of the Thompson river, over the entire Indian village, leaving nothing but wreck in its path. The landslide caused a wave from ten to fifteen feet high up the river, carrying ferry and all small boats before it. Fifteen Indians are reported missing, and twelve injured. Doctors have been sent from Kamloops and Ashcroft.

CURED OF INFLAMMATORY RHEUMATISM.

Mr. Jas. Boyle, the Well-known Restauranteur, Relieved In Few Days and Cured In Three Months.

TESTIMONY.

Two years ago I had been troubled with inflammatory rheumatism. The pain in my body, knees, limbs, toes, soles of my feet and every muscle was great; they were also terribly swollen and lamed.

I went to Mount Clemens, Mich., and tried everything possible to bring relief, but I did not receive any.

I got no relief until I tried Kassmir's Turkish Bath Cure for rheumatism. It gave me immediate relief and I was able to walk about in a few days. In three months I was cured.

I sincerely recommend to all my friends and sufferers of rheumatism to go through a course of Kassmir's Turkish Bath Treatments.

JAS. BOYLE.

This is only one of the many cases I have been successful with, as you may see by consulting my file of testimonials. It makes no difference how long you have been afflicted or in what part of the body the disease lies. I can cure you.

LARGEST ON RECORD

Export of Manufactures For Fiscal Year of 1905.

In Excess of All Combined Exports For Year 1876.

Washington, Aug 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Exports of manufactures from the United States in the fiscal year 1905 were not only the largest on record, but are in excess of the combined exports of all articles in the centennial year, 1876, and nearly $140,000,000 more than the total imports and exports of the country at the close of the Civil war.

Statistics just compiled by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor show that the exports of manufactures in the year just ended amounted to $543,620,297, as against $452,415,921 in the preceding year, $433,851,756 in 1900 and $183,595,743 in 1895. The growth in exports of manufactures far exceeds the growth of population, or the growth in commerce as a whole. This is apparent from an examination of the following table, showing the population, commerce and exports of manufactures of the United States in 1800, 1875 and 1905, and the percentage of increase in each since 1800 and 1875, the beginning of the greatest era in American development:

1905	83,145,000	2,636,074,349	543,620,297
Per cent increase:
1800-1876	750	517	3,930
1876-1905	84	63	441

An examination of the statistics of exports of domestic manufactures, especially in recent years, by articles and countries of destination, shows that about thirty manufactured articles were exported during 1905, with value in excess of $1,000,000 each, and that of these articles all except seven showed an increase as compared with exports of 1904.

Iron and steel manufactures supply about one-fourth of the manufactured articles exported from the United States, the total in 1905 having been $134,727,921, as against $111,948,586 in the preceding year, an increase of nearly $23,000,000. Steel rails showed an increase of $6,000,000, chiefly in shipments to Canada, South America, Mexico, the West Indies, Japan and other oriental countries, in several of which railroad development is proceeding at a rapid rate. Machinery also showed an increase in 1905 of more than $6,000,000 over 1904. A conspicuous feature, however, is the large increase in exports of locomotives to Japan, 151 engines having been sent thither in 1905, as against 74 in the previous year. Mexico and Argentina increased their purchases of American sewing machines, while Japan increased her purchases of electrical machinery and builders' hardware, each in a substantial degree.

Copper manufactures, consisting largely of pigs and bars, form the item of second importance in our exports and manufactures, the total being $86,225,291 in 1905, as compared with $57,142,081 in the preceding year. This growth of practically $30,000,000 in a single year is accounted for by an increase of nearly $10,000,000 in exports to China, $3,000,000 to the United Kingdom, $1,500,000 to France, $3,000,000 to Germany, $4,500,000 to Netherlands, $1,250,000 to Russia and nearly $2,000,000 to other countries.

Refined mineral oil ranks third in the exports of manufactures, the total being $71,888,317, as against $71,753,552 in the preceding year. Owing to the fall in price the value remained practically stationary, despite the fact that the quantity increased from 847,000,000 gallons in 1904 to 951,000,000 in 1905. The countries to which the largest exportations were made were United Kingdom, 221,000,000 gallons; Germany, 142,000,000; Netherlands, 117,000,000; China, 90,00,000; Belgium, 46,000,000; British East Indies and Japan, each about 30,000,000; Italy, nearly 29,000,000, and France, twenty-seven and three-fifths millions. South America, as a whole, took about 55,00,000.

Cotton manufactures present one of the striking features of the year's record, having advanced from $22,403,713 in 1904 to $49,666,080 in the year just ended. The growth occurred chiefly in cotton-cloth exports; $14,696,199 being the total in 1904 and $41,320,542 the figure for 1905. To China there was an increase of about 400,000,000 yards over last year's exportation of 76,900,000, and the value of our cotton-cloth exports to that country increased from $4,000,000 in 1904 to $24,750,000 in 1905. Japan was the only other country to show a considerable increase in takings from us, the total being 16,000,000 yards, valued at $1,125,000, as against less than 440,000 yards in 1904, valued at $55,000.

Leather, and manufactures of, fourth in importance in the list of manufactured articles exported, showed an increase of $4,000,000, the total in 1905 having been $38,000,000, as compared with $34,000,000 in the preceding year. In this class, also, Japan should be credited with the chief increase. To Japan we exported 16,000,000 pounds of sole leather, valued at $4,146,428, as against 2,000,000 pounds, with about $500,000 in the preceding year. The increase in boots and shoes to the West Indies and Mexico, each of these countries being credited with about $400,000 in excess of the 1904 figures, while the total increase in boot and shoe exports to all countries was but little over $818,000.

Other important articles exported were: Agricultural implements, $20,750,000; chemicals, drugs, dyes, etc., nearly $16,000,000; wood manufactures, $12,500,000; cars, carriages and vehicles, $10,665,000; scientific instruments, $8,000,000; paper and manufactures of, $8,125,000; paraffin and paraffin wax, $7,750,000; fibre manufactures, $6,750,000; tobacco manuufactures, $5,665,000; books, maps, etc., nearly $5,000,000, and India-rubber manufactures, $4,750,000.

The following table shows the exports of domestic manufactures and the total exports from the United States decennially from 1800 to 1900, and annually since that year to date:

1800	$2,493,755	$70,971,780
1810	3,951,154	66,757,970

A team of Bay City lobstermen would have looked like big league stars beside the Duluth White Sox yesterday, and the red-shirted minions of King Edward had the Champs badly faded.

After knocking Green out of the box in the first inning, and getting sweet revenge for the shut-out of Friday, the Champs appeared to think they had done their duty, and started one of the most grewsome exhibitions seen at Athletic Park this year. Kicks, boots, fumbles, muffs and errors of every kind known to fandom were worked in, and in addition to these the Champs invented some new ones of their own.

The weather may have had something to do with it. A cold northeaster was blowing across the diamond, driving the dust into the fielders' eyes, and making it difficult to judge fly balls, but the same breeze benumbed the fingers of the Winnipeg players, and they went through the game without a misplay.

The great Zelder, who was recently purchased from Crookston, replaced Green in the box in the second and pitched good ball throughout the remaining eight innings.

The first inning was a very good sample, and the Canucks started off by taking three runs on one hit. Howell drew a base on balls, and Piper bunted. Miller fielded and threw to Meneice in time to get the runner, but Sam dropped the ball. Gatewood bunted three times and retired himself, and Zelder drew a scratch single. Leighty bunted at the ball three times, and retired, and Tucker sent an easy one down to Newman. The little shortstop fielded and threw wild to second in an effort to catch Zelder, the ball going to right field. All three base runners scored before it was recovered. Claytor was retired at first.

The Champs started after Green viciously in the last half of the inning, and got back all the runs they had lost. Newman got a base on balls to start with, and Bennett slammed out a two-bagger, scoring the short stop. Si went to third on Meneice's single, and scored on O'Dea's long outfield fly. Erickson's three-bagger scored Meneice, but Weiler and Nehr were easy outs, McAleese drawing a base.

That was enough for Mr. Green, and the gentleman with the verdant name was relegated to third, while Zelder went in to pitch. For eight innings the Champs could do nothing with Zelder and with errorless support he had little difficulty in holding the heavy hitting White Sox.

Meanwhile the Duluth players continued their little travesty, putting up a fielding exhibition that would drive an ordinary pitcher into the bug ward of a crazy house.

In the second, Rogers drew a base on balls, Green singled, Howell sacrificed, and Piper cleared the bases with a two-bagger. Gatewood reached first on a fielder's choice which caught Piper at third, and Zelder reached first on Weiler's error, and second on Meneice's error, Gatewood going to third on the same play. Leighty was the third out.

Green drew a base on balls in the fourth, went to second on a sacrifice and scored on Piper's second two-bagger. Piper scored on Weiler's second error, which let Gatewood reach first. Zelder singled, and Gatewood scored on McAleese's error. Tucker made the third out.

Miller was getting a little weary of the comedy by the time, the seventh inning had been reached, and was pitching without much heart. Claytor led off with a double in the seventh, and Green followed with another. Piper, who had been hitting Miller's curves viciously all afternoon, swung for a home run, and cleared the bases.

The yawning void which occupied the space under the caps of the Winnipeg players, where the grey matter should be, lost them Saturday's game, in spite of the fact that they outhit the Champs and fielded as well as did the winners.

As soon as a Winnipeg player would get on a base, something seemed to break loose and rattle about in his thinking apparatus, and he would either hug the base until the coacher shoved him off, or start on a mad dash for the next corner at a most unexpected moment.

The Maroons made a quick getaway, and rushed two men across the plate before the Champs got into the game. Piper and Gatewood singled, and Tucker rapped one out to right field. Si started after it, stubbed his toe, lugged the wounded member for a minute, and then continued the chase on his hands and knees, while Piper and Gatewood chased each other around the bases. Si finally reached the ball and threw it to first. Sam was asleep at the switch and both runners scored before he woke up.

Something dropped in the fourth. Meneice singled and O'Dea slammed the ball over the fence for a home run, tying the score. Neighbors continued the bombardment by hitting for a single, and reached second on a passed ball. Weiler reached first on an error, and McAleese hit for two bases. Neighbors scored, and Weiler reached third, where he was caught a moment later in a double play with Nehr, who sent up a little pop fly. Erickson's long single scored McAleese. There was loud applause from the fanatics at this pleasant little session.

The Maroons came back in the sixth with two runs that knotted up the score again. Gatewood, Zelder and Tucker singled in quick succession, and the former scored and Zelder went to third on Si's bad throw to the plate. With but one man out, Zelder seemed suddenly moved by some strange impulse, and started on a mad dash for the plate, while Erickson was preparing to throw the ball. McAleese playfully poked him in the ribs about three feet the wrong side of the rubber. Tucker scored on Claytor's double, which would also have brought Zelder in had he been patient.

This little session put Erick Edward Erickson to the bad, and he retired in favor of Miller, who managed to shut the Maroons out for the remaining three innings, although he caused the fanatics occasional heart throbs.

The Champs won the game in the seventh on singles by Newman and Bennett and O'Dea's safe hit.

The game was clinched in the eighth on Gatewood's error, a single by Weller, two bases on balls and Roger's wild throw. The score:

SUPERIOR WINS.

Grand Forks Batters Unable to Hit Smith.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—The Longshoremen took the final game of the series from the Tigers Saturday by a score of 3 to 1. The game was an excellent one from the start until the finish, but the Tigers were unable to find Smith, and three little scattered hits were all that could be secured from him. Houch was on the rubber for the Tigers, but allowed eight or nine hits too many. The errors were divided. Anderson was the only Tiger to score. The Tigers did some fast fielding getting two doubles. The first double was made from Caldwell to Varco to Mullane, and the second was made on a pretty throw from the right garden by Jarvie to Mullane. Only two players took more than a one-base hit, and they were McShane who took a two-bagger, and French who reached for a three-bagger.

SPLIT EVEN.

Fargo Wins on Saturday and Crookston Sunday.

Fargo, N. D., Aug. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—Stripp presented the ball game yesterday to Crookston on a platter by coarse work in the second inning. Umpire Quigg prevented the locals from tying the score in the eighth by one of the rankest decisions of the many he has made on the local grounds, and Centerfielder Olson of the visitors prevented the locals from winning by a sensational catch in the ninth.

It was a strenuous Sunday game and the fans were wrought up to a high pitch. Umpire Quigg will be less popular than ever after his work in the eighth and at the close of the game some small boy threw mud at him and Capt. Stripp had to act as a body guard for the decision dispenser to the car. The only other feature of the game was a lucky spear by Schlatter in the ninth.

DULUTH SHOTS TAKE PRIZES

Win First and Second Money at Grand Rapids.

Duluth trap-shooters covered themselves with glory and incidentally captured several wads of prize money at the tournament just held by the Grand Rapids Gun club.

They defeated every professional but one on the grounds, and took first and second places among the amateurs.

T. J. Storey headed the list with 272 birds out of 320, while J. W. Nelson came second with 270. Nelson also distinguished himself by shooting "within the money" in every event.

Jackson finished fourth in the averages, while Loud and Berry were sixth and seventh.

Young was the only professional to beat Storey, breaking 275 targets.

Owing to the high speed of the trap, none of the averages were as good as those made at Duluth last week.

AMATEUR GAMES.

First National Bankers Win From Hardware Men.

The First National bank baseball team sprung a surprise on the Kelley-How-Thomson nine, winning Saturday's game by a score of 7 to 4. Alworth's timely three-bagger in the seventh brought in three of the scores, giving the bankers the game. The score by innings:

Batteries—McLean and Dow; Geer and Kallum.

The pitching of Frank Sommers won the game for the Gophers against the Cascades yesterday. Makowski shut the Gophers out for four innings, but went to pieces in the fifth and allowed fourteen runs in one inning.

The Morks defeated the Oak Halls yesterday in a five-inning game by a score of 11 to 1.

"HANK" HAFF VERY ILL.

New York, Aug. 14.—Captain "Hank" Haff, defender of the America's cup, is lying dangerously ill at his home, in Islip, L. I., and in an adjoining room his wife is in an equally critical condition. Captain Haff is nearly 68 years old, and fear is felt that he will not recover. The serious condition of each patient has been kept from the other.

THE YACHT RACES

The Crews Were Partly Composed of Ladies Saturday.

Yacht Club Formally Opened—Parade of Boats on Bay.

The formal opening of the Duluth Yacht club's new club house on Park Point occurred Saturday, and in connection with the event there were ladies' yacht races on the bay in the afternoon and an illuminated boat parade in the evening. Fifteen yachts and six launches, prettily lighted with Japanese lanterns, paraded the bay and canal, presenting a fine sight, and attracting hundreds of people to the club house and other points of vantage along the point and at the piers.

A dance, with La Brosse's orchestra furnishing the music, was a feature at the club house during the evening. The day's events were successes in every way. The races were pulled off in good shape. Ten boats, their crews made up partly of women, sailed over the triangular course of six miles in a free-for-all, which was won by Feather at 5:02. At the request of the members of the fair sex who directed the movements of the boats their names are withheld from publication. Frolic crossed the line at 5:22 and four minutes later the Florence came in. The race was not included in the cup and pennant series.

The house committee came in for many compliments on the charming manner in which the club house was decorated. The evening was an ideal one for the parade and dance, and appeared to be thoroughly enjoyed by club members and their guests. Commodore H. Johnson and Captain R. W. Marshall had charge of the parade.

In the cup series, the fourth event of which will be sailed next Saturday, the Feather is in the lead with fifteen points to her credit, a margin of one point over the Scud, which stands second with fourteen points. In the pennant series the Scud is first with eighteen points and the Feather second with seventeen. The Whirlwind is third with sixteen points, so that this contest is a very close one. In the mid-week series, sailed by the Class B boats only, Fred Smith is in the lead. As the last race in the series will be pulled off next Wednesday it is a certainty that Mr. Smith will come out with the greatest number of points to his credit. He has too great a lead to be beaten, even though he comes in last next Wednesday.

ST. PAUL DEFEATS SOO AT LACROSSE.

St. Paul, Aug. 14.—The St. Paul Lacrosse team yesterday defeated the strong Canadian Soo team by a score of 5 to 0. The game, although played on a soggy field and through intermittent showers, was full of brilliant features, the offense of the local players being especially strong. The winning of yesterday's game has an important bearing upon the challenge recently issued by the St. Paul team for a contest with Winnipeg for the international cup.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—The lacrosse team of Stratford, Can., was defeated here yesterday by the Calumets of Chicago by the score of 9 to 6. The game was fast and full of brilliant plays throughout, but the team work of the local aggregation was too much for the visitors, who depended chiefly on individual work to score.

WILL JOIN THEIR BOAT

Members of Naval Militia Leave For the Sault.

Accompanied by the Minnesota Naval Militia band, seventy members of the two local divisions of the reserves, marched from the Armory to the Union depot yesterday afternoon and boarded the South Shore train for Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., where this morning they joined the naval training vessel Fern.

The battalion was in command of Lieut. J. E. Lawrence of the senior grade, assisted by Lieut. George Scully of the First division and Lieut. C. E. Melby of the Second division.

The Fern was expected to arrive at the Sault last evening with the crew that joined the boat at Montreal and Ogdensburg. This week the Fern, with the naval militia will cruise on Lake Superior and will arrive in Duluth next Sunday, if the plans of the commanding officer are carried out. While on this cruise, the first annual outing of the naval militia, various boat drills will be had together with landing parties and drills by signal during the day and the evening. The Fern will not receive her armament until after she arrives in Duluth.

The training ship will be permanently stationed here during the time that she is at the disposal of the Minnesota Naval Militia and a number of short trips are likely to be taken for drill purposes before the close of the season.

LINE TO ORIENT

Will Resume Business In a Short Time.

San Francisco, Aug. 14.—The Toyo Kisen Kaisha steamship line is about to resume business between here and the Orient. It has been officially announced that the steamship America would leave Yokohama for this port on or about Sept. 16, and from that time the regular service of this line will be resumed. The two other steamships belonging to this company, the Nippon and the Hongkong will go into service as soon as they can be put in condition. They have been out of commission for more than a year. Shortly after the war between Russia and Japan broke out these three vessels were changed into auxillary cruisers and have since been in charge of the government. Now they are once more turned back to the steamship company, which will put them back into the passenger service.

BOAT CLUB SPORTS

Close Finishes Mark the Eight and Four-Oared Races.

There was no lack of excitement and spectacular features in the program of water sports pulled off by the Duluth Boat club Saturday afternoon.

In the eight-oared shell race, John Peyton of the crew which was in the lead, broke his oar lock and leaped overboard, while the seven other men finished the race, losing out by about a length.

In the four-oared shell race two of the shells fouled and the remaining two made a close finish.

The game of water baseball brought the day's sport to a grand climax. It was hardly a brilliant success as a scientific exhibition, but there was no lack of interest. The players were attired in beautiful and artistic uniforms, one team wearing skirts of red mosquito netting, with pink jackets over bathing suits, and the other pink trousers and red neckties. The effect was rather startling when they appeared on the float.

As the game progressed the garments became lost in the fray, and the players got down to their bathing suits.

The umpire, W. S. Telford, was attired in a life preserver and a megaphone.

The home plate was placed on the float, the pitcher standing on a raft, about twenty feet distant. First base, second base and third base were on other floats, and the players swam the distance between the bases, the fielders diving after the ball from their respective positions.

The features were too numerous to mention, and the game was called at the end of the second inning, with the score 0 to 0, on account of wet grounds.

The line-up:

Church	p	Glass
A. Puck	1b	H. Peyton
Jones	c	C. Puck
Leach	2b	Hulst
Rockwell	3b	Haroldson

In the canoe race, A. Puck and Talboys won an easy victory, the other two canoes, manned by Whyte and Close, and Dennis and Rockwell, fouling each other over the great part of the course and finishing close together.

The summary of the races are as follows:

Eight-oar race—Crew No. 1, B. M. Peyton, Church, Haroldson, Peterson, Brewer, Spencer, Telford, Talboys coxswain Hanson, first. Crew No. 2, Jones, J. Peyton, Glass, Rockwell, H. Peyton, McPhail, McGregor, Mapp, coxswain, Close.

Four-oared race—Colquohoun, McPhail, B. M. Peyton, H. Peyton, first; Haroldson, Jones, Rockwell, Talboys, second; Dennis, Glass, Church, Peterson and Leach, Puck, Brewer and J. Peyton fouled each other.

Canoe race—Puck and Talboys, first; Dennis and Rockwell, second; Close and Whyte, third.

Victoria, Aug. 14.—News has been received from Port Arthur that over seventy vessels including the battleships Peresviet, Poltava, Retvizan, Pobieda and Pallada and the cruiser Bayan have been raised, and the work of salving the merchant steamers sunk at the harbor mouth for blocking purpoes has been let to Japanese firms.

DEAD WILL NUMBER FIFTY.

Seattle,

SENSATION SPOILED

The Story of Consignment of Seeds Is Run Down.

Printing Office Will Be Investigated Before Congress Meets.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—A short time ago a highly sensational article appeared in a Washington newspaper in which the writer attempted to show that the department of agriculture had unfairly consigned a vast quantity of valuable seeds to a certain farm in Virginia in which Congressmen Wadsworth and Hull are interested. It was asserted that farmers of the neighborhood are "very curious about consignments of grass seed and shrubbery to the High Point Dairy farm a short distance from Gunston, Virginia." Apparently this curiosity was accentuated because the farm "is owned by Representatives J. A. T. Hull of Iowa, and James W. Wadsworth of New York." It was further declared that "the department has sent about $300 worth of grass seed" there.

The writer has taken pains to ascertain how much truth there was in the story and has found that it is a case of three black crows repeated. In the first place the High Point Dairy farm is not owned by Representatives Hull and Wadsworth, although these gentlemen have an interest in the place. Some five or six years ago James D. Yeomans of Iowa, then a member of the interstate commerce commission became impressed with the opportunities afforded for scientific dairy farming upon one of the partially abandoned estates on the Potomac below Mount Vernon. He interested Congressman Hull in the idea and also convinced a wealthy friend in Chicago to join the venture. A tract of about five thousand acres of practically exhausted land was purchased, several hundred head of dairy cows, Jerseys, Guernseys, Holsteins and grades were brought East from Iowa and modern dairy buildings were erected. Besides a steamer was purchased for the purpose of bringing the milk and cream to Washington and for the past three years the product of this dairy has been looked upon as among the very best which comes to the national capital. From the outset the entire herd of milch cows has been kept out of the pastures. They are fed by the process known as spiling; that is to say green crops are cut and fed to the stock in the stables. Green wheat, rye, corn, clover and alfalfa are among the forage crops produced and fed out.

Naturally an enterprise of this character attracted the attention of the department of agriculture and Chief Galloway decided to ask the manager of the place to test a few varieties of alfalfa seed, which had been procured for just such purposes. In all something less than a bushel was sent to High Point. The highest price of alfalfa seed quoted in recent years is $12 a bushel, or 20 cents a pound, and that is as near as the $3 story comes to the truth.

Mr. Wadsworth's connection with the place, by the way, is very insignificant. Mr. Wadsworth is a farmer and a stockman. He and Mr. Hull are warm personal friends. Mr. Hull desired Wadsworth to become interested in the enterprise and he induced his friend to buy ten shares of stock at $100 a share, a total of $1,000. As the total value of the High Point farm, together with buildings, machinery and stock, is in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 it will be seen that Mr. Wadsworth's interest is not very extensive and even if the department of agriculture had sent $300 worth of seeds to the place the congressman's interest in that consignment would have amounted to less than $2.

As to the shipment of shrubbery, that is easy. Under an act of congress each member of the house and senate is entitled to some fifty trees or shrubs every year. Those trees are prepared for shipment early in the spring. There are a great many congressmen who never claim their quota and these, being useless to the department, are frequently sent to the dump and burned up. To prevent their destruction this year a few score were sent to High Point farm and because two members of congress are stockholders in this farm and because the department of agriculture is in the throes of half a dozen investigations a space writer in Virginia has built up a sensation. The value of the seed and shrubs sent to High Point about equals the price paid for a column of "space" in the newspaper in which the story first appeared. It has since been reproduced in nearly every city in the country.

It is announced that the so-called Keep commission will completely overhaul the affairs of the government printing office before congress reconvenes. The annual expenses of this great print shop is in the neighborhood of $7,000,000. It is hinted that at least a million of this vast sum might be cut without the slightest damage to the service. But the economy, if it comes, will not be through the commission over which Assistant Secretary Keep presides but through the work of the house committee on printing, of which Representative Perkins of New York is a member. Mr. Perkins had not served on the committee thirty days when he reached the conclusion that the annual expenditures for printing a considerable proportion is virtually thrown away. Hundreds of thousands of pages of manuscript are put into type each year which are never seen by a reader after they leave the presses. Documents are dupllcatd and triplicated and in each instance the type is reset. The annual output of volumes of which no one reads is gigantic in proportions. Mr. Perkins called the attention of congress and the country to this waste of public money in a speech on an appropriation bill two years ago. But his remarks were unheeded because nearly every member fears to antagonize the powerful union which controls affairs in the government printing office. But the row created through the wholesale purchase of printing machines has at last directed public attention to the necessity for a revision of the printing affairs and a congressional committee will take hold of the subject. It is not likely that anything like a monetary scandal will be developed as this great institution is blessed with a force of officials who, for integrity and uprightness, will compare with any body of men in the world. But congress can easily save a million a year in this one office without the slightest detriment to any one and with no scandal whatever.

The name of Mrs. Charlotte Smith has again appeared in the public prints, because of her appeal to John D. Rockefeller for aid for the Woman's Rescue league. Mrs. Smith is better known in Washington than anywhere else in the country. For nearly a quarter of a century she has been pointed out as a mild crank, whose fad is the uplifting of those of her sex who need a helping hand. Few of those who see Mrs. Smith daily have the slightest idea that the woman at whom so much fun has been poked has devoted an income as large as a congressman's salary to aiding the unfortunate who need aid. Yet that is just exactly what Mrs. Smith has been doing for more than twenty years. Her somewhat rusty costume is recognized a block away, and many people have supposed that her absolute carelessness in the matter of dress was due to lack of funds to buy better. Yet Charlotte Smith, "the crank," the woman who can never talk of the distress of others without tears, could today live in absolute luxury if she would abandon her efforts in behalf of her less fortunate sisters. But she refuses these offers, and instead continues to draw her income of $5,000 per annum, nearly every dollar of which is devoted to the cause she has made her life work.

There are nearly a score of more or less morebund reciprocity treaties filed away in the archives of the senate. (They used to be called dusty archives, but the dust is kept out since Hon. Charles G. Bennett became secretary). These treaties will probably never be ratified. But three new ones at least are likely to be sent to the senate for consideration very soon after that body reassembles in November. The most important diplomatic duty which Mr. Root inherited from Mr. Hay is the preparation and negotiation of a new convention with China, affecting the immigration of the citizens of one country to the other. The howl of total exclusion of the Chinese is not as loud today as it was when Dennis Kearney spouted from the sand lots of San Francisco, twenty years ago. Then, too, China has in Wu Ting Fang a statesman who knows something of diplomacy. It is safe to assume that the new treaty will not be entirely one-sided, but Mr. Root has a delicate job to determine just how far he can go towards conceding Chinese demands.

Next to the Chinese negotiations those with Germany looking to a new commercial treaty are the most important. It is learned that negotiations now pending in Berlin are proceeding to the entire satisfaction of the president, but details of the progress made are not obtainable as yet.

Mr. Root, during his visit to Labrador, is looking into the question relating to the rights of American and Canadian fishermen off the Newfoundland. The New Englanders want free bait rom the Canadians but they don't want the "Canucks" to enjoy a free market for their catch. The problem of a duty satisfactory to all parties is a difficult one but Mr. Root has tackled it and he will undoubtedly succeed in bringing about an agreement between the province and the republic which will settle for many years the fishery question which has caused so much bad feeling between the two countries during the past thirty years.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

TERRIBLE DEED

Woman Asks Husband Where Heart Is and Shoots Him.

Drowned Her Daughter and Ends Life With Carbolic Acid.

New Albany, Ind., Aug. 14.—After deliberately drowning her 8-year-old daughter in a bath tub at her home at Thomas street and Ekin avenue, Mrs. Chester Winstandley, a woman of prominent family here, fired a pistol shot in the side of her husband, who was sick in bed with typhoid fever, and then in frantic haste swallowed the contents of a six-ounce bottle of carbolic acid. Mrs. Winstandley died an hour later after suffering horrible agony, but at last accounts there was a chance for the husband's recovery. With the exception of her victims and her aged mother, Mrs. Matilda Renshaw, Mrs. Winstandley was alone in the house at the time the terrible tragedy was enacted. Shortly before 4 o'clock she said to her mother, "Mamma, you lie down and take a nap, while I go upstairs and give Ruth a bath. When I get through I will return and help you with the work."

Mrs. Renshaw lay down on a couch in a downstairs room, while her daughter took Ruth upstairs for a bath. A short time later Mrs. Renshaw was aroused by screams that came from her son-in-law, who lay sick in an upstairs room. Rushing up the stairway as rapidly as she could, the woman was horrified to find her daughter wrapped in her husband's arms in the throes of death from the poisoning, and Mr. Winstandley bleeding from a ghastly wound in his side. Dazed by the sight and scarcely realizing what she did, Mrs. Renshaw rushed to the bathroom to see what had become of her granddaughter Ruth, when another horrible sight met her gaze. Lying face downward in a tub full of water lay the dead body of the little girl, attired in her night clothing, which she had worn all day, her mother from that time neglecting to dress her. The grand mother hastily lifted the child from the water and laid her on the floor, when she ran downstairs and frantically cried for help.

Neighbors rapidly gathered in, physicians were hastily summoned and in the midst of the confusion those who arrived attempted to do something for the dead and dying. Mrs. Winstandley, who had slipped from her husband's arms, lay senseless on the floor, and Mr. Winstandley had become unconscious from the effect of the wound and the shock. The wife was carried to another room, where she died a few minutes later, and the physicians exerted a heroic effort to save the little girl.

After the physicians had worked with him for half an hour or more Mr. Winstandley had regained consciousness and made a statement concerning the horrible affair.

He said that his wife came noiselessly into the room and, sitting down on the bed, fondly stroked his forehead for a minute, when she said:

"Beloved, tell me just where your heart beats."

He threw back the covers and placed her hand on his heart, when she suddenly exclaimed, "I am going to shoot you!" and, quickly drawing a revolver from her bosom, she fired at his heart. The terrified husband uttered a scream and at the same time, with what strength he could summon in his weakened condition, grasped the weapon and attempted to wrench it from her hand. By this time the footsteps of Mrs. Renshaw were heard on the stairway, and Mrs. Winstandley let go of the weapon and, grasping a bottle from the dresser, rushed into the adjoining room. Returning before her aged mother she threw herself into her husband's arms, the fiery acid burning her hands, face and throat, but she never uttered a word.

No cause is assigned for the terrible deed save that the woman must have been suffering from a mental aberration, and it is evident that the deed was planned at least twenty-four hours before it was executed. Mrs. Winstandley left her home Saturday, and it was supposed that she went down to this city and bought the drug and cartridges for the thirty-two caliber revolver owned by her husband, who for a year had not had a cartridge in the house, but the label on the bottle showed that she bought the carbolic acid in Louisville, and it is supposed that instead of going to a New Albany store she went to Louisville and bought both the cartridges and the drug.

All day long she neglected to dress her little daughter, Ruth, which is something unusual, and allowed the child to play about the house in her night clothes. She insisted that her sister, Mrs. Harry Gilles, and her husband, who occupy the same house, go to the Chautauquay assembly, which is in progress at Glenwood park. As soon as Mr. and Mrs. Gilles left the house she began to make preparations to put into execution the horrible deed she had evidently contemplated.

Mrs. Winstandley was 34 years of age and was a daughter of the late J. M. Renshaw, a prominent citizen of this city. Both she and her husband were natives of New Albany, and both belonged to old and prominent families. Mr. Winstandley is a son of the late Isaac S. Winstandley, former cashier of the old New Albany Banking company, and a member of a family that for generations has been in the banking business here. At present Mr. Winstandley holds the position of shipping clerk for the Peerless Manufacturing company in Louisville.

Since their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Winstandley, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gilles, the latter a sister of Mrs. Winstandley, her mother, Mrs. Matilda Renshaw, and her younger sister, Miss Mary Renshaw, together with the little girl, Ruth, who was the only child and the light of the household, constituted a happy family. The devotion of the entire family was always a subject of comment among their friends.

MORE THAN MILLION

Portland, Ore., Aug. 14.—Gate admissions at the Lewis and Clark exposition reached and passed the million mark last week, and are now climbing rapidly up toward the second million.

These figures are very gratifying to the administration department, to the other administration officials and to the people of Portland and the Pacific Northwest.

F. B. Davison, chief of the department of admissions at Portland, who has had experience in the same department at several expositions, expresses the belief that the Lewis and Clark fair will run Omaha a close race, and in all probability will win out in the total attendance, though at Omaha the exposition was open five full months, while the present enterprise is to be open but four and a half months. Omaha's total attendance was 2,613,508.

Mr. Davison expects a considerable increase in the atendance after the wheat farmers of the "Inland Empire" shall have finished their harvesting and the hop growers of Oregon and Washington shall have gathered their hop crops.

Nothing succeeds like success, and the Portland Fair has shown by actual and indisputable figures that it is a success. As it is a Western enterprise the entire West is to be congratulated, and if the East still imagines that "nothing good can come out of Nazareth" let that section take notice of the most successful of all American expositions.

The big spectacular event of the month will be the reproduction of the Custer massacre, on the 29th, having been postponed from the 10th. This will take place on the government peninsula, where a company of United States regulars, with an officer impersonating the gallant Gen. Custer, will be theoretically killed and scalped by a fierce band of 200 Umatilla Indians, in war paint and feathers. The chromo picture entitled "Custer's Last Stand" is familiar to most Americans, and it is this picture that will be reproduced in action by the soldiers and Indians. Some visitors from the East, who imagine that the West is still wild and woolly, have expressed a little disappointment at not finding this section still overrun by Indians, but they will have a taste of the real redskin warfare on the 29th, and the spectacle will be new and novel also to the Westerners, whose parents quit fighting Indians long ago and turned their bayonets into plowshares and pruning hooks.

KILLED BY LIONS.

Blackpool, Eng., Aug. 14.—Two lions, the property of the city, were found loose yesterday morning in the yard adjoining their cage, together with portions of the body of a workingman. It appears that the man, on the previous night, made the boast that he would enter the lions' cage. Evidently in an attempt to carry out this boast, he opened the cage. The animals escaped and killed him, gorging themselves on his body.

MAGAZINE ARTIST DROWNED.

Three Rivers, Mich., Aug. 14.—John C. Gilbert of Chicago, a magazine artist, was drowned at a Corey Lake resort, ten miles west of this city, yesterday. He was out in a sailboat with a party, when he jumped overboard to swim ashore. When about half way to shore he threw up his hands and called for help, but sank in about sixty feet of water before help arrived. His body was not recovered until four hours later. Mrs. Gilbert was in the boat at the time.

MADAME BELCHER'S EXPERIENCE

A Society Leader's Escape.

In exclusive and aristocratic circles of one of America's leading cities moved a refined, witty and most amiable lady, whose society was much sought after in spite of the fact that every now and then she was, much to the annoyance of her associates, and greatly to her own mortification, obliged to gulp up a large quantity of gas that was constantly accumulating in her stomach.

Leading physicians on two continents had failed to relieve her of flatulent dyspepsia, that was so pronounced that one could not long be in her presence without being aware of it.

Some one once spoke of her as "Madam Belcher," and other inconsiderate people repeated the expression. Reaching the lady's ear it so provoked, distressed and mortified her that she thereafter withdrew from society altogether.

At last she concluded to try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, the advertisements of which she had often seen in the papers, but had not heeded because she thought them too cheap to amount to much, and not to be compared with a five-dollar prescription from a fashionable doctor, that would cost several dollars more to be filled at a fashionable drug store.

To her surprise and joy she found that the tablets gave prompt and positive relief, and a few boxes made a perfect and permanent cure.

She is no longer "Madam Belcher," but has re-entered society and is one of its most sought-after and admired representatives.

There are belchers in all walks of life, people who cannot properly digest their food, which stays in the stomach, and, decomposing, gives rise to gasses that distress, and the belching of which, humiliates.

These cases can all be cured cheaply, privately and satisfactorily. All one has to do is to go to the nearest drug store and buy Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which only cost 50 cents a box, take them according to the printed directions, and they will do the rest. If you have dyspepsia in any form or stage; if you cannot digest a good square meal three times a day and get only strength and satisfaction out of it; try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and you will be pleased.

FAST TRAIN WRECKED

Twelve Persons Lose Their Lives Near Vermilion, Ohio.

Passenger and Freight Trains Come Together at High Speed.

Cleveland, Aug. 14.—A fast eastbound passenger train on the Nickel Plate road collided with a westbound freight train early yesterday at Kishman, Ohio, near Vermilion, resulting in the death of twelve persons, while at least twenty-five others were injured, eight of whom will probably die. The wreck, according to the officials of the company, was caused by a misunderstanding of the orders or neglect to obey them on the part of the crew of the freight train.

The dead:

FRANK WEAVER, 35 years old, Findlay, Ohio.

DOMENICO POMODORO.

ANTONIO GRILLO.

JOSEPH PARACI.

FRANK BUSCINI.

FRANCISCO SCILLA.

NATALE DIRMORA.

ANTONIO ACHILLE.

—— GALLAGUS, laborer.

—— TRAVOTA, laborer.

CALOGNO CAGLIANI, laborer, hurled through car window, died in Lorain hospital as a result of injuries.

The injured: John W. Long, 31, Cleveland, right leg broken; Richard A. Long, son of J. W. Long, right leg amputated, hip cut, head and body contused, may die; Mrs. John W. Long, back sprained and head cut; Louis Reinbolt, Rascome, Ohio, compound fracture left leg, foot crushed and body bruised; E. E. O'Hara, Findlay, Ohio, right leg amputated; B. L. Kerr, Grafton, Ohio, contusions on both legs; John W. Murphy, West Haven, Conn., right foot bruised and body lacerated; Philip Baskim, Tiffin, Ohio, back sprained; Floyd Trumer, Ada, Ohio, left leg broken face badly cut; John Dexter, Tiffin, Ohio, three ribs broken and scalp wound; Frank Phillips, Findlay, Ohio, left shoulder broken; John Jafa, back sprained; Leonardo Syracuse, back sprained and body bruised; Charles Buccufusu, back and both ankles sprained; Veona Leonardo, two ribs broken; Charles Dumont, left hip and back contused; Joseph Dumont, two ribs broken, back cut and internal injuries, may die; Tony Trevalli, back and both ankles sprained; Charles Degar, right hip and back bruised; Albert Jama, right ankle sprained; Frank Gallia, ankle sprained; Tony Veranca, ankle sprained and leg badly lacerated.

Roy Winch of Findlay, who, although severely injured, was the first man to rush into the wrecked smoking car to take part in the work of rescue, gave the following account of the terrible sight within:

"The living, the wounded and the dead were piled in one indiscriminate mass, all over the floor of the car, the living entangled with the arms and legs of the dead, and many of them pinned down by the dead bodies of the Italians.

"Some of the dead were so badly smashed that through their mouths protruded hideous masses of intestines.

"Terrorized by the death of their companions, the hiss of escaping steam, and the fear of death in the darkness, the Italians fought with one another and trampled the living and dead in their frantic efforts to get out of the car. Several of them were almost as badly injured by fighting each other as by the wreck."

Aside from the engineer, the men killed on the passenger train were all riding in the smoking car at the head of the train and were mostly foreign laborers in the employ of the Standard Oil company, on their way from Fort Seneca, Ohio, to Brookfield, in charge of a foreman. Engineer C. C. Poole, of the passenger train, was killed at his post while trying to reach for the air brake, after seeing the headlight of the freight train. His fireman, Haefner, saved himself by jumping.

The high speed of the passenger train threw its locomotive and first three coaches over on the engine of the freight train, telescoping the smoker and the car following. The forward cars of the freight train were splintered to fragments.

Of the passengers in the smoker, none escaped injury. Fortunately there was no fire, but the heavy timbers of the wrecked cars pinned down many and prevented them from getting out until assistance arrived.

As soon as possible after the wreck occurred, doctors were sent on a special train to come to the scene from Lorain.

The injured were hurried to Lorain and placed in the hospital there. The dead were conveyed to the morgue at Lorain, awaiting identification and disposition.

When the trains came together almost everybody in the smoker were dozing. The sudden jar hurled them out of their seats into the aisle and threw several persons to the roof and sides of the car, which seemed all at once to crush like a paper bag, pinning down each passenger in position in which he had been caught.

The passengers in the second car escaped more easily, as there the violence of the impact was not so severe, although few got off without cuts, bruises, sprains or broken bones. The two rear cars were sleepers, and they withstood the shock without serious harm. No passengers in the sleepers were injured.

The men on the train who escaped injury worked as well as they could without tools to save life and limb, and the residents in the sparsely settled vicinity soon arrived to help. The sleepers were used for the accommodation of some of the injured, as were several houses near the siding.

The officials of the Nickel Plate, as soon as they learned of the accident, ordered every possible assistance to be given and no expense spared in taking care of the injured.

President Caniff of the Nickel Plate yesterday said that from the information in the hands of the officials, the freight train crew had orders to go on the siding at Kishman and there await the passage of the passenger train. Why this was not done in time to permit the passenger train to go by, or a flagman sent out, has not been learned. A rigid investigation is being made by the railroad officials.

It is said the watch of the engineer of the freight train was slow, that he believed he had eight minutes to get his train on the siding before the passenger was due. The freight train had slackened speed and was about to back in the siding, when the passenger train came tearing along at the rate of forty-five miles an hour and dashed into it.

MAY NOT CALL EXTRA SESSION

President Has Not Fully Decided Concerning the Matter.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 14.—Notwithstanding the more or less definite announcement which has emanated from various sources during the last few months, congress may not be called into extraordinary session next November. Indeed, the indications are now that no extraordinary session will be held this year.

This statement is made on the authority of President Roosevelt himself. He has not decided the question definitely yet, and probably will not reach a determination of it until he shall have returned to Washington, the latter part of September. The chances of an extraordinary session appear, however, to be fading.

Strong pressure is being brought to bear upon the president to induce him not to call an extra session. So much interest has been manifest in the subject throughout the country that the president has received a large number of letters regarding it.

Many senators and representatives have urged against an extra session. They point out that practically nothing will be gained by an extra session, that will begin not more than three weeks before the opening of the regular long session, and that it will cause some inconvenience to many members of congress in both branches. Taking these things into consideration, the president has reserved a definite decision of the matter, the chances, as noted, being that the session will not be called.

Last spring it was the president's idea to issue at the proper time a call for an extraordinary session of congress, to be held in October, for the purpose of enacting, if possible, railroad rate legislation. Incidentally, it was expected that some recommendation might be made by the president regarding proposed changes in the existing tariff law.

The idea of an October session finally was abandoned, and subsequently the president made arrangements for a two weeks' trip through the South, beginning Oct. 17. It was then announced that the proposed extraordinary session would not be held until after the November elections.

If finally the president should decide to call congress together, the session will begin on the first Monday after the November elections, which will be just three weeks before the beginning of the regular session in December.

In this connection it can be said to be not unlikely, in view of the prevalence of yellow fever in New Orleans, that the president may conclude to make his trip through the South in two sections, visiting the Atlantic coast states in October, and Louisiana, Arkansas, and perhaps Tennessee, on another trip to be made later. No definite arrangements to this end have been completed, but the matter is being considered.

ASSAULTED CLERGYMAN

Negro Who Did the Deed Killed While Resisting Arrest.

Balston, N. Y., Aug. 14.—The Rev. Bernard Schulte and his wife of New York City were attacked at Mechanicsville late Saturday night and probably fatally injured by a negro, who was yesterday shot and killed in Saratoga while resisting arrest.

Mr. Schulte came to Mechanicsville recently to take charge of the Episcopal church during the absence of the rector, Dr. Oliver Shaw Newell, who is in Europe.

Early Saturday night, William Curtis, a negro, whose home is in Saratoga, presented himself at the door of the rectory and asked for a drink of water. Mr. Schulte was in the act of turning back to get the water when the negro drew a piece of lead pipe from beneath his coat and felled the clergyman with a terrific blow on the head, following this up with a rain of blows until his victim lay unconscious and apparently dead. Mrs. Schulte, who was upstairs, hurried down on hearing her husband fall and was met in the hall by the negro, who instantly struck her down before she could utter an outcry and continued beating her with his heavy weapon until he had inflicted injuries from which she can hardly recover.

The clergyman and his wife were discovered, lying unconscious and covered with blood by neighbors, and a search was made for the negro, who had been seen leaving the house.

Policeman James Sullivan discovered Curtis yesterday in Searings alley, a negro colony in Saratoga, and arrested him. The negro, however, broke away and ran, and after firing one shot in the air to halt him, Sullivan fired again, shooting him through the head and killing him instantly.

The condition of Mr. Schulte and his wife is said to be precarious.

A Wart or Pimple

MAY BE CANCEROUS.

When a wart, mole or pimple shows any sign of tenderness it is a warning that bad blood is behind it. Often these places are on the face, hands, legs or other part of the body for years, and give no sign to cause uneasiness, and then with a little rough handling, a slight cut or bruise will develop into a sore that refuses to heal, and the sufferer finds himself afflicted with a cancerous ulcer.

About three years ago a blister came on the right side of my nose. It grew speedily in spite of all efforts to heal it up; the pain was not very severe at first, but increased when the sore began to inflame and discharge matter. At times the place would scab over and appear to be getting well, but the scab would drop off, leaving a red, angry looking ulcer. I had almost despaired of ever curing it, when my attention was called to S. S. S., and after taking a few bottles the sore began to gradually grow smaller, the discharge stopped and I was cured.
Owensboro, Ky. JNO. MASSIE.

If the blood is pure and healthy these sores cannot exist. S. S. S. is the ideal blood purifier. It cleanses the blood of all poisons and impurities, making it strong and vigorous and able to supply the body with the strength and nourishment it needs. There is nothing that acts so promptly as S. S. S., toning up the entire system, helping the general health and curing sores permanently. Do not let a wart or pimple develop into a cancerous ulcer, but purify your blood with S. S. S. It is nature's remedy, purely vegetable, and while driving all poisons from the blood, will build up every part of the system. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired will be given without charge, to all who write.

SENSATION SPOILED

The Story of Consignment of Seeds Is Run Down.

Printing Office Will Be Investigated Before Congress Meets.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—A short time ago a highly sensational article appeared in a Washington newspaper in which the writer attempted to show that the department of agriculture had unfairly consigned a vast quantity of valuable seeds to a certain farm in Virginia in which Congressmen Wadsworth and Hull are interested. It was asserted that farmers of the neighborhood are "very curious about consignments of grass seed and shrubbery to the High Point Dairy farm a short distance from Gunston, Virginia. Apparently this curiosity was accentuated because the farm "is owned by Representatives J. A. T. Hull of Iowa, and James W. Wadsworth of New York." It was further decirred that "the department has sent about $500 worth of grass seed" there.

The writer has taken pains to ascertain how much truth there was in the story and has found that it is a case of three black crows repeated. In the first place the High Point Dairy farm is not owned by Representatives Hull and Wadsworth, although these gentlemen have an interest in the place. Some five or six years ago James D. Yeomans of Iowa, then a member of the interstate commerce commission became impressed with the opportunities afforded for scientific dairy farming upon one of the partially abandoned estates on the Potomac below Mount Vernon. He interested Congressman Hull in the idea and also convinced a wealthy friend in Chicago to join the venture. A tract of about five thousand acres of practically exhausted land was purchased, several hundred head of dairy cows, Jerseys, Guernseys, Holsteins and grades were brought East from Iowa and modern dairy buildings were erected. Besides a steamer was purchased for the purpose of bringing the milk and cream to Washington and for the past three years the product of this dairy has been looked upon as among the very best which comes to the national capital. From the outset the entire herd of milch cows has been kept out of the pastures. They are fed by the process known as spiling; that is to say green crops are cut and fed to the stock in the stables. Green wheat, rye, corn, clover and alfalfa are among the forage crops produced and fed out.

Naturally an enterprise of this character attracted the attention of the department of agriculture and Chief Galloway decided to ask the manager of the place to test a few varieties of alfalfa seed, which had been procured for just such purposes. In all something less than a bushel was sent to High Point. The highest price of alfalfa seed quoted in recent years is $12 a bushel, or 20 cents a pound, and that is as near as the $5 story comes to the truth.

Mr Wadsworth's connection with the place, by the way, is very insignificant. Mr. Wadsworth is a farmer and a stockman. He and Mr. Hull are warm personal friends. Mr. Hull desired Wadsworth to become interested in the enterprise and he induced his friend to buy ten shares of stock at $100 a share, a total of $1,000. As the total value of the High Point farm, together with buildings, machinery and stock, is in the neighborhood of $1,000,000 it will be seen that Mr. Wadsworth's interest is not very extensive and even if the department of agriculture had sent $300 worth of seeds to the place the congressman's interest in that consignment would have amounted to less than $2.

As to the shipment of shrubbery, that is easy. Under an act of congress each member of the house and senate is entitled to some fifty trees or shrubs every year. These trees are prepared for shipment early in the spring. There are a great many congressmen who never claim their quota and these, being useless to the department, are frequently sent to the dump and burned up. To prevent their destruction this year a few score were sent to High Point farm and because the members of congress are stockholders in this farm and because the department of agriculture is in the throes of half a dozen investigations a space writer in Virginia has built up a sensation. The value of the seed and shrubs sent to High Point about equals the price paid for a column of "space" in the newspaper in which the story first appeared. It has since been reproduced in nearly every city in the country.

It is announced that the so-called Keep commission will completely overhaul the affairs of the government printing office before congress reconvenes. The annual expenses of this great print shop is in the neighborhood of $7,000,000. It is hinted that at least a million of this vast sum might be cut without the slightest damage to the service. But the economy, if it comes, will not be through the commission over which Assistant Secretary Keep presides but through the work of the house committee on printing, of which Representative Perkins of New York is a member. Mr. Perkins had not served on the committee thirty days when he reached the conclusion that the annual expenditures for printing a considerable proportion is virtually thrown away. Hundreds of thousands of pages of manuscript are put into type each year which are never seen by a reader after they leave the presses. Documents are duplicated and triplicated and in each instance the type is reset. The annual output of volumes of which no one reads is gigantic in proportions. Mr. Perkins called the attention of congress and the country to this waste of public money in a speech on an appropriation bill two years ago. But his remarks were unheeded because nearly every member fears to antagonize the powerful union which controls affairs in the government printing office. But the row created through the wholesale purchase of printing machines has at last directed public attention to the necessity for a revision of the printing affairs and a congressional committee will take hold of the subject. It is not likely that anything like a monetary scandal will be developed as this great institution is blessed with a force of officials who, for integrity and uprightness, will compare with any body of men in the world. But congress can easily save a million a year in this one office without the slightest detriment to any one and with no scandal whatever.

The name of Mrs. Charlotte Smith has again appeared in the public prints, because of her appeal to John D. Rockefeller for aid for the Woman's Rescue league. Mrs. Smith is better known in Washington than anywhere else in the country. For nearly a quarter of a century she has been pointed out as a mild crank, whose fad is the uplifting of those of her sex who need a helping hand. Few of those who see Mrs. Smith daily have the slightest idea that the woman at whom so much fun has been poked has devoted an income as large as a congressman's salary to aiding the unfortunate who need aid. Yet that is just exactly what Mrs. Smith has been doing for more than twenty years. Her somewhat rusty costume is recognized a block away, and many people have supposed that her absolute carelessness in the matter of dress was due to lack of funds to buy better. Yet Charlotte Smith, "the crank," the woman who can never talk of the distress of others without tears, could today live in absolute luxury if she would abandon her efforts in behalf of her less fortunate sisters. But she refuses these offers, and instead continues to draw her income of $5,000 per annum, nearly every dollar of which is devoted to the cause she has made her life work.

There are nearly a score of more or less morebund reciprocity treaties filed away in the archives of the senate. (They used to be called dusty archives, but the dust is kept out since Hon. Charles G. Bennett became secretary). These treaties will probably never be ratified. But three new ones at least are likely to be sent to the senate for consideration very soon after that body reassembles in November. The most important diplomatic duty which Mr. Root inherited from Mr. Hay is the preparation and negotiation of a new convention with China, affecting the immigration of the citizens of one country to the other. The howl of total exclusion of the Chinese is not as loud today as it was when Dennis Kearney spouted from the sand locks of San Francisco, twenty years ago. Then, too, China has in Wu Ting Fang a statesman who knows something of diplomacy. It is safe to assume that the new treaty will not be entirely one-sided, but Mr Root has a delicate job to determine just how far he can go towards conceding Chinese demands.

Next to the Chinese negotiations those with Germany looking to a new commercial treaty are the most important. It is learned that negotiations now pending in Berlin are proceeding to the entire satisfaction of the president, but details of the progress made are not obtainable as yet.

Mr. Root, during his visit to Labrador, is looking into the question relating to the rights of American and Canadian fishermen off the Newfoundland. The New Englanders want free bait from the Canadians but they don't want the "Canucks" to enjoy a free market for their catch. The problem of a duty satisfactory to all parties is a difficult one but Mr. Root has tackled it and he will undoubtedly succeed in bringing about an agreement between the province and the republic which will settle for many years the fishery question which has caused so much bad feeling between the two countries during the past thirty years.

CURE SICK HEADACHE.

TERRIBLE DEED

Woman Asks Husband Where Heart Is and Shoots Him.

New Albany, Ind., Aug. 14.—After deliberately drowning her 8-year-old daughter in a bath tub at her home at Thomas street and Ekin avenue, Mrs. Chester Winstandley, a woman of prominent family here, fired a pistol shot in the side of her husband, who was sick in bed with typhoid fever, and then in frantic haste swallowed the contents of a six-ounce bottle of carbolic acid. Mrs. Winstandley died an hour later after suffering horrible agony, but at last accounts there was a chance for the husband's recovery. With the exception of her victims and her aged mother, Mrs. Matilda Renshaw, Mrs. Winstandley was alone in the house at the time the terrible tragedy was enacted. Shortly before 4 o'clock she said to her mother, "Mamma, you lie down and take a nap, while I go upstairs and give Ruth a bath. When I get through I will return and help you with the work."

Mrs. Renshaw lay down on a couch in a downstairs room, while her daughter took Ruth upstairs for a bath. A short time later Mrs. Renshaw was aroused by screams that came from her son-in-law, who lay sick in an upstairs room, Rushing up the stairway as rapidly as she could, the woman was horrified to find her daughter wrapped in her husband's arms in the throes of death from the poisoning, and Mr. Winstandley bleeding from a ghastly wound in his side. Dazed by the sight and scarcely realizing what she did, Mrs. Renshaw rushed to the bathroom to see what had become of her granddaughter Ruth, when another horrible sight met her gaze. Lying face downward in a tub full of water lay the dead body of the little girl, attired in her night clothing, which she had worn all day, her mother from that time neglecting to dress her. The grand mother hastily lifted the child from the water and laid her on the floor, when she ran downstairs and frantically cried for help.

Neighbors rapidly gathered in, physicians were hastily summoned and in the midst of the confusion those who arrived attempted to do something for the dead and dying. Mrs. Winstandley, who had slipped from her husband's arms, lay senseless on the floor, and Mr. Winstandley had become unconscious from the effect of the wound and the shock. The wife was carried to another room, where she died a few minutes later, and the physicians exerted a heroic effort to save the little girl.

After the physicians had worked with him for half an hour or more Mr. Winstandley had regained consciousness and made a statement concerning the horrible affair.

He said that his wife came noiselessly into the room and, sitting down on the bed, fondly stroked his forehead for a minute, when she said:

"Beloved, tell me just where your heart beats."

He threw back the covers and placed her hand on his heart, when she suddenly exclaimed, "I am going to shoot you!" and, quickly drawing a revolver from her bosom, she fired at his heart. The terrified husband uttered a scream and at the same time, with what strength he could summon in his weakened condition, grasped the weapon and attempted to wrench it from her hand. By this time the footsteps of Mrs. Renshaw were heard on the stairway, and Mrs. Winstandley let go of the weapon and, grasping a bottle from the dresser, rushed into the adjoining room. Returning before her aged mother she threw herself into her husband's arm, the fiery acid burning her hands, face and throat, but she never uttered a word.

No cause is assigned for the terrible deed save that this woman must have been suffering from a mental aberration, and it is evident that the deed was planned at least twenty-four hours before it was executed. Mrs. Winstandley left her home Saturday, and it was supposed that she went down to this city and bought the drug and cartridges for the thirty-two caliber revolver owned by her husband, who for a year had not had a cartridge in the house, but the label on the bottle showed that she bought the carbolic acid in Louisville, and it is supposed that instead of going to a New Albany store she went to Louisville and bought both the cartridges and the drug.

All day long she neglected to dress her little daughter, Ruth, which is something unusual, and allowed the child to play about the house in her night clothes. She insisted that her sister, Mrs. Harry Gilles, and her husband, who occupy the same house, go to the Chautauquay assembly, which is in progress at Glenwood park. As soon as Mr. and Mrs. Gilles left the house she began to make preparations to put into execution the horrible deed she had evidently contemplated.

Mrs. Winstandley was 34 years of age and was a daughter of the late J. M. Renshaw, a prominent citizen of this city. Both she and her husband were natives of New Albany, and both belonged to old and prominent families. Mr. Winstandley is a son of the late Isaac S. Winstandley, former cashier of the old New Albany Banking company, and a member of a family that for generations has been in the banking business here. At present Mr. Winstandley holds the position of shipping clerk for the Peerless Manufacturing company in Louisville.

Since their marriage Mr. and Mrs. Winstandley, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Gilles, the latter a sister of Mrs. Winstandley, her mother, Mrs. Matilda Renshaw, and her younger sister, Miss Mary Renshaw, together with the little girl, Ruth, who was the only child and the light of the household, constituted a happy family. The devotion of the entire family was always a subject of comment among their friends.

To lose is often merely not to find—as a business chance or bargain missed, and thus lost, through failure to read the ads.

MORE THAN MILLION

Portland, Ore., Aug. 14.—Gate admissions at the Lewis and Clark exposition reached and passed the million mark last week, and are now climbing rapidly up toward the second million.

These figures are very gratifying to the administration department, to the other administration officials and to the people of Portland and the Pacific Northwest.

F. B. Davison, chief of the department of admissions at Portland, who has had experience in the same department at several expositions, expresses the belief that the Lewis and Clark fair will run Omaha a close race, and in all probability will win out in the total attendance, though at Omaha the exposition was open five full months, while the present enterprise is to be open but four and a half months. Omaha's total attendance was 2,613,508.

Mr. Davison expects a considerable increase in the atendance after the wheat farmers of the "Inland Empire" shall have finished their harvesting and the hop growers of Oregon and Washington shall have gathered their hop crops.

Nothing succeeds like success, and the Portland Fair has shown by actual and indisputable figures that it is a success. As it is a Western enterprise the entire West is to be congratulated, and if the East still imagines that "nothing good can come out of Nazareth" let that section take notice of the most successful of all American expositions.

The big spectacular event of the month will be the reproduction of the Custer massacre, on the 29th, having been postponed from the 10th. This will take place on the government peninsula, where a company of United States regulars, with an officer impersonating the gallant Gen. Custer, will be theoretically killed and scalped by a fierce band of 200 Umatilla Indians, in war paint and feathers. The chromo picture entitled "Custer's Last Stand" is familiar to most Americans, and it is this picture that will be reproduced in action by the soldiers and Indians. Some visitors from the East, who imagine that the West is still wild and woolly, have expressed a little disappointment at not finding this section still overrun by Indians, but they will have a taste of the real redskin warfare on the 29th, and the spectacle will be new and novel also to the Westerners, whose parents quit fighting Indians long ago and turned their bayonets into plowshares and pruning hooks.

KILLED BY LIONS.

Blackpool, Eng., Aug. 14.—Two lions, the property of the city, were found loose yesterday morning in the yard adjoining their cage, together with portions of the body of a workingman. It appears that the man, on the previous night, made the boast that he would enter the lions' cage. Evidently in an attempt to carry out this boast, he opened the cage. The animals escaped and killed him, gorging themselves on his body.

MAGAZINE ARTIST DROWNED.

Three Rivers, Mich., Aug. 14.—John C. Gilbert of Chicago, a magazine artist, was drowned at a Corey Lake resort, ten miles west of this city, yesterday. He was out in a sailboat with a party, when he jumped overboard to swim ashore. When about half way to shore he threw up his hands and called for help, but sank in about sixty feet of water before help arrived. His body was not recovered until four hours later. Mrs. Gilbert was in the boat at the time.

MADAME BELCHER'S EXPERIENCE

A Society Leader's Escape.

In exclusive and aristocratic circles of one of America's leading cities moved a refined, witty and most amiable lady, whose society was much sought after in spite of the fact that every now and then she was, much to the annoyance of her associates, and greatly to her own mortification, obliged to gulp up a large quantity of gas that was constantly accumulating in her stomach.

Leading physicians on two continents had failed to relieve her of flatulent dyspepsia, that was so pronounced that one could not long be in her presence without being aware of it.

Some one once spoke of her as "Madam Belcher," and other inconsiderate people repeated the expression. Reaching the lady's ear it so provoked, distressed and mortified her that she thereafter withdrew from society altogether.

At last she concluded to try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, the advertisements of which she had often seen in the papers, but had not heeded because she thought them too cheap to amount to much, and not to be compared with a five-dollar prescription from a fashionable doctor, that would cost several dollars more to be filled at a fashionable drug store.

To her surprise and joy she found that the tablets gave prompt and positive relief, and a few boxes made a perfect and permanent cure.

She is no longer "Madam Belcher," but has re-entered society and is one of its most sought-after and admired representatives.

There are belchers in all walks of life, people who cannot properly digest their food, which stays in the stomach, and, decomposing, gives rise to gasses that distress, and the belching of which, humiliates.

These cases can all be cured cheaply, privately and satisfactorily. All one has to do is to go to the nearest drug store and buy Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets, which only cost 50 cents a box, take them according to the printed directions, and they will do the rest. If you have dyspepsia in any form or stage; if you cannot digest a good square meal three times a day and get only strength and satisfaction out of it; try Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and you will be pleased.

FAST TRAIN WRECKED

Twelve Persons Lose Their Lives Near Vermilion, Ohio.

Passenger and Freight Trains Come Together at High Speed.

Cleveland, Aug. 14.—A fast eastbound passenger train on the Nickel Plate road collided with a westbound freight train early yesterday at Kishnan, Ohio, near Vermilion, resulting in the death of twelve persons, while at least twenty-five others were injured, eight of whom will probably die. The wreck, according to the officials of the company, was caused by a misunderstanding of the orders or neglect to obey them on the part of the crew of the freight train.

The dead:

JOSIA ALEXANDER, 24 years old, Newark, N. J.

FRANK WEAVER, 35 years old, Findlay, Ohio.

—— GALLAGUS, laborer.

—— TRAVOTA, laborer.

CALOGNO CAGLIANI, laborer, hurled through car window, died in Lorain hospital as a result of injuries.

The injured: John W. Long, 31, Cleveland, right leg broken; Richard A. Long, son of J. W. Long, right leg amputated, hip cut, head and body contused, may die; Mrs. John W. Long, back sprained and head cut; Louis Reinbolt, Rascome, Ohio, compound fracture left leg, foot crushed and body bruised; E. E. O'Hara, Findlay, Ohio, right leg amputated; B. L. Kerr, Grafton, Ohio, contusions on both legs; John W. Murphy, West Haven, Conn., right foot bruised and body lacerated; Philip Baskim, Tiffin, Ohio, back sprained; Floyd Trumer, Ada, Ohio, left leg broken face badly cut; John Dexter, Tiffin, Ohio, three ribs broken and scalp wound; Frank Phillips, Findlay, Ohio, left shoulder broken; John Jafa, back sprained; Leonardo Syracuse, back sprained and body bruised; Charles Buccufusu, back and both ankles sprained; Veona Leonardo, two ribs broken; Charles Dumont, left hip and back contused; Joseph Dumont, two ribs broken, back cut and internal injuries, may die; Tony Trevalli, back and both ankles sprained; Charles Degar, right hip and back bruised; Albert Jama, right ankle sprained; Frank Gallia, ankle sprained; Tony Verance, ankle sprained and leg badly lacerated.

Roy Winch of Findlay, who, although severely injured, was the first man to rush into the wrecked smoking car to take part in the work of rescue, gave the following account of the terrible sight within:

"The living, the wounded and the dead were piled in one indiscriminate mass, all over the floor of the car, the living entangled with the arms and legs of the dead, and many of them pinned down by the dead bodies of the Italians.

"Some of the dead were so badly smashed that through their mouths protruded hideous masses of intestines.

"Terrorized by the death of their companions, the hiss of escaping steam, and the fear of death in the darkness, the Italians fought with one another and trampled the living and dead in their frantic efforts to get out of the car. Several of them were almost as badly injured by fighting each other as by the wreck."

Aside from the engineer, the men killed on the passenger train were all riding in the smoking car at the head of the train and were mostly foreign laborers in the employ of the Standard Oil company, on their way from Fort Seneca, Ohio, to Brookfield, in charge of a foreman. Engineer C. C. Poole, of the passenger train, was killed at his post while trying to reach for the air brake, after seeing the headlight of the freight train. His fireman, Haefner, saved himself by jumping.

The high speed of the passenger train threw its locomotive and first three coaches over on the engine of the freight train, telescoping the smoker and the car following. The forward cars of the freight train were splintered to fragments.

Of the passengers in the smoker, none escaped injury. Fortunately there was no fire, but the heavy timbers of the wrecked cars pinned down many and prevented them from getting out until assistance arrived.

As soon as possible after the wreck occurred, doctors were sent on a special train to come to the scene from Lorain.

The injured were hurried to Lorain and placed in the hospital there. The dead were conveyed to the morgue at Lorain, awaiting identification and disposition.

When the trains came together almost everybody in the smoker were dozing. The sudden jar hurled them out of their seats into the aisle and threw several persons to the roof and sides of the car, which seemed all at once to crush like a paper bag, pinning down each passenger in position in which he had been caught.

The passengers in the second car escaped more easily, as there the violence of the impact was not so severe, although few got off without cuts, bruises, sprains or broken bones. The two rear cars were sleepers, and they withstood the shock without serious harm. No passengers in the sleepers were injured.

The men on the train who escaped injury worked as well as they could without tools to save life and limb, and the residents in the sparsely settled vicinity soon arrived to help. The sleepers were used for the accommodation of some of the injured, as were several houses near the siding.

The officials of the Nickel Plate, as soon as they learned of the accident, ordered every possible assistance to be given and no expense spared in taking care of the injured.

President Caniff of the Nickel Plate yesterday said that from the information in the hands of the officials, the freight train crew had orders to go on the siding at Kishman and there await the passage of the passenger train. Why this was not done in time to permit the passenger train to go by, or a flagman sent out, has not been learned. A rigid investigation is being made by the railroad officials.

It is said the watch of the engineer of the freight train was slow, that he believed he had eight minutes to get his train on the siding before the passenger was due. The freight train had slackened speed and was about to back in the siding, when the passenger train came tearing along at the rate of forty-five miles an hour and dashed into it.

MAY NOT CALL EXTRA SESSION

President Has Not Fully Decided Concerning the Matter.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 14.—Notwithstanding the more or less definite announcement which has emanated from various sources during the last few months, congress may not be called into extraordinary session next November. Indeed, the indications are now that no extraordinary session will be held this year.

This statement is made on the authority of President Roosevelt himself. He has not decided the question definitely yet, and probably will not reach a determination of it until he shall have returned to Washington, the latter part of September. The chances of an extraordinary session appear, however, to be fading.

Strong pressure is being brought to bear upon the president to induce him not to call an extra session. So much interest has been manifest in the subject throughout the country that the president has received a large number of letters regarding it.

Many senators and representatives have urged against an extra session. They point out that practically nothing will be gained by an extra session, that will begin not more than three weeks before the opening of the regular long session, and that it will cause some inconvenience to many members of congress in both branches. Taking these things into consideration, the president has reserved a definite decision of the matter, the chances, as noted, being that the session will not be called.

Last spring it was the president's idea to issue at the proper time a call for an extraordinary session of congress, to be held in October, for the purpose of enacting, if possible, railroad rate legislation. Incidentally, it was expected that some recommendation might be made by the president regarding proposed changes in the existing tariff law.

The idea of an October session finally was abandoned, and subsequently the president made arrangements for a two weeks' trip through the South, beginning Oct. 17. It was then announced that the proposed extraordinary session would not be held until after the November elections.

If finally the president should decide to call congress together, the session will begin on the first Monday after the November elections, which will be just three weeks before the beginning of the regular session in December.

In this connection it can be said to be not unlikely, in view of the prevalence of yellow fever in New Orleans, that the president may conclude to make his trip through the South in two sections, visiting the Atlantic coast states in October, and Louisiana, Arkansas, and perhaps Tennessee, on another trip to be made later. No definite arrangements to this end have been completed, but the matter is being considered.

ASSAULTED CLERGYMAN

Negro Who Did the Deed Killed While Resisting Arrest.

Balston, N. Y., Aug. 14.—The Rev. Bernard Schulte and his wife of New York City were attacked at Mechanicsville late Saturday night and probably fatally injured by a negro, who was yesterday shot and killed in Saratoga while resisting arrest.

Mr. Schulte came to Mechanicsville recently to take charge of the Episcopal church during the absence of the rector, Dr. Oliver Shaw Newell, who is in Europe.

Early Saturday night, William Curtis, a negro, whose home is in Saratoga, presented himself at the door of the rectory and asked for a drink of water. Mr. Schulte was in the act of turning back to get the water when the negro drew a piece of lead pipe from beneath his coat and felled the clergyman with a terrific blow on the head, following this up with a rain of blows until his victim lay unconscious and apparently dead. Mrs. Schulte, who was upstairs, hurried down on hearing her husband fall and was met in the hall by the negro, who instantly struck her down before she could utter an outcry and continued beating her with his heavy weapon until he had inflicted injuries from which she can hardly recover.

The clergyman and his wife were discovered, lying unconscious and covered with blood by neighbors, and a search was made for the negro, who had been seen leaving the house.

Policeman James Sullivan discovered Curtis yesterday in Scarings alley, a negro colony in Saratoga, and arrested him. The negro, however, broke away and ran, and after firing one shot in the air to halt him, Sullivan fired again, shooting him through the head and killing him instantly.

The condition of Mr. Schulte and his wife is said to be precarious.

A Wart or Pimple

MAY BE CANCEROUS.

When a wart, mole or pimple shows any sign of tenderness it is a warning that bad blood is behind it. Often these places are on the face, hands, legs or other part of the body for years, and give no sign to cause uneasiness, and then with a little rough handling, a slight cut or bruise will develop into a sore that refuses to heal, and the sufferer finds himself afflicted with a cancerous ulcer.

About three years ago a blister came on the right side of my nose. It grew speedily in spite of all efforts to heal it up; the pain was not very severe at first, but increased when the sore began to inflame and discharge matter. At times the place would scab over and appear to be getting well, but the scab would drop off, leaving a red, angry looking ulcer. I had almost despaired of ever curing it, when my attention was called to S. S. S., and after taking a few bottles the sore began to gradually grow smaller, the discharge stopped and I was cured.
Owensboro, Ky. JNO. MASSIE.

If the blood is pure and healthy these sores cannot exist. S. S. S. is the ideal blood purifier. It cleanses the blood of all poisons and impurities, making it strong and vigorous and able to supply the body with the strength and nourishment it needs. There is nothing that acts so promptly as S. S. S., toning up the entire system, helping the general health and curing sores permanently. Do not let a wart or pimple develop into a cancerous ulcer, but purify your blood with S. S. S. It is nature's remedy, purely vegetable, and while driving all poisons from the blood, will build up every part of the system. Book on the blood and any medical advice desired will be given without charge, to all who write.

WEATHER MARKET

Rains In Northwest Cause Firmer Opening In Wheat.

Lower Cables Cause Break But Northwestern Markets Recover.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 14.—Wet weather in the Northwest caused much strength in the Minneapolis market today and that influenced other markets. The light world's shipments added to the strength, but later when the closing cable from Liverpool came showing a loss in that market of 1½d, the strength went out of American markets to a considerable extent and there was a drop of more than a cent. Forecasts of more rain brought prices back again and the recovery was aided somewhat by the light decrease in the visible.

The Northwestern market showed increased prices, Duluth being up ⅝c for the old and ½c for the new, and Minneapolis ⅝c. Other markets were all lower, Chicago being off ⅜c, New York ⅛c, St. Louis ¼-½c, and Kansas City ⅝-¾c.

Primary receipts of wheat were 1,128,000 bus, last year 1,346,000 bus. Shipments 457,000 bus, last year 431,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 55,000 bus.

The visible supply of wheat last week increased 154,000 bus, and is now 13,899,000 bus, against 12,568,000 bus last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ½@¾d lower. In the Chicago market September corn closed ⅞-1c lower. September oats closed ¾c lower. Primary receipts of corn were 580,000 bus, last year 803,000 bus. Shipments 788,000 bus, last year 458,000 bus. Clearances were 103,000 bus. The visible supply of corn last week increased 283,000 bus, and is now 5,074,000 bus, against 5,696,000 bus last year.

World's shipments of wheat last week, the previous week and the corresponding week of last year were as follows:

WHEAT.	Last Week.	Previous Week.	Last Year.
America	580,000	558,000	1,104,000
Russia	1,632,000	2,472,000	1,816,000

Total	4,641,000	4,924,000	3,916,000

The amount of wheat on passage decreased 1,042,000 bus. Corn increased 1,598,000 bus.

In the Duluth market there was fairly active trading. The old September option opened ⅞c higher at 84½c, fell back to 84⅜c at 9:36, advanced to 84¾c at 9:57, and then slumped to 83¼c at 11:35. It rallied to 84c at noon and fell back to 83⅛c at 12:10. It rallied to 84¼c at 1:10 and closed at 84c, an advance of ⅜c. The new September opened ⅜c up at 80⅝c, advanced to 81c fell back to 79¼c and closed at 80¾c, an advance of ½c.

Flax was dull and the heavy offerings that were characteristic of last week's market were missing. This was due to the rains in the Northwest. They are not exciting any alarm and will not unless they continue for some time, but they served to stop the selling. The October option opened ½c lower at $1.13, advanced to $1.13¾, fell back to $1.13½, and again sold at $1.13¾. The close was unchanged at $1.13½. November opened ½c lower at $1.13, advanced to $1.14, and fell back to $1.13¾. It closed there, a gain of 1c.

Oats on track showed no change in price, but oats on track fell ⅜c. Rye for September delivery fell 1c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat on track—No. 1 northern, $1.07; No. 2 northern, 99c. Durum, new, No. 1, 70c; No. 2, 69c; Sept., old, 81c; Sept., new, 80¾c. Flax to arrive, $1.20; on track, $1.18; Aug., $1.20; Sept., $1.15½; Oct., $1.13½; Nov., $1.13⅜; Dec., $1.21½. Oats on track, 27c; to arrive, 25¾c. Rye—Sept., 55½c; Aug., 56c. Barley—Feed, 36@40c.

Receipts: Wheat, 37,966; corn, 2,537; oats, 65,911; barley, 71,660; rye, 1,132; flax, 9,619.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Advances on Firmness at Minneapolis.

Chicago, Aug. 14.—Firmness in the wheat pit at Minneapolis today influenced a like sentiment here, advancing the price of the September option ¼@¼c to ¼@⅝c at 81¾c to 81¾c. There were fairly liberal offerings at the advance, causing the price to sag to 81½, but a recovery followed, and the market steadied around the opening range. Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago reported receipts of 398 cars, against 491 cars last week and 334 cars a year ago.

Persistent selling by pit traders and liberal selling orders from the Northwest caused weakness later. September closed at the lowest point of the day, 80⅛@81c, a net loss of 1⅜c.

Rain in the corn belt brought out a fair volume of selling orders and gave the market an easy feeling. September was down ½@⅝c to ¾@⅞c at 53⅜c to 53⅝c. There was a tendency toward strength with the better tone of wheat and September sold up to 53¾c. Underweight of offerings, however, the price for the near month was carried back to 53⅜c. Local receipts were 442 cars.

The market lacked strength throughout the session. After touching 53⅝c September closed easy at 53c, a loss of ⅝@¾c.

Unfavorable harvesting weather caused a steady tone in oats. September oats were unchanged at 26@26⅛c at the start, and kept close to the opening range. Local receipts were 442 cars.

Provisions were firm under moderate buying by packing interests. September pork was up 2½ at $11.30. Lard was 2½@5c higher at $7.82½. Ribs showed a gain of 2½c at $8.00.

Close: Wheat—Aug., 80½c; Sept., 81¼@¼c; Dec., 82⅝c; May, 85¾c. Corn—Sept., 52¾c; old, 53⅜c; Dec., 44⅝c; old, 46⅛@⅝c; May, 44¼@⅝c. Oats—Aug., 25¾c; Sept., 25¾c; Dec., 26¾c; May, 28⅝@⅞c. GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Cash markets in the Southwest slow, ½c to 1½c lower. Rain in the Northwest over Sunday and again this morning, coupled with smaller worlds shipments than expected gave market a firm start, and for a while after the opening, prices maintained a steady tone. Selling pressure, however, seemed continuous, the market finally giving way, at one time selling about a cent under Saturday's close. Late in the session a rally developed, principally caused by local trade finding offerings scarce, and in an attempt to cover. It still seems to us unchanged. Market is a good scalping market. News from abroad is more favorable. The action of the market late in the session indicates that wheat had been absorbed by strong interests or that some large interests were industriously active covering at the low level. We continue to look for a scalping market.

Corn—Rain over Sunday and a wet map this morning took the edge off grains right at the start, with market throughout the session displaying an irregular trend. This market has had quite a setback and we doubt the wisdom of becoming over-enthusiastic on the selling side, after such a break and as sudden as we have had.

Oats—This market sympathized largely with the setback in corn. Changes were slight and there was small trading. There continues, however, to be a fair cash demand. Market range is not broad, and the sentiment continues bearish. We feel that purchases of the deferred futures on breaks will show profits.

Provisions—Good buying appeared in ribs with lard and pork aside from holding firm were neglected. Market conditions seem unchanged. List is well held, and it seems as if it could be put higher.

* * *

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—The market opened up sharply on general rains throughout the Northwest, but after a momentary show of strength declined about two cents. It remained weak and near the bottom until the final hour of trading when another spurt of buying carried prices well over those of Saturday night. There was some reaction in the final hour of the session but the last quotations were about a cent better than those of Saturday. Cables came in weak and got weaker the further the session went. This was the result of better news from Russia, but later semi-official figures covering the crop in that country estimated that there would be 60,000,000 bushel less exportable wheat than there was last year. The domestic visible supply increased 154,000 bushel and this with the rain furnished the bull card for the day. The domestic crop situation at present is largely a matter of weather. Here in the Northwest the prospects are for a magnificent crop but in order to assure the best yield, clear weather is of the biggest importance in the immediate future. While there seems to be no reason for supposing that the spring crop will fall short of recent estimates, nevertheless, great caution should be used in making purchases at this level. Under all the circumstances we still feel that for the present at least, it is wise to take a trading position on the short side of the market. Today's range of prices did not call forth any great movement either way, the traders taking advantage of the market to scalp the market both ways. The news for the day met with little opposition from the traders.

ADVANCE IN STOCKS

There Were Widely Distributed Buying Orders at Opening.

Realizing Pressure Manifested and the Closing Was Irregular.

New York, Aug. 14.—There were widely distributed buying orders at the opening of the stock market today and sharp advances resulted. St. Paul and New York Central were carried 1⅝ over Saturday's closing, and Union Pacific 1⅛. Wisconsin Central gained ⅝, otherwise changes did not exceed a ½.

Offerings that came out on the opening rise were well taken, the only noticeable relapse being of a point in New York Central. Bull operators were encouraged by the power of the market and renewed their vigorous bidding of the large priced stocks. The buying was broader and heavier than on last week and nearly all stocks of first importance rose sharply. The principal advances were Great Northern preferred 0¼, Pullman 4 points, Northern Pacific 3½, Illinois Central 2½, Wisconsin Central and the preferred 1½@1¾, Kansas & Texas and Canadian Southern 1½, and Missouri Pacific, Central of Jersey, Northwestern, Wabash preferred, Atlantic Coast Line and Southern Pacific 1, and many others of similar amount.

The market was inclined to react, especially in the high priced railroad issues but few points of strength developed, and reactionary stocks rallied. Canadian Pacific rose strongly 2⅝ toward noon, and helped the general list. Missouri Pacific gained 1⅜, Kansas & Texas preferred 2, and Atchinson and Baltimore & Ohio 1, as did also Lackawanna, Wheeling & Lake Erie, Corn Products and Railway Steel Spring. Michigan Central rose 0, Northwestern preferred 3, Corn Products preferred 4, and Iowa Central preferred, Wheeling & Lake Erie first preferred, United States Rubber preferred, and Enamelling 2. Lead and United States Pipe preferred fell 1. Bonds were firm at noon.

Speculative activity shifted frequently from one group to another with the result that the market showed a good deal of irregularity, the scalping being in force constantly. In the early afternoon Pennsylvania, Missouri Pacific and Louisville & Nashville and the local traction stocks were features of strength, while the grangers and dealers were quiet and lower. Missouri Pacific was bought heavily and rose 2⅜ to 104. Denver & Rio Grande also advanced 1½, the preferred 2, and Metropolitan Securities, Brooklyn Rapid Transit, Pennsylvania, Louisville & Nashville, Texas Pacific and Paper 1 to 1⅜.

Extensive realizing depressed all stocks except the Southwestern corn carriers in which bull movement continued. At one time, Missouri Pacific's belated rise encouraging buying of other Gould properties, and there was a general advance in the group of a point or more. In addition Rock Island preferred and Chicago Great Western preferred B were moved up 1, Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred 1¾, Denver & Rio Grande 2½ and Michigan Central 14 points. Reactions of a point or more from the best figures of the day were made elsewhere. Illinois Central sold a point below Saturday's closing and Lead 2.

The taking of profits made considerable inroads on prices all through the list, but there was a recovery again. Smelting lost 1⅝, Steel Foundries preferred 1½ and Consolidated Gas 1. American Tobacco preferred was heartily bought and lifted 3¾. Lake Erie second preferred gained 3; Long Island 2; St. Joe & Grand Island first and second preferred and American Woolen 1½ to 1¾, and American Woolen preferred 1. The corn grangers were prominent in the late rise, Missouri Pacific rising 3. Some realizing pressure persisted elsewhere and the closing was irregular.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: The market is closing strong, and higher in all departments, though here and there an occasional stock seems to halt and hesitate. Today's market has been one less in specialties. The bulk of trade continues to be in the railroad list with the Grangers the leaders. The beneficial rains through the corn belt added to the buying. At times some disposition to take profits was in evidence, but it was very noticeable that such selling was readily absorbed, prices rallying easily to former or higher levels as the trade continues to feel that the long side of the market is the safer one. The enthusiasm created by the government report has not abated a particle. Add to this general business conditions at the present time, large railroad earnings, prospects of peace, and continued prosperity, backed up by our splendid crop outlook, it seems as if our advice to buy stocks on setbacks is still good.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Aug. 14.—The cotton market opened weak at a decline of 5 to 11 points and soon increased this to a matter of 15 to 16 points, under aggressive bear pressure and liquidation in spite of lower cables and talk of improved crop prospects, though some claim excessive rains in Eastern regions and enough in the Southern districts. There was covering at the decline and with some demand from wire and commission houses, prices rallied a couple of points toward middle of the morning, but the tone was feverish rather than steady.

Spot closed quiet, 10 points lower; middling uplands, 10.55; middling gulf, 10.80. Sales, 1,300 bales. Futures closed steady; August, 10.16; September, 10.25; October, 10.36; November, 10.41; December, 10.46; January, 10.53; February, 10.56; March, 10.62; April, 10.64; May, 10.66.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, Aug. 14.—Money on call easy, 1½@2 per cent, closing bid 1½, offered at 1¾. Time loans dull and easy; sixty days, 3 per cent; ninety days, 3¼@½; six months, 3¾@4; prime mercantile paper, 4@4½. Sterling exchange easier, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.86.75@80 for demand and at $4.84.75@80 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.85½ and $4.87½; commercial bills, $4.84⅝. Bar silver, 56¾c; Mexican dollars, 46c. Government bonds steady; railroad bonds irregular.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, Aug. 14.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption shows: Available cash balance, $127,264,866; gold, $52,715,032; gold certificates, $22,822,610.

FILES LARGE COUNTERCLAIM

N. J. Miller Claims Insurance Company Really Owes Him.

With a counter claim that the Phoenix Mutual Life Insurance company owes him $1,500 instead of his owing the company a large balance on a promissory note, with a mortgage foreclosure, Nicholas J. Miller has filed an answer to the complaint made in the action instituted by the insurance company for recovery. Mr. Miller admits the execution of a note for $12,500, but alleges that he never received the face amount of the amount, that $640 was taken out of the full amount as a commission for the party negotiating the loan. He claims that the company has always refused to pay him the full amount of the face of the note and further, that May 1, 1905, there was due on the note less than $10,000 when the company proceeded to foreclose on the mortgage. Mr. Miller also alleges that at the time of the foreclosure proceedings the company claimed to have due more than $1,000 over the actual amount that was due on the note. He asks judgment for the amount of his counterclaim, which amount is alleged to be over and above the amount due on the note and represents a portion of the proceeds of the sale on the mortgage foreclosure.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS, ETC.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, September 11th, 1905.

On reading and filing the petition of Marion Corkery, administratrix of the estate of Nelle Corkery, deceased, representing, among other things, that she has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of her administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

It Is Ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard by this Court, on Monday, the 11th day of September, A. D., 1905, at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office, in the Court House, in the City of Duluth, in said County.

And It Is Further Ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons

LONG WAIT IS NEARLY ENDED

Ninety-four Persons in Line for Fond du Lac Opening.

All in Good Spirits and Good Feeling Toward Each Other.

Tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock the opening of the Fond du Lac reservation will be opened for settlement and the long wait of the homeseekers who have been camping out in the corridor of the government building will be over. Today they are stretching themselves and getting ready for the final night in the hallway. They are beginning to wear an anxious look as the time draws near for the filing, and will be thankful when the affair is over. There are now ninety-four men in line, two of whom are women. Wives, sisters and mothers of the men visit them almost every day bringing them dainties from home and doing everything possible to make them comfortable during their trying vigil.

Yesterday morning Rev. John T. Moody of the Bethel Branch and a corps of singers held services in the corridor for those in line and in the evening Rev. John Pemberton of St. Paul, who is one of the homeseekers, preached at the request of his fellow homeseekers. Both clergymen chose subjects fitting for the occasion and were heartily welcomed.

The men in line have passed this afternoon the following set of resolutions of thanks to all of those who have been considerate of them in any way. The resolutions are signed by H. E. Osborn, chairman of the organization:

"We, the men and women now in line before the United States land office door, desire to express in this public way our appreciation of the courtesy shown us by the officials in the various offices on this floor; to the night watchman, who has done what he could for our comfort; to the friends who have furnished us with reading matter in the shape of magazines; to the Bethel workers for the Sunday services and for the folding chairs they furnished us, and to the press of the city for the fair treatment we have received from them.

"The best of feeling prevails among the men. There is no manifestation of jealousy, and every man is desirous of seeing 'a square deal' to all. The spirit of brotherhood has prevailed from the very first and is expected to prevail until the last man has filed his claim and gone forth to transform the wilderness into a garden or the swamp into a wheat field."

Up to Saturday evening The Herald published the list of names of those in line up to No. 69, who is A. A. Fider of Duluth. The following have registered since:

70 Otto Johannsen, Thompson, marshal.
71 Absent.
72 Erick Omland, McIntosh, farmer.
73 Miss Theresa McGrath, Faribault, trained nurse.

MRS. G. D. JEWELL DIES.

Peculiar Affection of Stomach Causes Death.

Nellie D. Jewell, wife of George D. Jewell of 1926 West Superior street, died yesterday of a rather strange malady, which was more or less puzzling to the physicians who attended her.

Mr. and Mrs. Jewell attended the Portland exposition a few weeks ago, and since her return Mrs. Jewell has been suffering from an ailment of the stomach. It became aggravated until she was unable to take any food whatever, and she grew weaker and weaker, finally dying of exhaustion.

At the post mortem the trouble was found to be structure of the pyloric end of the stomach.

Mrs. Jewell has lived in the city for twelve years, and is well known here. She is survived by her father and mother, a brother in Chicago and three sisters at Elkhorn.

The body will be shipped to Elkhorn for burial this afternoon.

20 Per Cent Discount on Fall Suits.

August Hagberg, 218 West Superior street.

FAIRBANKS VISITS HALE.

Ellsworth, Me., Aug. 14.—Vice President Fairbanks and Mrs. Fairbanks arrived here today to be the guests of Senator Hale and Mrs. Hale. During the afternoon a public reception was given at the Pines, the home of the senator. The small dinner party will be held this evening, after which the vice president will leave for Burlington, Vt., where he is to speak at the Battle of Bennington anniversary on Wednesday.

TWO DROWNED AT LA CROSSE.

La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 12.—William H. Klawitter, aged 50 and Albert Bergaus, aged 50, have been drowned in the Mississippi river while bathing. Six drownings have occurred here in the past few days.

J. J. HILL RETURNS.

Refuses to Be Interviewed Concerning the Strike.

St. Paul, Aug. 14.—(Special to The Herald.)—J. J. Hill, president of the Great Northern railroad returned to his offic today, having arrived from New York last night. He could not be interviewed concerning his attitude on the strike of the telegraphers, and no statement of what he proposed to do about it was given out.

There were no developments in the strike situation. It is now a waiting game on the part of the telgraphers, while the railroads insist the strike is broken.

FRENCH CLAIMS AGAINST VENEZUELA ALLOWED.

Dr. Chalmers Prentice, eye and nerve specialist of Chicago, who has been holding clinics at the Spalding hotel, will leave Tuesday night for Superior, where he will open Wednesday morning, at 10 o'clock, with a free lecture and clinic at the Superior hotel.

WORK OF VANDALS.

It is remarked that the trees planted at one side of the Grant tomb in New York by Li Hung Chang have been so injured by souvenir hunters, mostly women, in plucking twigs from them, that their growth is seriously retarded, says the Kansas City Journal. They care for such things differently in monarchical countries. The trees which Gen. Grant planted when in Tokio, Japan, were not only at once protected by a railing, but were constantly guarded by soldiers.

WAS ASTONISHED.

A kindergarten teacher took for her object lesson one morning a family pet, the cat, says the Boston Herald. She began thus: "Now, who can tell me what the kitten has, feathers or fur?"

For some time there was silence, but finally a tiny boy said in a low voice: "G-o-o-d L-a-w-d, hain't you never seen a kitten?"

The Season's Wind-up of Outing Suits.

If you feel like putting one of the Burrows Outing Suits on ice during the time after their service for 1905 is done, come in and we will sell you one at so low a price that the investment is worth your while.

Your Choice $7 An Outing Suit.

Office men taking advantage of this money-saving proposition can use the coat all the year around while at work, and the trousers will make a pair of nice outing pants for next season.

Your Choice $10 of Suits on first table.

Besides the above new offer we will continue this week to sell any suit on our first table at $10, and beg to remind you that they are fine suits which were marked to sell at from $15 to $20 while Mr. Burrows owned them.

CITY BRIEFS

Picnic, August 17, A. O. U. W. No. 105, at Lester park.

Take your friend on The Herald excursion tomorrow; thirty miles down the lake to Two Harbors and back for only 25 cents. Only chance you have for a week-day ride on Lake Superior. Boat leaves at 4 p. m., returning at 9 p. m.

P. McDonnell, the local contractor, is confined to the hospital with a severe attack of sciatic rheumatism.

H. V. Eva, secretary of the Commercial club, has been appointed by Governor John A. Johnson as special delegate from Minnesota to the Trans-Mississippi congress, which will meet at Portland, Aug. 16.

The steamer North West will have a full list of passengers on its arrival in Duluth tomorrow evening. Among them will be a party of 100 fire chiefs, who will attend the Duluth convention, and a Raymond Whitcomb party of 100 people, which will leave on a special over the Northern Pacific for the Yellowstone Park and Portland within an hour after landing.

James J. Hill, the railway magnate, has made application for membership in the Duluth Yacht club.

The moonlight excursion, advertised by the Epworth league of the Norwegian Danish M. E. church to occur this evening, has been postponed for one week. It will be held next Monday evening, Aug. 21.

Beginning today the Duluth & Iron Range road inaugurated a cafe service on its morning train from Duluth to the towns on the Vermilion range. This train leaves Duluth at 7:30 a. m., arriving at Ely at 11:55 a. m. Returning, it leaves Ely at 2:55 p. m. and arrives in Duluth at 7:30 p. m. All the service will be a la carte, and the best that can be had. The car has recently been overhauled, and a new lighting plant installed.

The Switchmen's Union of America, against whom James Carey was awarded a verdict in a suit to recover on an accident policy, has filed in district court notice of an appeal from the order of the court denying a judgment in the company's favor notwithstanding the verdict or for a new trial. J. A. Keyes is attorney for the union and John Jenswold, Jr., is attorney for Mr. Carey.

Don't forget big dance at Lester Park, tomorrow night, by Court Eastern Star, 86, U. O. F.

Probate Judge Middlecoff has received word from Ely that Mrs. Hilma Kauppinen, a young Finnish married woman of that place, has showed signs of insanity and will be brought to Duluth tomorrow for examination. The woman is said to be troubled with insomnia and has developed melancholia to such an extent that she can no longer be controlled and needs hospital attention.

HERALD EXCURSIONS.

Popularity Grows—Ride on Lake Is Latest.

In spite of clever, but cynical protests against picnics of the old-fashioned order, a day spent in the woods in the old-fashioned manner with the old-fashioned luncheon still is as attractive as in less strenuous days to a large number of people. About Duluth no picnic ground is more enticing than Fond du Lac, and the ride up the river to get there is not the least of the attractive features. The fourth of The Herald excursions to Fond du Lac took place today, and in spite of the threatening weather here a large number of pleasure seekers left at 9 o'clock this morning on the Newsboy for the delightful trip up the river and a day in the open air. Duluthians have come to know that even if the weather be a bit disagreeable here, a few miles from the lake more delightful conditions may be encountered. The river trip is becoming more admired and is taken more frequently than ever before and the many who avail themselves of The Herald Monday excursions prove the popularity of the trip.

Tomorrow The Herald will inaugurate the first of the lake excursions. At 4 o'clock in the afternoon the America will leave Booth's dock for a 30-mile trip down the lake, returning to the city at 9 o'clock in the evening. The boat is the finest of the Booth line, needing no introduction to Duluth people, who have admired and known the boat for a few years. The time of the excursion is a particularly attractive feature of the affair as so many business people will be enabled to go, as the greater part of the busines of the day will have been accomplished. The boat will stop for half an hour at Two Harbors. A moon is prophesied for tomorrow evening and the lake with a large and yellow moon in the heavens is entirely and wonderfully superior. This excursion is the only week day excursion on the lake and is already rousing great interest and enthusiasm among people who wish to go for short trips on the water.

Capt. Jacob Hector will be in charge of the boat and the guests may either take their luncheon with them or get their meal on the boat.

SUMMER HOME LAMPS.

"Lamps for country homes?" said an inquirer, repeating, within the store the words he had just read on a sign in the window. "Isn't a lamp a lamp anywhere?" he continued. "Don't we use the same sorts of lamps in the country that we do in the city?"

"By no means," said the lamp man, according to the New York Sun. "In these days of comfort and luxury and refinement we use lamps that are suitable to our environment, whatever that may be, and there are plenty of lamps that are especially designed for use in country homes, either for purposes of utility or for the sake of harmony with their surroundings, or for both.

"Simplicity is the keynote of country lamps. When people go into the country they want to get away from the ornateness of the city. But simplicity does not exclude beauty, and country lamps must be of good materials, substantial and well wrought.

"There are, to be sure, plenty of country homes in which gas or electricity is used, but there are also many others including so-called lamps which may be really homes of great comfort, situated where there is no gas or electricity, and so one standard country lamp is the bracket lamp, which is made fast to the wall, where it is out of the way of children, as it would be also of dancers.

"Such bracket lamps are used, for instance, in dining rooms, and we keep them of various materials and in various sizes and designs, and we make them to order when desired.

"Here, for example, is one of a number of bracket lamps that we have lately made to go into a log house of logs cut from his own forest at the owner's camp in the woods. In appearance, as you see, these lamps are of iron, but they are really of brass with an iron finish.

"In shape they are like a globe very much attenuated at the poles, and wholly without ornamentation. The bracket arm, holding the lamp, is perfectly simple, straight, round and solid, and the flat cross piece at the end of the arm, where it is attached to the wall, is equally simple.

"These lamps will be firmly screwed to logs in the walls of the rooms in which they are placed, to be quite in keeping with them in strength and solidity and in simplicity of appearance. But they will be at the same time far from unpleasing to the eye.

"And then, of course, there are for country houses hanging lamps of various sorts, to be suspended from ceilings, and there are for country homes hand lamps of various designs, and made of brass or bronze and in various styles of finish.

"A candlestick for country use is one made with a jointed standard, which can be used standing upright on its base in the ordinary fashion, or can be made into a bracket holder. A hole in one side of the edge of the base makes it possible to hang this on a hook in the wall or on a porch, the lower part of the standard projecting then horizontally, while the upper part is adjusted to rise vertically from the end of the projecting arm. A glass shade protects the candle flame.

"Another country candlestick is a very simple and attractive one made of pottery, with a shield on one side, to which the handle is attached. There are now used in country homes many simple glass candlesticks of colonial design, which save the carrying silver candlesticks to the country, and which may easily be more appropriate to their country surroundings.

"For shades for standing lamps used in country homes we sell some made of grass cloth, generous in size and bright in coloring. And we sell simple, pretty shades of straw and paper, an open straw frame work with a paper lining making panels.

"And we sell what we call poster shades, this being a shade with pictured paper panels. For glass shades we sell, for country homes, not decorated shades, but shades of solid colors, either a dark green, a color cool and comfortable to the eye, or shades that are of a soft gray in color when unlighted, lighting up with a greenish tint.

"And then, of course, we sell lanterns suitable to suspend by chains to light the veranda or porch, and we sell the big reflecting lanterns to light the driveway or the stable, or the carriage or the boat house; so you see there is really a large variety in the lamps for country homes."

SUNBURN A MIRACLE.

There are certain Arctic animals, dark coated in the short summer, that in winter turn pure white, thus matching the snow-covered landscape and escaping notice and harm, says the Boston Advertiser.

This change of color, this protection, effected no one knows how, is wonderful as wonderful as a miracle; and yet a kindred change of color, a kindred protection, happens among mankind every summer, and nobody ever notices it.

When the pale city people go out in the summer sun at the seashore or the mountains the light attacks them fiercely, first reddening their skin, then swelling, blistering and scorching it. If they kept in the sun enough, and if no miracle occurred, the light would kill them finally, burning off the skin first and afterward attacking the raw flesh.

But a miracle does occur. The skin changes from a pale color to a tan, and on this tan the sun has no effect. The sun may beat on tan-colored skin for days and weeks, but such skin remains always sound, unblistered, whole.

Thus nature works a miracle. The white skin is suffering, and nature, aware, somehow, that a tan skin is sunproof changes to tan the white. How does she do this? Where did she learn that it was wise to do this? No one knows. Only the fact of the miracle remains.

To prove this miracle—to prove that it is not the hardening of the skin, but the change in its color, which protects it from sunburn—is an easy matter.

Let a pale person, unused to the sun, stain one side of his face yellow, go out in the bright summer sun for a couple of hours. The one side of the face is no tougher, no more hardened, than the other, yet the unstained side will be inflamed, blistered, while the tan-colored one will be quite cool and unhurt.

Sunburn is a miracle, a protection to mankind as inexplicable and as wonderful as the miracle of the Arctic animals' change in the winter from dark coats to snow-white ones.

CHANGE THEIR NAMES.

According to the New York Sun, many immigrants change their names on arriving in this country because of the difficulty they find in getting them properly spelled. A good many residents of the East side of New York have adopted as their surnames the names of streets. In Rivington street there is a tailor, Isaac Delancey; in West Broadway, a cap manufacturer, Solomon Ludlow; a tobacconist not far away sports the name of Abraham Clinton, and there is an Israel Christie in Orchard street.

TOOK IT HOME.

In the days when facilities for keeping fresh fish were not what they are now a fish cart stood in the street at Shelburne Falls, and Postmaster Bowen stepped out and purchased a fish, says the Boston Herald. As he could not leave his office to take the fish home, he looked at the men standing about and said: "Now, if I had some one to take it home for me."

"I'll take it home for you," said a Mr. Merrill.

"All right; thanks," and Mr. Merrill and the fish started.

When Postmaster Bowen went home to dinner he looked for fish, and as none came on he asked his wife if Mr. Merrill didn't bring a fish to the house. On getting a negative reply, he lost no time in making his way into the Merrill house, and there, sure enough, his fish was steaming on the table, with the family just drawing up around it. Mr. Merrill treated him cordially, and invited him to take dinner, which he was quite willing to do.

PARSIFAL FIGURES.

One of the musicians in the orchestra that came back to New York with the Savage "Parsifal" company made some very interesting statistics as to the amount of Wagner's opera that had been handed out to the country by this troupe, says the New York Sun. He calculated that in the 224 performances the company had given there were 672 acts, which contained 960,064 bars of music, in which there were 4,586 bars to every performance. The opera was sung in 46 cities and 25 states, and the time occupied by performances of "Parsifal" was in 189 days, or 877½ hours, or 52,640 minutes. It is probable, moreover, that this application will be as much as the country needs for some little time to come.

The New "Empire" Rain Coats are Taking

"Just what we've been looking for," said a lady Saturday, who had been looking at the new models, "and, do you know, we've been in the stores of several cities on my way up the lakes; I have read about these styles, and also saw some of them East, but didn't know that I'd need it, until I got on the boat—and this is the first place I've been able to find just what I want."

We hear this nearly every day from strangers, and from our home people.

You can't go wrong on the style of your garment if you get it here — for that's our strongest point, absolutely correct styles!

Your money back without a word if you find that we've abused your confidence!

We fully realize that it's what we claim that brings you here—but it's what we do that keeps you coming.

We repeat—We sell you clothes that are more fashionable, better made and better fitting — yet, our prices are no higher than for the ordinary kind elsewhere. This you can easily prove to your own satisfaction if you but take the trouble to compare!

We are now selling lots of Fall Suits, Coats, Wraps, Rain Coats and Skirts to the most discriminating women at the Head of the Lakes—this means the Northwest, for Duluth women are known as being among the best-dressed in this country!

Several Styles—one of plain cravenette or a tiny check material—full Empire front and back—$27.50.

A "London Swagger" style—full tailored and strapped—of fine materials—$22.50.

Also a variety of tight-fitting and semi-fitting effects—trimmed with velvet and braid—advance lines that we bought under regular prices—$25 to $35 value—in all shades $18.50.

And special new models, tan, olive and oxford, $15.00 value at $9.50.

Handsome Long Coat Suits—tailored and plaited mixtures or plain colors—$27.50 and $29.50.

Semi-Paddock Suits — mixtures and plain colors—$32.50.

Queenly Broadcloth Suits and "Mannish" gray worsted Suits—$47.50. Lined throughout with fine taffeta and new panel effect skirt—$49.50.

Extremely high-class Novelty Suits in imported cheviots, broadcloths and mixtures—$52.50, $59.50, $65.00, $69.50, $75.00 and $85.00.

Fashionable Coats—new Autumn models.

The lengths range from 45 to 55 inches — in handsome gray or black and white mixtures — tan coverts — always durable—black cheviots, vicunas and broadcloths—or in the mannish worsteds—$11.75, $13.50, $16.50, $18.50, $21.50, $23.50, $25.00, $27.50, $29.50, $32.50 and $35.00.

Or Handsome Wraps—long, loose models in the Empire or loose effects, in black, tan, gray, sage, Alice blue and many shades of red—$29.50 to $85.00.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY.

NEW ORLEANS WILL BE FREE FROM INFECTION SHORTLY, SAYS EXPERT

People Are Greatly Encouraged By the Shrinkage In Cases.

No Violent Spread Outside Original Center of Infection.

Minnesota Doctor Not Yet Able to Make His Experiments.

New cases in New Orleans since 6 p. m. Monday, Aug. 13	18
Total cases to date	1,031
Deaths today	5
Total deaths	171

New Orleans, Aug. 15.—The number of new cases and deaths up to noon today shows a slight improvement in the yellow fever situation in New Orleans. New cases continue to appear from day to day in the state, but there is no general or violent spread of the pestilence outside of the original center of infection. Alabama and Mississippi continue free from the disease, three suspicious cases in Raymond, Miss., being today pronounced not yellow fever.

Dr. Guiteras, the expert, predicted today that New Orleans would be free from the infection in forty days.

New Orleans, Aug. 15.—Hopefulness among the general public was manifested today over the yellow fever situation, from the shrinkage of cases during the preceding twenty-four hours and the belief is gaining ground that 105 cases reported from Saturday will prove to be the top figures of the present visitation of the fever. As already stated all cases of fever which bore any resemblance to yellow fever were included in last week's daily lists, with the result that many of the yellow fever cases were subsequently diagnosed as malaria. Hereafter more care is to be taken and with the doctors co-operating, it is expected that all the yellow fever cases found will be promptly turned up without necessity of including in the reports fevers of other kinds.

The weather is a trifle cooler today, but there is no indication of a decided fall in temperature. Sudden changes in temperture are injurious to yellow fever patients and with the number of cases now under treatment more deaths than have been occurring will not be surprising.

At La Fourche Crossing, four miles from Thibodaux, the patient reported there with his nurse and family and all who visited him during his illness, have been placed on a disinfected boat which has been anchored in the bayou. With these precautions it is considered probable that the foci there will ultimately disappear.

Dr. Leach of Minnesota has not yet been able to make any experiments here. He told Mayor Behman that he had volunteers who were willing to be infected, but the local medical profession is disinclined to consent to deliberate infections at this time.

Surgeon Berry was reported today to be improving. He was well enough to receive visitors and barring accidents his recovery is now considered to be assured. The only other doctor who has been infected is Dr. John T. Crebbin, a young local physician. Dr. Crebbin has been quite seriously ill, though his condition was reported to be improved today.

Of the twelve deaths in the preceding twenty-four hours seven bore Italian names, two German, two English and one French. All were below Canal street. Nineteen cases were handled during the day at the emergency hospital, where there have been to date 121 cases. Twenty-seven have been discharged and many of the present patients are convalescent. The hospital authorities say that confidence in the treatment given in the institution is growing among the foreign races.

RUSSIAN OUTPOSTS

Driven In By Fierce Attack of the Japs.

Field Headquarters of Japanese Army in Manchuria, Aug. 13, 5 p. m., via Fusan, Aug. 15.—(Delayed in Transmission).—A Japanese reconnaissance in force along the line of the railroad, on the Kikin road, from the Chang Tuf line, drove in the Russian outposts. On Aug. 12 eleven Russians were killed and ten captured in a counter reconnaisance in the section of Kinyton. The Russians were driven back by the Japanese outposts.

MORMONS GO TO CANADA TO TAKE UP HOMESTEADS.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 15.—Between fifty and sixty Mormons reached Butte today on their way to Alberta, Can., to take up homesteads. The party is in charge of a bishop.

For several years the Mormon church has ben systematically colonizing the southern section of Alberta. At present this section contains a large population of Mormons, and the number is being constantly increased. It is planned to send a thousand more Mormons into Alberta, according to the bishop. Members of the party who reached this city today are principally farmers and ranchers from Utah.

SUBSIDY INCREASED.

Victoria, B. C., Aug. 15.—The Canadian government has renewed the mail contracts with the Union Steamship company for the Canadian-Australian line, the subsidy payable by the Dominion being raised $15,000.

THE PEACE ENVOYS ARE MAKING RAPID PROGRESS WITH MINOR ARTICLES OF JAPS TERMS

Article Covering the Surrender of Liaotung Is Accepted.

Cession of Sakhalin and Indemnity Will Probably Be Last.

Envoys Spent $19,000 In Cablegrams By One Company Sunday.

Portsmouth, Aug. 15.—Article 4 of the peace conditions under consideration by the Russian and Japanese envoys, was agreed on during the forenoon sitting of the peace conference today. Consideration also was given to Article 5, but in the course of discussion difference of views developed and it was decided to take note of the opposing opinions and proceed to the consideration of other articles. No further agreements had been reached when the conference adjourned to resume at 3 o'clock this afternoon. The following is the official announcement of the morning session:

In the morning sitting of Aug. 15, the conference has discussed Articles 4 and 5. Article 4 was unanimously agreed on. Not being able to arrive at a unanimous decision on Article 5, the envoys have decided to take note of the divergence of views and to proceed to the discussion of the other articles. The conference will be resumed at 3 o'clock.

This statement was made by Mr. Siebert of the Russian embassy.

Article 4 relates to the surrended of Russian leases on the Liaotung peninsula and Article 5, which was passed over on account of difference, to the cession of Sakhalin island to Japan.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 15.—The conference began at two minutes before 10 o'clock. The envoys went to the navy yard in their motor cars, but the trip was a somewhat slow one on account of the drizzling rain which made the roads muddy. Ten minutes after their arrival at the naval stores building, the negotiators had taken their places in the conference room and work began.

At the morning session today, consideration of Article 4, which relates to the Liaotung peninsula, and the surrender of the Russian leases was begun. As the cession of Sakhalin island i sthe fifth article, the natural deduction would be that today would witness a collision and possibly a deadlock. But it appears more likely that the question of the cession of the island, on which neither side is now prepared to yield, when reached, by mutual agreement, would be postponed until the end. The policy of each side as understood being to maneuver to place the responsibility of a rupture on the other, it is regarded as a practical certainty that neither will insist at this juncture on precipitating a situation which will decide this issue. The plan is almost certain to pass over the disputed articles and see how far an agreement is possible—then to rcturn and attack the obstacles. This is the logical and general method of diplomacy. It has the great advantage of bringing the envoys to a rapprochment upon every possible point and clearly defining the points of divergence narrowing the issues which divide the negotiations to the fewest possible number. If, for instance, the disputed points were reduced to two, as it is considered certain they eventually will be, the envoys would be enabled to bargain or compromise, to offer proposition and counter proposition. If, in the end, agreement was found to be impossible, the world would know and be able to form its judgment of the merits of the respective contentions and place the blame for the prolongation of the carnage in the Far East. The very fact that ultimately the world will be enabled to fix the responsibility for a rupture, that in the final analysis the two countries are on trial before the public opinion of the world, constitutes the main hope of a successful outcome.

Article 3, which was agreed to yesterday, it developed today was incorrectly stated to be the cession of the Chinese Eastern railroad. That article comes later. The third article pertains to the restoration of the Chinese administration in the province of Manchuria, and was a necessary and natural sequence to Article 2 providing for mutual evacuation and mutual recognition of Chinese territorial integrity and the "open door" policy for which American diplomacy has fought. The mistake was due to the fact that the railroad question involved generally in the question of the restoration of Chinese administration in Manchuria was touched.

When the envoys again faced each other this morning, the first business, before taking up Article 4, was the reading and signing of the protocols of yesterday's proceedings, including the draft of the three articles agreed on, and the minutes of the discussion. The Associated Press is now able to state authoritatively from both sides that the twelve "articles" now before them constitute the "bases" of a prospective "treaty of Washington," but as the wording is subject to revision, it does not as accepted, necessarily establish the final text.

The Associated Press is informed that, while covering the surrender of the lease of Liaotung peninsula, and the Blonde and Elliot islands, which are included in the leasehold, "Article 4" does not touch Ports Arthur and Dalny, which are covered in a separate article. Japan, it is understood, insists, at least for the present, on the occupation of these two points. The question of Russian government and private property will probably be dealt with by mixed commissions, as is customary at the conclusion of a war, when fortified cities pass from the jurisdiction of one country to another.

There is what is regarded as absolutely certain warrant for the statement that M. Witte is not referring the questions regarding the various articles to St. Petersburg or Peterhof. All that he has done thus far has been, in pursuance of his own decisions, although he is advising his sovereign, post facto, of what is done. But as to the two main propositions, if the time should ever arrive when his judgment concession should be made on either, it can be regarded as certain that he would consult the emperor before committing himself. In his interviews with the emperor, before he left St. Petersburg, he learned and shared the view of the ruler that peace was impossible for Russia on the basis of indemnity or cession of territory, and in all his public and private utterances, he continues to hold an absolutely uncompromising attitude on those points.

All indications from the Japanese side show also that Baron Komura is equally firm and that the payment of the "cost of the war and the cession of Sakhalin are conditions sine qua non." A suggestion is made that when Baron Komura ascertained from M. Witte's reply that the Russian non possumus

THE MYSTERIOUS "MR. DOVE" LOCATED AT BROCKTON, MASS.

Is Charged With the Brutal Murder of Chauffeur Bate.

His Penchant For Young Women Led to His Discovery.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—The Inter-Ocean today says: A warrant has been issued charging George Lawrence, alias Bennett Marsh, formerly employed as a chauffeur for various wealthy Chicagoans, with the murder of William Bate, the young chauffeur, whose dead body was found leaning over the steering gear of a car at a lonely spot in the road two and one-half miles beyond Le Mont on the morning of Nov. 19, 1904

J. V. Bate of Racine, Wis., father of the victim of the celebrated murder mystery, will arrive in Chicago from Racine today. Chief of Police Collins, confident that at last he has identified the mysterious "Mr. Dove," today will send Detective Sheehan to Brockton, Mass., where Bennett Marsh, known at home as George Lawrence, lives, and where, it is believed, he is in the last stages of consumption.

With Detective Sheehan will go Peter J. Startz, telegraph operator employed in the Santa Fe road station at Romeo, Ill., who was with 'Mr. Dove' for hours on the morning following the murder.

Marsh's penchant for young women was the means of the police eventually fixing suspicion upon him. Two suit cases, which a stranger answering the description of "Dove" shipped from Joliet to Kansas City to 'Bennett Marsh," gave the first real clue. The express company was notified, and when the consignee failed to appear, the cases were turned over to the police. Letters found in them led the police to Lake Forest, Ill., where Marsh had been employed as a chauffeur. There the police learned of Marsh's attachment for a young woman in the village. To identify the man before making any public move toward his arrest, the police centered efforts on getting a photograph of Marsh. It was a difficult task, until they learned that the young woman had a picture of Marsh. A detective became acquainted with her, and continued the acquaintanceship until he gained an opportunity to purloin the photograph.

Joy Morton, head of the International Salt company gave out a statement today concerning George Lawrence who, under the name of L. R. Marsh, worked for the Morton family as chauffeur for a short time just previous to the murder of Bate and for a time after the body was found. Mr. Morton declared that Marsh had always been a sober and industrious mechanic.

Brockton, Mass., Aug. 15—The Brockton police said today that George Lawrence, alias Bennett Marsh, for whom a warrant has been issued in Chicago, charging him with the murder of William Bate, was unknown to them. Several months ago a circular was received by the local police, giving a description of Lawrence, but since that time no communication has been received from the Chicago authorities. "If Lawrence is in this city," it was stated at headquarters, "the fact is unknown to us."

THE FOND DU LAC RESERVATION NOW OPEN TO SETTLERS

The Filing on Claims Commenced at Land Office at 9 O'Clock.

The Long Wait of Prospective Settlers Comes to an End.

The opening of the Fond du Lac reservation's ceded lands took place this morning at 9 o'clock as per schedule and everything moved along in peace and quietness. The people who had stayed in line for—some of them—more than a week, spent last night in anxiety for rumors were rampant about a rush being about to take place. It seems that there had been a good deal of talk on the street that certain real bad individuals were going to rush the crowd and take the cream of the places. This reached the ears of Chief of Police Troyer and he kept several men detailed at the federal building all night to prevent any disturbance.

This morning when the hour for opening arrived, Chief Troyer, Detective Irvine and a number of officers were present, but nothing happened to make their services necessary. The crowd, which has been in waiting has been orderly all during their trying time and this morning ther demeanor was no exception.

In the land office the register and receiver and the clerks of the office lined up in the filing room and George Zopp was stationed at the door to let the homeseekers in one at a time. Janitor Shannon was stationed at the door to the proof room, through which the applicants were passed out after filing.

Sharp on the stroke of 9 o'clock, E. C. Osborne of Schroeder, Minn., was admitted. Mr. Osborne began his vigil at the land office door a week ago Monday and has held position No. 1 ever since. He filed this morning for himself and for his father for whom he held a power of attorney. For himself he filed on the southwest of the northeast, the southeast of the northwest and the northeast of the southwest and lot 3, section 12, 58-18. The tract comprises 157.25 acres and is claimed to be the choice of the lands opened. For his father, James G. Osborne, the young man filed on 120 acres described as the northeast of the northeast and the south half of the northeast of 19, 60-17.

These were the first two filings, and following them came J. N. Larson of 1708 Dingwall street, Duluth, who filed on 146 acres, described as lot 2, and the east half of the southwest and the southeast of the northwest of 35-61-18.

No. 4 was John Ciocarelli of Cromwell, Wis., who filed on lot 5, the west half of the southeast of 35-51-18, comprising 138.50 acres.

The first man to find that somebody had filed before him on his first choice was Mat Tasnen of Wakefield, Mich. He offered to file on the northeast of the southwest, the northwest of the southeast, and the south half of the southeast of 35-51-18; but was informed that the man who filed just before him, John Ciocarelli, had filed on all of that description, except the northeast of the southwest. Tasnen wasted no time, but reached in his pocket for another description and filed on the southeast quarter of section 6-49-17, comprising 160 acres.

Carl T. Larson of 1708 Dingwall street was No. 6, and filed on 120 acres, described as follows: The east half of the southeast of 34, and the southwest of the southwest of 35, in 51-18. G. H. Huseby of Duluth filed on 147.25 acres—the southeast of the southeast of 10, the east half of the northeast, and lot 1 of 15, in 49-18. No. 8 was John Nelson of Duluth, who filed on 160 acres in the west half of the southwest of 3, and the east half of the southeast of 4, in 48-17. Herman H. Patry of Cloquet was No. 9, and filed on a tract of land comprising 161.64 acres, and described as follows: The north half of the northwest, the north half of the northeast of 5-48-17. John Erickson of Cloquet, who was No. 10, filed on lot 1 of 25, and lot 1 and the southeast of the northeast of 26-50-18, comprising 99.60 acres.

The difference in the faces and attitudes of the men as they filed was dis-

TEAMSTERS CLOSE MEETING AFTER ENDORSING GOULD

Philadelphia, Aug. 15.—The International Brotherhood of Teamsters closed its convention today. A number of delegates left yesterday and the faction that has supported President Shea represented at least two-thirds majority of those present today. Former President Gould was on the rack for more than an hour. His integrity had been brought into question by the committee of officers represented. The committee stated that it had no accounting of $800 of the $2,300 expended by Gould. Gould, in a speech, defended himself and declared he had never presented a bill that was not legitimate. He was supported by President Shea and Delegate Turley, former secretary-treasurer, the latter having audited Gould's accounts. The convention adopted a resolution of confidence in Gould and refused to concur in the committee's findings.

ITALIAN JACKIES URGED TO DESERT

New York, Aug. 15.—Alarmed by efforts to induce the sailors of the Italian cruiser Dogalo, which has been anchored off Fort Lee, to desert, the Italian minister of marine has cabled Capt. Capomajja to take his vessel from New York immediately.

On Sunday night the non-commissioned officers and sailors of the vessel were tendered a banquet by the Italian Socialistic union of New York. At the dinner slips of anarchistic literature were pushed into the hands of the guests.

The men who circulated the slips acted mysteriously and endeavored to keep their identity secret. They told the guests not to look at the slips for more than an hour. This injunction was not heeded and the sailors found a message on each piece of paper begging them to desert the ship and take up a residence in this country. They pointed to the example set by the sailors of the Kniaz Potemkine. Word of the plot reached the officers of the Dogali before the men returned. The attempt to get the sailors to desert their colors greatly excited the officers and all the banqueters were placed under arrest the minute they stepped aboard the vessel. There will be a rigid inquiry when the Dogali arrives home.

PEOPLE'S BANK WILL LIQUIDATE

St. Louis, Aug. 15.—Following the decision of United States Circuit Judge Vandeventer, denying an application for an injunction to prohibit the enforcement of a fraud order by the postal authorities, the directors of the People's United States bank, on the advice of their attorneys, have voted to go into voluntary liquidation. The following resolution was adopted:

"That, as the order issued by the honorable postmaster general, July 6, 1905, against this bank, prevents the proper and regular operation of the bank by the use of the United States mails, although the bank is solvent and sound in all respects, it is decmed by this board for the best interests of the depositors and stockholders to go into liquidation and to take at once all proper steps for the protection against unnecessary expense and loss to its stockholders and depositors."

SCHWAB TO INVESTIGATE NEW PROCESS FOR MAKING STEEL

New York, Aug. 15.—Charles M. Schwab, who has returned to this city from Braddock, Pa., revealed for the first time that his trip abroad was for the purpose of investigating in Germany a new and secret process of the manufacture of steel, which may have an important bearing on the future of that industry.

"I will be gone for three weeks and the only country I intend to visit is Germany," Mr. Schwab said yesterday. "I am going to inspect several steel mills. One offers a new development in the manufacture of steel. This has been inaugurated by friends of mine over there and I am going to see what it is like. Mr. Johnson, central manager of the Bethlehem Steel company is going with me."

He added that there was a possibility of his visiting Andrew Carnegie before he returned and refused to discuss his rumored contracts to construct wharves in Russia and for Russian armor plate.

SEVERE STORMS DO GREAT DAMAGE IN SOUTHERN OHIO

Cincinnati, Aug. 15.—Reports received today indicate that the storm yesterday and last night caused damage estimated at several hundred thousand dollars in Southwestern Ohio and less serious loss in other parts of the state and in Kentucky and Indiana. At Hamilton, Ohio, the rainfall reached two and one-half inches, causing a flood in the Miami river, which washed away several small bridges. At Middleton, the rainfall reached 4.26 inches, and both traction and steam roads were washed out at several points near there. Near Mansfield, Ohio, Joseph Finney, aged 3 years, died from the effects of a stroke of lightning, but his parents, who were stunned, recovered. Misses Nellie Smith and Lulu Wilson were seriously injured by lightning, which struck a farm house near Marysville, Ohio. Seven persons were stunned by lightning near Circleville, Ohio, but all will recover. David Waltz, the 14-year-old son of a wealthy farmer in Fayette county, Kentucky, was perhaps fatally injured by a bolt of lightning while standing under a tree. The damage to crops was especially heavy in Butler and Warren counties, Ohio.

THE CANADIAN YACHT WINS THE THIRD RACE

The Temeraire Now Has Two Heats to the Iroquois' One.

Charlotte, N. Y., Aug. 15.—A triangular course of three miles to each leg, two times around, making a total distance to be sailed of eighteen miles, was selected for today's yacht race, between the Temeraire and the Iroquois, the thir dofr the Canada's cup. The wind was blowing about fifteen miles an hour. This being, as it is understood, decided Temeraire's weather, the betting on the day's result was in her favor.

The starting gun was fired at 11 o'clock and the boats crossed the line as follows: Iroquois, 11:00:08; Temeraire,, 11:00:18. The Temeraire had the windward position.

The Temeraire pointed better and soon had a good advantage to windward. At the end of fifteen minutes of sailing the Temeraire had taken a lead of some lengths and was well to windward.

At 11:34 the Teeraire seemed to have better wind and her lead was increased.

At 11:35 through the haze it appeared that the challenger had turned the first stake boat and with spinnakers set started on the second leg.

Temeraire turned the second buoy at 11:55:30; Iroquois at 11:59:15.

At 12:15 Temeraire rounded the home buoy, completing the first round. At 12:18:30 Iroquois completed the first half.

The relative positions of the boats practically were unchanged, when they turned the first stake boat on the second round. The Temeaire turned at 12:51:30, the Iroquois at 12:56.

The wind had increased to twenty-two miles an hour. Temeraire turned the second stake boat at 1:15; Iroquois turned at 1:18:05, both were close reefed as they made for the finish line.

Temeraire won, finishing at 1:33, Iroquois came in at 1:35:15.

PRESENTED TO J. J. HILL

Telegraphers Send "Transcript of Case" to Great Northern President.

St. Paul, Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—President Perham of the Order of Railway Telegraphers today sent a "transcript of the case" of the striking Northern Pacific and Great Northern railway telegraphers to President J. J. Hill of the Great Northern. No request was made for an answer. Mr. Perham said he had sent the communication to Mr. Hill merely to inform him of the telegraphers' grievances as he believed Mr. Hill had not been properly informed of the reasons for the strike. Mr. Hill sent word to all reporters, who requested an interview, that he had nothing to do with the telegraphers' strike. He was leaving that matter entirely in the hands of the operating officials of the road.

CALUMET & WESTERN

Elevator Company Involved In Outside Complications.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—The Calumet & Western Grain Elevator company gave notice today to customers to transfer open accounts to the firm of Crighton & Co. The company's attorney said that the company had become involved in outside complications, pending a settlement of which it was deemed best to take protective measures. Experts are now going over the books of the firm. The Calumet & Western company own and operate a large elevator at South Chicago and another at Minneapolis. They also have connections at St. Louis and Des Moines and maintain an office in New York. S. Percy Buchanan is president.

STANDARD OIL COMPANY INCREASES DIVIDENDS.

New York, Aug. 15.—The Standard Oil company of New Jersey has declared a dividend for the quarter of $6 a share, payable Sept. 15. The previous dividends were $9 a share, payable June 15, and $15 a share, payable March 15, making $30 a share declared so far this year, against $29 a share in the corresponding period last year.

TWO AGENTS HAVE FAILED TO RESIGN.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Only two of the four special agents of the internal revenue bureau whose resignations have been called for have so far complied with the request, these being Capt. Charles H. Ingraham in charge of the New England division, and one of the Northwestern agents, whose name is withheld. Special Agent C. H. Burg of the Southwestern division, and another Western agent whose name is withheld, have not yet responded. Commissioner Yerkes today declined to discuss the charges further than to say that the treasury department knew nothing against the integrity of the men who had been asked to resign, but it was thought that more active men would serve the interests of the government better. Mr. Yerkes added that so far as he knew there would be no further changes in the force of special agents.

IDENTIFICATION A MISTAKE.

Detroit, Aug. 15.—The identification yesterday of Harry Parker, charged with the murder of Pawnbroker Joseph Moyer of this city, July 28, as Harry Soper, formerly of Toronto and Buffalo, proves to be a mistake. Headwaiter Merrifield of the Russell House cafe based his identification on a published photograph of Parker. When confronted with the prisoner he completely failed to identify Parker as Soper.

HARNESS MAKERS MEET.

Milwaukee, Aug. 15.—The National Association of Harness Makers is working on a revision of its constitution. WAS LARGE DEAL

Local Lumbermen Believe Weyerhaeusers Bought Pelican Lake Timber.

Purchase Gives Them 500,000,000 Feet In That District.

Although there has not yet been any confirmation of the reported sale by John McAlpine and others of an immense tract of pine timber in the Pelican lake district, it is now quite well understood among the local lumber and timber interests that the timber was purchased by Frederick Weyerhauser, and that it will go to swell the immense pine holdings that the Weyerhauser interests have already acquired in that district.

The report that the timber was sold by John McAlpine and Henry Turrish of this city is not believed to include all of those selling, for W. H. Cook, William O'Brien and the Lammers Bros. of Stillwater were also largely interested in the tract that is understood to have been taken over by Mr. Weyerhauser.

The total amount of timber involved in the deal is said to be about 260,000,000 feet, and the purchase price is understood to have been about $7 per thousand feet. That the men who sold the timber have made a great deal of money on the transaction is generally accepted. Most of it was purchased by them within the last four years.

John McAlpine's share in the timber, instead of being a half interest in the total, is said to have been a half interest in 40,000,000 feet, which Mr. McAlpine has held for some years. He still has other large pine holdings in the Pelican lake country. Mr. McAlpine owned his half interest along with Mr. Friant. When the latter sold out to the Cook & Turrish interests, Mr. McAlpine is said to have held on to his interest until now.

By the acquisition of this 260,000,000 feet of pine the Weyehausers are now said to control 500,000,000 feet of white pine in the Pelican lake country, 240,000,000 having been acquired a few years ago by purchase by the Pine Tree company from the North Land Pine company.

The purchase, it is believed, will practically insure the extension of the Weyerhauser logging road into the Pelican lake district within the next few years.

GRAND AERIE OF EAGLES ARE MEETING AT DENVER.

Denver, Aug. 15.—The eighth annual meeting of the Grand Aerie of the Fraternal Order of Eagles began here today. The gathering promises to open a new epoch in the history of this fraternlay. The ritual is to be wholly revised along Masonic lines so as to place the order on a firmer basis, and greater restrictions will be placed on membership, although no occupations will be barred. Another important matter under consideration is the establishment of a home.

New Land Company Formed.

The Illinois and Minnuesota Land company is the name of a new corporation, comprised of Duluth men, which this morning filed articles with the county register of deeds. The incorporators are A. W Kuehnow, Edward Hazen and William Elder, and these, with Fred A. Madge and Benjamin D. Brewster, constitute the board of directors. The company is capitalized at $50,000, and purposes to acquire, sell, lease, improve and sell agricultural lands in St. Louis, Carlton, Lake and Cook counties, and in various ways further the settlement and development of the agricultural lands in Northern Minnesota.

KREMARENKO'S ASSASSIN SENTENCED TO BE HANGED.

Viborg, Finland, Aug. 15.—The court-martial which has been trying Prokopo, the man who shot and killed Col. Kremarenko, chief of police of Viborg, July 21, today sentenced him to be hanged. Prokopo refused to plead unless tried by a Finnish court, and the witnesses summoned by the prosecution said they would testify only before a Finnish judge. A crowd of 5,000 persons made a demonstration outside the governor's house here yesterday as a protest against the trial of Prokopo by courtmartial.

A regiment of dragoons has arrived to reinforce the garrison, as the mob threatens reprisals.

TWO KILLED BY LIGHTNING.

Peru, Ind., Aug. 15.—James Showley and Ernest Campbell, both young men, drove into a barn near Wynn station early today to escape a storm. Lightning struck the barn, killing both men.

MEANING OF STORTHING.

The storthing, which has deposed King Oscar from the Norwegian throne, is being interpreted, the great court, and should be pronounced to rhyme with "courting." The second part of the word is identical with our "thing," however, as the Scandinavian languages, in common with "Anglo-Saxon," have the same word "thing" for "council." In modern English a trace of the second sense survives in the word "hustings," which came to mean the public platform upon which a candidate appeared at election time, though originally the "husting" was the council at which the candidate was selected, the "housething" or house council.

WAS ALL WHISTLE.

When Lincoln was practising at the bar, the opposing lawyer in a certain case had delivered a speech for the prosecution which was conspicuous for its exhibition of the man's conceit, says the Los Angeles Times. When he was through, Lincoln, who was attorney for the defence, rose slowly to his feet, and, with that quiet dignity and droll wit, for which he was so noted, addressed the court as follows:

"Your honor, my colleague, who has just delivered this brilliant exhibition of oratory, reminds me of a little flat-bottom steamboat that way back in the '50s used to ply up and down the Mississippi. It had a five-foot boiler and an 11-foot whistle, and every time it whistled it stopped."

HATED THE SURPRISE.

While traveling in Northern Maine the writer arrived late one evening at a small village hotel, says the Los Angeles Times. On applying for lodgings, he was told that the only available room was next to that of a very nervous man, who must not be disturbed.

After retiring to his room the writer thoughtlessly let fall one of his heavy hunting boots, and then, recalling the warning he had received, he placed the other carefully on the floor.

In about 10 minutes a nervous rap called him to the door, where stood his neighbor of the adjoining room, who exclaimed excitedly: "Why in blazes don't you take off that other shoe?"

MATINEE HAIR.

A writer in the Gentlewoman is on the track of new trouble. "We hear," she says, "a great deal of the matinee hat, but what about the matinee hair? One can, perhaps, ask a lady to remove her hat, but one dare not ask her to remove the hirsute obstruction as well; and yet, between the hair worn according to the present fashion and the matinee hat there is little to choose, at any rate from the point of view of the theatergoer seated behind a lady."

TO CONSIDER RECIPROCITY

Important Conference Will Open In Chicago on Wednesday.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—A large number of delegates from various parts of the country arrived here today for the opening session tomorrow of the conference to consider the question of reciprocity and relations with foreign countries. Among the delegates are representatives of the leading commercial, manufacturing and stock-raising organizations of the country. New York will be represented by three large delegations which arrived in Cheago today. The New York delegations represent the produce exchange, the chamber of commerce and the merchants' association. James F. Parker, Gustav H. Schwab and Edwin Page were conspicuous among the New Yorkers. Eighteen delegates representing the Texas Cattle Growers' association were among other delegates who came today. D. M. Parry of Indianapolis, president of the National Manufacturers' association is also a delegate. Tomorrow Governor Hoch of Kansas, Governor Mickey of Nebraska and Governor Johnson of Minnesota are due. Governor Cummins of Iowa, who will take a leading part in the conference, will arrive Thursday. Foreign consuls located in Chicago will also be present, and Senator Shelby M. Cullom will, among others, deliver an address. Today was devoted to meetings of delegates representing the organizations concerned with reciprocity. E. N. Foss of Boston, who will address the convention, was among the delegates who arrived today.

A "NEAR-WIN."

Detroit Free Press: "Talking about these near-wins," said one of the few cheerful-looking men on the ride in from the track, "I came real near getting a boulevardier's high hat full of it one day last summer—real near.

"Back in New York there's a deep, dark, crafty proposition, an old-time team-mate and pal of mine, who occasionally gets on the inside of one of the honest-and-truly shoat-slaughterings. When he runs into anything of this sort that looks particularly engaging to him he sometimes sends me a wire about it, so that I can go to it or not, as I see fit. In wiring me the names of things that look like winners to him, or that he had heard are going to be pulled off certain winners, he uses a sort of beat-about-the-bush code of his own, so as to avoid coming right out in the telegram and giving the name of the plug. He does that because, like a lot of other racing people who have telegraphed nice things away, he has suffered from leaks in transmission, due to sporty key-punchers.

"Before I went down to a Jersey seaside resort last summer I wrote to my New York mate, telling him that there was a handy poolroom at the place I was about to visit, and suggestig to him that if anything peculiarly saccharine swam into his ken during the month or so to follow I'd like to have him flit the same along to me, to the end that I might cop out gum and cigarette money and other legitimate expenses.

"One morning, about a week after I'd reached the Jersey resort, I found a telegram in my hotel box upon returning from the forenoon walk. The telegram had a New York date line, and it read this way: ::

"'Play mug that hummed to evening star, fourth race. Skinch, Jack.'

"So there was a pretty fathomless one for me to try to plumb. I grabbed a newspaper off the newsstand and turned to the New York entries and rubbered through the list of horses scheduled to go in the fourth race, without getting any light whatever.

"'The mug that hummed to evening star,' I kept repeating to myself, and I gazed over the fourth race entries again and again, trying to dope out the mysterious suggestion.

"There wasn't a horse in the race that had a name remotely suggesting a star, or anything like that, and I got into a sure-enough bake endeavoring to get a line on my New York friend's meaning. I took the telegram to the hotel clerk, a good deal of a horse fiend himself, and he figured on it for a long time, too, but he couldn't make any more head or tail out of it than I could.

"At the luncheon table I propped that telegram up in front of me and rubbered and rubbered at it as I waded through the meal, but it simply wasn't in me to uncoil the nub of the tip.

"After luncheon I sent my friend a wire addressed to the track. I think it was Sheepshead Bay, asking him to elucidate the meaning of his dispatch. I didn't have much hope that it would reach him in time for him to wire me a reply that would enable me to get down a piece of coin in the good thing in the fourth race, but I made the effort, anyhow.

"I put in a mean, guessy afternoon of it, waiting around the hotel for a reply to my telegram. At 3 o'clock, when no telegram arrived, I gave it up. I knew then that even if the wire did come I wouldn't be able to make the poolroom in time to go to the good thing. So I strolled over to one of the big piers to listen to the band music, my mind still filled with the good thing that I was missing on account of the queerness of my friend's wired suggestion.

"On the pier I picked up one of the band programs and began to idly run my eye over the list of pieces that the band was rendering. It was then about 4:30 in the afternoon.

"One of the pieces on the program caught my eye. It was a flute obligato, 'Wolfram's Song to the Evening Star,' a piece of music that I have been acquainted with and fond of ever since I grew up.

"And, of course, I tumbled to the meaning of the telegram the instant I saw the piece's name on the band program. I pulled the paper with the entries out of my pocket and there, in the fourth race, as big as life, was the name of the horse Wolfram.

"I tore the paper and program into two-inch bits, and then I went back to the hotel, cussing myself out for my obtuseness in not having been able to dope out the name of the good thing at a glance upon receiving the telegram from New York.

"There was another telegram in my hotel box when I got there. It was from my New York pal in reply to my inquiry. It read:

"'Wolfram, you hopeless fathead. He just strolled in at 150 to 1 and I'm going home with mine in a furniture van. Jack.'

"I went to bed about 8 o'clock that night. I didn't want anybody to talk to me."

HEREDITY AND CRIME.

Heredity does not have so much influence in the accounts of the crime of self-destruction as commonly thought, says the Kansas City Journal. The mere fact that a blood relative has committed the act has, according to best accounts, no bearing socially upon the phenomena. There is no moral or social bearing between the acts of different individuals in this regard worth noting. Mental unsoundness is in many instances the occasion of crime. Perhaps it would be fair to say in most cases this is the cause. But by no means should society admit this without clear evidence, as it is so easy to condone the atrocity of the act by plausibility of the argument that one must be surely unbalanced who would destroy himself.

BLOOD POISON is the worst disease on earth, yet the easiest to cure when you know what to do. WANT DISGUISES.

What People Want Them for In New York.

If one wants material for a thousand or more stirring dramas let him visit a wigmaker, says the New York Sun.

"Is it really true?" a wigmaker whose experience is world wide and covers a couple of decades was asked. "That people, just plain, ordinary garden variety, come to you to be disguised?"

"I am not exaggerating when I say thousands of them," he answered. "My memory is a storehouse filled with anecdotes illustrating this fact.

"One of the most interesting cases of the kind happened in the Chicago branch of our house. A young fellow came in there and asked to see me. There was no doubt about it, he had lived a wild and woozy life, and at that moment had returned from a rest-up on a Western ranch.

"His father, after many attempts to straighten him out, had finally resorted to extreme measures, and the young man had been informed that papa had kept his word and had disinherited him. The young fellow had just heard that his father, was desperately ill, and he had concocted a scheme which he unfolded to me.

"Orders had been given at the family residence that under no circumstances was he to be admitted. It would be impossible either to bribe the butler, an old family servant, or to slip by him. His idea was to disguise himself as an older man, who would be admitted, and fix up matters with the father.

"The young chap was really in a desperate fix; there was good stuff in him, you could see at a glance, and his crop of oats was very nearly planted. So I helped him. I made him up so that no one could recognize him. When I had finished he was about 45, gray haired, and without a trace of the scapegrace.

"He came back and told me his story. The father, it seemed, was at the point where all he wanted was a good reason to forgive his son, and the latter supplied it. The son easily gained admittance to the sick room, and spent an hour or two talking papa that his son wasn't so black as he was painted after all. No one in the establishment dreamed of the disguise.

"The next day the father died, but not until the will had been altered and the son came into his rightful share.

"One of my very first experiences was when, as a lad of 15, just starting out for myself in Washington, I was called to the St. James hotel to make up a fellow, who said he was down there for a lark, know a number of people in Washington who would insist on entertaining him, and all that, and he didn't want to be bothered.

"We chatted together as to the most effectual disguise, and I finally made him up his exact opposite in coloring, age and general appearance. I even went out and bought clothes for him, and it was not until two days afterward, when I read in the newspapers of the escape of a notorious robber, that I realized who the man was I had been working on.

"A great deal of my work outside of the theatrical part and that for social functions is done for the detective force, and the man who works in any line of disguise for a detective is pretty sure to also for the man the detective is trying to capture.

"It often happens that a detective comes to me disguised in a hurry. He is on the trail of a man and has no time to waste. Naturally, on short notice like that all the disguise that can be made is with the wig and beard, but that is usually sufficient, although, if I have time, I prefer to fix the eyebrows, put a line perhaps under the eyes, which gives ten years more to the age, or some slight touch to the face in another way.

"I believe that our detective force lacks a proper education in the possibilities of disguise. I could fool any detective in the world, I know, with a disguise that I could assume in crossing the street.

"I lectured once before the bureau of identification in the police department at Chicago, and with the same man as model showed thirty different ways by which man, if he were an escaped criminal, could elude detection. I made him old, young, a pauper, a prosperous business man, thin, stout, tall short; the shape of his nose was changed, the eyes sunken, the face made haggard as if pinched with want, and then transformed in a minute into the plump appearance of a metropolitan clubman.

"The man I took as model was not one I would have selected ordinarily, for he had very strongly marked features, which had to be overcome in most of the disguises. The ideal model for such an experiment is one whose features are absolutely commonplace.

"A man came to me in the West once, whom I recognized as a well-known member of a detective agency; he wanted a complete disguise; he wanted it quick, and he wanted it effectual. He was on the trail of a murderer.

"I changed him from a dark haired, strongly featured person of about 40 odd years to one of about 50, gray haired, with a short gray beard and ruddy face. Then I had him change his clothes for a dark gray suit. When I had completed my design any one would have taken him for a prosperous broker or banker.

"Still he hesitated; the disguise seemed perfect to him and to me and my staff of assistants, but he was dealing with a desperate character. Finally he said:

"'I'll go down to the station, and if Mike, the station man, doesn't know me it is all right.' Mike and he were pals in a way, and Mike kept an eye open to help him out on his cases.

"Arrived there, he saluted Mike and said: 'Don't you know me, Mike?'

"Mike scratched his head, looked thoughtfully at him, and answered, 'Your face is familiar, but I can't exactly place you.'

"He jumped on the train at that and started after his man, whom he caught all right.

"Recently I made up a young woman to look like a man. She made an appointment with me for an evening makeup, and came to the shop about 6. Her clothes had been sent here for the change, and when she got through she looked like the real thing.

"She was a female detective and asked me to follow her after she left for a few blocks, to see if any one was on. She played her part all right and wore her clothes very well, the only possible difference being in the walk, and that was done better than the gait of most women who dress like men.

"Just now suspicious husbands come in to be disguised in order to follow their wives to the seashore or mountains. This may sound like a fairy tale, but it is, unfortunately, too true.

"Many men do not care to employ detectives, either because they are afraid to trust them or they can't afford it, so they come here, get a disguise and depart seeking evidence. When the man brings back the wig or beard he has hired, I can usually tell whether his quest has been a success.

"Jokers are among my customers, too. On one occasion a young woman came to me and ordered a disguise that she had designed herself. She was to be made up as an old woman, and she had even practiced a sort of cracked voice that harmonized with her infirm look. Her hands were rubbed with grease paint to indicate that she was suffering with rheumatism, and in this guise she went away and consulted with her own husband, who was a doctor, and who prescribed for her without the slightest idea of her identity.

"A man from the suburbs came in one day. He was of the type of practical joker that flourishes in that part of the world. I made him up as a rather tough sort of character, rubbed his face with some sort of preparation that we have, and sprinkled the crape hair over it to give the stubby, unshaved look that a prisoner who had escaped would naturally have. I made his nose coarse with putty and deep lines to indicate his character. His clothes he had secured from some second-hand place, and, perfectly delighted with his appearance, he went off.

"I thought all the time I was working on him that he was fooling me and that he was in reality a detective and was taking that disguise in order to associate with some tough characters and get his man or plunder. I really did not believe a word about his story that he wanted to fool his wife.

"However, a few days after he came in, and I guess he had told the truth. It seemed that his own dog had bitten his leg, his wife had shut the door in his face, he had trampled his neighbor's lawn and been called sharply to account and on his remonstrating had suffered the indignity of arrest. He said, in a rather pathetic manner, that he guessed he'd had all the practical joking he wanted for the present, and I could see that it hurt him to pay the rest of his bill.

"The most important thing to conceal is the features of the back. That is where the utility of the wig comes in, for it hides the marks on the back of the head and neck.

"Exaggeration of disguise is all right on the stage, but when you are making up a man to go out on the street in broad daylight you have got to study fineness of detail. If a man is thin, he is padded out, while if a beard is needed it is put on in such a way as to make the face look fat. If he is short, he can be lifted by means of elevators which are placed in his shoes.

"It may be that he is naturally short and owns a round face. In that case he can be made to look thin, his nose is lengthened with putty and his cheek bones are made prominent by paste that cannot be detected.

"If he has abundant hair, a wig in which the hair is scarce or even a bald head may do; if his hair is thin, a wig of thick, curly hair is a conspicuous element of his new attire. Clothes play an important part, and the stout man is made to dress in black, a lean individual in a loud check. The short man wears a top hat and the tall one a cap.

"I should say that Mansfield was the worst make-up artist on the stage. I have had him insist on my cutting the hair from the front of the wig until the ridge showed where it was sewed and then look perfectly satisfied and be surprised when I, as an artist, remonstrated.

"Irving on the other hand, is too careful in detail, often using strength and time on trivial matters which have absolutely no significance from the auditorium."

The wigmaker has a snapshot of the scene when 150 chorus girls invaded the place to have their heads measured for the spectacle of "Babes in Toyland" and another attraction. That day stands out in the annals of wig history as being one of the hardest to live through.

He has a large collection of historic portraits which are used as models.

"I suppose I have made up 500 Napoleons," he explained. "He is one of the easiest make-ups—the military hat, the well known uniform, the lock of hair on the forehead—there you are.

"But the Napoleon of Arnold Daly's in 'The Man of Destiny' was a different matter. He was lean, lank, the Napoleon of the early life, before fat had replaced fervor and while his expression was one of remorseless ambition.

"When a man comes into prominence I have orders from all the vaudeville artists in the country for that make-up. For example, when Dewey jumped into the front rank, I fitted out at least 300 or 400 facsimiles of the admiral and used hundreds of pictures to get the accurate expressions, etc.

"President Roosevelt is another man whose likeness I have made innumerable times. The greatest difficulty with him is to get the teeth, and I produce the effect with orange peel.

"Often I get a written description of some local politician, and send a make-up to correspond, so that when a company plays in the town one of the men will come out, and his unexpected appearance brings down the house. Often these orders have to be executed at a moment's notice, and it is no uncommon thing to get an order for 500 wigs to be delivered in less than a week for some musical comedy that is out."

The wigmaker led the way through the establishment. In the working part of the place rows of girls were seated, ventilating the wigs, as pulling the hairs, two or three at a time, through the lace work foundation is called. Wooden blocks of many sizes ornamented the shelves, and in a distant corner a young man with signs of a swelled caput was having his head measured by one of the attendants.

"We have a special branch of the trade with society women," the wigmaker said, "Hundreds of them wear handsome wigs, made so beautifully and of such expensive material that they could never be detected. Often a woman wears one simply to give her own hair time to recover from the use of the irons. While it is expensive, a wig, if well taken care of, will last ten or fifteen years easily."

ADMIRAL AND DOG.

The late Gen. H. V. Boynton disliked dogs, says the Los Angles Times. He said one day in Washington:

"I know a lady who always receives her callers with a yapping, snapping spaniel, pampered and spoiled, on the sofa beside her. An old admiral, a friend of mine, visited her one afternoon, and the spaniel took a dislike to him. It began to bark and growl and show its teeth, and it leaped down from its velvet cushion on the sofa and began to make little feints and springs at the admiral's legs.

"He, as he talked, held his cane in his hand, and kept the tail of his eye on the infernal little beast. Its growls and yappings redoubled, and its feint-like springs at his legs increased. For anxiety and rage he could hardly follow the thread of the talk. He took a firm grip on his cane.

"The lady said calmly:

"'Don't be afraid, admiral. My little dog never bites any one.'

"And even as he spoke the nasty brute nipped the admiral's ankle, tearing the stocking and drawing blood.

"He swung his cane and gave the dog a rap on the skull that rolled it, half-unconscious, into a corner.

"'Don't you be afraid, either, madam,' he said. 'I never strike little dogs.'"

BONAPARTE'S SPEECH.

While Charles J. Bonaparte, the new secretary of the navy, was connected with the Baltimore Reform league it decided to investigate the conduct of a prominent federal officeholder, says the Kansas City Journal. Friends of the crooked official learned this, and resolved to "pack" the council, so that the report might be voted down. Mr. Bonaparte listened attentively to the arguments against the report, and then rose to give his own views, bitterly attacking teh official, and urging that the changes be immediately accepted. He saw, however, tha this words would have little effect on that portion of his audience which sided with the accused man, so when he had finished his discourse he began over again, repeating his speech word for word, pause for pause, gesture for gesture—not once, but a dozen times, until toward morning the friends of the accused official were fast asleep. Mr. Bonaparte and his associates then approved and adopted the report.

If a merchant should advertise, however modestly, some article which he would prefer not to sell at the price—he would never again wonder whether, after all, his advertisements are read.

FIRE CHIEFS HERE FOR CONVENTION

Large Number Have Already Registered With the Secretary.

Although the thirty-ninth annual convention of the International Association of Fire Engineers will not open until 10 o'clock tomorrow morning, more than 100 of the chief engineers of some of the principal cities of the country have already registered with the secretary, James McFall of Roynoke, Va., who has established his headquarters on the ground floor of the Spalding hotel.

A large number came in on the morning trains, and more are expected this afternoon. A party of between 100 and 125 is due on the North West this evening, and the remainder will arrive on the trains tomorrow morning.

The majority of those who have already reached the city are from the South, Georgia, Mississippi, Missouri and Virginia being well represented.

The party on the North West this evening will bring the representatives from the large Eastern cities.

The following is a list of some of the most prominent members of the association who have already registered: W. B. Martin, Steubenville, Ohio; W. B. Bldeker, Fort Worth, Tex.; C. E. Coots, Indianapolis, Ind.; R. G. Blackburn, Oswego, N. Y.; E. J. Jewhurst, Albany, N. Y.; John T. Ruane, Minneapolis; P. W. McKeeber, Sioux Falls, S. D.; E. S. Hoswell, Lowell, Mass.; H. F. Magee, Dallas, Tex.; John Kendall, Detroit, Mich.; P. Prevost, Ottawa, Ont.; C. W. De Vore, Decatur, Ill.; John E. McGuire, Savannah, Ga.; J. H. Garnand, Galveston, Tex.; George P. McGillian, Appleton, Wis.; John Lacy, Ishpeming, Mich.; L. F. Pearce, Columbus, Ga.; Charles Hafer, Little Rock, Ark.; John Kegebin, Norfolk, Va.; E. B. Farley, Petersburg, Va.; T. E. James, Albany, Ga.; E. H. King, Kearney, N. J.; B. Duffy and Fillmore Tyson, Louisville, Ky.; W. R. Joyner, Atlanta, Ga.; Thomas Clancy, Milwaukee; George Fendrick, Vincennes, Ind.; O. Johnson, Superior; W. L. Sandridge, Lynchburg, Va.; C. T. Coates, Danville, Ill.; George Harlos, Yazoo City, Mo. Louis Butler, Pawtucket, R. I.; J. F. Browder, Montgomery, Ala.; Edward Wall, Covington, Ky.; J. O. Glanville, St. Louis; George McDorman, Athens, Ga.; H. C. Harrington, Rome, Ga.; A. B. Ten Eyck, Hamilton, Ont.; L. Clark, London, Ont.; N. V. Holmes, Evanston, Ill.; William Armstrong, Joliet, Ill.; C. E. Swingely, St. Louis; J. J. Wood, Paducah, Ky.; H. C. Henley of the National Fire Protective association, St. Louis, and F. M. Griswold and G. E. Bruen of New York, representing the same company.

The convention will be opened tomorrow morning at the Armory. The delegates will all assemble in front of the Spalding hotel, and headed by the Third Regiment band, will march to the Armory. Rev. M. S. Rice will open the convention with prayer, and this will be followed by welcoming addresses from Mayor Prince, Theodore Hollister, representing the fire commissioners, and E. L. Millar, representing the Duluth Commercial club.

There will be a long business session at 2 o'clock, during which the ladies in the party will enjoy a drive around the boulevard followed by a luncheon at the Country club.

In the evening memorial services will be held in the Lyceum theater.

Thursday will be exhibitors' day, and Friday afternoon and evening will be devoted to a boulevard drive and a dance at Lester Park. Three long business sessions will be held on Saturday.

A great number of the delegates have brought their wives and families with them on the trip, and will either go on from Duluth to the Portland exposition, or remain in the city for a week or ten days.

All of the delegates and visitors will wear badges while in the city. The chiefs will be distinguished by red badges; the ladies and visitors by white badges; and the exhibitors by blue badges.

LADIES COMMITTEE.

Mrs. J. T. Black, chairman; Mrs. E. M. Ferguson, Mrs. W. A. Abbett, Mrs. H. B. Knudson, Mrs. Ike Black, Mrs. J. W. Kreitter, Mrs. A. B. Black, Mrs. M. B. Cullum, Mrs. C. S. Wilson, Mrs. Theo. Hollister, Mrs. M. M. Gasser, Mrs. D. S. Forgy, Mrs. J. H. Nolan, Mrs. W. H. Wilson, Mrs. M. Kelley, Mrs. T. F. Bradley, Mrs. E. A. Tessman, Mrs. W. H. Eden, Miss Emma Waugh, Miss Olive Kreitter, Miss Sarah Black, Mrs. J. A. Waugh, Mrs. C. H. Farmer, Mrs. Fred Farmer, Mrs. J. Gray, Mrs. I. D. Burgh, Mrs. H. V. Eva.

RECEPTION COMMITTEE.

Hon. M. B. Cullum, mayor; E. M. Ferguson, president Commercial club; Roland D. Haven, president of council; F. J. Voss, city treasurer; H. W. Cheadle, city clerk; Alfred McCallum, secretary board of fire commissioners; Bert Fesler, city attorney; W. S. McCormick, city comptroller; C. H. Troyer, chief of police; M. Kelley, E. A. Tessman, L. A. Barnes, J. W. Kreitter, W. H. Eden, William Abbett, C. E. Peaslee, W. H. Wilson, Simon Clark, Theodore Hollister, A. R. Merritt, A. A. Farrington, H. Knudsen, J. A. Waugh, P. S. Amnicke, A. B. Black, T. P. Bradley, F. W. Helmick, J. H. Nolan, Thomas Thompson, W. J. Gray, B. W. How, Boardy M. Low, M. M. Gasser.

The members of the association who arrived in the city from the South this morning all expressed the greatest pleasure at the cool lake breezes which greeted them, and welcomed them as a pleasant relief from the stifling heat in the eastern and southern states. The sun broke through the clouds this morning, and gave promise of fine weather for the convention days. Nothing but favorable comments were heard on all sides concerning the Duluth summer climate, and the picturesque location of the city.

Outing Suits for Indoors.

The good Outing Suits left of the Burrows stock are being sold this week at $7.00 each. We need not talk about how extraordinarily low this price is, for everybody who knows aught about Burrows' clothes will realize what this offer means.

For men working in offices this is an excellent chance to get, for very little money, a fine office coat, and the pants will be good to keep till next year, when they can be worn as outing pants.

Suits for $10

that are not $10 suits, but which Burrows sold at from $15 to $20, will continue to hold the front table in the store all this week.

And scores of "good things cheap" can be had in the Furnishings, Hat, Shoe and in the Boys' Departments.

CASS LAKE MAN

Appointed Scaler of Timber In Forest Service.

Washington, Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—John Mussell of Cass Lake has been appointed scaler of timber in the forest service and has been assigned to duty in the McShane cutting in the Big Horn forest reserve, in Wyoming.

SUES FOR $1,000,000.

New York, Aug. 15.—Managers of the Metropolitan Museum of Art of New York have another legal fight on their hands for possession of the estate of the late Jacob S. Rogers, valued at $6,000,000. Mrs. Virginia Heinisch, half-sister of the dead locomotive builder, has brought proceedings in Paterson, N. J., to recover $1,000,000, with accumulated profits, which she alleges her father, who also was the father of Jacob S. Rogers, had placed in the locomotive business for her.

A SPECIAL MEETING

Council Will Consider West Superior Street Paving Question.

A special meeting of the council will probably be called for Wednesday evening to take up the matter of awarding the contract for the West Superior street pavement.

The city attorney will probably render his opinion on the legality of the bids to the board of public works this afternoon or tomorrow morning, and the board will then take action at once, and refer the matter to the council for confirmation. Owing to the lateness of the season it is of great importance to waste as little time as possible, and the aldermen will endeavor to save four days by holding a special meeting.

WILL ATTEND CONGRESS.

G. R. Layborn to go to Fraternal Meeting.

Senator George R. Laybourn has been appointed as one of the representatives of the supreme court of the Independent Order of Foresters to attend the nineteenth annual meeting of the National Fraternal congress, to be held at Mackinac island next week. The congress is composed of sixty leading fraternal orders of America. The coming meeting will probably be the most important ever held by the organization. There will be discussions of Equitable matters, old-line insurance and certain revisions in fraternal insurance. The appointment as representative of the supreme court is considered quite an honor, for only six or seven such men are chosen from members of the order in the United States. Senator Laybourn will leave for the meeting early in the week.

CONDITIONS AT GUAM

To Be Improved By Recommendations of Board.

Agana, Guam, July 22, via San Francisco, Aug. 15.—A board appointed by the governor, consisting of Lieut. R. S. Douglas as chairman, C. D. Lehmkuhl, executive secretary, and the Rev. Padre Jose Palomo, has been in session during the greater part of the month, having under advisement the financial condition of the island, the salaries of insular officers, distribution of duties, and the desirable changes to be instituted in the administration of island affairs. A number of changes under the recommendation of this board, it is contemplated, will soon be put into effect. Among others, the disbanding of the insular artillery, now the only police on the island, and the substitution therefor of a suitable constabulary, reformation of the courts of the island whereby the supreme court becomes the court of appeals, and is brought as near to the jury system as the circumstances attending will permit.

IT WAS HE.

It was music day in the first grade, says the Los Angeles Times. "Now, children," said the singing master, "I will give you a pretty Christmas song to learn for next time." Then, being a true teacher and a man of deeply religious sentiment, he added: "Of course you all know who was born on Christmas?" Up went a forest of hands. "You may tell," he said, pointing to a little fellow who was fairly jumping out of his seat. "I was, sir," was the unexpected reply.

J. McMenamen, New Zealand Rancher, Talks of Country.

Says United States Is Best Place In World to Live.

"Every resident of the United States who knows how to pray should fall down on his knees and thank God that he lives in this country," said J. McMenamen, a New Zealand ranch owner, today. Mr. McMenamen, who landed at San Francisco last April, has been making a tour of the United States and Alaska, going wherever fancy willed. He came to Duluth yesterday for the purpose of viewing the big ore docks.

"This is a fine country," he continued. "I like it in New Zealand, but I imagine there is no place in the world like the United States to live. The money-making chances are better here than anywhere else, and all the surroundings appear to be agreeable. Most of the people in my country are pretty well to do, however. Ranching and mining are the principal lines of business. New Zealand has a population of 900,000 at present, with English, Scotch and Irish predominating, but with a mixture of all nationalities. One does not see many Americans there, except tourists. A good many tourists visit us.

"My ranch is only a small one, with not more than 8,000 sheep on it. None of the ranches there are as large as in Australia, where one man owns as high as 800,000 sheep. The New Zealand socialistic form of government is proving to be quite a success. Women are allowed to vote there as well as men. Every woman more than 20 years old has the same voting rights as a man who is of age.

Other things are different there than in the United States. We have an old age pension, for instance. There are no poor houses. When a person gets old and unable to care for himself he is allowed a certain sum as pension money from the government. Some get as much as twenty pounds a year, or about $100 in American money. It doesn't cost hardly as much to live there as it does here. We have very few poor people. While they are not millionaires, most of them have money. It is rich farming country.

"I am very much interested in America. From a farmer's standpoint I should prefer Vermont to any other state in the Union as a place of residence. It appeals to the farmer more than any other part of the country."

Mr. McMenamen left for Portland, Or., over the Great Northern this morning. After visiting some of the coast cities he will return home.

Our Mexican Trade.

Our trade with Mexico has been steadily increasing since 1870 when our exports and imports only amounted to about $2,000,000 each. This year they will reach $46,000,000 each. There has also been a steadily increasing demand for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, because more people are learning of its wonderful cures and have decided to try it for their own satisfaction. If you are still hesitating get a bottle today and give it a chance to prove its merit. You'll find it perfectly safe and reliable, in fact the most delicate system can easily retain it. For over fifty years it has been curing poor appetite, heartburn, insomnia, belching, dyspepsia, indigestion, costiveness and female ills without fail. We urge every sick man and woman to try it at once.

BURGLARS IN DEPOT

Get Cash and Milage Tickets From Omaha In Superior.

Burglars gained entrance to the Omaha depot in Superior last night and robbed the cash drawer of its contents, $26 in all, besides taking three 1,000-mile books, valued at $20 each, and two excess baggage tickets, worth $12.50 and $35. All of these can be used with little fear of detection, it is said. The thieves have not yet been apprehended.

The men got into the depot by raising the window in the ladies' waiting room and lifting it up. Before leaving the men turned out the electric light which is generally kept burning through the night. The baggageman happened to pass the place and, noticing that the light was out, made an investigation and found what had occurred. This was at 11 o'clock and the police were immediately notified.

Summer Diarrhoea in Children.

During the hot weather of the summer months the first unnatural looseness of a child's bowels should have immediate attention, so as to check the disease before it becomes serious. All that is necessary is a few doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy followed by a dose of castor oil to cleanse the system. Rev. M. O. Stockland, Pastor of the first M. E. Church, Little Falls, Minn., writes: "We have used Chamberlain's Colic, Choelra and Diarrhoea Remedy for several years and find it a very valuable remedy, especially for summer disorders in children." Sold by all leading druggists.

MOB DEMANDS REVENGE ON NEW YORK PATROLMAN.

New York, Aug. 15.—The East Twenty-second street police station was stormed last night by a crowd numbering several hundred persons, who demanded revenge on Patrolman Hale, who had clubbed John Hogan into unconsciousness.

Hogan, according to the policeman, with several companions, had been blocking a sidewalk, and was ordered to "move on," had attacked Hale with a hatchet. Hogan was removed to a hospital, where it was said that his skull was fractured, and that probably he would die. The crowd finally dispersed.

DENIED BY KIDWELL

President of Railway Mail Clerks Answers Charges Against Him.

Cincinnati, Aug. 15.—John A. Kidwell, national president of the Railway Mail Clerks' association, appeared before the members of the Cincinnati branch of the Fifth division and defended his administration against the charges of having misappropriated the funds of that organization. The matter is now being discussed among the 10,000 members throughout the United States.

The meeting took place in the loft of the Federal building, and his address was listened to with close attention. Mr. Kidwell's presence caused many members to secure substitutes to take their places on night runs out of Cincinnati in order that they might hear his defense.

Mr. Kidwell requested the meeting be called when he heard that the Cincinnati branch met several nights ago and passed resolutions damending a thorough investigation of the charges which have been talked about among the clerks for some time. It has been claimed that much money was squandered, and that Kidwell did not turn in itemized expense accounts while traveling throughout the country on official business.

The president said that he was not a grafter and remarked that he had traveled into St. Louis for about eighteen years and that he had plenty of opportunities to learn the methods of the defunct political ring of that city.

He said that if he was guilty of such methods he would not stop at small sums, but would get rich quick and then retire from the railway mail service. Kidwell told the clerks that he had been patronizing the Pullman company, claiming that he found it less expensive than to sit in a day coach and ride several thousand miles and spoil a suit of clothes such as his moderate means permitted him to purchase. He said he was in the habit of tipping waiters for service. The president also asserted it was only becoming to the head of such an organization to look fairly presentable upon arriving in a city and meeting reporters who would have passed him up if he had slept curled up on a seat in a car.

Mr. Kidwell had a difficult time explaining how some of the large sums had been expended for the good of the association. He told his audience that the money had been spent in a good cause, for which the members had received ample returns through legislation. Some of the clerks wanted the speaker to explain more fully on this point, but he refused to do so and said they ought to have more confidence in their officials.

Kidwell declared he was a candidate for re-election in order to vindicate himself.

He told them that the next national convention is to be held in this city on October 3, 4 and 5, and at that time the question as to whether the president should travel about the country and necessarily increase expenses will be further settled. Kidwell said that this would amount to less than $1,400 for this year, and told the clerks that he owned no real estate, had a bank account just large enough to sustain a family and that any one of them was at liberty to dig in the cellar of his home at Columbus, Ohio, for hidden treasure. This remark caused the clerks to laugh. He also said that since the misappropriation argument arose he has met with some queer receptions. He recently went to Kansas City and was met by a delegation which informed him he should not have come. Kidwell said that he was between the devil and the deep blue sea, for had he stayed at home his action would have looked like an acknowledgement of guilt, and by going he was accorded a frosty reception.

The trouble originated several weeks ago when J. J. Mulligan, national auditor, whose home is at Utica, N. Y., wrote a statement for the Railway Mail, a publication devoted to the interests of the railway postal clerks, in which he attacked George Woods, the secretary, of Portsmouth, N. H.

"It was entitled 'The Parting of the Ways.' Serious charges were made against the latter, and the name of Kidwell was mentioned in the publication. The executive committee held a meeting and Mulligan was asked to substantiate the attack he made on Woods by producing documentary evidence. It is claimed that he was unable to do so and Woods, as secretary, recently notified the auditor that he had been removed from that position. The resolution also empowered the president to cancel Mulligan's membership should he try to fight the action of the committee. The deposed auditor refused to give up the records in his possession, and Kidwell resorted to the authority given him by the committee. This is one of the main objections to the president, and will be the cause of a fight at the national convention.

Kidwell explained that he was not defending Woods, but the members contend that his position in the controversy has brought upon himself the present trouble. A resolution, thanking Mr. Kidwell for his attendance and explanation, was unanimously adopted.

FRIENDS GIVE HIM FAREWELL

Banquet Tendered Gerard Tonning Who Goes West Wednesday.

Last evening at the Hotel Metropole a farewell banquet was given in honor of Gerard Tonning, who leaves Duluth tomorrow for Seattle, Wash., where, in company with Carl Riedelsberger, a violinist formerly of Duluth but in later years in Minneapolis, he opens a school of music. Speeches, songs, and good fellowship prevailed, while a sumptuous repast was partaken of.

Emil Olund, now of St. Paul, a long-time friend and neighbor of the guest of honor, made laudatory remarks, and in the name of those present wished him godspeed and success in his new field.

Later Mr. Tonning was presented with a field glass, and W. G. Joerns made the presentation speech. He told of Mr. Tonning's many sterling qualities, his work in the field of music during his twenty years' residence in Duluth, and the loss to the musical people of Duluth.

Mr. Tonning replied, thanking the friends appreciatively.

THE STRIKE SITUATION

Nothing New Has Developed—Philbin Will Show Figures.

"After today there will be only one station in Minnesota on the Great Northern system that will not be open," said Superintendent D. M. Philbin, today, in speaking of the telegraphers' strike situation. "A man starts work at Buhl today, and leaves Kerrick the only depot which is not open for business. Some of the others are short-handed, we admit, but the force is of sufficient size to carry on all necessary business.

"The strikers, I see, deny the truth of my assertions in last Saturday's Herald. I have the figures here in the office, open to the inspection of all, to prove that every statement I made was true. It is true enough that the postoffice job is not given our employes by the railroad company, but they attend to the government business on the railroad's time, and during a time when they are supposed to be devoting their whole attention to the company's business. If it were not for their position on the railroad they would be unable to keep the postoffice job, for it does not pay enough money. The operators are better paid than the retail clerks in Duluth or Superior and promotions come faster."

The strikers say that, while many of the stations along the line are open, the men in charge are in numerous instances not competent to handle the telegraph business, and that the road is therefore greatly handicapped. All trains appear to be running on time.

BIGGEST SHIP

In the World Burns to the Water's Edge.

Baltimore, Md., Aug. 15.—The American built ship, Roanoke, one of the largest in the world, and commanded by Captain A. J. Amesbury, bound for Baltimore with a cargo of chrome ore from New Caledonia, caught fire Thursday afternoon while at anchor in Nebone Harbor, New Caledonia, and was burned to the water's edge.

Her last trip to this port was made in April, 1904, and she was laden with a cargo of matting from Hongkong for a local firm. She was 192 days on the voyage, and left the Orient in November, 1902.

The information of the Roanoke disaster was received by cable by Noumea, London, then by the local Maritime Exchange. Details of the disaster have not been received and the fire is of unknown origin.

Fine Vaudeville Bill.

A large audience showed its appreciation of the clever vaudeville performance at the Metropolitan theater yesterday. This theater is making an effort to obtain the best talent on the road, and the bill this week is fully up to the standard. Johnny Rigge, the equilibrist, does some very good balancing feats on the trapeze. Miss Gilmore, a pleasing little lady, renders some choice selections on the violin. Swanzel and Razell have a clever sketch, introducing some trick piano playing, which makes a hit. Arthur P. Jackson sings one of Charles K. Harris' pathetic songs, "Why Don't They Play With Me." The illustrations are good, and the song is well rendered. George and Laura Lewis, in "The Scarcrow and the Lady," have a funny sketch, in which Mr. Lewis does a grotesque dance that brings down the house. The moving pictures are good. "The ex-Convict's Troubles" is a true representation of what a hard struggle a reformed criminal has to overcome his disgrace. Matinees daily at 3 o'clock. Night performances at 8 and 9:30 o'clock.

FAVORS SAID TO HAVE BEEN SHOWN BEEF TRUST.

Washington, Aug. 15.—One explanation of the failure of the bureau of animal industry to provide inspectors for small packing houses doing an interstate business in meat products is that at some establishments controlled by the beef trust, more inspectors are stationed than are necessary.

From a quarter which seems thoroughly reliable it is learned that a few months ago there were six government meat inspectors at the house of Armour & Co. in Chicago, where there was then only enough work for three. This was at a time when at least two houses in Kansas City, which were not in the trust, had been told that there were not enough inspectors.

When the firm of Workman & Co. carried a complaint to Secretary Wilson it was told that the committee on agriculture in congress had repeatedly cautioned the department not to extend the inspection to the small houses on account of the expense.

Dr. D. E. Salmon, chief of the bureau of animal industry, when informed of the report that several months ago Armour & Co. had twice as many inspectors as were needed, and that this condition was supposed still to prevail, said: "I do not believe that statement is accurate.

Dr. Salmon was asked about a report that in Wyoming men who had qualified only as taggers were doing the work of inspectors. He admitted that there were some stock examiner and taggers engaged upon work in Wyoming, but that they were in every way qualified.

AT CROOKSTON.

Fifty Men In Line to File on Homesteads.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Fifty men were in line at the land office here this morning when the first quartet of homesteaders were admitted and permitted to enter, and after a fourteen hours' wait in the long dark hall, Mr. Nelson of Dawson secured the first entry. Thirty-five claims were available as a result of the opening and until long past noon crowds surrounded the land office door clamoring for admittance. The first four to gain admittance and file on lands, were M. S. Nelson, G. P. Jones, Alida P. Walderman and Henry Pontius, Crookston. Most of the land taken is north and south of Bagley and is considered valuable for farming. The one taken by Nelson is valued by land men at $2,000 and he has been offered $1,000 for his rights.

PATHETIC CASE

Italian Woman With Nursing Baby Confined In Jail.

Three Other Children Are With Father on Claim.

Carrying a nursing baby, unable to speak any English and nearly frantic with the knowledge that three other small children are alone in the northern woods with none but their father to care for them, Mrs. Francesca Vurcio, an Italian woman, is confined in the county jail awaiting a hearing before the district court on the charge of selling liquor without a license.

The woman is one of the prisoners caught in the movement against blind-piggers in the northern part of the state. She lives with her husband in a little shack on a claim near the new town of Aurora. She has four small children, of whom the youngest is but a few weeks old.

Two of the county's witnesses visited her house and, according to their claim, purchased two small bottles of beer from her. A warrant was sworn out for her arrest and she was brought to the city. After being given a hearing in the municipal court she was bound over to the grand jury, and her bail was fixed at $50 cash.

The woman's husband has no money to furnish the bail and he is unable to even come to the city to the assistance of his wife, as the children would be left alone in the woods of Northern Minnesota if he should leave them.

The woman cannot speak a word of English and told her story in court through the medium of an interpreter.

She has the little baby in jail with her and walks the floor nursing it, and brooding over her sad plight and terror of her strange surroundings.

MYSTERY OF THE DIAMONDS

Lost By Potter Recalled By Millionaire's Marriage to Masseuse.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Revival of interest in the now famous Potter diamond robberies has followed announcement of the marriage of O. W. Potter, millionaire, public man and steel magnate, to Mrs. Elizabeth Bell, cafe cashier, candy store proprietor, hair dresser, masseuse and bathhouse keeper. Old time police officials reiterated in whispers the statement adhered to by Former Chief Kipley until his death that the mystery of the robberies and the vicious assault upon the late Mrs. Potter could be explained only by members of the Potter household.

A member of the family furnished additional material for speculation by the statement that the first robbery involved a far greater amount than was made public at the time, the value of the stolen gems, greatly exceeding $25,000. The second theft, when Mrs. Potter was struck down and pounded over the head while defending her gems, resulted in the theft of only such diamonds as had been purchased to replace the originals to a limited extent, according to this authority.

Passionate fondness for diamonds on the part of Mrs. Bell, who became Mrs. Potter, coupled with the lavish display of the sparkling gems made by her after the reported death of a rich uncle, is responsible for the change of public interest from Mrs. Bell herself to the Potter diamonds and her gems.

EVERY BONE IN FACE BROKEN

Indiana Man Pounds Life Out of Brother-in-Law.

Logansport, Ind., Aug. 15.—With his bare fists William F. McClaeb pounded the life out of his brother-in-law, Joseph Uncefer, aged 60, who, he claims, had attacked him with a corn knife. The murder was witnessed by Mrs. Charles Stewart, McClaeb's sister, and scores of neighbors, who were too frightened to stop the frenzied man.

Uncefer was indicted recently, charged with the murder of his son. He was acquitted, but the mystery surrounding his son's death has never been cleared up. The son was found dead in the woodshed at Uncefer's home, his skull crushed. The father declares that the boy came home intoxicated and fell while trying to get into the house.

Mrs. Stewart recently separated from her husband. In a buggy with Uncefer she called at McClaeb's residence and asked concerning some of her household goods. McClaeb declared he knew nothing about them and Unsefer, according to the prisoner, took a corn cutter from under the seat and attacked him. McClaeb dodged and knocked Uncefer down. Then he sat on Uncefer's stomach and hammered his face into a pulp. Hardly a bone in the skull is unfractured. A policeman dragged McClaeb from his victim, who died before reaching the hospital.

Uncefer's face is a shapless pulp, his nose and cheek bones are caved in and crumpled to pieces. His head and face have more the appearance of having received a beating with a stone hammer than with human fists.

WILL NOT CONSENT TO EIGHT-HOUR DAY.

Toronto, Aug. 15.—President Ellis of the United Typothetae appeared before the committee appointed by the Typographical union to consider the eight-hour day movement. WOMAN IN A TERRIBLE RAGE

Insulted By Man and Emptied Two Revolvers Into Him.

Rushville, Ind., Aug. 15.—Following the tragic death of Norman Cook, a farm hand, at the home of Wesley Burkhert, seven miles south of here, Mrs. Ann Burkhert, wife of Wesley Burkhert, was arrested and lodged in jail here. By her own statements the woman shot at Cook seven times, five shots taking effect. She then inflicted a deep gash across the back of his neck with a knife. Cook died three hours after the shooting without regaining consciousness, except to call for a drink of water.

Mrs. Burkhert says she went to an upstairs room shortly after dark and that she foun dCook in the room. Cook had formerly worked on their farm, and the woman knew him. It is intimated he insulted her. She rushed down stairs, she said, got a thirty-two-caliber revolver and shot at him four times, all shots taking effect. One bullet entered his stomach, two in his right side, one in his right hand and one in the right leg. The husband heard the shots and took the revolver away from the woman. She got another revolver and shot at Cook three times more and the husband took that revolver away from her. While the husband went to the barn to hide the revolvers the woman says she slashed the dying man across the neck.

The neighbors who were called sent for the coroner, and he in turn, after trying to save the wounded man's life, summoned Sheriff Brainbridge from Rushville, who took the woman into custody. It is said that there has been gossip in the neighborhood concerning Mrs. Burkhert and Cook. Another arrest is expected.

AN OFFICER AS REFEREE

New York, Aug. 15.—After a prize fight on board the converted cruiser Yankee, which was refereed by a lieutenant in the United States navy, off Monte Cristo, San Domingo, on July 6, Harry Cohen, a coal passer on the Yankee, died as the result of the punishment he had received. Charles Johnson, a negro coal passer on the Olympia, Cohen's opponent, was acquitted by a court of inquiry, which rendered a verdict of "accidental death."

Boxing and all other athletic sports are encouraged by the officers of the navy, as it prevents the men from becoming restless and homesick on a long cruise. Boxing gloves are carried on every ship.

Johnson was the best middleweight fighter on the Olympia, and Cohen had defeated all the men of his class on the Yankee. Rivalry between the men led to a ten-round bout for a purse of $50. The squared ring was built on the after deck of the Yankee, and Lieut. George T. Pettingill of the cruiser Denver was the referee.

When the fight started 500 men and at least a dozen officers were at the ringside. Each fighter had seconds and timekeepers. Johnson weighed about 145 pounds, while Cohen was seven or eight pounds lighter.

After the first round it was apparent that Johnson had Cohen at his mercy. According to one of the men on the Yankee who was at the ringside, Cohen took a count of seven or eight several times, and when he got to his feet Johnson would not strike, but wait for him to make the attack. Cohen was cheered on by his shipmates, who hoped he would get in a lucky blow.

In the eighth round Cohen, without being struck a blow, sank to the floor, while Lieut. Pettingill counted the final ten. Cohen was unconsious, and efforts of the ship's surgeons to revive him were unavailing. He died the same day, and an autopsy revealed that he had sustained a hemhorrhge of the brain.

Cohen was buried at Monte Cristo with naval honors, and at a court of inquiry the testimony was overwhelming that Johnson was not vicious in his fighting and had been unusually lenient toward his adversary as soon as he realized his condition. Johnson was aquitted of any intent to kill Cohen.

WANTS THEM HANGED.

Odessa, Aug. 15.—The military procurator has appealed against the decision of a courtmartial which sentenced two boys each 20 years old and a girl 13 years old to penal servitude for being in possession of explosives. The procurator asks for capital punishment.

RESTORES WITHDRAWN LANDS.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The president has modified his proclamation withdrawing from entry lands in the Uintah Indian reservation in Utah. It is understood he restores 80,000 acres of the withdrawn lands.

BONAPARTE'S SIGNATURE.

The signature of Charles J. Bonaparte, the new secretary of the navy, is the subject of much speculation in the different bureaus of the department, says the Kansas City Journal. Nothing like it has been seen for at least four generations of secretaries. It is large, distinct, carefully rounded and every letter is made with care. It is distinctly handsome and Secretary Bonaparte writes it with much care, spelling the "Charles" out and finishing with a little flourish and a carefully added period. Secretary Long's signature used to look like a rapid dash down hill. Secretary Moody's was an incoherent assemblage of vertical and inclined lines, and Secretary Morton's bold running hand showed a tendency to stretch out into a straight line.

HOW HE WENT.

Just after the close of the Civil war Col. John S. Mosby, the famous Southern chief, was stumping while running for a minor office in a small town in Virginia, says the Los Angeles Times. Knowing that a love for the gray and a hatred for the blue still lingered in the hearts of his audience, he referred in glowing terms to his part in the battles against the "Yanks," concluding with: "Gentlemen, in casting your votes, remember that John Mosby was the last man to bear the Confederate banner through your town, and if there is a man here who doubts this claim, there is one you all know well who will vouch for it, no less a man than Fitzhugh Lee."

"Yes, John," said Lee, "I saw you bear our banner through this town, and it went through faster than it ever went before, for Kilpatrick was after you, red-hot."

"It is by studying little things that we attain the great art of having as little misery and as much happiness as possible." Reading the advertisements cultivates the habit of "studying little things."

GAME QUIT QUICKLY.

A. J. Anklebuster Made an Intellectual Poker Play.

New York Sun: "There is them" said old man Greenhut, "that sets up f'r bein' strong on religion, 'long o' readin' the Good Book continual, an' mebbe l'arnin' a few verses by heart. But that kind ain't to be depended on when it comes to makin' a practical 'application o' the golden words o' wisdom that's wrote into that book.

Take that there proverb that says 'My son, hearken thou not to the voice o' the bluffer, 'specially when he bluffs, not wisely, but too well.' There's a heap o' parsons 'd read that in the pulpit in the mornin' an' never think o' givin' heed to it when they was sittin' into a friendly game at night.

"Now, Amos J. Anklebuster, he were entirely different."

At this point the old man paused suddenly, and busied himself in counting a quantity of small change which he pulled out of his trousers pocket. Finding a half dollar of dubious appearance he scrutinized it carefully and then dropped it in his cash drawer.

This performance was rather puzzling to the beholders, since it did not seem entirely clear that any great advantage was to be gained by transferring the coin from his pocket to the drawer, though it was undoubtedly true that his habit was to make change for his customers from the drawer.

However that may have been, the old man appeare to take considerable satisfaction in the thought of what he had done, and, as if he considered himself entitled to an extra indulgence because of some unexpected saving, he took down a box of particularly choice cigars, such as he smoked on special occasions only, and selected the best one he could find in the box.

Lighting this with great care he walked around to his favorite seat by the window, and placing his feet on the window sill he sat a long time looking at them, and smoking in silence.

Then Joe Bassett, growing impatient, exclaimed:

"Touchin' this here Anklebuster. Who was he?"

"He were a man 't mought ha' been the sheriff o' this county," said Greenhut, "if he'd chose to stay here an' run f'r office ag'in trillers as got elected on the stren'th o' three or four extra lucky gun plays. An' he were the man 't made the most intellectural play at draw poker 't was ever saw in this comunity the time when Crossbone Tucker come here to do up Arkansas City.

"Folks uster say 't Amos J. Anklebuster was too hasty an' impulsive like for to make a good poker player. He 'peared to do everything half cocked, so to speak, an' half the time it looked like he was bettin' his money afore he right knowed what his hand was.

"Them was the days when we was tryin' toget together talent enough for to build up the reppytation o' Arkansas City, an' it was most important for to do up any outsider 't happened to stop over. 'Peared to me like Anklebuster were intelligent enough to make a particular good player if on'y he'd put the curb onto his disposition. So I says to him:

"'Anklebuster,' I says, 'why don't you take things more easy like? Looks to me like it was better to give the other feller a chanst o' tyin' hisself up when you're tol'able sure o' holdin' the best cards. When a man is blamed eager to get into the pot first like you 'pears to be ain't it a kind o' warnin' to other folks to stay out?'

"But Anklebuster, he says: 'Greenhut, that's my way o' playin'. If you makes up your mind,' he says, 'to soak a man with a hungry bluff,' he says, 'pears to me you don't want to lose no time a-doin' of it.'

"Well, I c'd see there was sense into that, an' says to Anklebuster, 'But,' I says, 'if you play so all fired sudden like, don't you keep the pot other feller f'm contributin' as much as he'd oughter to the pot?'

"'What if I do?' says Anklebuster. 'I git the pot, don't I? Most gen'ly I do, that is. An' there's other pots a'terwards to contribute to. Anyway, that's my way o' playin' an' I ain't no gre't loser up to now?'

"There wa'n't no disputin' that, an' I seen the on'y thing was to let him go on playin' his own game his own way, but it did make me nervous to see how all fired quick he was, until that time when he made his great play ag'in Crossbone Tucker. Then I seen there was advantages about his game what he couldn't ha' got no other how.

"Crossbone Tucker had come to town like a raveling wolf, a-howlin' for blood, an' havin' a reputation o' bein' the slickest dealer an' the coolest bluffer 't played cards onto the boats. 'Pears he uster stop off, now and then, some place, an' look f'r the best players there was, an' tackle 'em single handed.

"An' he'd stopped off here an' was doin' up the talent when Amos J. Anklebuster come home. He'd been down the river on business.

"Now, there hadn't nobody never caught Crossbone Tucker deailn' crooked. Fhat was one reason why he was knowed f'r a slick dealer.

"Well, Anklebuster heerd about all this afore he'd been home two hours, an' there was them that told him 't Crossbone Tucker had took in over $800 in the four days he'd been playin'.

"I reckon ropes an' chains wouldn't ha' held Anklebuster when he heerd this. They said he was waitin' for his supper when they told him, but he didn't wait no more. He came down to my place so swift that they lost sight of him on the road an' he rushed in, tempestuous, just as Crossbone Tucker were settin' in with three or four citizens as had been hit tola'ble hard a'ready, but was game for to make a effort to get square.

"Anklebuster just set in with the rest. He didn't waste no time askin' if he c'd have a hand, or whether it 'd be agreeable for him to join, nor nothin'. He just set in.

"That was his way. If he was going to do anythin' he just done it. If there was any objections goin' to be made, they c'd be made after, for all he cared. But this time there wa'n't none.

"More 'n likely there weren't no game ever played in Arkansas City 't was brung to a finish more sudden like 'n that one was. There was on'y three deals in the hull game, but they was remarkable deals.

"First off it were Crossbone Tucker's deal, an' they'd made a jackpot for to start. Anklebuster set first an' he hadn't got his cards fair off the table afore he opened the pot for the size of it. It didn't look like he c'd ha' saw what his cards was, but reckon he must have, f'r he wa'n't likely to make no such break as to open without the cards.

"Well, anyway, everybody came in, an' Tucker looked at his hand tol-able close afore he spoke. He were some slow in his play, bein' reckoned a careful player, even if he did bluff outrageous sometimes.

"But when he'd studied his cards he raised it ten, and he hadn't got his money in the pot afore Anklebuster made it twenty more to draw cards.

"You'd ha' thought some on 'em 'd ha' dropped under a double raise, seein' no-body was willin' to raise, but they didn't, none on 'em. I reckon they must ha' thought it were a bluff atween them two.

"They all come in an' Tucker didn't raise again, so the hull six on 'em had $37 apiece into the pot afore the draw. They'd only took a hundred apiece to start, an' 'twas table stakes, so it looked like somebody was goin' to get hurt.

"Well, Anklebuster he called for three cards, showin' plain enongh 't he had aces, 'thouten he'd been actin' foolish altogether, an' all the others took two apiece.

"Then Anklebuster he picked up his draw with one hand an' shoved his hull pile in the pot with t'other. 'Peared like he'd bet again 'thout knowin' what he was bettin' on, but that was on'y 'count he was so 'mazin' rapid in what he did.

"Then, one after another, all six on 'em shoved their piles up to the middle o' the table. O' course there couldn't nobody raise, bein' 'twas table stakes, an' the on'y thing to do was to show down.

"Anklebuster showed first, bein' he was called, an' his hand was three aces. Everybody else had three till it came to Tucker, an' he'd caught his fourth ten spot.

"Mebbe 'twan't none surprisin' 't that sort o' play was too swift f'r some on 'em, an' three o' the citizens dropped out. Anklebuster, he 'peared to be just het up a bit, an' he pulls out six hundred, so's to be even with Tucker, an' reached over for the cards, it bein' his next deal.

"An' there were another man in the party named Wimple, 't 'lowed he'd six hundred. They made another jackpot, each man puttin' up $5, 'thouten any on 'em sayin' nothin'. It were a game f'r the marrer, then, an' there wa'nt no words wasted.

"Wimple had first say, an' he opened for $15. Tucker made it $20 an' Anklebuster made it $50. I looked to see Wimple lay down a'ter that, but he comes back at 'em strong. All's he did was to see the double raise an' put a hundred-dollar bill in the pot.

"Then Tucker made it a hundred more, an' Anklebuster done just what he done the deal before. He put his pile in the pot, an' the others made good.

"Then they all stood pat an' Anklebuster showed a full house ag'in two flushes.

"Wimple said he reckoned he'd had enough, but Tucker hadn't lost only his first hundred, an' what velvet he'd accumulated, an' he were keen for more, so he says he'll play Anklebuster a freeze-out for as much as he has, which it figured up to $1,850.

"Anklebuster says he's agreeable, an' Tucker flashes his wad. It were Tucker's deal, an' Anklebuster antes ten calls twenty, makin' a stiff start.

"Well, the cards was still runnin', f'r Tucker he comes in, an' Anklebuster raised it twenty. Tucker grinned, an' put up fifty more, an' Anklebuster went back at him with 200.

"Then Tucker he tried Anklebuster's play, an' he shoves the hull o' his pile into the pot, an' it was right there 't Anklebuster showed what a intellect he had in the way o' rememberin' a golden text.

"He says to me a'ter: 'When I seen him push in his pile I thought o' that verse o' Scripter that says, "My son, harken thou not to the voice o' that bluffer, 'specially when he bluffs not wisely but too well," an' I knowed it was time for somethin' to be did, quick.'

"An' before Crossbone Tucker knowed what he was doin' Anklebuster pulled his gun an' blowed the hull top of his head plumb off. Then he took the pot."

RICH PRIZES OFFERED.

Many, no doubt, will conclude that there is practically no chance of securing such desirable prizes as the large sums of money—five prizes, each worth £8,000—offered by the Nobel bequest, where is is absolutely needful to have attainments of both a learned and brilliant nature, yet a study of the following particulars of prizes which is known as the prickly pear; it is a rather attractive looking plant, but its leaves are covered with hair sharp enough to pierce the hands of any one who is so rash as to touch it. The plant came originally from America, but after it was introduced, in some manner or another, into Queensland, it spread so rapidly and to such an extent that in some districts it has practically destroyed all other vegetation. The Queensland government is still offering a reward of £5,000 to any one who can devise a method by which it can be completely eradicated.

The British consul at Palermo not long since sent a dispatch to the foreign office containing information regarding a premium of £2,000 that the municipality of Catania is offering. In order to encourage local industrial enterprise, this sum is to be awarded to the individual who establishes some new industry in the town. This trade is to be of such a nature that it will employ not fewer than 100 workmen. A further £1,000 will be paid for every additional fifty hands that are afterward employed. These sums would be payable at the end of the year, in five equal instalments.

Five hundred pounds is to be obtained from the government of Holland. As most people are aware, the Dutch are the most expert diamond cutters in the world, but in this diamond cutting it is necessary to use an alloy which is dangerous to health. Is it possible to find a method of doing without the aid of this alloy?

Again, to turn to a very different source of money-making by competition, there is £500 being offered by the well known firm of Ricordi & Co. In order to encourage English opera,, that firm has offered this prize to be competed for by English subjects alone, and has guaranteed to produce the successful work at the Royal Opera house, Covent Garden. M. Massenet has already been secured as one of the adjudicators.

One of the biggest prizes on offer at the present time is for no less a sum than £5,300. This is being offered by the Russian imperial ministry of finance, and the last date for claiming it is July 1 next. The subject of the competition, however, is of a technical nature, for what the Russian minister wants is a good and reliable system of denaturing alcohol.

Mr. Woodbury, a philanthroplst resident in New York, offers £200 to any married man who can convince a jury of twelve matrons that there is in that city a single specimen of a perfectly happy married man. Mr. Woodbury's contention is that bachelors and spinsters form the happiest section of the community; he urges nothing against marriage in general, and says that his arguments refer only to the conditions of life in New York. Mr. Kerr, who takes the side of the married man, and Mr. Woodbury himself will act as counsel, while a committee of single men will act as judges.

Women can gain a prize of £200 which is being offered by the Women's Institute of Science at Naples. It is to be given for the best work on any subject of scientific research, but it must be based on independent laboratory experiments.

Another interesting subject is "The best, irksome and least-costly method of securing the male able-bodied youth of this country for service in the regular or auxiliary forces as existing, and for expanding these forces in the time of war." For the three best essays dealing with these topics the Royal United Service Institution offers prizes consisting of 100 guineas, 30 guineas and 10 guineas.

A very big prize is that which a millionaire residing in Paris, M. Daniel Osiris, has instituted on similar lines to that laid down by Mr. Nobel. This prize, however, is confined to Frenchmen, except during any year when an exhibition is being held in Paris, when it becomes open to people of any nationality. A sum f money has been set aside that will produce not less than £100,000, and this amount is to be awarded every three years in perpetuity to the discoverer, inventor or producer of the idea or object that will do most to benefit humanity.

SCORNED A CHECK.

A New York paper recently asked Emperor William of Germany to contribute an article on the war in the Far East, the article to be signed, says the Kansas City Journal. A check for $5,000 was inclosed with the request. By return mail came a decidedly curt note to the effect that the emperor had no desire to write for such a publication on any subject, and especially on the Russo-Japanese war. Of course the check was returned.

Miss Harriet Shanno and Miss Lou Tyler were hostesses at a delightful "at home" this afternoon at Miss Shannon's home at 1718 East Superior street. The rooms were prettily decorated in the summer garden flowers. In the parlor golden flow was used, and sweet peas were the decorations of the back parlor. The diningroom was very attractive in yellow and white decorations, nasturtiums in the light shades being used. The rooms were lighted entirely with candles giving a soft and particularly charming effect.

Receiving with Miss Shannon and Miss Tyler was Miss Morey of South Bend, Ind. Assisting about the rooms were Miss Lillian Brown, Miss Dana Van Vleit, Miss Elizabeth Hoopes and Miss Cora Letteau. In the diningroom Mrs. Watson S. Moore presided, and assisting were little Misses Rhea McManus, Dorothy Chisholm and Edith Mullen. During the receiving hours from 4 to 6 o'clock nearly a hundred guests called.

Y. W. C. A. OUTINGS.

Several Pleasing Affairs Are Being Planned.

An outing has been planned for the members of the Young Women's Christian association by the secretary, Mrs. Wesley Feetham. During the summer a number of informal outings are taken by a number of the members. Several impromptu picnics and tramps through the woods have been enjoyed this summer, but the entertainment planned for tomorrow evening is different from those preceeding. A brake ride is planned and at 7 o'clock the members will start from the rooms on West Superior street and the drive about the boulevards will be taken. Upon the return an informal social hour will follow at the association rooms. These informal outings are greatly appreciated by many of the business young women who remain in the city throughout the summer months as giving an opportunity to get the fresh air and recreation with a number of congenial companions. Any desiring to join in the drive tomorrow evening should send in their names at once.

VALUE OF TACT.

It Makes Friends and Keeps Them.

Tact may be defined as saying the right thing and leaving unsaid the wrong one; also of doing the right thing in the right way and of not doing it in the wrong way. It is sometimes assumed that women have more tact than men, but, however that may be, the possession of this desirable quality will win more for a woman than ever beauty can. There are some persons in whom this power seems to be innate. They know how to select the most agreeable and efficient methods of approach, they rarely blunder in their intercourse, they wound no one's sensibilities and accomplish their end without a war of words or without giving another the unpleasant sense of defeat. The most tactful women in the world are French women, and they carry all before them by this means without the aid of beauty, says the Providence Journal. The celebrated women of the salons of the eighteenth century in France were, as a rule neither young nor handsome, rich or well educated; yet by their tact they exercised an enoromus influence over the minds of the great men who frequented their salons. Mlle. de l'Espinase, one of the most celebrated of these women, was poor and plain, yet a witty French author said of her: "When people talked to her they never felt how clever she was but how clever they were."

Mme. du Deffand, the friend of Horace Walpole, old and quite blind, was to the last witty and delightful and swayed the minds of men, while Mme. Geoffrin, a bourgeoise, neither beautiful nor well educated, was a leader of the most aristocratic circle the world has known because she had a "tact that amounted to genius." She could not even spell correctly, but her tact and sympathy put her en rapport with learned men and attractive women. Her clever, illiterate old grandmother, who brought her up, is quoted as saying: "If a woman were a fool education only made her folly more conspicuous, and if clever, she could get on very well without it."

The only woman who is apt to get herself universally disliked is the one who has unpleasant, tactless manners and prides herself on speaking the exact truth on all occasions, forgetting that "blunt truths more harm than nicer falsehoods do." It requires mind and brain of a certain quility to be tactful; not the brain of the learned woman, who may possibly lack perception; not the brain of the merely clever, practical woman, who can serve up a dinner of eight courses, but certain sympathetic qualities of mind and heart which enable the possessor to see and feel, which give insight into character and which enable the possessor to take the mental pulse of others. A tactful person does not lose a friend for a jest or by making the first remark which comes into her head. Naturally, one is sometimes off one's guard and in a moment of irritation may say the "things best left unsaid," but the tactful person will try to efface the error, while the tactless one is forever unconscious of offense.

AN UNAVAILABLE PLOT

By Louis J. Stellman.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

"Yes," the Man was saying, "life is full of pathetic little incidents that crop out from the most unexpected sources." He was combating with considerable eloquence the Girl's statement that it was a sentimentless age. She did not believe this herself, for she was young—and pretty—but she was bored, for one thing, and she wanted to draw the man out.

"Every one has his secret tragedy—with a real, human heart-throb in it," the Man went on. "The beggar, the washerwoman, the millionaire, the Failure in life—the stolc, the beast, the fanatic. Each one of them has at some moment in his life stood face to face with his soul. And, no matter how long ago it has been, how many things have come between—some trivial incident, a flower, a tune, a word anything, will at times bring that memory to the surface and temporarily transfigure him."

The Girl regarded him curiously. She was succeeding better than she had anticipated. Usually his mood was light—too light, she thought, to harmonize with the shadow that sometimes crossed his face.

"Tell me about it," she said at a venture. "It is a new story?" The Man wrote things for the magazines. He poked about in all sorts of odd corners for "realistic material." Occasionally he outlined a plot for her, after some such prelude as this.

"It would make a good story," he mused. "I hadn't thought of writing it, though. It's too—elusive. Just a commonplace little thing—but, if I could put old Joe Henderson into it, just as he looked! If I could do that—"

"Who is old Joe Henderson?" interrupted the Girl.

"He's the survivor of a past regime," replied the Man, gazing into the fire, abstractedly, "of a time when newspaper men were called 'journalists,' and wore top hats, frock coats and the dignity of old-school professional men, when they fraternized with princes and statesmen and were honored throughout the land. The misplaced remnant of a faded glory—that's what old Joe Henderson is. Absolutely inapplicable to modern conditions. He edits a little trade paper at $40 a month, and polishes every word that goes into it—even the ads. His frock coat and top hat—he still wears them—are threadbare with age, but always carefully brushed. It is pitiful to see him try to fit himself into an age that has outstripped him. You see, Joe never had much enterprise, so the years slipped by and left him far behind. He still has a youthful spirit. He's not much over fifty, and, until the other day, I've never heard him mention the past. Never a whine about 'decadence' or 'the good old times.' Just a futile, never-ending hope that he will rise again."

"And the story," cried the Girl, eagerly—"about his past. Tell me that."

"Ah, yes, the story," said the Man, shaking off his revery and facing her. "As I said, it was quite an every-day affair. So was the way Joe told it; the look on his face, and—all that." He turned to the fire again.

"You see, we were up at the club. (A lot of us got together, and we elected Joe an honory member some time ago—because he couldn't afford to join, you know.) We were talking—about midnight it was—and I asked him out to have a bite with me. We went to a quiet little place and had black coffee and things. Then we smoked, and something or other I said—about a girl I had left behind me when I came West—stirred a responsive chord within him and he began to tell me of his early life. About a woman—of course, there had to be a woman in it—a broken engagement and a westward flight; a checkered career; odd jobs here and there and everywhere; crumbling prestige, lack of ambition; a memory that would not down and, finally, forgetfulness and drifting with the stream of resignation. Many a man has told me the same thing before. There was no bitterness in Joe's recital—that was, perhaps, the only difference—nothing but a placid acceptance of the inevitable.

"When he had finished we smoked a while in silence. After a time he threw down his cigar and looked at me. It was the most peculiar look. I couldn't describe it—but I turned my face away.

"'Hal,' he said, 'the other day I met a man from Philadelphia—my old camping ground, you know—and we got talking about people there. He asked me if I knew the Campbells. I tried to switch him off, but it was too late.

"'They have a daughter,' he told me. 'Must be nearly fifty, but very well preserved, except for the gray in her hair. The old folks are over seventy. Yes, I know them well. But that woman—she—there's a sadness about her face—a something—my heaven, man! it makes people cry. She's done a world of good—practical charity and that sort—and she's an accomplished musician. Lord! she can make a violin talk—just simply talk! She fondles the thing; takes it with her when she leaves the room. Mostly she plays herself and sometimes, in the morning, they find her asleep in an arm-chair, with the violin in her arms.'

"That's what he told me—this fellow, d— him,—you remember, just before the last time I was drunk. I didn't know, you see, but what I'd had something to do with it. It doesn't matter about me, much. But that girl! I gave her that violin!"

"I tried to change the subject, but old Joe wouldn't have it.

"'No,' he said, 'let me get done with it. Do you know what I did? I sat down and wrote her a letter. Yes, after thirty years. Just a little note, you know. I don't quite understand what made me do it.'

"He paused. I offered him a fresh cigar, but he didn't take it. He was smiling, half absently, and neither of us spoke.

"'Quite a little romance, isn't it?' he said, at length. 'You can write it up, if you want to.'

"'No, Joe,' I said. 'No, I don't think I'll write it, but I'd like to know—if she—the rest of it, Joe.'

"'There isn't any more of it,' he returned in a sort of monotone. 'That's all.'

"'But the letter?' I questioned. 'Surely it—you—'

"The queer look had disappeared from Joe's face. The spark—the something—it was gone! His expression was placid again and the eyes looked tired.

"'I didn't send it,' he said, calmly. 'I carried it about in my pocket for a while—and tore it up, finally. No, I didn't sent it. What would have been the use?'

The Girl placed a hand on the Man's arm, impulsively. Her eyes were moist.

"Oh!' she cried, "and you call that a commonplace story! It's beautiful—if you only write it down as you've told it to me. I can realize it—feel it all. It's so strong and simple. Don't you see it has made me cry?" She paused a moment. "And that poor old man," she went on, "did you persuade him to write it over again? What did you say?"

"There was nothing to be said," returned the Man.

"Nothing!" cried the Girl, drawing back. "Oh!"

"No," said the Man, shortly. He arose and walked to the window. "You see, I did the same thing myself once. I don't suppose you'll understand—but that's why I can't write the story. It's sort of—sacred, or something like that."

After the Man had gone the Girl stood at the window and watched his retreating figure until it passed from view.

"I wish he had told me the other story," she said to herself.

And then, for some inexplicable reason, she burst into tears.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Officers Called to Investigate Fatal Shooting In Woods.

Sault Ste. Marie—Matt Pennanen shot and killed William Wiles at Spur 459 on the Soo line, and Sheriff Lipsett and Coroner Shepley have gone to investigate. It is rumored that the affair was an accident. Pennanen disappeared in the woods with his rifle, and the officers are on his track. The place is several miles back in the woods and little can be learned of the shooting.

The Bruce copper mines Ontario) have been purchased by the Lancaster syndicate of London, England, and to operate them the Copper Mine and Smelter company, with a capital of £20,000 sterling, has been formed.

Republic—A find of valuable mineral on lands in which he is interested, near Republic, has been made by Carl Peterson of this village. Peterson encountered a bright, scaly substance which was entirely new to all prospectors to whom it was shown. Some samples were sent to the Michigan College of Mines, with request for analysis. The answer came back that the mineral had been identified as molybdenum, a comparatively rare substance in demand for use in chemical laboratories, but that no data were at hand at the moment to indicate its commercial value.

Some Eastern chemists were communicated with, and they have now replied that a ready market can be found for practically all the molybdenum the Republic man can furnish, and that if eight courses, but certain sympathetic qualities of mind and heart which enable the possessor to see and feel, which give insight into character and which enable the possessor to take the mental pulse of others. A tactful person does not lose a friend for a jest or by making the first remark which comes into her head. Bessemer—A big black she bear with her three cubs, is making herself comfortable at the expense of the miners' lunches in the No. 6 dryhouse at the Tilden mine. Last night as the day watchman unlocked the door to enter he was astonished to see the big animal coolly feeding her cubs from the lunch pails of the miners and as she reared up at the intruder he directly took to his heels. Returning later armed, and with companions, it was found the bear family had vanished. Hunters are diligently looking for the game.

The Michigan Telephone company is extending its lines from this city to Lidnow, to connect this range with Marquette and the copper country.

The prompt response of the Bessemer fire department saved the little village of Ramsey from total destruction Sunday afternoon. Fire caught in a large barn filled with hay in the rear of the big mining boardinghouse. This was also on fire when the hose from Bessemer arrived, which, with the ample water supply from the pumps of the Eureka mine soon had the fire under control.

Ironwood—The strike at Newport mine has been settled and the men are all back at work. Their pay remains the same as before.

Houghton—Lenna Brown, alleged first wife of Charles Brown, a former resident of Minneapolis, was the chief witness against the latter in the circuit court, where Brown was made to stand trial on the charge of bigamy. According to Mrs. Brown No. 1's testimony, she and Brown eloped from Minneapolis, where they resided, on Oct. 24, 1897, and went to Hudson, Wis., where they were married. They lived together about two years, after which Brown, so she claims, left her and went to work in the woods. About two years ago Brown came to copperdom, where he wooed and wed Bridget Sullivan, a charming brunette. Mrs. Brown the first is a decided blonde. All was happy for about a year, and then the first wife put in her appearance. The result was that Brown was arrested.

The trial was a brief one, but while it lasted it furnished some spicy testimony. Failing to show that the marriage of Brown and his first wife was legal, Judge Streeter instructed the jury to bring in a verdict of not guilty. Brown was released and Mrs. Brown No. 1 has returned to her home in Minneapolis.

NO WASTE NOW

Lumbermen Take Rag, Tag and Sliver For Sawmills.

Pine Stumps Are Being Made a Source of Revenue.

It has frequently been remarked in the past two years that the general run of pine logs received for sawing at the mills in the local harbor are very much smaller in size than were the logs brought to the mills in the early days of sawing operations. This situation, the lumbermen claim, is easily explained by the fact that the big logs were cut first and manufactured into lumber, and loggers paying but little attention to the smaller logs when the big trees were plenty. The big trees have now become scarcer and the lumbermen have been compelled to turn their attention to the smaller ones, those which they at first disregarded. Because of this scarcity of the larger logs the shipments now coming to the mills by water or rail are comprised of logs which the timber owners in districts as yet untouched regard as very small.

In commenting on the decreased size of the logs received by the mills now before the county board of equalization recently, a prominnt local manufacturer very aptly described the situation when he said.

"We are glad enough to get every rag, tag and sliver."

With the disappearance of the pine timber tributary to the large sawmill districts, the lumbermen have given more attention to the manufacture of the cheaper grades of lumber. Lumber prices of late have been stiffened to a point where the buyer claims that there is such a thing as "cheaper grades." Culled lumber which in the earlier days of cutting was thrown away ,or which was a drug on the millmen's hands, now finds ready sale for various purposes at pretty good prices.

Even in the heavily timbered districts in the northern part of the state where sawmills are being put in operation for the first time the lumbermen have learned to avoid waste and are stripping the land clear, leaving nothing but stumps and tree tops.

In some districts attention has been turned to the stumps with the idea of making them pay a revenue. The pine distilling plant put in at Hinckley a little over a year ago is considered a good example of its kind for the reason that it is working nicely and making a satisfactory product at a reasonable profit. The owners of the plant have invented a process of retorting pine stumps and the distillates include tar, turpentine, pyroligneous acid and charcoal. The acid produced is refined elsewhere and a considerable amount of wood alchol is obtained.

The general process is said to be similar to those employed by charcoal burners operating retorts and not kilns. A cord of stumps, for which the farmers are paid about $3 is said to yield about 30 gallons of tar, 20 gallons of turpentine, a gallon of acid, 25 gallons of oil and about 60 bushels of charcoal, though the latter is of an indifferent quality.

As the busines progresses it is regarded as likely that other processes of extracting the products of the pine stump even more cheaply, will be discovered and it may not be many years before the Northern Minnesota farmer who clears his land of stumps by the use of explosives and teams and then burns them will find a market for them and secure a revenue that will, in a large part compensate him for the cost of clearing his land.

SANGER FOR ASSISTANT SECRETARY OF STATE.

Lenox, Mass., Aug. 15.—There is a report in Stockbridge that William C. Sanger of New York is to be assistant secretary of state, and that the appointment will be made this week.

Mr. Sanger is now in Labrador with Secretary Root. He served as assistant secretary of war under Mr. Root and was invited to make the trip to Labrador by his former chief.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Case Against Frank Jones For Assault Nearing Its Close.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—The state closed its testimony Monday in the case against Frank Jones. Jones is a resident of Moorhead, and was in Fargo at a circus July 19. He and a livery employe on this side, named Baake, had a row over a girl. Max Miller was a friend of Baake and became involved in the quarrel. Before it was over Jones struck Miller with a fence picket and fractured his skull. Miller was in an unconscious condition for two or three days, but recovered.

A Minneapolis boy, named Floyd Purcell, fell from the roof of the courthouse to a concrete floor twenty feet below and fractured his skull. He was engaged with the crew putting on the iron roof and stepped on a plank which tipped, causing the fall.

Hankinson—A. J. Dunham and Mrs. Elizabeth Dunham of DeVillo township were married by Judge Jersin of the county court. Thirty years ago they were married in an Eastern state and ten years later came to Richland county where they settled on a large farm and were soon well-to-do. Misunderstandings, however, arose and six years ago Dunham left the country and Mrs. Dunham sued for and obtained a divorce on the grounds of desertion. Lately a correspondence began which resulted in a reconciliation and their marriage.

A pretty wedding took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. Kinney when their niece, Miss Blanche A. Kinney, was united in marriage to Winfred A. Rowe of Fargo. Rev. H. E. Walker officiated.

Harvesting in this vicinity began Aug. 9, and it is expected will be over by the 20th. Indications are very favorable and a fifteen-bushel average at the very least is predicted.

A Dexter township farmer last week became involved in a fistic argument with his wife. She seems to have been the "better man" as he required the services of a physician after the encounter. He has since begun an action for a divorce.

Jamestown—At the regular session of the county commissioners last week the resignation of Commissioner E. J. Welsh of Courtenay was presented to the board and accepted. H. J. Murphy of Courtenay was unanimously chosen as his successor. Mr. Murphy is a well-known druggist of Courtenay and an excellent business man. Mr. Welsh was led to resign the office on account of private business matters, having accepted the position of traveling auditor for the Langworthy Lumber company. Alfred Steele was elected president of the new board.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—An autopsy on the body of the late John S. Bradner, the hardware merchant of Hecla, who died on Aug. 6, after an illness of a few days, revealed the fact that death was caused by arsenical poisoning, the poison being found in the heart, lungs and kidneys in quantities sufficient to cause death. Just before he was taken sick Mr. Bradner was engaged in building a large galvanized iron tank for a customer. In working on the job he went inside the tank and soldered it from the inside. Physicians state that the heat from the soldering plant released the arsenic contained in the galvanized iron and the poison, in the form of gas, was absorbed by Mr. Bradner's body, and death ensued in a few days.

O. D. Buchecker, the wealthy Walworth county man who was recently brought to the Brown county jail, charged with threatening to shoot his son, has been released, having furnished bonds for his appearance in circuit court to the sum of $2,500. Upon his release Buchecker went to a store and purchased a fine silk hat and then to a bakery, where he bought a large quantity of food, which he had taken to the county jail for the benefit of his fellow prisoners. Buchecker will be missed by the inmates of the jail, as they have lived on the fat of the land during his stay with them.

Sioux Falls—Mrs. William Rhinelander Stewart, formerly of New York city, who recently became a member of the local divorce colony, has just entertained a distinguished guest, in the person of Anthony J. Drexel, the multi-millionaire of Philadelphia, who is married to a sister of Mrs. Stewart. Mr. Drexel was accompanied by his son, and they arrived in Sioux Falls in the former's private car, "Twilight." After remaining over Sunday as the guest of Mrs. Stewart and her daughter, Miss Anita, they today departed for the East. This was Mr. Drexel's first visit to South Dakota, notwithstanding that many thousands of dollars of the Drexel estate is invested in Indian mission schools in the southwestern portion of the state.

Webster—About 8 o'clock Sunday evening Frank G. Walters, Fred Lawrence, Lou Nelson, Frank Manley and Fred Kerns, prisoners in the county jail awaiting trial for the robbing of Chilson & Haugen's store on the night of July 18, made their escape by sawing the window bars, and making their escape in a livery rig which had been secured by a confederate. The other two who were bound over along with those who escaped remained in their cells. The evidence against them not being so strong as against the others. The prisoners had agreed to plead guilty before Judge McCoy next week, but this was probably a "pipe dream" given the sheriff in order to allay vigilance.

Huron—Rev. George H. Starring has accepted a call to the pastorate of the Congregational church at De Smet, and will enter upon his work about the first of September.

The Huron college trustees announce the employment of John I. Fipal, a graduate of Beloit college, as instructor in oratory and physical culture.

Geddes—Completed figures for Charles Mix county give it a total population of 11,212, a gain of 2,714 in five years. Platte has a population of 760, Geddes 616 and Wagner 513.

Ashton—The city council has called a special election for Sept. 1 to vote on a proposition to issue bonds for waterworks in the sum of $3,000.

LIGHTNING'S QUEER FREAK

Bolt Strikes Dynamite 1000 Feet Beneath Earth's Surface.

Norway, Mich., Aug. 15.—A recent accident at the Ludington mine, at Iron Mountain, as a result of which one man was killed and two were seriously injured, was one of the most remarkable ever chronicled in the Lake Superior iron mining region. The men were working at the bottom of the new shaft, which is about 1,000 feet deep, yet lightning caused the fatality. A crew of miners had just finished drilling nine holes and filling them with dynamite. Three of the men—Anton Erickson, William Anderson and Charles Anderson—were still at the scene, connecting the leading wire to the charges of dynamite, preparatory to exploding them, when the lightning struck the shafthouse, ran down the steel cable attached to the skip, which was resting at the bottom, and exploded the charges in two holes. Erickson was instantly killed and his companions severely hurt.

BRITISH FLEET SAILS.

London, Aug. 15.—The British channel fleet, consisting of eleven battleships, eight cruisers and a flotilla of torpedo boats, under command of Sir Arthur Wilson, sailed from Spithead today bound for the Baltic sea. During the cruise the squadron will visit Youiden, Graa Deep, Swinmunde and Neufahrwasser.

FAITH IN HUMANITY.

Under the heading "How They Lost Their Luck,' Success magazine recently printed a long list of causes, and among others was "trusting unworthy people."

While not so prolific a source of misfortune as some of the other causes named, this is undoubtedly responsible for many a failure, and indeed the man is fortunate who does not sometime during his life suffer losses through dishonesty of those in whom he has put his trust.

Such experiences naturally damage one's faith in humanity, and that is perhaps as great an evil as they accomplish. Much more comfortable and much happier is he who holds his faith in mankind than he who distrusts every man and seeks for ulterior motives behind the most common acts of kindness. A man once bitten by a bank failure is likely thereafter to be distrustful of banks, and to seek other methods of keeping his money than that of trusting it to bank officers for safe-keeping.

The remedy is not to be found in universal and consistent distrust. That leads men into a form of cowardice that shuts the door of opportunity to them in many cases. He who trusts no one is in a pitiable state of mind.

While betrayals of trust stand out conspicuously before the world, they must not be permitted to disguise the real truth, that in spite of appearances tending to prove the contrary the average of mankind is honest Against the banker that betrays those that have trusted him must be arrayed the ranks of the thousands who have been faithful to their trust; against the trusted friend who has robbed those who have confided in him must be lined up the thousands who have suffered personal losses and even death in the defense of their integrity; against the public official who stoops to despicable grafting must be set off the thousands who serve the people honestly and faithfully.

The danger of the victim of misplaced confidence is that it may breed a hopeless pessimism in his mind. Pessimism is a diseased condition; optimism is health. Ordinary care and a common sense study of human nature should always be used. The man that trusts those whom he has reason to distrust has but himself to blame. But the contrary extreme, distrust of everybody, should be abhorred like a plague. It is a mental astigmatism that is more damaging to its victim than to the objects of its suspicion.

ANTIDOTES FOR CORRUPTION.

If you are going to have decent things in politics, you have got to fight for them. The most expensive government on earth is a democratic form of government, based on universal suffrage, and if it is going to be an upright and free government, it has got to be paid for in love and service and self-sacrifice and loyalty.

Thus spoke District Attorney Jerome in one of his characteristic talks at Chautauqua recently, and when he said that he said something worth thinking about.

And it comes from a source that makes it worth while, for Jerome is doing what opportunity brings to his hand to do to make democratic government what it ought to be. In the early days of his appearance in the limelight his numerous eccentricities led many to distrust him. He did worthy things, but he did them spectacularly, and as the custom was, he was accused of paying to the grandstand. But after the public became accustomed to his idiosyncracies and learned his earnestness and devotion to duty, he quickly mounted to a higher plane in public esteem.

"If you are going to have decent things in politics, you have got to fight for them." Eternally true. When the people, fed and pampered by prosperity into supine neglect of public affairs, permit those to conduct their business that are always seeking such power, it is but a short time until corruption runs rife. A period of public neglect results in a period of corruption, which in turn generates a period of public indignation, and the shout is "Turn the rascals out!" Then they are turned out, though they go reluctantly, and cling with grasping fingers that have to be torn away.

If the people were vigilant all the time, there would be no periods of public neglect, no corruption, no necessity for public indignation and political house-cleanings. If the people were like a careful housekeeper, who sees that the house is swept and dusted and aired every day, there would be no gathering places for the rats and spiders and noisome vermin of political corruption.

"Love and service and self-sacrifice and loyalty." These are the antidotes for greed and plunder and selfishness and treachery, which gallop like deadly plagues through the body politic while the people spend their time in forgetfulness and criminal complacency.

A SILLY INSINUATION.

Philadelphia Telegraph: Arms and ammunition, furnished by parties unknown, captured in transit, were intended, as shown by shipping vouchers, for the bandits and outlaws of the disturbed districts in the Philippines. Who furnished these rifles and cartridges? It is believed in well-informed circles that the Boston anti-Americans had more or less money and material on hand when their campaign as allies of Aguinaldo came to an end. Is it the anti-American league that is squaring up the balance of the old Aguinaldo account by shipping the left-over stock of arms and ammunition to the marauders who still defy the law in the Philippines?

What utterly disgusting rot!

A first reading of the paragraph naturally led to the conclusion that it was a feeble joke; a second shows that it is serious, and that there exists in Philadelphia a newspaper that will in this day and age make such a charge against its countrymen with no more evidence than that of a diseased imagination.

There was a time, when imperialism and militarism were political issues and bugaboos, when men affected to believe that those who opposed a war of conquest and the assimilation of an alien race and country by force of bayonet were guilty of conniving with the insurgents and giving them aid and comfort against American arms. They "affected to believe it" is the proper term. They pretended a lot of indignation about it, and in fevered speech-making branded them as traitors to their country. Then when the campaign was over they forgot all about it, which they certainly never would have done had they really believed that there were traitors in this nation.

That was some years ago. Other issues have come up, and these are almost forgotten. Yet here comes a newspaper to insinuate that because the Boston fellows that did not approve of the conquest of the Philippines had money left when the issue was dead, and because somebody has been shipping guns and ammunition to the insurgents in the Philippines, the two circumstances must have relationship, and it must be the anti-imperialists who are backing up the men that are making trouble for American troops.

Such charges were bad enough when they were made in the heat and passion of a bitter political campaign. They are utterly inexcusable now. It is charitable to suppose that the sudden awakening in Philadelphia recently and the extraordinary heat that has prevailed lately, have turned the Telegraph's brain.

STRONG MEN NEEDED.

There is a disposition in certain quarters to condemn the tendency to talk politics in the off year, which is based on a feeling that people get enough politics in the even-numbered years when elections are held, and are therefore entitled to a rest during the off year. Perhaps they are entitled to a rest, if they wish it, but just the same it is when the people are taking a rest from politics that the gangsters, the wire-pullers and the parasites of politics are doing their most effective work, and if the people maintained a lively interest in politics all the time there would be no period of quietness under cover of which tricky work could be done.

The Herald does not believe there is any harm in talking politics in the off year, particularly if the talk will take the course it should—that of a discussion among the people of the candidates they are going to select for the various offices they will have to fill. It is a wholesome sign when the people do a little talking along those lines, because usually the talk is confined mostly to a few fellows that are making up their minds as to whom they will have the people select.

For instance, in Northern Minnesota it is not too early for the people who are interested in progress—and that includes everybody—to begin talking about who they are going to send to the legislature, for that will be vastly more important than who is to be governor. A governor's opportunities to do wrong are infinitesimal alongside of those of a member of the legislature, and his chances of discovery greater. The people can watch a governor much more closely than they can watch their representatives in the legislature, and if by chance they elect the wrong sort of a man for governor they can turn him out in a couple of years, and no great harm will be done. If they pick the wrong member of the legislature—and they often do—they can turn him out, too, but in one session there is plenty of time for him to betray his trust and sell out his people without their realizing it.

Here is the point: There is going to be greater need of strong men in the legislature from Northern Minnesota next time than ever before. Northern Minnesota is approaching a crisis in her history, where there is much that she absolutely needs and many obstacles to overcome in getting it. The strongest possible men should be chosen, both for the senate and house, and if there ever is a time when strong men should sacrifice personal interests and usurp mediocrity's long-tenured position, this is it.

In the past Southern Minnesota has out-weighed Northern Minnesota in the legislature. The last census showed that the southern part of the state had remained practically stationary, while the northern part had grown. Therefore with the reapportionment Northern Minnesota should gain considerably in representation, perhaps enough to balance things up and even to assume the lead. But Southern Minnesota will fight this bitterly, and will endeavor to leave things in their same relative position. It will take strong men from Northern Minnesota to secure its rights. This and drainage, immigration, good roads and a more liberal land policy form a quintet of reasons why Northern Minnesota must send her best men to the legislature this next time above all. Mediocrity will be fatal.

Hotel Gossip.

"The opening of new mining and ore properties in Kentucky is being backed largely by northern and eastern capital," said A. D. Small of Louisville at the St. Louis. "The Kentucky towns are many of them becoming infected with the northern spirit of progress, and quite a difference is to be noted in their general condition.

"Indiana and Ohio operators have been looking over the Kentucky oil fields lately, with a view of doing some work there. A lot of the new wells are being drilled by new operators. During the past three or four weeks a number of capitalists from the North have acquired territory in both developed and undeveloped sections of the Kentucky fields.

"Canadian capitalists are also interested in the district, and are said to be preparing to do extensive drilling in the lower Kentucky divisions. The York Oil company, which has done considerable drilling in Canada, is reported to have acquired territory in the old district. Deep tests are to be made in the Knox county field, and several wells will be drilled to a depth of more than 2,000 feet in order to thoroughly test the deep formations. Deep oil has been found in Knox county, but the sand was never developed, and, if the plans of the new operators are carried out, the tests will be of great importance.

"Coal mining is coming to be quite a feature in certain parts of Kentucky. One can realize this to the full at Corbin, one of the coming towns of Eastern Kentucky. It is coming to be an important railroad center. While there is a good deal of coke and considerable lumber shipped out of the mountains toward the North, coal is the great commodity. To stand on a car on one side of the big railroad yards and look across, is like looking over a field spread over with glistening lumps of coal. This coal comes from the mines across the Virginia border, and from Bell, Knox and Whitely counties in Kentucky.

"Corbin is the railroad center of the mountains. It is the liveliest, busiest, most active and progressive, as well as the smokiest, dirtiest, and, in some respects the most unattractive town in that section."

"A lot of the city sportsmen expect their favorite restaurants to furnish them with grouse and partridge through the winter months, and at all seasons of the year, regardless of the game laws, and then they express surprise when they go out hunting in the fall and find there are no birds where the year before hunting was good," said Charles Fedders of Tower at the Lenox.

"They don't seem to take into consideration the fact that the birds they eat out of season are taken from the general supply of game in the vicinity of Duluth, but every grouse or partridge served on local tables means just that much decrease in the supply. A good many men think that out-of-season shooting doesn't affect general conditions to any very great extent, but they are mistaken. When you come to think of the number of birds that can be served in a single restaurant in one year, you begin to see how the unlawful practise may result disastrously to the sport. A friend of mine told me he knew of one boy along the Iron Range road, who admitted having shot seventy birds after the closing of the season for the purpose of supplying Duluth restaurants. Probably twenty boys were doing the same thing, and there you have about 1,500 dead birds accounted for.

"The sons of settlers, most of them have dogs and guns. They know just where all the chickens, grouse and partridge are located, and it is not a difficult matter for them to kill the birds, but if they shot only what their own families wanted for eating purposes the slaughter would be much less than if they were shooting for the money of the restaurant men. Since the arrest and conviction of a Duluth restaurant man for unlawfully buying birds probably not so many have been killed out of season, although I am not in a position to say positively whether this is true or not. It is a fact, though, that there are practically no birds at all in districts where, two years ago, there was the finest hunting."

Would Reduce Coffee Rations.

Baltimore Sun: A tax on coffee would make the political pot boil.

The Weather.

This seems to be a sort of dry northeaster. Its threats of rain are something appalling, and the few futile, harmless sprinkles that result are ridiculous. But perhaps, so long as it is contenting itself with threats, it is not well to call attention to its failure to carry out those threats. It might turn around and just to show that it knows how, send a drenching rain that would last a day or two and quench the joy of the visiting fire chiefs in their visit. Much as the fire fighters have to do with water, they probably would not like it in the form of a cold northeaster. Perhaps the worst feature of the storm is that it has driven the police reporter to another poetic frenzy, the result of which, "An Ode to the Northeaster," will be found on this page.

The weather man is not quite ready to predict a change. His forecast for the twenty-four hours ending tomorrow night at 7 o'clock is for showers and fresh northeasterly winds, which are the principal ingredients of more northeaster.

The barometer is lowest over Eastern Lake Erie. Temperatures have risen over Southern Montana, Wyoming, Western Texas and Western New York, and have fallen over Ohio, Oregon and Washington. Rains fell during Monday or last night over the Red River, Mississippi and Ohio valleys, Atlantic states and most of the lake region. In the latter district the weather continues threatening with fresh easterly winds.

Following were the highest temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ening at 7 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Wednesday: Wisconsin—Local rains tonight. Wednesday partly cloudy and warmer.

Minnesota—Local rains tonight and Wednesday.

North Dakota and South Dakota—Local rains tonight and Wednesday. Cooler Wednesday.

Upper Lakes—Fresh north to east winds, becoming variable tonight and shifting to southerly Wednesday with local showers.

French Wit.

Buffalo Enquirer: Clyde Fitch was discussing French wit.

"The wit of France," he said, "won't bear transplanting. We shouldn't like it here. It is too subtle, too unexpected, too delicate, and, above all, too wicked.

"I heard yesterday a French witticism that exemplifies well the Gallic qualities of subtlety, delicacy, and wickedness.

"Two club men met, and the first says: "What is the matter, Charles? You look blue. Has your wife caught you kissing that pretty governess of yours?"

"Charles groaned.

"'Worse than that,' he replied. The pretty governess caught me kissing my wife.'"

Chow's Stiff "Counter."

Boston Herald: Admiral Hichborn, long the chief constructor in the navy, has a Chinese servant named Chow, whom he brought with him from the East. One day Chow asked permission to go to a funeral.

"All right," said the admiral. Then he added: "I suppose you will put a lot of food and sweetmeats on his grave, as they do in China?"

"Allee same China," Chow replied.

"Now, Chow," continued the admiral, "when do you think the dead Chinaman will come up and eat the food you leave on his grave?"

"Allee same time Melican man comes up to smellee flowers you leave on his grave," answered Chow, urbanely.

Caine on the Press.

Hall Caine in Harper's Weekly: I wish to say that nobody admires more than I do the great work of the great novelist known to the world as "The Press." This novelist publishes his novels in serial form only, and his grip is so intense that few of us can sit down to breakfast before learning the latest developments of his story. His romance is the most romantic we meet anywhere; his pathos the most pathetic, and his power the most powerful. His originality is so startling that it makes all forms of invention look like the fabrications of children at play, and his versatility is so extraordinary that it is impossible to predict whether he will raise his curtain tomorrow morning on a tragedy or a farce in high life or low life, on the land or on the sea. He is the great world-novelist, and he goes on from century to century, making stories of surpassing interest and value. His page is always open and can never be closed, and whatever his subject, we are compelled to read of it. Such is the novelist called "The Press"—the novelist of life—and in no country that I know is he so faithful, so truthful, or so incorruptible, as in our own.

Summer's Passing.

I.

O'er yonder in the distant fields
The goldenrod is swaying,
A-garnishing the meadows green
And mellow Fall betraying.
The ripened grain glows in the sun,
And Autumn's first sweet tinge upon
The woods is gently laying.

II.

Deep azure skies look down upon
Belated summer flowers;
The moon shines pale and dreamily
Until the morning hours.
The weeds grow tall; the garden bed
Boasts one lone rose, all blushing red
And parched for fresh'ning showers.

III.

The corn lifts high its tasseled head,
The grain is ripe and yellow;
The orchard boughs are drooping low
With off'rings rich and mellow.
A hazy mist begins to climb
The hills as golden Autumn time
Draws near—and all is well, O.

—WILL F. GRIFFIN in Milwaukee Sentinel.

The Sower of the Seed.

He planted an oak in his father's park
And a thought in the minds of men.
And he bade farewell to his native shore,
Which he never will see again.
Oh, merrily stream the tourist throng,
To the glow of the Southern sky;
A vision of pleasure beckons them on.
But he went there to die.

The oak will grow and its boughs will spread
And many rejoice in its shade,
But none will visit the distant grave
Where a stranger youth is laid;
And the thought will live when the oak has died,
And quicken the minds of men,
But the name of the thinker has vanished away,
And will never be heard again.

—WILLIAM E. H. LECKY.

Twenty-two Years Ago

At a special meeting of the village council, a resolution was passed to locate Fourth avenue west, and to adjust the excess of measurement of said block. Joseph M. Geist was granted permission to place a clock in front of his building. Liquor licenses were granted to Edwin Burlingame and Archie McLeod.

Haug Bros. will occupy their new store about the first of next month.

Williams & Upham, the dredge contractor, have ninety-nine men in their employ, either in Duluth or its immediate vicinity.

W. L. Grant, agent for R. L. Polk & Co., publishers of the Duluth directory, finished his work on Saturday, but leaves a man here for a few days to pick up additional items. Mr. Grant has 7,610 names, but allowing 20 per cent for duplicates, there would remain 6,088 names, which Mr. Grant thinks is fully within bounds. On the basis of two and a half to every name in the directory, this would give a population of 15,000. The census of 1880 showed a population in Duluth of 3,486.

The great telegraphers' strike virtually ended last Thursday evening, when many members of the brotherhood signified their intention to seek employment again in the offices they had left; and on Saturday Master Workman Campbell issued an order to all assemblies absolving them from all obligations to continue the strike.

E. J. Hoppman of the Minnesota house will build a brick residence on First street west.

The Mannheim silver mine is showing some rich looking specimens, so the knowing ones say.

J. C. Ferguson has completed this week a neat dwelling house for Capt. Farrell on Lake avenue, which is for sale or rent.

Mayor Graves gave the police force some very sensible advice last evening, among other matters cautioning them against the use of liquor while on duty.

LAUGHING LINES.

Washington Star: "Do you think that a politician is worse than other men?"

"No," answered Senator Sorghum. "He has more temptations."

Cleveland Leader: Reporter—Here's a Sunday feature giving full directions on "How to Give a Sunday Dinner."

Editor—You go back and write another, giving full directions how to get one. We're running this paper for the masses.

"So I noticed when the contribution plate was passed around.

Cleveland Plain Dealer: "How did this jury compare with the previous ones?"

"It was much more ready to agree. There was one man on it who insisted on eating raw onions at every meal."

Cleveland Leader: "The cashier has skinned out and his books are in an awful muddle," announced the bookkeeper. "What shall we do?"

"Open a running account with him at once," said the president, promptly.

Chicago Tribune: Caller—"How is your son getting along at college, Mrs. Suddenclyner?"

Motherly Old Soul—"Hiram's doing first rate. He is taking a special study this term. He writes me that he is the receiving end of the best battery in the college nine. That's something in the electrical line, isn't it?"

Judge: Aunt—But I thought you understood that George was a poor young man when you became engaged to him.

Niece—Of course I did, but I didn't imagine it went so far as his not being able to get a new automobile till next season.

Washington Star: "Mr. Higgins has the artistic temperament."

"Don't say that," responded Miss Cayenne. "Whenever I hear that a man has the artistic temperament I can't avoid an impression of a man that borrows and forgets to pay."

Philadelphia Press: "I see that a letter supposed to have been written by Henry VIII. has just brought $2,000."

"That's nothing. A letter of mine just brought $10,000."

"Indeed?"

"Yes, to a girl who sued me for breach of promise."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Grand Rapids Independent: "Over in the Sixth Mr. Cole looks like a storm cloud to Mr. Buckman," says the Bemidji Pioneer. Its only a cloud of Cole smoke, however, and it hasn't begun to cast its shadow over the political field.

Cass Lake Times: Forestry in the great North state will soon see its finish. The luscious dream that has filled the heads of a dozen or more propagandists of a great national park in the midst of thrift and industry will never be realized, the settler has decided against it and it must go with other less harmful schemes of the idle lounger of the cities.

Warroad Plaindealer: While you think of it, just take notice that land values in the neighborhood of Warroad have advanced 1,000 per cent in the last three years.

Deer River News: The late census shows Itasca county the greatest gainer in the state, an increase of 150 per cent in five years. With a few state ditches and more roads it will double that in the next five years.

Moorhead Citizen: When the good citizen takes a vacation from politics the grafter redoubles his exertions.

Moorhead Citizen: The packers have long boasted that in packing hogs they utilized everything but the squeal. The people have been given that.

Elk River Star-News: What political honor can compare with the professional reputation of Dr. W. J. Mayo of Rochester, this state, who was recently elected to the presidency of the American medical association? To our mind the man who distinguishes himself in his chosen vocation wins more lasting glory than any won through political scheming.

Detroit Record: Frank M. Eddy, once politician and now editor of the Sauk Center Herald, is quick to see a joke. He endorses Tom Lawson's endorsement of Governor Johnson for the next Democratic presidential nomination. Can it be that Frank aspires to abandon his present honorable vocation, return to politics, and therefore wishes to side track the governor?

Northome Record: No matter what business a person may be engaged in, he will have his troubles. The farmers' hogs are always dying with cholera, his horses are running into barbwire fences, the laboring man is meeting with accidents, the merchant is meeting with hard luck with his collections, and so it is all the way along the line. But if a man wants to marry trouble—let him run a newspaper.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Even if a man gets half a loaf instead of the whole it is generally stale.

Imagination is a great thing to keep people thinking they love each other some time after they are married.

A man speaks of his being in public life when he gets a rubber stamp signature letter from a congressman acknowledging the receipt of his advice.

The very first thing for a man to do after he gets married is to spend all his money every day, so he won't get mad with his wife for taking it out of his pocket.

The Limit of Bravery.

New York Tribune: The Japanese are very brave. They even dare to put "Oyama chestnuts" and "Togo lobsters" on their menu cards.

A Deadly Epidemic.

Kansas City Star: There is another epidemic in the land more fearfully insidious and destructive than yellow fever, which yet arouses little apprehension. The lust for money is blighting what is fairest in American life. It is overturning ideals for which the builders of the Republic labored and suffered. It is undermining morals and destroying character on every side. But people are largely indifferent.

"Fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul," said the Founder of Christianity; "but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body in hell." If people took these words at their face value, if they were half as alarmed over dishonesty and selfishness as they are over fever, the days of the grafter and extortionist would be numbered.

Ode to the Northeaster.

Fair Goddess of the Northeast wind,
Gentle mother of the fog horn and the mist,
Fore-runner of the rain and every kind
Of weather that should be stricken from the list,

How often do I wish that you'd assume
Some human shape, perhaps that of a man,
Or of a little child or something that would loom
Up before me in the shape that I could grab.

Then would I take and bang your head against the wall,
Or dash your brains out with a stake,
And then, by gum, you'd have a nice long fall,
From off some lofty bluff into the lake.

And then, by Jove, just listen while I gloat,
I'd stick your head into the bay and slosh
And slosh that darned old wooden block about,
Until you were completely drowned, by gosh.

I'd choke your breath out with the greatest glee,
Pull out your hair in one nice, large chunk,
And—but no, such joys are not for me,
I've had a dream, and now I've fallen from the bunk.

And so, thou ghost at every summer feast,
So long as thou remainest effervescent as thou dost,
Thou can'st lord it o'er the greatest and the least,
While we only sit and cuss and cuss and cuss.

—The Police Reporter.

When Johnny Scored.

Harper's Weekly: "Now, boys," said the schoolmaster, during an examination in geography, "what is the axis of the earth?"

Johnny raised his hand promptly.

"Well, Johnny, how would you describe it?"

"The axis of the earth," said Johnny, proudly, "is an imaginary line which passes from one pole to the other, and on which the earth revolves."

"Very good," exclaimed the teacher. "Now, could you hang clothes on that line, Johnny?"

"Yes, sir," was the reply.

"Indeed?" said the examiner, disappointed; "and what sort of clothes?"

"Imaginary clothes, sir."

What He'd Have.

Harper's Weekly: It is reported that on a recent occasion when Arthur Balfour, Joseph Chamberlain, Lord Charles Beresford, and the Japanese minister were dining out together, Mr. Balfour, who was standing treat, asked Mr. Chamberlain what he would have.

"Thanks, I'll take Scotch, Arthur," was the response.

"And what will you take, Lord Charles?"

"I'll take Irish, Arthur."

"And what will you take?" addressing the Japanese minister.

"I'll take Port Arthur, thanks," was the answer.

In the Vernacular.

Chicago Tribune: This is the conversation between the girl with the 50-cent earrings and the girl with the gold-plated bracelet on her wrist:

Chicago Record-Herald: The fact that an insurance official has been discharged for talking too much will be likely to meet with hearty approval from people who, after saying no, are robbed of valuable time and deprived of patience by insistent solicitors.

Straws in the Peace Current.

Philadelphia Press: The man with an empty pocket is generally willing to come to terms. One of the most promising "straws" in the peace conference negotiations is the announcement that French bankers will not put up any more funds for Russia's war chest.

KEEPS HIS LICENSE

Council Does Not Cancel That of Frank C. Lillis.

Bridge Building Company Suggests Changes In Operating.

Eight members of the Duluth city council last evening gave an exhibition of a quick switch which fairly left the few spectators and the other five aldermen present, gasping for breath. A chance offered whereby they could evade voting for the cancellation of the Parlor theater license and the eight took quick advantage of it. They were Aldermen Barnes, Chesney, Harker, Lyle, Mueller, Ribenack, Schaffer and Tessman, while the other five aldermen who opposed it were Aldermen McEwen, Moore, Waugh, Wilson and Haven.

The matter came up under a motion passed at the meeting of the council last Monday evening, when the council passed a resolution charging Frank C. Lillis, proprietor of the Parlor theater, with allowing liquor to be sold in his place of amusement. When his license was granted there was a clause included which provided expressly that no liquor should be sold in the theater, and that the license should terminate at once, when this should be proven.

Lillis came up for a hearing last night on the charges. The opposition to revoking declared that the council was no place to hold such a hearing.

"We have a police department," said Alderman Tessman. "It is not the council's place to enforce the law."

"As a member of the police and license committee, it seems to me the man should be arrested and prosecuted before the council should take it up," said Alderman Chesney.

"The courts have no authority to revoke a license," said Assistant City Attorney McKeon. "I am here for the purpose of presenting the city's side of this case. The charge is that this man violated the terms under which his license was granted. The terms of the license specifically stated that no liquor should be sold in the theater. If it was sold, his license should be revoked, and I propose to show that it was sold. What is the use of whipping the devil around a stump? It will have to come to the council finally. Let's get down to business right now."

"This is the time and the place and the proper manner to take this matter up," said Alderman Wilson. "If you want to meet this matter fairly and squarely, take the advice of the assistant city attorney. If you want to wink at it and dodge the issue, you can vote not to take it up now."

Alderman Moore at this juncture waxed a little sarcastic.

"When you thought the street railway was not living up to its franchise, you didn't split hairs about the council being a legislative body, but you passed a resolution concerning it," he said.

Attorney Alexander Marshall then objected on behalf of his client, against holding the hearing before the council.

Alderman Moore promptly submitted a resolution that the license be revoked without a hearing.

"If he does not care to have a hearing, we can revoke it without a hearing," he said.

The motion silenced all opposition, and Secretary Gus Lahti of the police department was sworn to give evidence.

As soon as Mr. McKeon had passed the preliminary questions, and started on the regular examination of the witness, Mr. Marshall objected to all further testimony on the ground that the council has no authority to regulate the sale of liquor in a theater, but only the manner in which the shows shall be conducted. He read a section of the city charter in support of his objection.

"What rot," said Mr. McKeon. "My friend Marshall is too good a lawyer to believe what he is saying. He knows, and any law student who has spent six months in an office knows that the power which grants a license has the power to regulate the license or to revoke it. That is one of the most fundamental principles of law. Marshall knows it, and the council knows it."

"I move the objection be overruled," said Alderman Wilson.

But here was the loophole for which the attorney had been striving, and the eight aldermen headed for it with celerity. They voted to sustain the objection, and all further testimony was excluded.

"I hope you realize what you are doing," said Alderman Wilson. "You are now refusing to hear all evidence concerning a violation of the conditions under which you voted to grant this man a license a few weeks ago."

Here the matter rested.

* * *

The Modern Steel Structural company of Waukesha, in a communication, submitted a plan for increasing the carrying capacity of the ferry bridge.

The company stated that the plan was merely a suggestion, and that it was submitted in order that the council might have time to consider it fully.

The plan provides for a remodeling of the trucks and car, whereby the machinery can be removed from the car.

"You might better carry traffic on the car instead of the machinery," the communication stated.

The matter was referred to the proper committee.

KISSED BRIDE OF ANOTHER

Milwaukee, Wis., Aug. 15.—Because it is alleged he kissed the wife of Charles Buchholz, a grocer and saloonkeeper at 1428 Eighth street, Patrolman Albert F. Dettman, living at 1140 Richard street, has been suspended pending final hearing.

According to Buchholz, Dettman, who patrols the neighborhood in which Buchholz lives, entered his saloon in his absence, and after drinking a bottle of beer, threw his arms around Mrs. Buchholz, who is young and comely, and imprinted a fervid kiss on her lips.

Buchholz, as soon as he learned of the affair, hunted up the gallant officer of the law, and said that if he did not pay the injured wife $500 in lieu of damages he would "fix" him. It is said Dettman agreed to pay that sum in installments of $10 a month, but that he defaulted in his first payment, contrary to the written agreement signed Aug. 3. A hearing before the board of police and fire commissioners will be had in the near future.

"He said something about my being pretty," said Mrs. Buchholz, "and then suddenly threw his arms about my neck and kissed me. He begged me not to tell my husband. He should be ashamed of himself, for he has a family of his own, and is old enough to be my father. Why, I had been married only a few months."

Dettman denies the charge and alleges blackmail.

REVIVED AT POSTMORTEM, IOWA MAN WILL LIVE.

Des Moines, Iowa, Aug. 15.—Louis Viel surprised several physicians and nurses at Mercy hospital by suddenly regaining life.

Shortly after the post-mortem on him began Dr. Conklin happened to take hold of the supposed dead man's heart and pinch it slightly. Almost instantly the organ began to throb at a natural rate.

The incisions made were quickly closed. Viel regained consciousness a few hours later and will soon be able to leave the hospital.

THE JOY OF A GOOD CIGAR.

Boyce Tells How Smokers Can Be Sure to Get Their Money's Worth.

"How can one be sure of getting his money's worth in buying a cigar?" asked a Herald reporter of S. F. Boyce.

"I'll tell you how to be sure. Just buy a Wadsworth Bros.' Chico. This cigar is always the same—a good, honest, satisfying smoke. It is made with a long Havana filler, so that it always burns with a firm, solid ash, the best sign of a good cigar.

"The Chico burns with a fragrance like that of the Carodina perfecto, a 25c cigar, but it costs only 5c. Our best customers are smoking the Chico, and when they stop in front of the cigar case, they say, 'give us some more of those good cigars.' We pass out the Wadsworth Bros.' Chico, and they go away happy."

Try a Chico yourself, and see how it is.

MACADAM CHOSEN

Property Owners Decide on Pavement For Superior Street.

All Bids Held Up Pending City Attorney's Opinion.

Tar macadam was the pavement selected by the property owners on West Superior street, at the meeting held yesterday afternoon in the council chambers, but all bids were held up pending a decision from the city attorney on their legality.

Out of the total frontage of 13,600 feet affected by the improvement, but 4,472 feet was represented at the meeting. Of this amount the owners or agents of 3,206 feet voted for tar macadam and 50 for asphalt.

R. D. Haven was chosen chairman of the meeting, and L. A. Barnes secretary, and on motion by Luther Mendenhall the secretary was instructed to read the description of the property, to which the owner or agent responded with the name of the pavement he desired.

Charles M. Carpenter, the representative of the Barber Asphalt company, repeated to the meeting the objections which he had stated to the board at the meeting held yesterday morning when the bids were opened. He asserted that all the bids were illegal, since none of the bidders but himself had submitted samples of the pavement, as called for in the specifications. Mr. McDonnell claims he submitted samples of bitumen, which he left in the engineer's office some time ago, but he was not low on the macadam bids. Mr. Carpenter asked that all bids be thrown out but that of the Barber company, and that the contract be let to that company as the lowest legal bidder.

The board has two courses left open. It may throw out all the bids, or it may let the contract to the lowest bidder on tar macadam, Hugh Steele, and check up the quality of the bitumen laid through the city engineer's office.

The matter has been laid before City Attorney Bert Fesler for an opinion. Mr. Fesler returned this morning from a short vacation, cutting short his trip and returning for the purpose of looking into the question. He will give his opinion to the board before the meeting next Friday, and the board will probably act in accordance with it.

The principal discussion at yesterday's meeting was on the question of voting as a whole, the petition prepared by the representatives of sandstone blocks. The owners of 3,000 feet were represented in the petition. Lane McGregor and some of the other advocates of tar macadam objected to this petition being presented, claiming that some of the signatures were not obtained in a fair manner, and did not truly represent the wishes of the owners.

E. P. Towne, the attorney for the sandstone company, took exception to this statement, but the petition was ruled out and only those owners present or represented by an agent, were allowed to vote. The bids were as follows:

Telford macadam—P. McDonnell, $74,36.50; Hugh Steel, $68,093.20; George R. King., $77,239.70; Sang & Preston, $78,244.75.

Asphalt—P. McDonnell, Eighth to Twenty-fifth avenues, $111,135.10; Fourteenth to Twenty-fifth avenues west, $69,684.10; Barber Asphalt Co., Eighth to Twenty-fifth avenues west, $126,999.40.

Tar macadam—Eighth to Twenty-fifth avenues, with crushed rock foundation, P. McDonnell, $96,884.50; Hugh Steele, $80,298; George R. King, $105,923.95; Sang & Preston, $103,-gerald & Norris, $97,742; same district, with 5-inch concrete foundation, P. McDonnell, $101,966.50; Hugh Steele, $96,596.99; George R. King, $118,-495.85; Sang & Preston, $161,020.02; Fitzgerald & Norris, $151,697; tar macadam, plain,, P.McDonnell, $57,559.50; Fitzgerald & Norris, $59,045.

Sandstone—Tar and gravel filler, Eighth to Twenty-fifth avenues, P. McDonnel, $131,512.50; Hugh Steele, $135,870.20; George R. King, $135,444; Sang & Preston, $134,692.25; Fitzgerald & Norris, $129,075.30; Sandstone part sand filler, P. McDonnell, $124,-118.50; Hugh Steele, $129,215.60; George R. King, $132,486; Sang & Preston, $129,146.75; Fitzgerald & Norris, $132,032.90; tar and gravel filler, Eighth to Fourteenth avenues, P. McDonnell, $46,605; Fitzgerald & Norris, $49,636; Eighth to Fourteenth, part sand filler, P. McDonnell, $43,945; Fitzgerald & Norris, $47,705.

OSCAR HANEY FOUND DEAD.

Missing Hinckley Man Probably Killed By Lightning.

Hinckley, Minn., Aug. 15.—With his rifle resting against a nearby tree, the body of Oscar Haney, who disappeared nine days ago, was found Sunday by relatives. The discovery was made near a big swamp one mile from his home. It is believed he came to his death by lightning, as a sapling near the body was burned, and other evidences of a stroke of lightning were found. The coroner decided an inquest was not necessary.

MOON'S ECLIPSE SEEN BY MANY

Sky Was Filled With Clouds a Part of the Time.

New York, Aug. 15.—Although the conditions here were not ideal last night, many persons saw the eclips of the moon. The skies were filled with banks of fleecy clouds, which for the greater part of the evening obscured the face of the satellite. There were periods every few minuts, however, which afforded a good view of the eclipse.

The moon entered the penumbra, as observed from New York, at 12 minutes past 8 o'clock, and at 17 minutes to 10 was in the shadow of the earth. It appeared as though a liberal slice had been cut off from its southern horn. The middle of the eclipse was recorded at 15 minutes to 11, and at 13 minutes to 12 the moon had entirely left the shadow of the earth. She was clear of the penumbra and all such entanglements at 17 minutes after 1 o'clock this morning.

"Uncle Josh Perkins," presented at the Lyceum last night, immensely pleased the audience, which was rather a large one. The story deals with the loss and restoration of a child to her parents, of her adventures in the city of New York with a scheming lawyer, after her money, and of her rescue by Uncle Josh, a spry old farmer who will not permit himself to be buncoed. The story is an old one, but is treated in a new way in "Uncle Josh Perkins." Uncle Josh finally learns that the girl he has rescued is his daughter, and all ends happily.

The part of Josh is taken by Frank Pond with a deal of credit to himself. During the course of the play he introduced a few songs that were great hits. Other taking vaudeville features were offered, and all of them were well received by the audience. Joe Rith earned a lot of hissing as the scheming lawyer; Lulo Berlin, Edna Ransom and Kate Rith all came in for a share of the applause.

Administrators Have Suit.

W. G. Bonham, administrator of the estate of Elizabeth Bateman, deceased, has begun suit in district court against A. J. Thomas, administrator of the estate of William Bateman, deceased, the woman's husband, to recover judgment for a half interest in a residence property at Ely. The property is valued at from $500 to $1,000 and is alleged to have been transferred to the husband without consideration.

IN BANK 299 YEARS.

Roxbury Man Has Part Claim on $12,000,000.

Boston, Aug. 15.—An offer of $75,000 has been made to J. C. Rhodes, a Roxbury photographer, said to be a cousin of Cecil Rhodes, by the English authorities, to stop the prosecution of a claim for $12,000,000 now held in chancery and deposited in the Bank of England, 299 years ago. This fortune is the growth of £800 deposited there three centuries ago by George Rhodes, one of the projectors of the Jamestown colony. The agent for Rhodes says the chancery court has admitted the claim and is ready to pay over the money on sufficient documentary evidence.

TO SEE FOR THEMSELVES.

Officials to Investigate Live Stock Conditions.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Secretary of Agriculture James Wilson, accompanied by Dr. E. S. Salmon, chief of the bureau of animal industry, arrived in Chicago last night, and today will begin an investigation into live stock transportation.

"We have come to Chicago to learn the actual condition of the live stock traffic," said Secretary Wilson. "We want to see for ourselves just what the situation is, so we can handle it intelligently at Washington. The law provides that cattle shipped in cars which are not provided with conveniences for feeding and rest shall be taken out and fed at least once in twenty-eight hours. We want to determine what conveniences are necessary to feed and rest cattle in transit."

R. R. COMMISSIONERS TO MEET AT DEADWOOD.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Members of the National Association of Railroad Commissioners left here early today on a special train over the Chicago & Northwestern railroad for Deadwood, S. D., where the annual meeting of the association will open Wednesday morning and continue four days. After the meeting the delegates will go in special trains to Portland and other Pacific coast points.

Among those who will deliver addresses before the association are Judson Clements, a member of the interstate commerce commission, and George R. Peck, general counsel of the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul road.

MAN WEDS HIS FORMER WIFE

Marries Her the Second Time Without Knowing Her.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 15.—Remarried twenty years after they had been divorced, the man not knowing when the marriage ceremony was performed that the woman at his side was his former wife, was the matrimonial experience of a Western couple now enjoying a second honeymoon in the East.

The woman, however, knew the secret, but found enjoyment in not revealing it to the man until after he was again her husband.

James Hurlbutt and Ruth Emery were married when he had not arrived at man's estate. She was 18. Less than a month before the marriage they had met for the first time at the home of a friend in Quebec. After a brief honeymoon he set out alone for the states to seek a fortune in the West.

A misunderstanding arose not long after he left. Angry letters passed between them and soon she wrote him that it was her wish that their correspondence should cease, and he consented. He was in Chicago when her letter came, but at once left there and traveled farther West. Relenting, the wife hurried to Chicago, but found no trace of her husband.

Some years later she secured a divorce on the grounds of desertion and married Rufus Beresford, a mine owner. He died in New Mexico, leaving several properties in Montana.

The widow came to Helena and recognized her former husband at a hotel. She was a stranger to him. She engaged him to examine her properties. The friendship thus established led to love. After the ceremony she told him her secret, and he declared he was doubly delighted.

TAUS CASE CONTINUED

Until the Recovery or Death of Victim Is Made Certain.

Crookston, Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—At the preliminary examination of Frank Taus of Angus yesterday morning on the charge of shooting Fac McLennon of that place the case was continued until August 21st in order to determine the charge which shall be preferred. If McLennen, who is in St. Vincent hospital now with a bullet in his back and a hole through his left lung should survive, the charge will be but that of assault with a deadly weapon, but in case McLennen died the charge will be murder, premeditated.

At the examination two witnesses, Ben Sewell and George Clover, who were eye witnesses of the shooting were placed upon the stand and both told similar stories of the events which led up to the tragedy Wednesday evening last.

George Clover, the witness for the state, stated that he had been employed for some little time upon the repairs to a threshing machine standing in the lot which Taus started to cross when leaving the store. He saw McLennen take his coat and vest off and follow Taus across the lot, heard the latter command him to stop and then saw him raise his arm and fire at McLennen and the latter fell. Clover believed that one shot only was fired by Taus.

At a late hour McLennen was growing weaker, and is not expected to live.

IRVING LIBEL CASE IS CONTINUED TO OCTOBER.

New York, Aug. 15.—The libel case against Robert Irving of the New Yorker was adjourned yesterday to Oct. 16 by an agreement between Assistant Attorney Krotel, Congressman Rhinock of Covington, Ky., and the defendant.

Mr. Rhinock, the complaint, said the widow of Robert W. Criswell has promised to turn over all the papers bearing on the case. The congressman said he was more desirous of having the person who actually wrote the article brought to justice than he was of prosecuting Irving.

RACES ARE BEGUN

Many Fast Harness Events Scheduled For This Meeting.

Fair Weather Is the Thing Horsemen Most Desire.

Barring rainy weather the races of the Tri-State circuit, which were to begin in this city this afternoon, are expected to be a success. Several good racing events have been arranged for each day with a list of entries in each which insures a lively contest for the purses offered by the association. The races will last today, Wednesday and Thursday, beginning at 2 o'clock each afternoon.

The small amount of rain that fell last night and this morning did no harm to the track at the Driving park, which the management said this noon was in excellent condition.

This afternoon's events were to be a 2:22 pace open to trotters in the 2:20 class and a 2:40 pace open to trotters in the 2:35 class and a running race. In the first race the purse was $460, in the second $300, and in the running race it was $100.

Wednesday afternoon's races and entries are as follows: 2:18 trot or pace —Purse $300. Lady Option, Fleet King, Lady Strathbury, Alice, Bulah Smith and Black Babe.

2:30 trot—Purse $100. Black Chief, Alexander C., Lora Moir and Frank W.

The trotting and pacing races will be followed by a running event in which there are three horses entered.

Much interest is centered in the 2:30 pace to be pulled off Thursday afternoon for the reason that J. J. McGehan of Highbridge, Wis., owner of Walter J., and George Wilkinson of Ashland, owner of Wyman S., have a side bet of $200 on position in the event. Information as to the wager was telephoned Secretary Peachey by Mr. McGehan yesterday, the latter remarking that Wyman S. would have "to go some" if he beats Walter J. on this occasion. At Ashland, last spring, where the horses were matched, Wyman S. won the stakes.

Thomas Kyle, an expert starter, has been engaged by the association to act in that capacity here, and the judges will comprise local and outside men.

CONFERENCE WITH M. WITTE

Delegates Discuss Condition of Jews In Russia With Envoy.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 15.—A free exchange of views on the subject of the condition and treatment of the Jews in Russia was had last night in a conference between M. Witte, Baron Rosen and Oscar Straus, Jacob H. Schiff, Isaac N. Seligman and Adolph Lewishohn of New York, and Adolph Kraus of Chicago. The statement was made by the delegation calling on the Russian plenipotentiaries that nothing tangible resulted from the discussion, but future benefit was looked for. The financial condition of Russia was not mentioned in the discussion and was not suggested as a topic of discussion, according to Mr. Kraus.

After the conference, which concluded ten minutes before midnight, Mr. Straus made the following statement:

"M. Witte explained with much frankness the condition of the Jewish population of Russia, while the American gentlemen endeavored to explain to the Russian gentlemen the state of public opinion in the United States and on the part of the American people with the restrictive and suppressive laws exercised by the Russian government against its Jewish subjects.

"While the discussion, in its nature, could not well lead to immediate practical results, the gentlemen present at the conference, which lasted several hours, believe that in course of time and indirectly, the frank exchange of opinion and views which has been had cannot but bear beneficial consequences."

M. Witte is known to sympathize with the aspirations of the Jews for improved conditions and if satisfactory assurances are given, it can be stated that Russia, should she so desire, can place a foreign loan in the Jewish banking houses.

Shortly after his arrival at the hotel, Mr. Straus made the following statement regarding his mission:

"I would further say that the Russia-Jewish question must be settled in Russia. Emigration, no matter how large it may be, can only affect the outer service. M. Witte has seen with his own eyes while in this country, the progress that has been made among the Russian emigrants to America, and what he has seen cannot fail to have an influence upon him in indicating the way to make the Russian Jews helpful in the upbuilding of that empire.

"I regard the whole question as a very simple one. It only involves giving all the subjects of the emperor equal rights. That I regard as fundamental."

Mr. Straus was unwilling to speak of the specific program which the delegation might suggest to M. Witte for the improvement of the condition of the Jews in Russia.

BAIRD SELLS DAKOTA LAND

That Farm of 5,000 Acres Included In the Transfer.

Lakota, N. D., Aug. 15.—The largest land deal ever made in this county was closed last Saturday. It involved the sale of all the holdings of Lyman D. Baird of Austin, Minn., to a syndicate composed of local business men. The transfer included what is known as the Thal farm in Nelson county, ten miles south of Lakota, amounting to 5,000 acres, as well as several tracts of land scattered throughout the state, making about 1,200 acres additional. All of the land is within easy reach of the Great Northern railway, is exceptionally well selected and comprises some of the choicest farm land in the state. The crop for this year on upwards of 3,000 acres is included in the deal.

Lyman D. Baird was here several days and personally made the sale. His mission here was primarily in the interests of the First National bank of Faribault, Minn., of which institution he is the receiver. He purchased the land about three years ago, purchasing the most of it from Samuel Thal of Milwaukee, who is also heavily interested in this section. It is understood he closed the deal at a handsome profit over the purchase price.

It is understood to be the intention of the new purchasers to place the land upon the market at once, and to dispose of it in tracts to suit future purchasers. The consideration paid Mr. Baird has not been made public, but it is understood to be upwards of $100,000.

CHARGED WITH FRAUD.

St. Paul, Aug. 15.—John C. Hanley was yesterday held to the United States grand jury on a charge of using the mails to defraud. The charge arises from Hanley's connection with the Consolidated Farm and Ranch company, a corporation with an authorized capital of $300,000. Hanley is alleged to have sold stock in the company by representing that it had purchased the Montana Co-operative Ranch company, but the receiver of the latter company testified that no such sale had taken place.

STATION IS NEEDED

Police at West End Require More Accommodation.

Present Station Vile—Other Improvements Possible.

Early last spring a move was made to have the city build a police station at the West end, and there the matter seems to have dropped. At the present time, as for a long period, prisoners arrested at the West end are held in the basement of the fire hall at Seventeenth avenue west until the patrol wagon can arrive from up town to take them out of this hole. The place is an awful one to keep even a man who is dead drunk, and this the police realize, and do the best they can. This basement is right under the stables of the fire department, and the aromatic qualities of such a position can better be imagined than described. When the police "pinch" a drunk, or some other brand of criminal, he is held at this police station only until the wagon can come down from the central station to take him away.

As matters stand just now things are anything but easy and pleasant for the police detail of the West end. They have a territory of several miles to cover, running from the end of Garfield avenue to the Red Cliff Lumber company's mill at Thirty-ninth avenue west and clear to the top of the hill. In this district there are twenty-five saloons, and as this line of taxation pays $25,000 a year, to say nothing of the regular taxation's production, it would seem only just that the territory should be given better police protection and better service in that line generally. In case an officer has trouble with a prisoner now, he has to wait for a long time for the wagon, or drag his man to the fire hall through the large crowd which is sure to gather; and conditions are anything but pleasant. The West end should have both a small police station and a small patrol wagon. The taxes paid at the West end warrant this.

TIMINSON-JOHNSON.

Young Couple Wedded on Saturday Evening.

Miss Ida Timinson and Andrew Johnson, both of the West end, were married on Saturday evening last at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Johnson, 515 Nineteen and a Half avenue west. The occasion was of double importance, as it was the silver wedding anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Johnson, and this event was celebrated also. The ceremony was performed by Rev. H. K. Madsen of the Norwegian-Danish M. E. church. The attendants of the bride were Misses Gustafson and Timinson, and the best men were Messrs. Anderson and Johnson. The young couple have gone East on a wedding trip.

A large number attended the wedding, and the newly married couple were the recipients of many presents. Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Johnson, in celebration of the anniversary of their marriage, were also given some handsome silver pieces.

To Choose Pastor.

The congregation of the Bethany Lutheran church is called to meet in the church tomorrow evening to have presented to it the name of Rev. E. G. Chinlund of Lincoln, Neb., as pastor and on whom they are to vote. It seems to be the general verdict that Mr. Chinlund is the right man for the place and also that he will be elected. Both appearance and reputation give the impression that Mr. Chinlund is exceptionally well gifted for the place and that he will prove a popular pastor.

Change Church Services.

Rev. J. W. Robinson, pastor of Grace M. E. church, who has been visiting in Hamilton, Ont., was expected back Saturday but did not appear. Consequently the arrangements for the services of the church had to be hastily changed. In the morning, therefore, Mrs. Wesley Feetham spoke on Y. W. C. A. work and in the evening Harvey Sedgewick had charge of the services.

His Official Visit.

Grand Master Workman William B. Anderson of the A. O. U. W., also Grand Recorder Charles E. Larson and other grand officers, will pay an official visit to Rice's Point lodge No. 80 next Thursday evening. The lodge is preparing to give the visitors a rousing reception. Grand Master Workman Anderson is a prominent member of the state legislature and is well known throughout the state. No member of the order can afford to miss meeting him and the other grand officers.

West End Shortrails.

Misses Anna and Lydia Johnson have just returned from Pike Lake, where they have been for a few days enjoying a summer outing.

The Salvation Army corps at the West end will give another moonlight excursion on the steamer Newsboy tomorrow evening. The boat will leave the Twenty-first avenue dock at 7:30, the Tower slip at 8 and the Fifth avenue dock at 8:30. The former excursions of the corps have been favorably commented on and the officers have been urged to give this one.

A son was born to Mr. and Mrs. Ed St. George of 2629 Huron street Saturday.

Orange Cleveland of Webster City, Iowa, is visiting friends in the West end.

Mrs. S. C. Merrill of Sterling, Ill., is among the visitors at the West end these days.

A. O. Anderson of Johnson & Moe's is back from Isle Royale with a good catch of fish and a good string of fish-stories.

Bethany Lutheran church will give a moonlight excursion tonight.

Theodore Wold has returned from a visit to Eau Claire and other Wisconsin points.

Mesdames Will and Theodore Harris are camping at Lc Clair, Wis.

Oscar Dufert and A. Duguay have returned from a visit to points in Ontario.

WOOD FOR PULP.

Forest Service Is Experimenting With Various Kinds.

Washington, Aug. 15.—(Special to The Herald.)—Experiments to determine the value of various woods for pulp are being made by the forest service. The enormous growth of the pulp paper industry has made heavy inroads on supplies of spruce, a wood which is suitable for many other purposes, and it is only within the last few years that other woods have been added to the list of the paper manufacturer.

The first wood to follow spruce was balsam fir, then came for certain kinds of paper, poplar. Very recently the Virginia or scrub pine has been used with success. It is the object of the experiments now under way to investigate what further species are serviceable for pulp.

Experiments of this kind are rarely undertaken by the individual operator, who naturally continues to use the wood or woods which he knows from experience are adapted to his uses. It is immaterial to him whether pulp wood with which he is familiar can be used for construction purposes or not. Nevertheless, he would eagerly welcome a knowledge of such other woods as have hitherto possessed little or no commercial value, but which can be used for papermaking with comparatively trifling stumpage cost. The work of the forest service aims to place precisely this sort of knowledge in his hands.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

Albert Gunderson, of Racine, Wis., was found dead near Cheyenne Wells, Col., on the right-of-way of the Kansas Pacific railroad. His head had been pounded into a pulp with a barrel stave. The body had been robbed of everything of value.

Henry M. Beatty, assignee of the Western State bank, at Denver, filed a statement in the district court, placing the bank's assets at $897,527, and its liabilities at $864,992.

In a head on collision, two miles from Macon, Ga., between a north-bound Central of Georgia passenger train and a south-bound freight at 5 o'clock Monday afternoon two were killed and three seriously injured that death will probably result. The dead: Benjamin Jordan, mail clerk (negro); Joe Henry, Macon, fireman passenger train (negro).

She will probably return to St. John's on the next trip of the mail boat, Dillon Wallace, however, is pushing forward beyond any white man's previous track.

A small schooner, which was leisurely sailing along the coast of Lingan Head, N. S., was struck by a severe squall Monday afternoon and capsized. Before those on shore could make preparations for assistance the storm increased to the intensity of a hurricane and one by one the crew were seen to fall away from the bottom of their overturned craft. It is believed that all were lost.

KID SHAY WINS EASY RACE AT POUGHKEEPSIE.

Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 15.—The grand circuit trotting and pacing meeting, which began at the Hudson River Driving Park here yesterday afternoon furnished three good races under favorable conditions of track and weather for a fair sized crowd. The three-heat plan was adopted.

Turley, driven by Ed Geers, was made favorite for the 2:12 trot at $15 to $15 for the field. Kid Shay set a terrific pace in the first heat, winning in 2:09¼, breaking the track record of 2:10¼ for a trotting race, previously held by Little Dick. Practically the whole field appeared to out-trot Turley, but he remained favorite to the end of the second heat, which was almost a repetition of the first, when Kid Shay became favorite to $25 to $15 for the field. He again finished first in the final, but Turley was a very close second, winning third money.

LITTLE BOY ONE MASS OF SORES

Not One Square Inch of Skin on His Whole Body Unaffected—Awful Suffering from Raw Itching Humor—Screams Were Heartbreaking—Skin Peeled 20 Times.

WONDERFUL CURE BY CUTICURA REMEDIES

"My little son, a boy of five, broke out with an itching rash. Three doctors prescribed for him, but he kept getting worse until we could not dress him any more. They finally advised me to try a certain medical College, but its treatment did no good. At the time I was induced to try Cuticura he was so bad that I had to cut his hair off and put the Cuticura Ointment on him on bandages, as it was impossible to touch him with the bare hand. There was not one square inch of skin on his whole body that was not affected. He was one mass of sores. The bandages used to stick to his skin and in removing them it used to take the skin off with them, and the screams from the poor child were heart-breaking. I began to think that he would never get well, but after the second application of Cuticura Ointment I began to see signs of improvement, and with the third and fourth applications the sores commenced to dry up. His skin peeled off twenty times, but it finally yielded to the treatment. Now I can say that he is entirely cured, and a stronger and healthier boy you never saw than he is to-day. DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE IN THE conditions of a certain mortgage made and executed by Herman Erickson and Hilma Erickson, his wife, and Gust Johnson and Ida Johnson, his wife, as mortgagors, to Duluth Brewing & Malting Company, a corporation organized and existing under and by virtue of the laws of the State of Minnesota, as mortgagee, bearing date the 7th day of June, 1904, with a power of sale therein contained, which mortgage was duly recorded in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for St. Louis County, Minnesota, at 3 o'clock p. m. on the 13th day of June, 1904, on page 31 of Book 221 of Mortgages.

Said default consists in the failure of said mortgagors to pay a part of the principal sum secured by said mortgage. That by the terms of said mortgage and the note secured thereby, the mortgagors agreed to pay the sum of $1,681.07, with interest at the rate of 8 per cent per annum, on demand after date of said mortgage. That demand of payment was thereafter duly made. That no part thereof has ever been paid, except that $34.00 was paid thereon on June 14, 1904, and $357.07 was paid thereon on May 29th, 1905, by reason thereof the power of sale in said mortgage contained has become operative, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has ever been instituted to recover the debt secured by said mortgage, and there is claimed to be due and is due on said mortgage at the date of this notice the sum of $1,327.63.

The property described in said mortgage and thereby mortgaged is situated in the County of St. Louis and State of Minnesota, and is described as follows, to-wit:

Lot number Three (3) in Block number Thirteen (13), in Chisholm, according to the recorded plat thereof in the office of the Register of Deeds in and for said county.

Now, Therefore, notice is hereby given, that by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said mortgaged premises above described, which sale will be made at public auction to the highest bidder for cash by the Sheriff of said St. Louis County, at the front door of the County Court House in the City of Duluth, Minnesota, in said county, on the 30th day of August, 1905, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, to satisfy the amount that shall then be due upon said mortgage, and Fifty Dollars ($50.00) attorneys' fees, as stipulated in said mortgage, and the costs and disbursements allowed by law, and taxes (if any), subject to redemption at any time within one year from the date of said sale, as provided by law.

PUT LEG ON TRACK

After a Surgeon Had Refused to Amputate It.

Meadville, Pa., Aug. 15.—Surgeons having refused to amputate the right leg of James Duffy, aged 58, he decided to get rid of the member in spite of them. He had suffered for a long time from a fever sore on his leg.

He went to the railroad track and waited for the first train. When the engine was half a dozen feet from him a bystander grabbed him and tried to pull him out of danger, but the wheel caught his toes and crushed them. He reviled and threatened to beat the man who interefered.

MINISTER BEATEN

By Mine Boss Which Resulted In a General Strike.

Superintendent and His Two Sons Arrested and Fined.

Glouster, Ohio, Aug. 15.—All of the miners, numbering over 400, of the Sunday Creek Coal company's mine No. 256 are now on a strike, and they will be out for some time, according to present indications. The trouble started when Mine Superintendent David Williams, Sr., ordered John Rothery, one of the drivers, to take a few empty coal cars to a miner who was ahead of his turn. This he refused to do, and Williams, it is said, promptly discharged him, at the same time abusing him. Rev. Morgan Lewis, who was a bystander, was also attacked by Williams and badly beaten. David Williams, Jr., also came into the scramble.

The Williamses were arrested on a charge of assault and battery and pleaded not guilty. Young Williams was bound over to court on a bond of $200, and the elder Williams in two bonds of $250 each on two charges.

Both men were released, and all trouble was thought over, but about 11 o'clock, while Rev. Lewis was sitting on the curbing of the pavement on High street, both of the Williams men sneaked up behind him. The elder Williams, he states, carried a knife. He was kicked and bruised, and another Williams boy (Thomas) dealt the minister a heavy blow on the head with a pair of metal knuckles. The work was done so quickly that the people in the street did not know what had happened. They came to the rescue of Rev. Lewis, however, and John Ray tried to arrest one of the Williams boys. Marshal Yoleum took all of the men to the village jail and locked them up, but the large crowd following demanded the release of Ray, which Mayor Gormley ordered done.

Excitement ran to a high pitch during the scramble and continued all afternoon. Rev. Mr. Lewis was taken to a neighbor's house, where his wounds were dressed. He was able to be out late in the evening. The three Williams men were fined for this offense $25 and costs each by Mayor Gormley, with an additional thirty days' sentence for each in the workhouse. This latter part was set aside, however, on condition that they would go home and not take part in any more fights.

As a result of the attack on Rev. Mr. Lewis a meeting of miners was called and it was decided that mine No. 256 should lay off work until the mine superintendent, David Williams, Sr., was discharged, together with his son David, boss hauler. Secretary Joseph Richards of District No. 6 of the United Mine Workers of America was present at the meeting, and said that if the coal company decided not to shut this mine down, all the other mines of his district will be immediately shut down. This district covers all of Southern and part of Central Ohio.

The nerves of the people are high strung, and many small fights are taking place between men who favor one side or the other. Some trouble of a like nature between the boss and his men caused the mine to stop operations one day about two weeks ago. An indignation meeting was held last night. During the exciting talk of the afternoon there were many suggestions that Williams and his sons be tarred and feathered, and even hints of lynching were heard.

OLD MYSTERY CLEARED UP

Negro Confesses to a Murder of Twenty-Five Years Ago.

New York, Aug. 15.—If substantiation follows the reported confession of George H. Leroy, a negro serving sentence for murder in Seattle, that he and two other men strangled Jennie Cramer of New Haven and threw her body into the sound off Savin Rock, nearly a quarter of a century ago, one of the most sensational murder mysteries of modern times will have been solved and some measure of justice will come to those whose lives have been blighted by suspicion.

Walter Malley of New Haven, one of the richest and loneliest men in the gay college town; Blanche Douglass, who was a defendant with him at the Jennie Cramer murder trial, and his cousin, James Malley, now a doctor in an obscure Pennsylvania village, who was the third defendant, are the persons most directly concerned about the truth of Leroy's confession.

After their acquittal, James Malley left New Haven forever. Blanche Douglass returned to New York and was later reported dead, though it is insisted that she did not die.

Walter Malley was 23 years old when he was arrested on suspicion of having murdered Jennie Cramer. His father, Edward Malley, was a wealthy merchant. Walter had plenty of money and in 1881, while on a visit to New York, he met Blanche Douglass, an actress. He liked her so well he took her back to New Haven with him.

Jennie Cramer was a New Haven girl, the daughter of a German tobacconist, and was strikingly pretty. She liked to be admired, and her most persistent suitor was James Malley.

On Aug. 6, 1881, the dead body of Jennie Cramer was found on the beach at Savin Rock. Jennie had disappeared from her home on the morning previous.

Suspicion at once fastened on the Malley boys and Blanche Douglass, as Jennie had been with them continuously up to the time she disappeared. After eleven months in jail they were brought to trial and acquitted.

DROPPED DEAD

After Refusing to Take Out Life Insurance Policy.

Appleton, Wis., Aug. 15.—After listening for two hours to the arguments and blandishments of a life insurance agent, Henry Pauls dropped dead. He had refused to take out a policy for $50,000, although it had been offered in the most alluring light, cumulative, nonassessable, in effect immediately, tontine, endowment or any other plan he chose.

Fred Wettengel, representtive of a life insurance company, met Pauls on the street and engaged him in conversation on the subject, but Pauls, who was the father of six children, did not believe he could afford the insurance. Furthermore, he said he came of a long-lived family, and did not believe in paying life insurance premiums for half a century and dying to beat the game.

The return of his wife from a shopping tour ended the argument, and as Pauls started to walk away with her he fell dead. Physicians says he succumbed from heart failure.

WOMAN'S CURIOSITY

Caused Postmaster's Sister to Open Others' Letters.

Zanesville, Ohio, Aug. 15.—Excessive curiosity as to the contents of letters that passed through her hands is alleged to have got Miss Minnie Binckley, deputy postmistress at Clay Bank, Perry county, into serious trouble.

Miss Binckley is but 17 years of age, and she is the sister of the postmaster at Clay Bank. She was arrested by United States Marshal McAllister of Marietta, and brought to this city, where she was arraigned before United States Comissioner Meyer. She entered a plea of not guilty and was bound over to the federal grand jury in the sum of $500. She gave the bond required and was released and returned to her home.

Miss Binckley is inexperienced in the ways of the world and probably does not realize the gravity of the charge that has been placed against her. The letters which she is charged with having opened were addressed to Miss Kae Kiener and were mailed from Junction City, Ohio. Other letters passing through the office are alleged to have been opened, and Postoffice Inspector J. F. Oldfield was assigned in the case. He made the affidavit upon which the arrest was made.

The Food of Our Forefathers

The World Progresses With Mighty Strides, But Intelligent People Cling to One Old Truth.

Modern progress, of which we hear so much nowadays, is not so great perhaps as we are sometimes made to think. True enough, it cannot be denied that the world is progressing along many lines. Wonderful accomplishments are recorded every year, almost every day. We telegraph to trains moving at high speed. We travel from New York to Chicago in eighteen hours, though only a few years ago, comparatively speaking, the journey required more than that number of days. We build great railroads under the earth and soon we shall build one across the oceans. All these and many more marvelous things we are doing.

But in one particular the most intelligent and progressive people today cling to the ideas of their forefathers.

One of the most nourishing dishes, and one of the most common perhaps, a century or so ago, was known as "Frumenty." It is seldom, if ever, seen now, but Hutchison, the eminent English food authority, says it was very nourishing and wholesome. It was prepared by soaking the kernel of wheat in water until it burst and then boiling it in milk with sugar and salt, and was of high value in producing bone, blood, muscle and nerve force.

Malta-Vita is an extended and elaborated process of the old way of making "Frumenty." The whole wheat grain is thoroughly cleaned, then boiled in water, cooked in steam to gelatinize the starch, then allowed to stand in coolers (where it is carefully watched by an expert) just long enough to allow the gelatinized starch cells to break down. Then it is treated with barley malt instead of sugar, as the barley malt and the gelatinized starch make "maltose" or malt sugar—highly nutritious and most easily digested. After this it goes to the ovens, where it is baked under such intense heat that when the crisp brown flakes, delicious beyond description, come from the ovens they contain only one per cent of moisture.

Malta-Vita is scientifically prepared to meet the requirements of the human body, and Malta-Vita is good to eat; especially appetizing when served with fruit or cream. All grocers, 10 cents.

WORKINGS OF THE DAMS

At Mississippi Headwaters to Be Investigated By Government Engineers.

St. Paul, Aug. 15.—The investigation of the workings of the government dams on the upper Mississippi with a view to preventing such floods as have occurred recently in counties adjoining the dams, began in St. Paul yesterday when Maj. H. M. Chittenden of Sioux City, Iowa, Maj. Chas. L. Potter of Duluth and Capt. W. V. Judson of Milwaukee, Wis., United States engineers appointed by the secretary of war to make the investigation, met and organized in St. Paul.

The party left last night for the reservoirs at Lake Winnibigoshish, Leech Lake, Pokegama Falls, Pine River and Sandy Lake to investigate conditions. The party will be gone a weeek and will give a public hearing Sept. 12 to all persons interested in the operation of the dams.

Much of the day was spent in looking over maps and charts and in organizing for the work. Maj. Chittenden was elected chairman and Capt. Judson secretary. Delegations from St. Paul and Minneapolis commercial clubs, accompanied by Congressman Stevens of St. Paul and Loren W. Fletcher of Minneapolis, met with the engineers and expressed the interest that people of the Twin Cities take in the proper management of the dams.

"The board will consider two questions in its investigation," said Maj. Chittenden. "One is the use of the surplus water for power and the other is the use of the reservoirs in protecting persons and property along the Mississippi river. We are going to make a thorough investigation at the reservoirs."

TRAIN KILLS TWO AUTOISTS

Crushed to Death at Pike's Crossing, Near Bennington, Vt.

Rutland, Vt., Aug. 15.—Deputy Police Commissioner Harris Lindsley of New York city and Miss Eliza P. Willing of Chicago, who were to have been married next week, were almost instantly killed at Pike's crossing near Bennington, Vt., yesterday afternoon, when a north-branch train on the Rutland railroad struck the automobile in which they were traveling.

Miss Willing's nephew, Ambrose Cramer and the chauffeur, J. Adamson, were thrown out and badly bruised and cut, but not seriously injured. The engine was thrown fifteen feet and the tracks were torn up for 100 feet. The automobile was dashed to peices and afterward destroyed by fire.

The locomotive and one car were running backward to meet the flyer from Burlington at the Bennington station and were thrown from the rails, the engine being overturned and rolling a distance of ten or fifteen feet from the rails, which were torn up for nearly 100 feet. Engineer William Sibley and Fireman William jumped from the cab and were unhurt, while fifteen passengers also escaped injury. The injured were removed to the hospital at the Soldiers' Home and were resting comfortably.

The accident occurred shortly after 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon as the party were traveling up a steep grade leading over the crossing. Mr. Lindsley and Miss Willing occupied the rear seat in the car, a big touring machine registered "1041" City of Chicago. The boy and the chauffeur were in front.

There is a curve near the crossing and Adamson states that he did not see the train until it was upon them. Engineer Sibley and Fireman Magan make the same statement. The locomotive tender struck the rear seat of the automobile, which was thrown sixty feet.

The locomotive left the rails and plowed over the sleepers for nearly 100 feet. Lindsley was killed instantly and Miss Willing survived the accident but a few minutes. The bodies were removed to a Bennington undertaking establishment. Young Cramer and Adamson were removed to the hospital at Bennington.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—Miss Evelyn P. Willing, who was killed near Bennington, Vt., yesterday, was a daughter of the late Henry Willing, who was a partner of Marshall Field for many years and was one of Chicago's wealthy men. Mr. Willing and his wife died some years ago, and Miss Willing and a brother, Mark S. Willing, resided in the family mansion at 110 Rush street. Miss Willing, who was prominent in society, spent most of the winter and the early part of this year in New York, returning to Chicago early in July. The announcement of her engagement to Harris Lindsley of New York was a surprise to the fashionable set of Chicago. No definite plans of the wedding had been arranged. Miss Willing left here for New York July 29 to take a motor tour of the East with Mr. Lindsley and other friends.

GROSS FRAUDS ARE ALLEGED

In Furnishing of Supplies to the Schuylkill Arsenal.

Philadelphia, Aug. 15.—An investigation of clothing and other contracts at the Schuylkill arsenal, one of the supply depots of the United States army, which was begun last week by Frederick S. Strong of the inspector general's department, was continued yesterday. There has been considerable trouble at the arsenal for some time, and frequently charges have been made that the government was being defrauded out of thousands of dollars through the furnishing of inferior goods by certain contractors. So far the inquiry has been confined to the contracts for furs.

Among those examined by Maj. Strong yesterday were Robert Charlton and E. F. Beckett, assistant inspectors at the arsenal. Charlton testified that he never passed goods not up to the specifications. He said a firm of garment makers had attempted to bribe him by offering $2,000 if he would be easy on them in his inspection of their goods. He refused the money and informed the commandant of the arsenal of the affair. He also said that he had been approached several times by other contractors.

Inspector Beckett said he had frequently put his stamp of approval on goods which he knew should have been marked inferior. He did this, he said, by orders of his superiors. He was an old soldier, he said, and always obeyed orders.

Maj. Strong, with his assistants, called at the office of Loeb, Lipper & Co., which firm had held government contracts, for the purpose of taking the testimony of Joseph Loas, a member of the firm. Mr. Loas, however, refused to answer questions.

A visit was made to the fur establishment of Theodore Zeifert, who, Inspector Charlton testified, was the man who offered him the $2,000 bribe. In answer to Maj. Strong's questions Mr. Zeifert made an absolute denial to the charges.

REVENUE MEN DISCHARGED

Commissioner Yerkes Starts a Big Shake-Up In the Ranks.

Washington, Aug. 15.—The Star says: "There has been a big shake up among the agents of the internal revenue service, but just how far it has gone is a matter of speculation. It is stated, however, that four revenue agents have been asked for their resignations, and at least two of the four have come here for a personal conference with Commissioner Yerkes of the internal revenue bureau.

"These are Capt. Charles H. Ingram, in charge of the New England work, stationed at Boston, and C. H. Berg, who has had a section of the Southwest under his charge, and has been located in Texas. The names of the other agents could not be learned.

"Commissioner Yerkes would not discuss the matter. Those in position to know say that Commissioner Yerkes has personally been watching the work of the revenue agents, who are really the secret investigating officials of the revenue bureau, and has concluded that some of them have not been doing their duty in detecting some of the things going on."

Unnecessary Expense.

Acute attacks of colic and diarrhoea come on without warning and prompt relief must be obtained. There is no necessity of incurring the expense of a physician's service in such cases if Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy is at hand. A dose of this remedy will relieve the patient before a doctor could arrive. It has never been known to fail, even in the most severe and dangerous cases and no family should be without it. For sale by all leading druggists.

MARKET IS DULL

Wet Weather Continues But Has Little Effect on Wheat.

Receipts More Liberal and Cash Wheat Is Weaker.

Duluth oBard of Trade, Aug. 15.—The weather in the Northwest yesterday and last night was wet, and though clearer today the forecast was for rains tomorrow. Receipts were more liberal, however, and the market had an easy tone. The feeling as to the weather is that the crop is made as to bushels and that rains can only retard the ripening and perhaps injure quality should they continue. Cash wheat was reported from the Southwest as weaker in tone, and St. Louis reported flour as dull and not selling well.

Chicago was the strongest market today, but the range in all markets was rather narrow and trading dull. The September option in Duluth fell ½c for the new and ⅛c for the old, ½c in Minneapolis and ⅝c in St. Louis, while in Chicago it advanced ¼@⅝c, in New York ¼c and in Kansas City was unchanged.

The Liverpool market closed unchanged to ⅛d lower, London ½d lower, Berlin ⅜c lower and Antwerp unchanged.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 31, against 16 last year and at Minneapolis 76, against 113 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 101, against 218 last year. Chicago received 272, against 257 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 788,600 bus., last year, 923,000 bus. Shipments, 307,000 bus., last year, 388,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 105,000 bus.

Bradstreet reported a decrease of 1,308,000 bus. in the world's visible supply of wheat. East of the Rockies there was an increase of 1,062,000 bus., and in Europe and afloat a decrease of 2,400,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ⅝@⅞d lower. In the Chicago market, September corn closed ⅛@¼c lower, September oats closed ⅛c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 490,000 bus., last year 268,000 bus. Shipments 720,000 bus., last year, 276,000 bus. Clearances were 258,000 bus. Bradstreet reported a decrease of 1,116,000 bus. in the world's visible supply of corn.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was quiet. The old September option opened unchanged at 84c, sold at 83¾c at 10:30 and at 83½c at 11:30. It fell back to 83¼c at 12:30, rallied to 84c at 12:55 and closed at 83⅞c, a loss of ⅛c. The new September was inactive and closed ½c lower at 79¾c.

Flax was fairly active and but little changed in price. October opened ¼c higher at $1.13¾, fell to $1.13½, rallied to $1.14 and fell back to $1.13⅜. The close was unchanged at $1.13½. The November option opened unchanged at $1.13¾, sold at $1.14, fell back to $1.13⅝ and closed there, a loss of ⅛c. September fell ½c to $1.16.

Oats to arrive advanced ⅛c and oats on track fell 1½c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat on track, No. 1 northern, $1.07; No. 2 northern, 98c. Durum new, No. 1, 70; No. 2, 68c; September old, 83⅞c; September new, 79¾c. Flax to arrive, $1.20; on track, $1.48; August, $1.20; September, $1.15; October, $1.13½; November, $1.13⅝; December, $1.13. Oats to arrive, 25¾c; to arrive, 25¾c. Rye, September, 55½c. Barley: Feed, 39@40c.

Cars inspected: Wheat, 31; last year, 166; corn, 3; oats, 15; rye, 3; barley, 17.

Receipts: Wheat, 35,700; corn, 3,357; oats, 25,833; barley, 4,034; rye, 1,504; flax, 2,152.

Shipments: Wheat, 22,000; corn, 24,346; oats, 21,863; barley, 71,124.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Liberal Receipts Give Wheat an Easy Tone.

Chicago, Aug. 15.—More liberal receipts than anticipated here and at points in the Northwest caused an easy tone in the wheat market today. A weak tone in cash wheat was also an influence. September was off ⅛@¼c at 81, and declined ⅛c further under the pressure of selling by pit traders. A fair scattering buying movement developed at the lower level and steadied the market. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 373 cars, against 474 cars a year ago.

A revived rumor of Russian crop shortage infused a measure of strength into the market later and sent prices upward. September advanced to 81⅝c. The close was steady at 81½c, a gain of ¼@⅜c.

Further rains in the corn belt induced liquidation by liberal traders and commission houses, resulting in an easy feeling in the corn market. September was down ⅛c at 54c at the outset. The easy tone in wheat brought out still further offerings, and the price of the corn option was backed to 53¾c. Local receipts were 451 cars.

Corn became steady later, September advancing with the upturn in wheat to 55⅞c, but dropping back at the close to 53½@⅝c, a loss of ⅛@¼c.

A fair demand by commission houses for May imparted a steady tone to the oats market. September started unchanged at 25¾c, and advanced to 26c. Local receipts were 514 cars.

Provisions exhibited a slightly easier tendency due chiefly to a cessation of buying by the packers. September pork was off 5c at $14.22½. Lard and ribs were unchanged at $7.81½ and $8.07½@8.70 respectively.

Close: Wheat—August, 80¾c; September, 81½c; December, 82⅝c; May, 85⅝@⅞c. Corn—September, 53½@53¾c; old, 52¾c; December, 44⅝c; old, 46¼c; May, 44c. Oats—August, 25⅞c; September, 25¾c; December, 26¼c; May, 28¾c. Pork—September, $14.37½; October, $14.45; January, $13.20. Lard—September, $7.80; November, $7.65; December, $7.30; January, $7.26. Ribs—September, $8.80; October, $8.87½@8.90; January, $6.95. Rye—Cash, 85½@55c; September, 57c; December, 58@58c. Timothy—September, $3.62; March, $3.55. Clover—August, $12.75. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.16; southwestern, $1.06. Barley—Cash, 38@46c. Cash, wheat—No. 2 red, 82@84c; No. 3 red, 82@83c; No. 2 hard, 81¾@81½c; No. 3 hard, 80@85c; No. 1 northern, No. 2 northern, nothing doing; No. 3 spring, 80@85c. Oats—No. 2, 24¾@26c; No. 3, 24½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—The weekly government statement report was not a factor. A cablegram from Russia telling of more damage to the growing crop caused some buying early, as did also smaller primary receipts than a year ago. This later factor is being watched carefully by the trade, as it seems to indicate that the first rush of winter wheat is passed, with farmers not disposed to force their crop on the market at present prices. Conditions, as we view them, seem unchanged trade is narrow and easily gets oversold. The weather in the Northwest, while bad, is not as yet causing much concern to the trade. We continue to look for a scalping market.

Corn—More rain through the corn belt gave the market a slightly lower opening with trading throughout the session showing mostly a dragging tendency. Cash premiums are still maintained and there continues to be a good demand for cash stuff. While we doubt much the policy of forcing the short side in the new crop months at their present discount. The market closed weak, and practically at the low point.

Oats—This market made slight headway, closing slightly lower in sympathy with corn. At the moment the market acts as if it would continue in its present trading form.

Provesions—Led by pork this market again ruled strong, with much the same buying that has been in evidence for some days. We see no change in the speculative side of this market. It acts as if it could do still better.

• • •

Minneapolis: "We have had three days rain and prospects of at least one more. A delayed harvest is liable to cause a change in sentiment and after the long spell of bearishness it would not be surprising to see the speculative pendulum swing to the bull side. The crop, however, is made, rain would tend to injure its quality and the September short might be forced to cover his wheat at a loss. There is little fear, on the whole, that the Northwest is to be robbed of a big grain crop."

• • •

Davidson, N. W. T.:—Crops in this vicinity at present are unparalleled in the history of the district. Wherever there is grain sown, the crop exceeds all expectations. Barley is being cut extensively on the surrounding farms at this time. Wheat for the most part has gone past the growing stage and is now ripening fast. The average yield of wheat providing nothing adverse happens is figured at 35 bus. per acre.

• • •

Chicago Record-Herald: Patten's next move in the September corn deal is the subject of a great deal of attention and comment in speculative circles. The big bull trader seems to be given the leadership by general assent. In the opinion of traders the Patten holding was about 6,000,000 bus. of old September before yesterday's purchases were made. It was the general belief that cash houses easily sold 500,000 bus. of old September delivery during the morning against their acceptance in the country. It was assumed in the trade that the rains that had so improved the promise for the new crop were also inducement to farmers to part with the old. This has not been definitely determined. Meanwhile the shipping demand for corn continues good, and there were large decreases last week in public and privat elevator stocks here, this being the only point of large supplies in public elevators in the country. There are rumors, however, of stocks of corn at other points.

• • •

Dennis, Chicago: There is no buying of wheat to amount to anything by any one but shorts. Talk about carrying charges and lower prices; how do you like Chicago stocks of wheat, public and private increasing three and one-half million bushels, in three weeks, and all the export business we can do in some low grade Maryland and low grade New York state wheat. Manitoba and Ontario wheat will be underselling American western wheat for some time to come, unless we decline to an export basis, and with Liverpool declining, and Canadian wheat offers being cheapened, we in the Middle West and Southwest stand a fine chance for exports yet. Don't we? In the mean time the Southwest says its movement is increasing, and will be a much poorer quality, making it all the harder to sell. Rain in the Northwest now only means delay in the movement and deterioration in quality. The bushels of that crop are made and its is a big one.

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—The undertone in wheat was strong during practically all through the session. The crop news had no decided and pronounced trend. Reports, and just as reliable as some were of quite the opposite tenor. The same situation was encountered at home. Word came from the Northwest that the continued rain was doing much harm and at the same time more reports were received that the wet had done no harm yet, and probably would not, unless the storms continued for a week. The statistics for the day were bullish. The big line of long wheat held by a northwestern house is reported to be still intact, and the efforts to dislodge it have been apparently abandoned. It was reported early yesterday that ½c further decline Saturday would have weeded out this line, but the slight rally yesterday and the steadiness today strengthened the hold of the operators and decided them to hang on for a while. The market looks pretty firm at this time and we think it about low for the time being. We therefore consider a trading position on the long side as the most advisable stand to take and advise taking profit on any material bulge.

MODERATE GAINS

Marked the Opening Hour on New York Stock Exchange.

Some Sagging Later and Close Was Firm and Dull.

New York, Aug. 15.—Moderate gains wert he rule today at the opening in a broad and active stock market. United Staes Rubber gaolned a point and Reading, New York Central and Kansas & Texas large fractions. Geins extending from ⅛ up were made in a number of stocks.

Over-night advances melted away when profits were sought, but there were abundant buying orders around yesterday's closing figures and very few stocks fell below that. Such losses as occurred were recovered and prices generally reached a higher level. Wabash preferred, Rock Island, Southern Railway and Woolen were heavily bought. Great Northern preferred and Wabash preferred gained 2 and the Wabash stocks, the Kansas City Southern stocks, Wheeling & Lake Erie first preferred, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, Lead and Tobacco preferred 1. There were some points of weakness among the minor specialties. General Electric, Ing preferred, Allis-Chalmers preferred and Iowa Central preferred lost a point each.

An active demand for New York Central carried it up 1½, but railroad stocks as a whole wer inclined to droop. Some of the minor Southwesterns were relatively firm. Kansas & Texas preferred rising a point. Specialties were in favor and a gain of 2⅝ by Locomotive carried other railroad equipment stocks with it. Pressed Steel Car rising a point. American Snuff sold at an advance of 13 and the preferred 4. Smelting rose 1⅜ and Pullman, the Central Leather stocks, Corn Products, Colorado Fuel and Minneapolis & St. Louis and Virginia-Carolina Chemical preferred rose 1 to 1½. Central of Jersey and Delaware & Hudson fell 2½ and Federal Mining 2, United Railway Investment 1, Great Northern preferred sold at 318. Bonds were firm at noon.

Confused dealings and a lower tendency prevailed after mid-day despite the concentration of bullish activity in the railroad equipment and other specialties. While the railroads did not sag much all efforts to advance them was met with stock to sell. Delaware & Hudson extended its loss to 4 points and Pullman lost 2, United States Pipe preferred 1¾, Duluth South Shore & Atlantic preferred 1. The gains ran from 1 to 1½ for American Car, Metropolitan Street Railway, Tennessee Coal, Des Moines & Fort Dodge and Pere Marquette preferred.

Stocks yielded with less resistance during the afternoon. The principal grangers, coalers and some specialties were bought at large fractions below yesterday's close. Business increased during the selling. Missouri Pacific, Ontario & Western and Westinghouse Electric lost a point.

Prices made some recovery as the bear traders were discouraged by the small success in dislodging stocks. Locomotive preferred and Kansas & Texas rose 1, the preferred 2¾ and American Telephone 2¾. Lackawanna dropped ten points. Evansville & Terre Haute lost 2 and Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Baltimore & Ohio preferred 1. The close was firm and dull.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Payne, Webber & Co.: Market closed somewhat irregular, considering the strength displayed in the pit-taking which it has been subjected to the tone is quite strong. Commission ouses report increase in volume of outside business. Sentiment was helped somewhat by news late in the day that article 4 of the peace conditions had been agreed to. The belief is generally held that both nations will come together and reach some amicable agreement, whereby war can be brought to a close, once assured this would do much in shaping bullish sentiment. We continue to advise purchase of good stocks on set-backs.

• • •

Zeller to Baker: We hear a pool has been formed in New York Central and the tip is that the stock will be put to 165 at least. There has been considerable profit-taking this morning, but the market had absorbed offerings readily and we think that the general list is a purchase.

TREASURY BALANCES.

Washington, Aug. 15.—Today's statement of the treasury balances in the general fund, exclusive of the $150,000,000 gold reserve in the division of redemption, shows: Available cash balance, $126,788,552; gold, $82,874,492; gold certificates, $22,317,370.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, Aug. 15.—Money on call, easy, 1¾@2 per cent; closing bid, 1¾; offered at 2. Time loans, steady and dull; sixty days, 2¾@3¼; ninety days, 2¾@3; six months, 2½; six months, 4. Prime mercantile paper, 4@4½ per cent. Sterling exchange, steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.86.70@4.86.75 for demand and at $4.84.70 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.86½ and $4.87. Commercial bills, $4.84⅝. Bar silver, 59¼c; Mexican dollars, 46c. Government bonds, strong; railroad bonds, firm.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Aug. 15.—The cotton market opened easy at a decline of 4 to 9 points and increased the loss to a matter of 8@11 points under stoploss selling and bear pressure inspired by a sharp decline in Liverpool and fears of spot weakness following new crop receipts.

There was a good demand for covering at the decline and some fresh buying for long account, based on continued dry hot weather in Texas, and toward the middle of the morning the market steadily led up to within 4 or 5 points of last night's close, with trading less active on the partial recovery.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 7 points higher; middling uplands, 10.60; middling gulf, 10.85. Sales, 100 bales. Futures closed very steady; Aug., 10.25; Sept., 10.30; Oct., 10.45; Nov., 10.49; Dec., 10.55; Jan., 10.64; Feb., 10.67; March, 10.70; April, 10.72; May, 10.75.

MIDWAY HORSE MARKET.

Minnesota Transfer, St. Paul.—Barrett & Zimmerman report: Receipts still hold heavy. The strongest demand centered on drafters and expressers. Owing to enormous receipts trade is sluggish. Movement in drivers still slow. Clearance difficult to consumate at following prices:

Drafters, extra	$160@215
Drafters, choice	150@160
Drafters, common to good	120@150
Farm mares, extra	110@125
Farm mares, choice	85@110
Farm mares, common to good	65@ 85
Drivers extra	150@300
Drivers common	75@150

HAD THE FLOOR.

Judge Stewart, while residing in the town of Hartland, was the cause of a little impromptu sport, says the Los Angeles Times. The town meeting was held in the Opera house, and he was moderator. The men were seated in chairs, which had to be handled with the greatest of care or they would shut up and the occupant would go to the floor.

Mr. Waterhouse, weiging 200 pounds, was seated in the front row. After the meeting had been duly opened, Mr. Miller arose to make the opening remarks. Just then Mr. Waterhouse moved, and found himself spread full length on the floor. Without a moment's hesitation, Judge Stewart said: "Excuse me, Mr. Miller, but Mr. Waterhouse has the floor."

NAME WAS HARDER.

Two men were introduced to each other, says the Los Angeles Times. One, failing to catch the other's name, asked him to repeat it.

"My name is rather hard," said No. 2.

"Well," said No. 1, "I don't believe it is any harder than mine."

"I'd be willing to bet $10 it is," No. 2 replied.

To this No. 1 assented without hesitation, and the bet was made. Then No. 2 said: "My name is Stone, F. W. Stone."

"I'm sorry, but you lose," said the other. "My name is Harder, T. B. Harder."

WEBSTER'S FOOLING.

When Daniel Webster was a young man, but already distinguished, he revisited the school of his earlier days, and found there the same teacher who taught him in his youth, says the Los Angeles Times. She expressed great pleasure at seeing him, and did everything to make his visit pleasant. She pointed out to him many boys she thought might have brilliant futures, and he remarked that they were "all very nice boys." To her surprise, however, he asked her to show him the very worst boy in her class, and when she reluctantly did so he patted him on the head and put a gold piece in his hand, saying: "Take this; I used to have your place when I was in this room."

FARMERS' PEDIGREES.

Some of the farmers in France have long pedigrees. The French Agricultural society had offered a prize for the farmer of longest standing in the Seine Inferieure, says the Kansas City Journal. This brought to the front an old farmer named Liot, who, besides proving that he was the doyen of his district, produced documents showing that the farm had been in his family for 227 years. In another neighboring district a farmer named Bernage produced a pedigree of 217 years. Such instances of long descent are far from uncommon in France.

Articles of Incorporation —of— ILLINOIS & MINNESOTA LAND COMPANY.

We, the undersigned, have associated ourselves together to form a corporation for the purposes hereinafter mentioned, pursuant to the Constitution and General Laws of the State of Minnesota, and particularly to the provisions of Title 2, Chapter 34 of the General Statutes of said State of 1878, and Laws amendatory thereof, and supplementary thereto, and to that end have organized by adopting and signing the following Articles of Incorporation.

ARTICLE I.

The name of this corporation shall be ILLINOIS & MINNESOTA LAND COMPANY.

The general nature of its business shall be the buying, selling, improving and leasing of lands, tenements and hereditaments in the State of Minnesota, and especially to acquire agricultural lands in the Counties of St. Louis, Carlton, Lake, Cook and Itasca, in said State; to sell and dispose of such lands to actual settlers; and by all methods thought best to further the settlement, cultivation and improvement of agricultural lands in the northern part of the State of Minnesota, and especially in said Counties; and to do all things necessary or incidental thereto.

The principal place of transacting the business of this corporation shall be the City of Duluth, St. Louis County, Minnesota.

ARTICLE II.

The time of the commencement of this corporation shall be August 20th, 1905, and the period of its continuance shall be thirty (30) years.

ARTICLE III.

The capital stock of this corporation shall be Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000); and the same shall be subscribed to, and paid for, at such times, and in such manner, as the Board of Directors shall determine. No stock shall be issued for less than its par value, payable either in cash or in its equivalent, in property acceptable to the Board of Directors.

ARTICLE IV.

The highest amount of indebtedness to which this corporation shall at any time be subject, is the sum of Fifty Thousand Dollars ($50,000.)

ARTICLE V.

The names and places of residence of the persons forming this corporation are as follows:

A. W. Kuehnow, Duluth Minnesota,
Edward Hazen, Duluth, Minnesota,
William Elder, Duluth, Minnesota.

ARTICLE VI.

The first Board of Directors of this corporation shall be the incorporators hereof, and also Fred A. Mudge and Benjamin D. Brewster.

ARTICLE VII.

The government of this corporation and the management of its affairs shall be vested in the following officers, to-wit:

A Board of Five (5) Directors, who shall be stockholders of the corporation, and a President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer.

The Board of Directors shall be elected by the stockholders of the Company at their annual meeting, and the President, Vice-President, Secretary and Treasurer shall be chosen by the Directors at their first meeting after each annual meeting of the stockholders. The Directors and officers shall hold their respective offices for the term of one (1) year, and until their respective successors are elected and qualified.

The officers until the first annual meeting of the stockholders shall be:

A. W. Kuehnow, President;
William Elder, Vice-President;
Edward Hazen, Secretary and Treasurer.

The annual meeting of the stockholders shall be held on the first Monday in June in each year, after the year 1905, at such hour and place as shall be fixed by the By-Laws of the corporation.

ARTICLE VIII.

The capital stock of this corporation shall be divided into Five Hundred (500) shares of the par value of One Hundred Dollars ($100) each.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, We have hereunto set our hands and seals this 11th day of August, 1905.

A. W. KUEHNOW, (Seal.)
EDWARD HAZEN, (Seal.)
WILLIAM ELDER, (Seal.)

Signed, Sealed and Delivered
In Presence of:

ITS GALA NIGHT

West Duluth Lodge, No. 145, A. O. U. W. Initiates Class.

Eighty-Five For Degrees —Grand Lodge Officers Present.

Tomorrow night will be one of special importance and pleasure to West Duluth lodge, No. 145, A. O. U. W., for at that time the largest class in the history of the lodge will be given the degrees. Deputy Grand Master Workman Charles Ehle of Minneapolis, who has been working up the class, has met with a great deal more success than he expected, and has secured eighty-five candidates, who will take the degrees. The grand lodge officers will be present to see the work done, and the members of the Degree of Honor, which is the woman's auxiliary of the order, together with the wives of members and candidates, will take part in the ceremonies of the evening.

Upon the arrival of the grand lodge officers over the Northern Pacific road, at 6:55 tomorrow evening, they will be met by a committee from the lodge and escorted to the residence of E. D. Nickerson, where they will take supper, after which the local lodge in a body will escort them to the Great Eastern hall, headed by a band.

The grand master workman of the state, who will be present, is Hon. W. B. Anderson of Winona, one of the leading members of the legislature, and one of the most prominent members of the Republican party of the state.

HAD FINE TIME.

Visiting Women Leave After Delightful Entertainment.

Mrs. Samuel Carpenter of Montreal, Quebec, and her sister-in-law, Mrs. N. Carpenter of Houghton, Mich., leave today for their homes via the Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic railway, after visiting with friends here for some time. They have been absent from their homes on quite an extended trip, visiting friends in Michigan, Wisconsin and various points in Minnesota. They were at the Sault celebration of the opening of the first canal there, before coming to Duluth. Mrs. Carpenter will continue her trip on a lake steamer from the Sault.

While here they have been delightfully entertained, and wish to thank their friends for the pains taken to make their visit the pleasant one it has been. Among other things, the Mesdames Carpenter, together with Mrs. M. J. Fillatrault, Mrs. Ed Fillatrault, Miss Minard, Mrs. Schmidt of Superior and Mrs. Lemay went to Cloquet river in a prairie schooner and spent a few days fishing there.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

Division No. 4, A. O. H., will hold a regular meeting this evening at Gilley's hall.

John Perry has returned to West Duluth after a four months' stay at Barrows, Saskatchewan territory, Northwestern Canada.

The funeral of Mrs. Thomas Olson was held this afternoon from Plymouth Congregational church and the burial took place in Oneota cemetery. A large number of friends followed the remains to the grave.

James Kirkwood, Jr., has returned from a trip to Boston and other points in the East.

The Westminster Presbyterian church will hold a lawn social on Tuesday evening, Aug. 15, at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Wiliam Towner, 6205 Wadena street. Ice cream and cake will be served.

Alfred Merritt will leave tonight for his home in California.

Lon Merritt and family will go tomorrow to Pike Lake to camp for the rest of the summer. They are moving their equipment out there today.

Oliver Olson of West Duluth was one of those who filed on land today in the Fond du Lac reservation.

Mrs. Hildora Olson of Fifty-eighth avenue west entertained last evening in honor of Miss Margaret Gislason of Gardar, N. D. The guests were: Misses Gislason, Vorga Magnusson, Thorda Magnusson, Amy Magnusson, Margaret Nordal and Nannna Tinarson, and Harry Olson.

THE FOND DU LAC RESERVATION NOW OPEN

tinctly noticeable. As they entered the door their faces bore a look of anxiety and weariness which was almost pathetic. After the ordeal of filing was over, one and all would give a sigh of immense relief, and the strained look would go away from their faces. The first ten filings, as given above, is a fair sample. They are all near Brookston and Brevator, or some point of the railroad around those places, for these are considered the choice locations of the reservation.

After the numbers of those filing began to get into the larger figures, a good many found that the land they had picked for first choice had already been filed on and in some cases second and third choice. Nearly all of the applicants had papers made out for three, four and more descriptions and so got something, but some of them had to be satisfied with as low as forty acres instead of the 160 they had planned on. One of the lowest amounts of acreage applied for was that of Rev. John Pemberton of St. Paul, whose first and only choice was lot 2 in 12-50-18 and consisted of only 19.50 acres. He got it. Mr. Pemberton also filed soldiers' additional scrip on 24.75 acres adjoining his for a gentleman in St. Paul, from whom he held power of attorney. The lowest number of acres filed for, however, was by Frank Magnuson of Cloquet, who filed on 13.40 acres in lot 5 in section 10-49-17. Several applicants after finding the land they wanted gone turned away without filing on anything.

Three women filed this morning. The first was Miss Ethel Maude Seeley, a school teacher of Cloquet. She was No. 29 in line and found that the land she wanted was not yet chosen. It consists of 160 acres and is the southeast of the northwest and the north half of the southwest and the northwest of the southeast of 33-50-18. Mrs. Erestine Cook of Minneapolis was not so fortunate. Her first two choices in 49-18 had been taken so she filed on the northwest of the southwest in section 2 and the northeast of the southeast and the south half of the southeast of section 3in 50-19, amounting to 16 0acres. Miss Theresa McGrath, a nurse of Faribault, found her first choice gone so she filed on the northeast of section 4 in 49-17, amounting to 160.61 acres.

Isaac Seile of Duluth did a lightning and lucky stunt this morning in the filing. He was about half way down the line, and when his turn came to enter the office, sought to file on eighty acres, described as the east half of the southwest quarter of section 32, in 50-17. He had no citizenship papers with him, believing that because his father was a citizen he did not need to take out citizenship papers. He was informed that, although such was the case in the matter of voting, he had to show the goods when filing for land. Thereupon he chased out of the office and upstairs to Judge Morris, in United States court, where he took out his citizenship papers, came down and got into line again. It was soon his turn to get into the office again, and when he did so he heaved a big sigh of relief when he found that the land he wanted had not yet been gobbled.

The close of the rush came at 12:20, and at that time eighty-six applications had been filed. Some time after the rush was over another application was filed, making eighty-seven all told. The total acreage filed upon this morning amounts to 11,347.81. As there are 24,342.15 acres in the reservation open for filing, a little less than half has been filed on. It is expected, however, that when the people who settled on the land at 9 o'clock this morning begin to come in this afternoon and tomorrow, the greater part of the vacant acreage will have been taken up. Stragglers are coming into the land office now, inquiring what land is still vacant.

The troubles of those in line are not, however, necessarily over with the filing of their entries in the land office. The first man up is likely to win out, according to land attorneys, for his filing was made at the hour of 9 o'clock, when the lands were open to entry. Actual settlers can claim rights before his entry they could probably not prove a prior claim because their rights could not attach until the same moment. Each of the others may, however, have to face some individual prepared to prove by witnesses that he was on the land at the hour of 9 o'clock and therefore has a prior right to the land.

It might be urged that presons on the land before 9 o'clock were trespassers, but department decisions have held that while they were trespassers up to 9 o'clock, they acquired settler's rights at the moment of 9 o'clock.

PEACE ENVOYS MAKING RAPID PROGRESS

on these articles he decided to begin the consideration of the articles seratim in order to have time to communicate with his government and secure its final word. The suggestion from Vienna of a possible compromise on the question of Sakhalin on the basis of co-dominion looks attractive, but it is hardly considered a practicable solotion, as co-dominion would almost inevitably lead to friction and trouble A little more than half a century ago it might be said that co-dominion almost existed on the island, the Russians holding the northern and the Japanese the southern half, the limitations of their respective jurisdiction being badly defined, but it was an unlivable condition and led to the exchange of the Japanese dominion on Sakhalin for the cession of the Kuriles.

The Hebrew delegation, headed by Jacob H. Schiff of New York left the hotel Wentworth today saying that there would be a subsequent interview with M. Witte in New York. They believe the result of their talk with M. Witte and the interview which is still to come cannot but prove beneficial to their co-religionists in Russia. They continue to deny that the question of a loan to Russia was discussed with M. Witte. Nevertheless one of them said to the Associated Press that he had no doubt if Russia desired, Jewish bankers would be glad to loan Russia money if the Jews in Russia were placed on an equal footing with other inhabitants of the country. The representative of another great banking house (not Jewish) said: "Russia can obtain in America all the money she wants to make peace, but none to make war. Our position is the position of the Paris bankers."

THREE ARTICLES

Of the Japanese Conditions Already Agreed To.

Portsmouth, Aug. 15—Although rapid progress was made in the peace negotiations yesterday, three of the twelve articles which constitute the Japanese conditions of peace having been agreed to by M. Witte and Baron Rosen on behalf of Russia, neither of the two articles to which M. Witte, in his reply, returned an absolute negative, was reached. The crisis, therefore, is still to come. It may be reached today, as the cession of Sakhalin comes fifth in the list. The articles as they are officially designated in the brief communications authorized to be given to the press, which were disposed of yesterday, are in substance as follows:

First—Russia's recognition of Japan's "preponderating influence," and special position in Korea," which Russia henceforth agrees is outside her sphere of influence, Japan binding herself to recognize the sovereignty of the reigning family, but with the right to give advice and assistance to improve the civil administration of the empire.

Second—Mutual obligation to evacuate Manchuria, each to surrender all special privileges in that province, mutual obligation to respect the "territorial integrity" of China and to maintain the principle of equal opportunity for the commerce and industry of all nations in that province (open door).

Third—The cession to China of the Chinese Eastern railway, from Harbin southward.

There never was any question about the acceptance on the part of M. Witte on these articles, the first two covering in more emphatic form the contentions of Japan in the diplomatic struggle which preceeded hostilities. This is a natural consequence of the result of the war.

The cession of the railroad, the building of which cost Russia an immense sum, estimated by some at between $100,000,000 and $200,000,000, is ceded to China. Japan and China, therefore, will arrange between themselves the method by which the former is to be remunerated and through this financial operation Japan might have a very considerable portion of her claim for the "expenses of the war" liquidated.

DEMAND FOR INDEMNITY

Must Be Abandoned or Peace Will Fail.

New York, Aug. 15.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Times says that "An important personage" declared to him yesterday that if Japan did not abandon her demand for an indemnity the negotiations at Portsmouth would be broken off this week.

Every preparation, he said, had been made for a general mobilization, with a view to a supreme effort in Manchuria in the present year. True, the chances of victory were dubious, but Russia would play her last card before accepting dishonorable conditions of peace.

The order for the mobilization will be issued in the middle of August (old style) if peace has not previously been concluded.

STRENUOUS LIFE

Is That of Envoys Trying to Arrange Peace.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 15.—That making peace is a strenuous life is illustrated by the daily program of work of the peace envoys and their suites. Eight sessions of the conference have been held since the arrival of the missions at Portsmouth, one week ago, and all but one of these has been as long as two hours. Outside the sessions every one connected with the work has continuous and taxing occupation with but few hours for rest and practically none for recreation. The envoys have breakfast before 9 o'clock; they are in the navy yard before 10 and with the exception of a brief space for luncheon served in the conference building they stay in session until evening. After this a hurried dinner is served at the hotel and the work of the evening and night begins. Last night for M. Witte and Baron Rosen there was an outside duty and one of almost as much importance as peace between Russia and Japan, namely, the consideration of the question of the amelioration of the condition of the Jews in Russia, with a delegation of the eminent American Hebrews. During this time the Japanese envoys were busily engaged in their quarters in bringing their records up to date, in the preparation of cablegrams and in getting ready for the next day.

An idea of the volume of cables which are daily sent to Europe and the far East may be had from the statement that Sunday one cable company handled $19,000 worth of business, including dispatches from both Russian and Japanese peacemakers, from its headquarters here.

Both sides are very keen in the matter of their facilities for communication. The heavy tax on the local telephone wires made it impossible for them to get quick service between the hotel and their conference rooms in the navy yard and complaint was made, with the result that Secretary Peirce had two direct phone systems installed between these points, one for the Russians and one for the Japanese. The exclusive use of the navy yard, so far as civilians are concerned, is still possessed absolutely by the members of the peace commission. Yesterday, in addition to the regular guard of marines which from the first was placed over the naval stores building, a detail of secret service men was added. These surrounded the building and kept constant watch throughout the session.

IMMIGRANT HAS COMPLAINT

On the Way He Was Held Up at Ellis Island.

Dayton, Ohio, Aug. 15.—Christian Tschabrun, a native of the Tyrol, Austria, has arrived in Dayton to join his family after an experience with the immigration laws he did not expect. When Tschabrun arrived he was detained at Ellis island, apparently on account of his age, for he had $1,200 in money and was to join his family, who are well-to-do here. He sent word here, and his daughter, Mrs. Zengle, and Anton Amann, a newspaper reporter, hurried to New York.

On their arrival they found the old gentleman undergoing a hearing of his protest against deportation. The protest was overruled and Amann filed an appeal, which was forwarded to the department of labor and commerce. The Daytonians were finally informed that Tschabrun would be allowed to land under a bond of $1,000, secured by real estate, the deeds for which must be filed in the office of the immigration commissioner. This could not be secured in New York and time was not allowed Amann to come to Dayton. Finally Tschabrun enlisted the sympathy of two members of the Catholic Gesellenverein in New York, one of whom put up as security a deed for a 28-story building and the other a deed for land worth $250,000. Tschabrun was liberated and allowed to come to Dayton.

Amann asserts that 450 immigrants were held in a comparatively small, ill-ventilated and scantily lighted detention room at New York with Tschabrun and suffered privations for twelve days. He says there were no tables or chairs in the room, and all had to sleep on the cement floor or stand up all the time, there being no other alternative, the only freedom being that given when taken to their meals.

BUYS ALL THE RADIUM IN SIGHT

New York Chemist Says He Cornered Market In Europe.

New York, Aug. 15.—That he had purchased while in Europe during the last three months all of the available radium of the best quality, was the assertion made by Hugo Lieber, a chemist of this city, upon his return on the steamship Moltke. Mr. Lieber is well-known because of his connection with the experiments made at Flower hospital last year, when several cases of cancer were treated by the surgeons of that institution by the radium cure.

"I saw the records of the cures of seventy or eighty cases of cancer by radium treatment," said Mr. Lieber, "and of these forty were lupse. Whether these cures are permanent can only be determined after a lapse of two years. At present they seem little short of wonderful. In September there will be a world's fair in Belgium, at which there will be a congress of the radiologists of the world."

Mr. Lieber visited M. Curie, the discoverer of radium, at his home in the Boulevard Kellerman, Paris. How much radium he had purchased Mr. Lieber declined to say.

SOMNAMBULIST

Hides Her Own Purse and Then Notifies the Police.

Cincinnati, Aug. 15.—A peculiar example of what strange things people subject to sleep-walking will do came to the notice of the police. Mrs. Frank Tomlinson of 41 Corry street, when she returned home Thursday night placed her purse, containing $115, on a table near the bed, and retired. In the morning her purse had disappeared. She could not remember anything about it. She reported the matter to the Corryville police, but there was no evidence of burglars having entered the house during the night. An officer made a careful search of the premises, but could discover no evidence of robbery. Later in the day a telephone message came to the police from Mrs. Tomlinson, stating she had found the purse in a cupboard in her room.

She is a somnambulist, and she said that during the night she got up in her sleep and hid the purse.

CESSION OF RAILROAD TO THE CHINESE CAUSES AN EARNEST ARGUMENT

Discussion of the Article Likely to Take All Day.

The Road Runs South From Harbin to Port Arthur.

Probable That Russia Is Prepared to Give Up Road.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 16.—The morning session of the peace envoys of Russia and Japan today ended at 1 o'clock. During the entire time the discussion was on Article 7, which refers to the cession of the China Eastern railroad to China.

The following statement of the conference was made by Mr. Korotevetz at the close of the morning session:

"In the morning sitting of Aug. 16, the conference has taken up the discussion of Article 7. The discussion not having been finished, the conference has taken a recess at 1 o'clock. The session will be resumed at 3 o'clock."

The exchange of views this morning was of a very earnest character, and it is expected that the discussion of Article 7 will consume all of the afternoon session. Indeed, at the time the envoys adjourned for luncheon they were not at all certain that they would be able to complete the discussion today.

The article before the envoys today, covering the question of cession to China of the Chinese Eastern railway, which runs south from Harbin to Port Arthur and Dalny, with a spur to Newchwang, where it connects with the Shanhai Kwan-Tien Tsin road, was conditionally accepted by the Russian reply, but agreement to it was bound up with consideration involving the fate of the whole negotiations, and it is certain to lead to long and earnest discussion. Russia will not admit the Japanese contention that the road is wholly a government institution, as all the shares of the railroad corporation are owned by the Russo-Chinese bank. The government's interest in the road, however, will probably not be denied, but it will be urged that so far as it is private property, it is not confiscable. The Russian contention will be backed up by evidence. Mr. Berg, the vice director and attorney of the Russo-Chinese bank, while here attached to the mission as one of M. Witte's secretaries, is also here to protect the interests of the bank. Nevertheless, in the long run, Russia, it can be regarded as certain, is prepared to give up the road, remunerating the Russo-Chinese bank if necessary, as with the loss of Port Arthur and Dalny, and the evacuation of Manchuria, its raison d'etre for strategic and military purposes ceases. Its surrender to China, however, involves a large monetary profit for Japan.

WET WEATHER

Makes Envoys' Trips to Navy Yard Disagreeable.

Portsmouth, Aug. 16.—The Japanese envoys, after a trip from Newcastle in an uncovered motor car, though a cold rain prevailed, arrived at the navy yard at 9:40 today. The Russian commissioners reached there a few minutes afterward. It is understood that the subject to be considered today was No. 7 of the peace conditions, which is the one relating to the cession of the Chinese Eastern railroad to China.

Beginning today the peace envoys are to be served with breakfast in their dining room at the naval stores building, at the navy yard. Heretofore a luncheon and afternoon tea had been served in the dining room, and the arrangement had proved very attractive.

The menu for breakfast is printed in French, and sets forth an array of dishes calculated to please appetites of the widest variety.

Breakfast will be ready each morning at 9:30 o'clock, and it is the intention to have the meal concluded so that the conference may begin by 10. The trip of the envoys from the hotel to the navy yard this morning was very disagreeable, on account of the steady, chilling rain, to which the Japanese representatives in their open automobile were exposed.

BACK TO BARBARISM

Return of Manchuria to China Means, Says Russian.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 16.—Alexandre S. Briantchaninoff, correspondent of the St. Petersburg Slovo, writing on the questions involved in the surrender of the Eastern Chinese railway, which is being considered by the peace conference today and also regarding the general question of the restoration of Chinese sovereignty in the province, says:

"Notwithstanding the secrecy so strictly observed regarding the discussion of the peace conference, it is now known that the second article discussed concerned the question of returning Manchuria to China and that the article has been agreed upon. So it is understood that Manchuria is going to be restored under the charming administration of China. For fear of Russia's enlargement she has been pre-

CHINKS ARE ANXIOUS TO RAISE BOYCOTT

Viceroy of Nanking Appointed to Try to Suppress Movement.

Shanghai, Aug. 16.—The Chinese foreign board has named Chou Fu, the viceroy of Nanking, to make every effort to suppress the boycott which has now been extended to English goods, imported, it is supposed, by an American firm.

Chinese merchants have asked the general chamber of commerce to assist them to suppress the movement, fearing that serious financial troble will result. Much of the trade of Shanghai is already being transferred to Tien-sin, where Gen. Yuan Shi Kai, viceroy of Pechili, has prohibited the boycott.

NINE SWINDLERS TAKEN FROM A BROWNSTONE FRONT HOUSE

New York, Aug. 16.—Having been informed that a band of swindlers, posing as wire tappers, had netted a large sum by the familiar confidence method of pretending to hold back race results going by wire to pool rooms, the police have raided a brownstone front house, handsomely furnished, in West Forty-fifth street. Nine men, alleged to be members of the gang, were arrested. Eight of the prisoners already had their pictures in the rogue's gallery.

Police reserves were called out to help in the charge on the building. Officers climbed up the front and entered by the parlor window. Eleven men were within and they made a wild dash to escape. On the wall of one room was found a telephone, which appeared to have been in use for months. A telegraph instrument in the corner was merely a blind while the walls were covered with racing charts.

All of the prisoners were stylishly dressed, and the majority of them weer elderly, gray haired men, who looked like prosperous brokers. They chaffed the police, and declared they would be set free in short order, but were locked up for the night.

Many complaints have been made by persons swindled through the wire-tapping game, one man having lost $50,000 a few months ago.

CLERGYMAN WILL TRY TO GET SIGN FROM MAN WHO IS HANGED

New York, Aug. 16.—To strengthen his argument against capital punishment, the Rev Emila Murry, pastor of the Second Reformed church, Jersey City, who will witness the execution of Edward Tapley, a negro wife murderer, in the Hudson county jail on Friday. Mr. Murry contends there is consciousness after the body of a condemned man leaves the platform, and he declares that a man who was hanged in Jersey City, four years ago, gave a signal after the drop fell, showing consciousness, although his neck was broken. If Tapley gives similar signs after hanging, Mr. Murry will appear before the legislature next winter and ask for abolition of capital punishment.

ROBBER HOLDS UP THREE STAGES

Fresno, Cal., Aug. 16.—Meager details of the daring robbery by a highwayman of the Yosemite valley stages, running between Raymond and Wawona have reached here. The stages were held up one at a time about three and a half miles below Ahwahnee, a few miles above Grub Gulch. Passengers were relieved of their money. A telegraph message was received here by W. A. Veith from his brother, Anton Veith, Austrian consul at Milwaukee, who was a passenger on the stage coming out of the Yosemite valley. The telegram said: "Stage held up. Robbed of money, but not all."

SAINTS ARE HAPPY

Population of the State Capital Almost Reaches 200,000 Mark.

Ramsey County Has 206,330 People, a Gain of 35,776.

St. Paul, Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—The official census figures for St. Paul and Ramsey county were announced today by F. G. Warner, census supervisor for the city and county:

The total population of St. Paul is 197,025.

There are in Ramsey county, 206,330.

This is a most gratifying increase in the population of the city and county.

	1905	1900.
St. Paul	197,025	163,065
Ramsey county	206,330	170,554

It will be seen that the increase in St. Paul in the five years is 33,960, or 21 per cent. The increase for the county is 35,776.

PRAISE FOR NEGROES

President Writes Letter to National Negro Business League.

He Wishes Their Organization All the Success Possible.

New York, Aug. 16.—At today's meeting of the National Negro Business league, Secretary Emmet J. Scott read the following letter from President Roosevelt:

Oyster Bay, Aug. 12, 1905.

My Dear Mr. Scott:

I wish all success to the National Negro Business league. Your organization is absolutely out of politics; and is stimulating activity among your people and working to increase their efficiency in the industrial world it is also doing far reaching work in the way of giving sibilities as citizens and power to meet these responsibilities. I need hardly say that I put moral betterment above physical betterment. But it is absolutely impossible to do good work in promoting the spiritual improvement of any race unless there is a foundation of material well being, by this foundation necessarily implies that the race has developed the root qualities of thrift, energy and business sense. It is as true of a race as of an individual that while outsiders can help to a certain degree, yet the real help must come in the shape of self help. The success of your organization and the development among our colored fellow citizens of the very qualities for which you stand will mean more for the solution of the race problem than any philanthropic efforts merefy from outside could possibly do.

Wishing you all success, I am sincerely yours,

THEODORE ROOSEVELT.

FINANCIAL CRISIS DUE

Berlin Banker Fears Serious Monetary Trouble In China.

San Francisco, Aug. 16.—Carl Beckman, a Berlin banker, a recent arrival here, who has been traveling extensively in China, says that a grave monetary crisis is liable to occur in China before long.

"That country," he goes on to say, "seems to be manipulating its coinage in such a manner as to have less valuable coin circulating side by side with one more valuable, and according to a well known economic law, the less valuable medium is likely to drive out he more valuable one and cause a financial depression.

"Therefore the 'cash,' a copper coin in value equal to about one-twelfth of the American cent, has been the chief coin in circulation, but recently there has been an extensive mintage of a coin called the 'centus;' it is equal to about ten 'cash.' Of the latter fully 1,000,000,000 were coined last year while the mintage of the 'cash' has not been increased. Now, while the value of the 'centus' is nominally about ten times that of the 'cash' its intrinsic value is not nearly so much larger and I fear that the less valuable intrinsically, of the two coins, will drive out the other coin. I doubt if the industrial strength of China is such as to make it prepared to substitute such a unit of money as the 'cent' for the less valuable unit, on which all transactions have been based in the past."

SERIOUS CRIME CHARGED.

Fergus Falls, Minn., Aug. 16.—H. L. Watkins, who was until recently in the hotel business in New York Mills, was brought to this city yesterday to answer to a charge in incest. He has been bound over to the grand jury here.

INTERNATIONAL FIRE FIGHTERS HOLD ANNUAL CONVENTION IN DULUTH

CHIEF W. R. JOYNER OF ATLANTA, GA., President of International Association of Fire Engineers.

Several Hundred Delegates In Attendance at Thirty-Third Gathering.

Business Sessions Are Begun—List of Those Here.

The thirty-third annual convention the International Association of Engineers began this morning with the meeting at the Armory. A very large number of chiefs are in attendance, and the greater number of them have their wives along. At the opening session today the women and the men occupied the floor. The rostrum was occupied by the president of the association, Chief W. R. Joyner of Atlanta, Ga.; Chief John T. Black of Duluth; Rev. M. S. Rice of the First Methodist church; Mayor Marcus B. Cullum; Theodore Hollister, president of the fire board; E. L. Millar, Maj. H. B. Eva, secretary of the Duluth Commercial club; H. B. Knudsen, Alderman Tessman, Alderman Waugh, Chief of Police Troyer and Frank W. Helmick.

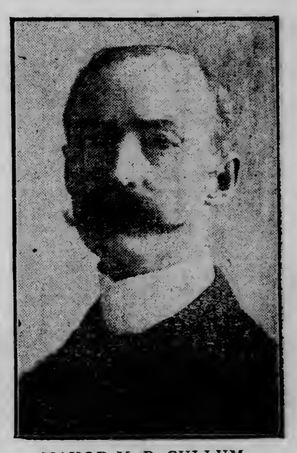

Preceding the gathering at the Armory, the chiefs gathered at the Spalding hotel, where the Third Regiment band, a platoon of police, in command of Lieut. Drennan, and a detail of firemen from the central fire hall, in command of Capt. Dunbar, formed and headed the procession of chiefs, which filed out of the lobby of the hotel and marched to the Armory, a good many of the ladies following in carriages.

At the Armory the police and firemen formed parallel lines, through which the visiting chiefs marched, the firemen and patrolmen saluting as they passed. While the gathering was getting settled the Third Regiment band played several lively airs, and was liberally applauded.

The meeting was called to order by Chief John Black of Duluth, who introduced Rev. M. S. Rice. Mr. Rice invoked the blessing of Providence on the gathering, saying that it was a convention of men whose life's work and total interest is wrapped up in the great work of protecting human life and industry, offering, even, if need be, their lives in the cause. The convention stood during the invocation.

Mayor Cullum was then introduced to welcome the chiefs in behalf of the city. Said he:

"When asked to address this convention of firemen this morning I

"It has been thought best to deliver this welcome in sections. The Rev. Dr. Rice, by his appearance, will advise you that, perhaps, it is better for you to do your fighting of fire while yet on earth ("Amen," interjected Mr. Rice, amid laughter.) Mr. Hollister of the fire board will extend the welcome of the department. Mr. Millar, the 'old man eloquent' of the Comercial club will deliver you the commercial greetings of our city, and possibly deliver the bouquets.

"Now to the ladies: The Almighty early realized that it was not good for man to be alone, and so from all the lovely things on earth he took the loveliest part and created woman. I must confess that we of Duluth would view with some alarm the coming of so many gentlemen unaccompanied by their wives, and to these wives we say, that if in the course of the convention it becomes necessary for your husbands to convene in secret session, all the handsome men in Duluth will endeavor to be your most agreeable servants.

ALL FRICTION AT NEW ORLEANS HAS CEASED

Physicians Are Assisting Hospital Service In Fever Cases.

New Orleans, Aug. 16.—The fact that the physicians are now assisting the marine hospital service in turning up all the existing cases of yellow fever is evidenced in an examination of the report for the past twenty-four hours. Of the sixty-two cases, thirty were reported by doctors as having come within their practice. Of the other thirty-two, Inspector Perkins produced nineteen cases of yellow fever and cases presenting symptoms thereof, two were returned by the ward organizations, two by the city board of health, five by the emergency hospital and four by the charity hospital. Any friction that has heretofore existed has passed away and perfect harmony exists in the work. The total number of cases treated in the emergency hospital to date is 236, of which number thirty-six have died. Three cases of yellow fever have been taken from the steamship Sappize at quarantine. The vessel was from Colon.

The first case where there has been the refusal of a householder to permit fumigating of a patient's room has resulted in the quarantine of a house in the downtown district.

As soon as it was reported to Dr. White that the fumigating and screening squads had been refused permission to enter he appealed to Inspector Whitaker, who ordered policemen on duty to prevent egress or ingress. An affidavit will follow. Two ambulance cases of fever have been found in an Esplade avenue saloon. The victims are Italians. It was found the men had been at Bayou Sale on the Southern Pacific road.

Quarantine improves in some directions and grows worse at others. At Monroe, a conflict arose between a citizens meeting and the authorities. The citizens in a sudden spasm of alarm desired to restore the shotgun quarantine. Mayor Forsythe objected and ordered the military to hold themselves in readiness. Appeal was made to the governor, who said the orders of the state board of health must be followed or soldiers would be mobilized. The citizens yielded.

If the entire city responds to the appeal for sulphur fumigation on Sunday, it is estimated that 300 tons or 600,000 pounds will be consumed.

CONFERENCE FOR RECIPROCITY MEETS

Chicago, Aug. 16.—The national reciprocity convention conference began a two-days' session today at the Illinois theater. Six hundred delegates from all parts of the country have assembled to discuss reciprocal trade relations with other countries, amendment of the Dingley tariff law, alterations of the interstate commerce law, and kindred matters.

The West sent a large delegation, the great stock raising and farming industries of the West being especially well represented. Manufacturers from the Eastern states are also well represented at the conference.

A notable feature of the conference was the attendance of general consuls resident in Chicago, representing nearly every country in the world. The conference was called to order at 10:15 o'clock this morning by D. S. Sanders of Chicago, who said:

The establishment of fairer trade relations with foreign nations is a matter that affects directly the prosperity of every farmer, stock grower and exporter in the United States. One by one, the European governments are tightenng the coils intended to strangle the American export trade in agricultural products and afford goods. We are today face to face with a new and prohibitive German tariff designed to keep out every pound of American breadstuffs and provisions. Retaliation has been tried at tremendous cost to our producers and manufacturers and is a failure. The long roll of delegates attending this convention, it seems to me, supplies proof at once convincing and complete that there is a real demand from the business interests of this country for congressional attention to the needs of our foreign commerce.

The committee of arrangements has endeavored to make this conference absolutely non-partisan. Moreover, we have no pet plan of bringing about the desired results. We distinctly disclaim any attack on the protective tariff principle, or upon any particular interest.

We believe that our great basic industry, agriculture, the backbone of all our prosperity, cannot safely be neglected further, and that its welfare at this juncture can be assured by suitable congressional action which will not be a detriment to any other legitimate American industry. It is idle to say that nothing can be done. Where there is a will there is a way.

MAYOR GOT AWAY WITH $117,000

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 16.—Public Prosecutor Emily of this city has evidence that Mayor Belcher, for whom a warrant for embezzlement has been issued, sailed from San Francisco Sunday. With the co-operation of the federal and state governments which Mr. Emily has already asked, he hopes to arrest the fugitive when the steamer touches at Honolulu. The authorities at Honolulu have been notified and are on the lookout for him.

The defalcation with which the mayor is charged is now estimated to amount to about $117,000.

CESSION OF RAILROAD TO THE CHINESE CAUSES AN EARNEST ARGUMENT

Discussion of the Article Likely to Take All Day.

The Road Runs South From Harbin to Port Arthur.

Probable That Russia Is Prepared to Give Up Road.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 16.—The morning session of the peace envoys of Russia and Japan today ended at 1 o'clock. During the entire time the discussion was on Article 7, which refers to the cession of the China Eastern railroad to China.

The following statement of the conference was made by Mr. Korotovetz at the close of the morning session:

"In the morning sitting of Aug. 16, the conference has taken up the discussion of Article 7. The discussion not having been finished, the conference has taken a recess at 1 o'clock. The session will be resumed at 3 o'clock."

The exchange of views this morning was of a very earnest character, and it is expected that the discussion of Article 7 will consume all of the afternoon session. Indeed, at the time the envoys adjourned for luncheon they were not at all certain that they would be able to complete the discussion today.

The article before the envoys today, covering the question of cession to China of the Chinese Eastern railway, which runs south from Harbin to Port Arthur and Dalny, with a spur to Newchwang, where it connects with the Shanhai Kwan-Tien Tsin road, was conditionally accepted by the Russian reply, but agreement to it was bound up with consideration involving the fate of the whole negotiations, and it is certain to lead to long and earnest discussion. Russia will not admit the Japanese contention that the road is merely a government institution, as all the shares of the railroad corporation are owned by the Russo-Chinese bank. The government's interest in the road, however, will probably not be denied, but it will be urged that so far as it is private property, it is not confiscable. The Russian contention will be backed up by evidence. Mr. Berg, the vice director and attorney of the Russo-Chinese bank, while here attached to the mission as one of M. Witte's secretaries, is also here to protect the interests of the bank. Nevertheless, in the long run, Russia, it can be regarded as certain, is prepared to give up the road, remunerating the Russo-Chinese bank if necessary, as with the loss of Port Arthur and Dalny, and the evacuation of Manchuria, its raison d'etre for strategic and military purposes ceases. Its surrender to China, however, involves a large monetary profit for Japan.

WET WEATHER

Makes Envoys' Trips to Navy Yard Disagreeable.

Portsmouth, Aug. 16.—The Japanese envoys, after a trip from Newcastle in an uncovered motor car, though a cold rain prevailed, arrived at the navy yard at 9:46 today. The Russian commissioners reached there a few minutes afterward. It is understood that the subject to be considered today was No. 7 of the peace conditions, which is the one relating to the cession of the Chinese Eastern railroad to China.

Beginning today the peace envoys are to be served with breakfast in their dining room at the naval stores building, at the navy yard. Heretofore a luncheon and afternoon tea had been served in the dining room, and the arrangement had proved very attractive.

The menu for breakfast is printed in French, and sets forth an array of dishes calculated to please appetites of the widest variety.

Breakfast will be ready each morning at 9:30 o'clock, and it is the intention to have the meal concluded so that the conference may begin by 10. The trip of the envoys from the hotel to the navy yard this morning was very disagreeable, on account of the steady, chilling rain, to which the Japanese representatives in their open automobile were exposed.

BACK TO BARBARISM

Return of Manchuria to China Means, Says Russian.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 16.—Alexandre S. Briantchaninoff, correspondent of the St. Petersburg Slovo, writing on the questions involved in the surrender of the Eastern Chinese railway, which is being considered by the peace conference today and also regarding the general question of the restoration of Chinese sovereignty in the province, says:

"Notwithstanding the secrecy so strictly observed regarding the discussion of the peace conference, it is now known that the second article discussed concerned the question of returning Manchuria to China and that the article has been agreed upon. So it is understood that Manchuria is going to be restored under the charming administration of China. For fear of Russia's enlargement she has been pre-

CHINKS ARE ANXIOUS TO RAISE BOYCOTT

Viceroy of Nanking Appointed to Try to Suppress Movement.

Shanghai, Aug. 16.—The Chinese foreign board has named Chou Fu, the viceroy of Nanking, to make every effort to suppress the boycott which has now been extended to English goods, imported, it is supposed, by an American firm.

Chinese merchants have asked the general chamber of commerce to assist them to suppress the movement, fearing that serious financial troble will result. Much of the trade of Shanghai is already being transferred to Tien-sin, where Gen. Yuan Shi Kai, viceroy of Pechill, has prohibited the boycott.

Retaliation has been tried at tremendous cost to our producers and manufacturers and is a failure. The long roll of delegates attending this convention, it seems to me, supplies proof at once convincing and complete that there is a real demand from the business interests of this country for congressional attention to the needs of our foreign commerce.

The committee of arrangements has endeavored to make this conference absolutely non-partisan. Moreover, we have no pet plan of bringing about the desired results. We distinctly disclaim any attack on the protective tariff principle, or upon any particular interest.

We believe that our great basic industry, agriculture, the backbone of all our prosperity, cannot safely be neglected further, and that its welfare at this juncture can be assured by suitable congressional action which will not be a detriment to any other legitimate American industry. It is idle to say that nothing can be done. Where there is a will there is a way.

MAYOR GOT AWAY WITH $117,000

Paterson, N. J., Aug. 16.—Public Prosecutor Emily of this city has evidence that Mayor Belcher, for whom a warrant for embezzlement has been issued, sailed from San Francisco Sunday. With the co-operation of the federal and state governments which Mr. Emily has already asked, he hopes to arrest the fugitive when the steamer touches at Honolulu. The authorities at Honolulu have been notified and are on the lookout for him.

The defalcation with which the mayor is charged is now estimated to amount to about $117,000.

THE BENJAMIN DRAKE FIGHT SETTLED AT LAST.

New York, Aug. 16.—The great Benjamin Drake fight has been settled, according to the World, and the property will be divided at once. It was valued ten years ago at $6,000,000 and has been the subject of much litigation. Dr. Austin Drake of Springfield, Ill., is now on the way to this city, and, it is understood, will receive $3,000,000 as his share of the estate.

The estate was left to two sons by their father, a grocery man for many years in this city. Both sons died intestate and the estate reverted to a long list of collateral heirs living mainly in the West. It is stated that all the litigants have now managed to agree and the matter was settled out of court.

R. R. COMMISSIONERS MEET AT DEADWOOD.

Deadwood, S. D., Aug. 16.—The national railway commissioners arrived in this city at noon today, having left Omaha at 2 p. m. yesterday. Preparations have been made for the accommodation of at least 200 guests, and both Lead and Deadwood are united in doing everything possible to make the meeting an unqualified success. A reception will be given to the visitors this evening, and on Thursday, through the courtesy of Mr. Grier, they will be shown through the mills, cyride plants and hoists of the Homestake company.

HANDSOME GIFT

L. P. Highmark Presents Swedish Mission Church With Two Lots.

Mr. and Mrs. Highmark Celebrate Their Silver Anniversary.

The announcement of the gift of two lots on Fifty-ninth avenue west and Green street to the Swedish Mission church by L. P. Highmark comes as a surprise and delight to Rev. K. E. Forsell and his congregation. The lots were purchased recently by Mr. Highmark with the view of loaning them to the church until such time as they were able to purchase them outright. After due consideration, Mr. Highmark decided to present them to the church free from all incumbrances.

Rev. Mr. Forsell states that it is the intention to move the church, which is now located at Sixtieth avenue and Cody street to the new site. The old building will be placed on the rear of the grounds and remodeled for use as a Sunday school room and social hall while an entirely new edifice, much larger than the old, will be erected for the church proper. The financial condition of the mission is in good condition and it is the congregation's hope that the contemplated changes can be accomplished in the near future.

SILVER ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Highmark Celebrate.

A pleasing event in social and church circles was the celebration last evening of the silver wedding of Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Highmark at their residence, 221 North Sixty-third avenue west.

During the evening they were presented with a handsome silver coffee service and two silver candlesticks of exquisite design. The presentation speech was made by Rev. Knute E. Forsell of the West Duluth Swedish Mission. The coffee service bore the inscription: "To Mr. and Mrs. L. P. Highmark on Their Twenty-fifth Anniversary, From Their Children and Friends." Mr. Highmark responded to and extended his thanks to the donors. Mr. Highmark surprised and delighted the guests with the announcement that he would give to the Swedish Mission church two lots on Fifty-ninth avenue and Green street.

During the evening an impromptu musical and a literary program was given. Those participating were Rev. F. A. Kling of the West end Swedish Mission, Prof. A. E. Anderson, Charles Schell, P. Gilluson and F. O. Gustafson. The last named rendered Carl Boberg's celebrated and appropriate poem "A Silver Anniversary."

TRAGEDY AT ANGUS

May Result In a Charge of Murder.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 16.—At the preliminary examination of Frank Taus of Angus on the charge of shooting Fac McLennen of that place, the case was adjourned, or continued until Aug. 21, in order to determine the charge which shall be preferred. If Mr. McLennen, who is in St. Vincent hospital now with a bullet in his back and a hole through his left lung, should survive, the charge will be that of assault with a deadly weapon, but in case McLennen dies the charge will be murder, premeditated and intended.

Mr. McLennen, the victim of the shooting, is hovering between life and death, and until today or tomorrow nothing definite in regard to his recovery can be given out.

BUSH RELEASED

From Jail Only to Be Re-arrested.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 16.—The county attorney's office did not appear in Judge Bourquin's court when a petition for a writ of habeas corpus, made in behalf of Jay Cross Bush of Kent, Minn., was called for hearing.

Bush is the aged claimant of the famous Colbert estate, who was locked in the county jail a few weeks ago on a charge of perjury, it being alleged that he had sworn falsely in order to cheat his brothers and sisters and other relatives out of their share of the $50,000 estate.

Habeas corpus proceedings were begun in behalf of the old man last Saturday by Attorney B. S. Thresher. As there was no opposition to the application, Judge Bourquin granted it, and Bush was ordered released from custody.

He was arrested immediately, however, on a complaint charging him with vagrancy, sworn to by a constable. Bush was arraigned on the charge immediately in Justice Devy's court. Pending the trial he was released on $15 cash bail, that being the amount of money found on him when he was picked up in an exhausted condition recently while wandering around aimlessly in the mountains near Butte, following his exposure by his brother.

Railroads.

BUSINESS LARGE

Railroads Breaking Records In Number of People Handled.

North West Also Breaks Her Passenger Carrying Record.

Railroad and steamship lines entering Duluth are this year breaking all previous records in the number of tourists carried to and from the Head of the Lakes. Never in the history of the town have so many outsiders visited Duluth in so short a space of time, and they are still arriving in undiminished numbers.

Most of the railroads have found it necessary to add extra equipment to care for the traffic, and so extensive is the travel that berth reservations are being made in many instances a week ahead, in spite of the fact of the extra equipment. This morning, for instance, all but four or five berths on the Omaha Duluth-Chicago train had been engaged for Saturday. The Omaha brought in three extra sleepers from Chicago yesterday, and every few days it is found necessary to add extras. It is much the same with the other roads.

The steamer North West brought in a record-breaking number of passengers last evening. On the list there were 400 names. In all her seasons on the lake, this is the greatest number of people ever carried on the boat on a single trip. Nearly one-fourth of the passengers consisted of members of one of the Raymond Whitcomb parties, on a personally conducted tour of the West. A special train over the Northern Pacific left at 10 o'clock last night with the party for the West. The Anchor line boats are also bringing in large numbers of tourists.

All of the four leading hotels of the city have been doing a rushing business since the season opened, and frequently they have been compelled to run guests away for lack of room. The smaller hotels and numerous boarding houses, however, have been well able to handle the overflow.

NOT MANY GOING.

Harvest Tickets Are Not In Great Demand.

It is estimated that the entire number of men taking advantage of the special harvest railroad rates and leaving Duluth for the western harvest fields this year will be less than 600, a compared to 2,000 in some other seasons. The demand for men in the West is just as great as it has ever been in the past, but there is so much work at good wages in this vicinity that many of the men do not care to leave their old positions for the new.

The scarcity of harvest hands in St. Paul and Minneapolis is, just about as marked, owing to the large amount of railroad work being done west of the Twin Cities. Many of the laborers who hire out to the railroads leave their positions after they have been shipped West, and start work in the harvest fields. The Great Northern and Soo roads have established rival employment offices in the Twin Cities, and are offering free fare, with no employment agency fee, to all men who will agree to go to the Dakotas and work on the new construction contracts. The roads count on only comparatively few of the men thus hired remaining with them, the harvest fields proving too strong an inducement to the remainder.

Some of the logging companies are now offering $35 a month and board for sawyers. In addition to the railroad and woods work, orders have been received by the National Employment company for men to work in the lignite coal fields of North Dakota.

C. & H. OFFICERS

May Now Buy Stock In Other Mining Companies.

Boston, Aug. 16.—The stockholders of the Calumet & Hecla Mining company, at their annual meeting today, voted to amend the by-laws so as to permit Calumet & Hecla officers and directors to buy and sell shares of other mining companies. The new offices of second and third vice presidents were created, and Quincy A. Shaw and R. L. Agassiz were chosen respectively to fill the positions.

At the meeting announcement was made that the company—having acquired 20,000 acres of mineral land in Michigan, would form two new companies, the Frontenac and the Manitou, for the purpose of exploring the land. The stockholders voted to turn over part of the holdings of the Calumet & Hecla company to the new companies. The old officers and board of directors were re-elected.

The amendment to the by-laws adopted authorizes the officers and directors "to subscribe for, purchase, acquire, or dispose of stock in any other company organized for the purpose of mining, refining, smelting or manufacturing any or all kinds of ore, minerals or metals." A regular quarterly dividend of $10 per share was declared.

WHEN YOU ARE BILIOUS, it is a sign that your liver is out of order, and the poisonous bile, instead of being excreted from the body through the intestines, is taken up in the blood. MYSTERIES OF LIFE

Remain as Impenetrable as Ever, Says Professor Darwin.

Interesting Address Delivered to British Association at Capetown.

Capetown, Aug. 16.—The members of the British association arrived here yesterday and at their first session last night President George Howard Darwin delivered an address.

President Darwin, illustrating in the outset the augmentation of man's power over the forces of nature during the past four centuries, recalled the fact that Barthulomeu Diaz, the discoverer of the Cape of Storms, spent sixteen months on his voyage, while a ship of 13,000 tons had just brought his hearers there, in safety and luxury, in little more than a fortnight. If today was less romantic, the lot of man was easier for he had inherited the accumulated endowment of centuries of genius and labor. Scarcely a year passed without some new marvel of discovery or invention, and the rate at which the development of knowledge proceeded seemed truly astonishing; but from a wider point of view the scale of time was relatively unimportant, for the universe was leisurely in its procedure. It must always be profoundly interesting to trace successive cause and effect in the chain of events which make up the history of the earth and to speculate on the origin and future of animals, planets, suns and stars. He would, therefore, try to set forth some of the attempts which had been made to formulate evolutionary speculation. This choice of a subject had been almost on him by the scope of his own scientific work and was, he thought, justified by the name he bore. A belief in the gradual and orderly transformation of nature, both animate and inanimate, was of great antiquity, but until recently theories of evolution in both realms of nature, were partial and discontinuous, and the chains of facts were correspondingly short and disconnected. At length the theory of natural selection, by formulating the cause of the divergence of forms in the organized world from the parental stock, furnished the naturalist with a clue by which he examined the disordered mass of facts before him, and he was thus enabled to go far in deducing order where chaos had ruled before, but the problem of reducing the heap to perfect order would probably baffle the ingenuity of the investigator forever. So illuminating had been this new idea that thousands of new facts had been brought to light and strung in due order on the necklace of knowledge. It was not his object nor was he competent to examine the extent to which the theory of natural selection had needed modification since it was first formulated by his father and Wallace. But he was justified in maintaining that the general principle held its place firmly as a permanent acquisition to modes of thought. Evolutionary doctrines concerning inanimate nature, although of much older date than those which concern life, had been profoundly affected by this great impulse, and the origin and history of the chemical elements and of stellar systems now occupied a far larger space in the scientific mind than was formerly the case. The mystery of life remained as impenetrable as ever His point of view was illustrated by a reference to political history. The degree of persistence or permanence of a species, of a configuration of matter, or of a state depended on the perfection of its adaptation to its surrounding conditions. If they traced the history of a state they found the degree of its stability gradually changing, slowly rising to a maximum, and then slowly declining. When it fell to nothing a revolution ensued and a new form of government was established. The physicist, like the biologist and the historian, watched the effect of slowly varying external conditions; he saw the quality of persistence or stability gradually decaying until it vanished, when there ensued what was called in politics a revolution. These considerations led him to doubt whether biologists had been correct in looking for continuous transformation of species. Judging by analogy, they should rather expect to find slight continuous changes occurring during a long period of time followed by a somewhat sudden transformation into a new species, or by rapid extinction. The time scale in the transmutation of species of animals was furnished by the geological record, although it was not possible to translate that record into years. The time needed for a change of type in atoms or molecules might be measured by the millionth of a second, while in the history of the stars continuous changes occupied millions of years. Notwithstanding this gigantic contrast in speed the process involved seemed to be essentially the same. The study of stability and instability, then, furnished the problems which the physicist and biologist alike attempted to solve. The fascinating idea that matter of all kinds had a common substratum was of remote antiquity. In the middle ages the alchemists, inspired by this idea, conceived the possibility of transforming the baser metals into gold. Although even the dissociative stage of the alchemistic problem still lay beyond the power of the chemist, yet modern researches seemed to furnish a sufficiently clear idea of the structure of atoms to enable them to see what would have to be done to effect a transformation of elements. Natural selection might seem, at first sight, as remote as the poles asunder, from the idea of the alchemist, yet dissociation and transmutation depended on the instability and regained stability of the atom, and the survival of the stable atom depended on the principle of natural selection. Within the last few years electrical researches had shown that the atom was not indivisible, and a flood of light had been thrown thereby on the ultimate constitution of matter. By various convergent lines of experiment it had been proved that the simplest of all atoms—that of hydrogen—consisted of about 800 separate parts, while the number of parts in the atom of the denser metals must be counted by tens of thousands. These separate parts of the atom had been called corpuscles or electrons, and might be described as particles of negative electricity. The mechanism was as yet obscure whereby the mutual repulsion of the negative corpuscles was restrained from breaking by the atom, but a positive electrical charge, or something equivalent, must exist in the atom, to prevent disruption. The existence in the atom of this community of negative corpuscles was certain, and they knew further that they were moving in speeds which might in some cases be comparable to the velocity of light, namely, 200,000 miles a second. But the mechanism whereby they were held together in a group was hypothetical. It appeared that there were definite arrangements of the orbits in which the corpuscles must revolve, if they were to be persistent or stable in their motions. The corpuscles in one community might make thousands of revolutions before instability declared itself, but it must finally break up, and the corpuscles must disperse or rearrange themselves after the ejection of some of their number. If the elements were not eternal in the past, was there any reason to believe that they would be eternal in the future? Although the conception of the decay of an element and its spontaneous transmutation into another element would have seemed absolutely repugnant to the chemist, until recently, yet analogy with other moving systems seemed to suggest that the elements were not eternal. Thomson conceived that an atom might be constructed after a model he had devised—an electrical miniature planetary system, which was a triumph of mathematical power—that he thought might be made to run for a million years, but it would not be eternal. Such a conclusion was an absolute contradiction to all that was known of the elements until recently, for no symptoms of decay were perceived, and the elements existing in the solar system must already have lasted for millions of years. Nevertheless, there was good reason to believe that in radium, and in other elements possessing very complex atoms, they did actually observe that break-up and spontaneous rearrangement which constituted a transmutation of elements. It was impossible to say how science would solve this difficulty, but future discovery in this field must prove deeply interesting. It might well be that the train of thought he had sketched would ultimately profoundly affect the material side of human life. Communities of atoms possessed every degree of stability. The existence of some was so precarious that the chemist in his laboratory could barely retain them for a moment; others were so stubborn that he could barely break them up. In this case, dissociation and reunion into new forms of communities were incessant and spontaneous progress throughout the world. The more persistent or more stable combinations succeeded in their struggle for life, and were found in vast quantities, as in the cases of common salt and of the combinations of silicon. Stability was further a property of relationship to surrounding conditions; it donated adaptation to environment. Thus, salt was adapted to the struggle for existence on the earth, but it could not withstand the severe condition which existed in the sun.

RECORD BREAKING RAIN IN WEST VIRGINIA

Huntington, W. Va., Aug. 16.—A record breaking thunder storm prevailed in this section during the night, five inches of rain falling in two and one-half hours, according to the records of the government observer. Bridges and culverts were washed out on the country roads, and the railroads suffered from landslides. Growing crops were ruined, and in many instances farm houses were washed away by the flood, their occupants barely escaping.

DEFECTIVE PAGE

MAY REJECT ALL BIDS FOR PAVING

Attorney's Opinion May Put That Course Upon the Board.

Sentiment Changing In Favor of Sandstone and Asphalt.

The prospect now is that all of the bids submitted to the board of public works for paving West Superior street, will be thrown out and new bids called for, and that tar macadam will yield its place as the choice of the property owners to either sandstone or asphalt or a combination of the two.

The meeting held in the office of the board of public works this morning was of an entirely different tone from Monday's meeting. Several property owners who, at the meeting Monday, favored tar macadam, expressed a desire to change their vote to asphalt for the western half of the improvement.

The argument that tar macadam would not be of sufficient durability to stand the wear and tear of a business street, appeared to be the main reason for the change.

Among those who spoke most strongly against the tar macadam were W. B. Silvey, E. P. Alexander, E. P. Towne and Morton Miller, Jr.

David Sang of the board stated that the prospect was that the asphalt bids at least and probably the others would have to be thrown out under the opinion rendered by the city attorney.

"That means that if you choose asphalt it will take at least two weeks longer to advertise for bids and that may mean that the pavement won't be completed this year," said Mr. Sang.

"If the contract is let to the Barber company two weeks from now," said Charles M. Carpenter, the representative of the company, "I will answer for the work being done this fall, if the city will make the street railway company get its work out of the way and not delay us."

The asphalt and sandstone advocates appeared to have combined against the tar macadam adherents, and were apparently agreed that the sandstone blocks should be laid east of Garfield avenue where the heaviest trucking will be, and that asphalt should be laid west of Garfield.

"I have already a petition signed by owners of over 800 feet of property, asking for asphalt," said Mr. Carpenter. "Give me until 4 o'clock and I will bring that up to 1,200 or 1,400 feet. Many of these are people who were at first in favor of tar macadam, or who thought they would only complicate matters by favoring asphalt on Monday."

Mr. Towne also stated that the petition for sandstone blocks should not be passed over as it was on Monday.

"You will find that asphalt has greatly gained in strength on the western half of the improvement," said Mr. Towne. "Sandstone blocks have lost none of their adherents and have gained strength if anything, and whatever gains have been made by asphalt have been made at the expense of tar macadam."

"The board should take time enough to gain a true idea of the real sentiment of the property owners on the question," said Mr. Silvey. "We don't want any unnecessary delay, but at the same time this is a question of our pavement for years to come, and we can't afford to rush it through without due consideration. I do not think we should consider any questions of false economy at the present time and put down a cheap pavement which will not stand the wear and which will have to be replaced within a few years."

Morton Miller called attention to the trouble that is experienced with horses slipping on the East Superior street pavement, and stated that the grade in some parts of the proposed improvement is greater than on East Superior street.

The meeting finally adjourned without action until 4 o'clock this afternoon, when the city attorney's opinion will be submitted, and if it is as expected the board will probably recommend that all bids be rejected. The council will hold a special meeting this evening to consider it, and it is likely that it will order the board to again advertise for bids.

Trout May Be Caught In Minnesota For Fourteen Days Yet.

There is a difference of fifteen days in the trout seasons of Minnesota and Wisconsin. The Wisconsin season closed yesterday, but the Minnesota season still allows the song of the reel to be heard in the land until Sept. 1. The Wisconsin legislature did a lot of freak things last [illegible] but the Minnesota season closed [illegible] thing more than was accomplished in the game laws. That mater is so tangled up that a fisherman in Wisconsin goes along a stream or lake nowadays with his Walton Blackstone in one hand and his rod in the other; for he is likely to be violating some clause at any step.

The season in Wisconsin has been a good one for the fishermen. But they are now bemoaning the fact that the season next year will be shorter than ever. This year and in previous years before the mutilation of game laws, the season opened on April 15 and closed Aug. 15. Next year, however, under the new legal abortion the season will open on May 1, chopping fifteen days off the already too short season. The local game league across the bay have been putting spawn in the creeks of Douglas county this year and it is estimated that many hundred thousand fish will result. A good many of the creeks had been fished out.

The fishing in Minnesota, with fourteen days yet to go has been a good one and most enjoyable. With the heavy rains which have fallen this year heretofore small creeks have developed into good trout streams and some of the catches have been phenomenal. Probably more trout have been eaten by Duluthians this year than in many years before. The beauties were of large size on the average and the streams for the most part have been easier of access than formerly. The season for all other varieties of Minnesota fish extends to March 1, except in the case of black bass when for a short time during the spawning season in the spring bass must not be caught.

Along about this time of the year interest in fishing begins to lag, and the sportsmen turn their attention to thoughts to hunting and spend their spare time in looking up their guns and ammunition and otherwise to making preparations for sport in the fields and woods. Many of them have spotted good huntsession, but made no worse job of anyare now only awaiting the opening of the hunting season to begin. It will be lawful to hunt all varieties of game birds in this state beginning Sept. 1, with the exception of quail, partridge, pheasant and ruffled grouse.

A Valuable Hint.

For 35 years we have maintained the reputation of being the home of the best. It is a theory we have clung to tenaciously, believing that the best was always the cheapest. But more important yet, we sell the best at the price of the other sort. Any advertisement well-worded will sell goods, but to get people in the way of coming back season after season, and leaning on and relying upon every promise and announcement, is the best test of a store's worth.

No experimenting, no guessing at the right thing and that at the right price here.

WOMAN DIES OF BROKEN HEART IN ELLIS ISLAND DETENTION PEN

New York, Aug. 16.—Mrs. Sely Winstock, wife of a plumber living in this city, died a prisoner on Ellis Island Monday night. The doctors say heart disease was the cause, but her husband and friends are making a stormy protest over her detention by the immigration officials and declare that the woman died from a broken heart.

Winstock came to this country from Russia four years ago. He left his wife and three children with his father. Engaging in business on the East side he gradually accumulated money enough to bring them over and also took out citizenship papers recently.

Mrs. Winstock arrived at Ellis Island July 2. Her youngest child had contracted measles during the voyage and was sent to a hospital ashore. The other children were also allowed to land but the mother was held on a report by the examiners that she had heart disease. The husband went to Ellis Island daily and tried to comfort Mrs. Winstock. Meanwhile lawyers were busy and made strong efforts to secure permission for her to land. The matter was finally placed before the bureau in Washington, but no action had been taken when the woman suddenly gave way under the strain and died before her husband could reach the detention pen.

SUIT FOR RECOVERY.

Local Concern Sues Hunter and Belliveau.

Alleging that Andrew J. Hunter and Moses D. Belliveau, formerly in business at Virginia, still owe a balance of $750 on a note and for unpaid rent, the Duluth Brewing & Malting company has brought suit for recovery in district court. The complaint alleges that for valuable consideration Hunter and Belliveau executed a promissory note of $500 on which they were to make monthly payments of $50. It is claimed that only $150 was ever paid. The building occupied by Hunter and Belliveau as Virginia was, according to the complaint, to pay a rental of $200 per month and they are alleged to be $400 in arrears for rent. Baldwin, Baldwin & Daneer represent the brewing company.

Fire

is a hot proposition, whether it is of a destructive or of a constructive nature.

It is a disagreeable thing when it wakes you up at night and chases you out of your comfortable bed into the cold street, while it is really nice when it roasts a good turkey for the festive family table.

But that even the bad sort of fire has its sunny side is shown by this week's convention of the fire chiefs, now in session at Duluth. While they are used to warm receptions and probably came here to cool off, they find us all aflame to help them in having a hot time.

Chief

among the things to keep them comfortable in case of chilly or in warm weather, as the case may be, are the scores of clothing bargains which we are firing out of the store at such low prices because they bear the label of the former proprietor of this big store. We are selling his $15 to $20 suits at $10, and any outing suit (including those made by Stein-Bloch) go at $7.00. HARD LUCK STORY

Young Woman Tries to Work Merchants For Loan

Claims to Be Stranded on Way to Troy, N. Y.

A demure maiden with appealing eyes and a smile that would draw water from a stone, attempted to work a number of Duluth merchants yesterday for the insignificant sum of $10 and failed.

Most of the Duluth merchants were not born yesterday, and while they were willing to aid beauty in distress, the story told by the artful maiden was a little too strong to go down.

According to her hard luck tale she had come from Billings, Mont., and was on her way to Troy, N. Y., where she lived. She had run out of money in Duluth and was stranded here without the price of a meal or a sleeping car ticket. The loan of such an insignificant sum as $10 would tide her over her present financial embarrassment and the money would be promptly returned as soon as she reached Troy.

The tale, and the simple, unaffected manner in which it was told, made a hit at first, but the different merchants instead of promptly coughing as they were expected to do, began to make a few inquiries.

"Where is your ticket to Troy?" asked one of the merchants.

"It's at the depot with my things."

"Wouldn't a dollar or two do as well? That would buy your meals for a day or two."

"Oh, but I don't like to travel without money."

"Well, I don't like to see anybody starve here in Duluth, said the merchant. "You go and get your ticket and bring it back here and show it to me and I'll see that you don't lack the price of your meals while you are getting back to Troy, but I don't like to distribute money around in such a promiscuous manner."

The young lady failed to appear again and it was learned later that she had visited several other stores with the same story, but so far as could be learned she had not secured any money on her hard luck story.

WILL START NEW TOWN

Brookston In Fond Du Lac Reservation Due For Boom.

With the opening of the Fond du Lac reservation it is expected that the town of Brookston, or Stony Brook as it is sometimes called, will undergo quite a building boom. The town was platted about a year ago, in anticipation of the opening of the reservation, and in the past several months it has had a steady and substantial growth in the way of new building enterprises. Located in the heart of the reservation on the Great Northern line from Duluth to Cass Lake, and nearly midway of Cloquet and Floodwood, Brookston is claimed by the land seekers who have been in that vicinity to be the logical location of a thriving town, the base of supplies for a large district which will now be developed into a farming community.

Three or four years ago Brookston was practically a spot in the midst of a forest. The station was an old box car where the telegraph operator attended his duties, part of which was to keep from being eaten up by mosquitoes in the summer, and from being frozen to death in the winter. The railroad company then built a small depot and freight shed to take care of the supplies sent to that point when construction work began on the line from Brookston to Ellis, called the Stony Brook cut-off, a road which shortens materially the ore haul of the Great Northern from the range. Following closely the cut-off line came one or two miles of yard construction at Brookston for switching facilities and passing tracks, a water tank, and coal sheds. One of the things now contemplated by the Great Northern company is said to be a round house at that point.

Quite a number of people followed the construction work, and at Brookston they settled, until there are now over a dozen families living in proximity to the depot, many of them on railroad property.

The platting of the townsite by Duluth and Cass Lake parties has resulted in a few business enterprises locating at Brookston, and it is expected that as the demand grows others will open stores there.

Up to quite recently the settlers either obtained their supplies from Cloquet or Floodwood, or by shipping them in from Duluth.

TO BE SOLD FOR TAXES.

Thousands of Acres to Go Under the Hammer.

St. Paul, Aug. 16.—State Auditor S. G. Iverson has announced that he will sell at public auction this fall in every county in the state thousands of acres of land that has been forfeited for nonpayment of taxes. It will be the first public sale of the kind in the history of Minnesota and will be conducted under a law passed in 1902.

"Many people will wake up some morning next fall and find that their property has been sold for taxes," said Mr. Iverson. "It appears that many do not know there are taxes on the property, for in some cases the taxes are due only for one year two or three decades ago and have been paid promptly for ever year since."

A Two Harbors Complaint.

To the Editor of The Herald:

Allow me to occupy a short space in your valued paper. On May 9, 1905, our little girl, aged 4 years and 5 months, was taken down with measles. On the morning of the 12th our family physician examined her and said her case was nothing serious. A younger child, a boy, aged 1 year and 9 months, was very low with what the doctor pronounced typhoid fever. The doctor said "the children must be kept apart, for if the boy takes the measles he will not last long."

We talked the matter over with the doctor, and he thought the most advisable thing to do would be to employ a trained nurse. We gave our consent, and on that day the doctor 'phoned to a drug store in Duluth for a nurse. She arrived on the afternoon train. A short time after she came she asked me for a woolen blanket. I gave it to her. She then took the child out of her warm bed, removed her night dress and woolen shirt and gave her a sponge bath. Then she wrapped her in a moistened woolen blanket, put her in bed, and had a window near the side of the bed open.

I was greatly alarmed at the treatment, as I had been keeping the little girl very warm. I asked her if that was the way they treated measles at the hospital. She said, "That is the way we treat all fever. We have found out that the main thing in all fever is to keep the temperature down."

When the nurse came the child's temperature was 103 degrees; after she gave this treatment she told me she had lowered the temperature one-half of a degree.

On the morning of the 13th the doctor came, and he also came at 9 o'clock on the evening of the 13th and pronounced our little girl very sick with bronchial pneumonia. That evening I was all alone taking care of the boy, as my husband, an employe on the D. & I. R. R., had gone out on the road that day, feeling that everything was going well at home and that the children were getting the best of care. On the afternoon of the next day he came back, only to find that our girl was dangerously ill. We suggested calling in another doctor, but owing to the fact that the doctors here are not on friendly terms, this was denied. The doctor told us we would be taking our child's life in our own hands, as the other doctor perhaps would do something desperate.

On the 15th Dr. Taylor of Duluth was called, and after making a thorough examination he pronounced her hopelessly sick, as her system was deranged. She lingered until the evening of the 19th, when she died of that dread disease, spinal meningitis.

Was this treatment right or was it not? This was the first case of measles in town this spring.

Our people demand the best of teachers and the best of preachers, but who demands the best of doctors? Will the time ever come when people will not be content in saying, "It is God's way. His will be done." We are encouraged by the highest authority in this land to raise large families, but who will protect our little ones from being experimented upon by doctors?

Is It Justice?

To the Editor of The Herald:

On page four of yesterday's issue is the pitiful story of a poor Italian woman with her little babe in her arms, confined in jail, for what? Selling two bottles of beer.

Admitting an infraction of the law, is this justice? Should not some discrimination be shown in such a case? Turn to page seven, column three, and see how lenient the law seems to be toward the weak and erring. Why should the letter of the law be allowed to take such swift vengeance on the weak and ignorant on the one hand, and on the other hand allow both the letter and the spirit to be violated? Why should a license not be revoked when the conditions under which it was granted had been violated? Very truly yours,

Women Pay Fines.

Millie Hartman and Belle Beach, the last of the four suspects to plead guilty to the charge of receiving stolen goods, paid fines of $250 each in district court yesterday afternoon and were discharged from custody. Both are colored women and reside on St. Croix avenue. They purchased goods stolen from Silberstein & Bondy's store in June last.

Range Woman Gets Bail.

Mrs. Francesca Vurcio, the Italian woman from near Aurora who has been bound over to await the action of the next grand jury on the charge of running a blind pig, was released from jail yesterday on $50 bail and permitted to return to her home and care for her family. The woman when brought to Duluth had a nursing baby and the confinement in jail so frightened her that she had several fainting spells.

DUCKS AND CHICKENS

Will Be Plenty In Minnesota This Fall.

St. Paul, Aug. 16.—Except in the lowlands of Northern Minnesota where damage has been done by floods, Minnesota hunters will find plenty of ducks and prairie chickens when the season opens Sept. 1.

Reports received by Executive Agent S. F. Fullerton of the state game and fish commission are that the crop of ducks and chickens in many counties is the largest in the history of Minnesota.

"Were it not for the heavy rains last spring there would be a bumper crop of chickens all over Minnesota," said Mr. Fullerton today. "There will be practically no shooting this year in Clay county, which ordinarily is a banner duck and chicken county. In Norman county where there is considerable high land, the crop is unusually large. Redwood county never had so many chickens before."

NINE ITALIANS BLOWN TO PIECES.

Elkins, W. Va., Aug. 16.—Nine Italians were blown to shreds and their hut reduced to atoms by a dynamite explosion at the construction camp of Dunleavy Brothers, about six miles from Durbin, between 1 and 2 o'clock yesterday morning. This is thought to be only another chapter in a feud between a gang of desperadoes and Italians. The crime was not discovered until daybreak, when members of the camp ran across the gruesome spectacle of parts of the anatomies of the foreigners hanging to the trees. The deed was premeditated, but there is no trace of the perpetrators. The death of these Italians may cause international complications.

IN LUNA'S SMILES

Herald Excursionists Bathe in Moonlight Returning From Lake Trip

Many Take in Weekly Outing on America—Next Week's.

The first of The Herald excursions to Two Harbors and return took place yesterday afternoon and the steamer America, which carried it was well filled. Not only was a pleasant time spent on the water and in Two Harbors, but the magnificence of the night and the superb panorama of flickering lights on the green hill of Duluth and the splendid chance for a moonbath, amply rewarded the excursionists for getting out and facing uncertain weather. The schedule of the excursions, which are to be held every Tuesday afternoon, follows:

The America will leave Booth's dock at 4 o'clock in the afternoon as at about that time business men can get away from work without being anxious about it for the rest of the afternoon. The boat reaches Two Harbors just in time for supper and an excellent chance is afforded for picnic lunches by families taking the trip, or, if it is desired, supper can be taken at one of the hotels up town. An hour is sepnt in Two Harbors and then the return trip is made, the boat reaching Duluth about 9 o'clock in the evening.

If all of the tripa prove as ideal as that of yesterday The Herald will likely have soon to charter two boats to carry the crowd. Many who had planned to go decided to stay away because of the uncertain weather in the morning and in the early part of the afternoon; but these made the mistake of their lives. They missed many things, but the sight presented to the excursionists on returning in the moonlit evening was such that lovers of the scenic would have undergone hardships to see.

The harvest moon almost at the full hung low over the lake and that body in repose rippled back its reflection. People have long raved about the beauties of the city as seen from a boat in the lake at night, but it is not often even to such advantage as the excursionists of last evening encountered. They, with one accord, crowded the rails of the steamer and gazed at the splendor spread out before them. Minnesota Point and the Duluth entry to the harbors, the latter lighted by many lights is deserving of a description which curtails one's adjectives. Beyond the entry the fine steamers North West and Juniata, moored to the wharves and ablaze with lights, added materially to the scene.

It was noticeable that although the weather on shore at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon seemed to incline toward chilliness, after the trip had started, either the weather settled or there was a different brand of it out on old Superior, for it became decidedly warmer and much more pleasant. The ride was delightful and many family parties spread their basket lunches under the trees at Two Harbors and enjoyed a pleasant meal. While there they saw the big new ore carrier W. E. Corey, "the yacht of the Steel Trust" and other large boats, but the Corey was the center of interest for this is her first trip to the Head of the Lakes and she is of a magnificent type of boats.

Going and coming Robinson's orchestra played up-to-date and up-to-mark music and every attention was shown the excursionists by Capt. Hector and the other officers of the boat.

The next excursion will be held next Tuesday afternoon at the same time. It is more than likely that the greater number of those who were on yesterday's excursion will go next Tuesday also and that many more will attend.

LUMBERMEN MEET.

Semi-Annual Session of Mississippi Valley Association.

Minneapolis, Aug. 16.—There were about forty representatives of the lumber manufacturing interests of the Northwest here yesterday, the occasion being the semi-annual assembling of the Mississippi Valley Lumbermen's association.

The association is conducting a grading bureau which grade all of the lumber produced by the manufacturers in Minnesota, Iowa, Wisconsin and Michigan upon a uniform basis and routine matters along this line and the conditions of the trade chiefly concerned the deliberations. R. S. Kellogg, forest assistant of the new forest service in the department of agriculture, Washington, told of the interesting work being done by his department in gathering comprehensive statistics covering the entire field of the lumber industry in the United States.

A proposition looking toward the endowment of a chair of applied forestry in practical lumbering at Yale college was also taken up, the idea of E. E. Weyerhaeuser, chairman of the committee appointed by the National Lumber Manufacturers' association to look after the fund of $150,000 being raised for the purpose.

WOMEN COMING TO THE FRONT

Sociologist Says They Are Driving Men From Industrial Pursuits.

Detroit, Aug. 16.—The speech of Prof. Bodine, who is superintendent of compulsory education at Chicago, at the congress of sociologists and factory inspectors yesterday, created a mild sensation among the delegates.

The speaker produced federal statistics covering the past twenty years, showing that industrial competition of women, children and machine labor was driving the men out of the large cities to fields of heavy manual labor in mining and agriculture.

He declared that woman was destined to be the ruling sex in industrialism, and continued:

"Man, like the Indian, is dying out and being driven out. In 1890 there were 3,914,571 women who were employed in gainful occupations in America. In 1900 the number had increased to 5,329,887.

"The birth rate of females is increasing and the deaths decreasing. It is just the reverse among the males.

"We are rapidly drifting back to the age of the 'eternal feminine,' when man will be a back number and forced to return to the soil and to those fields of labor where only his physical endurance will save him in the struggle for survival."

In discussing the competitive life for the leadership in society, the speaker said:

"Society is dying out at the top. It is a crystal maze of glass houses where no occupant dares cast the first stone; the dangerous example—the academy of divorce.

"Society has mothers who are slaves to the sciences of fashion and frivolity; who look more often into their mirrors than into the faces of their children.

"When a fashionable mother gadding about at social functions and a fashionable father at his club, the result will be that within a decade the question of the neglected children of the rich will become as great a social problem as that of the neglected children of the poor."

Charles King, an American will be hanged at Edmonton on August 31. King was convicted of murdering an English prospector named Hayward at Lesser Slave lake, N. W. T., last fall. He was tried twice. The Dominion government had the case under review and has decided not to interfere. King came from one of the Dakotas.

The steamer Idlewild, carrying 200 women and children was tossed about rudderless on Lake Erie for five hours in the high wind which blew all day, Tuesday. When off Windmill Point the rudder broke away. The Idlewild was brought into Buffalo by four tugs which were summoned by persons on the shore who saw her distress. The officers preserved order among the passengers, none of whom was injured.

The valuation of the property of Marshall Field in Chicago was fixed at forty million dollars by the board of review. Of the sum named thirty million dollars is in real estate and the balance in personal property. The personal holdings in his residence on Prairie avenue are valued at two million dollars.

On account of rain Tuesday's Grand Circuit races at Poughkeepsie were postponed until Wednesday, and each day's program will go over one day, making the meeting end on Saturday instead of Friday.

A contest over the $1,000,000 estate of the late Peter Henkel, flour manufacturer, who died May 23, 1904, was instituted in the Wayne county, Mich., circuit court Tuesday. Mrs. Alice Henkel Pennington, granddaughter of the deceased, who was bequeathed $500 in the will, asks the court to set the instrument aside, thus leaving the estate open for distribution among the heirs at law.

THE "FISH TRUST"

Makes Answer to Ohio's Suit of Ouster.

Columbus, Ohio, Aug. 16.—A. Booth & Co., of Chicago, a corporation popularly called "the fish trust," against which a suit in ouster was recently filed by the attorney general on the ground that it was organized in restraint of trade, yesterday filed an amended answer in the circuit court.

The answer admits that the defendant is a corporation incorporated under the laws of Illinois with a capital stock of $5,500,000, and though it has purchased twenty-four fish companies, the answer denies that it is a trust in restraint of trade and names several hundred fish companies doing an independent fish business. It also names 203 corporations in Ohio, among them the Standard Oil company, which are organized in the same way and doing business without being molested. It says the company is properly incorporated under the laws of Illinois and is entitled to all the benefits therefrom.

REACHED HER DOCK.

Exciting Run of Sinking Steamer to Block Island.

Block Island, R. I., Aug. 16.—The steamer New Shoreham, while entering the harbor yesterday on her trip from Providence, with 100 passengers, struck a sunken wreck and after an exciting run for the dock, sank to the main deck just as she ranged alongside the pier. The passengers were able to land over the usual gang plank.

The steamer was the only one to reach the island yesterday afternoon, owing to the heavy weather and as a result of the accident many who had finished their vacations are detained here.

The New Shoreham, which was built in Boston in 1901, had been making regular trips during the summer between Providence and this port. She was about half way across the harbor yesterday when she struck the wreck. The collision ripped open a hole several feet wide in her bottom, but notwithstanding the steady inrush of the water, the fireroom men and the engineer headed by Chief Engineer John Quinlan of Providence, stuck to their posts. When the steamer was within 100 yards of the dock the water put out the fires and when the vessel reached the dock Engineer Quinlan was standing in water up to his waist. He was still at his post, when the steamer's gang plank was pushed ashore.

CHORUS GIRL

A Year Ago, Now a $5,000,000 Widow.

New York, Aug. 16.—One year ago a chorus girl, at a salary of $25 a week, today a widow of a steel millionaire, with a $5,000,000 dower right in his great estate—that is the romance of Goldie Lillian Mohr, a former beauty of the Weber-Fields company.

A year ago she married Alan W. Wood of Pittsburg, who died yesterday in St. Luke's hospital. His estate, estimated at from $15,000,000 to $20,000,000, will be divided between his wife and his six children by a former marriage.

The savory odor of beef stew, that is bread out of the oven, brown, crusty beef stew properly made, greeted the visitor to the class in cooking which is being maintained at the Adams school during July and August of this year by the Women's Council of this city. In the account of the annual meeting of the Women's Council, which was held in February, appears this sentence: "A committee was appointed to investigate the feasibility of establishing a school of domestic science during the summer months in connection with the Bethel." That is the first mention that can be found of the present successful and helpful school that has been held for the past five weeks, and which will continue until Sept. 1. The quiet manner in which the school has been established is typical of the methods of the Council. It was not found feasible to establish a school in connection with the Bethel, but another locality was found.

It is doubtful even if the members of the Council most sanguine of the scheme foresaw so successful a session. One hundred and twenty girls, ranging in age from 10 to 15, are receiving instruction from Mrs. Hugh McCurdy of Chicago, a woman widely known as one of the finest instructors in domestic science.

The school was established primarily for the girls of the working classes, and as during the summer months many children of Lower Lake and St. Croix avenues are without helpful employment of any kind, it was desired to establish the school there. It was found impracticable, however, and a room was secured at the Adams school. Gas stoves were installed, and cooking utensils, to accommodate twenty pupils, were provided. Dainty caps, aprons and sleeves were provided for 100 children, and Mrs. McCurdy was secured as instructor. The applications came in rapidly, and with careful management 120 girls are receiving instruction, with twenty or thirty more anxiously waiting and hoping that by some mischance they will be privileged to attend the classes.

Each morning Mrs. McCurdy meets two classes, and each class receives instruction twice a week. The pupils are eager and responsive, and whatever order may reign at other times, the day they take their first loaf of bread out of the oven, brown, crusty and delicious looking, order is a thing forgotten, and shrill giggles of delight from twenty happy little cooks create for a few moments a small pandemonium. The attendance is prompt and regular, and the reception by the people benefited cannot help but be most gratifying to the women who have worked untiringly for the school.

The members of the Council are anxious that any interested in the school visit it, and an hour spent at one of the classes is an hour well spent. It proves conclusively that instruction in domestic science is not a fad, but a serious study. The instruction which the girls receive in the classes is applied practically at their homes, and these lessons learned are not soon forgotten. The classes meet each morning of the week, except Sunday, and any of the club women of the city, or others interested in the undertaking, are invited to attend a class.

Fasten the Ends.

"Fasten the Ends" is the motto which the tidy girl hangs over her dressing table. She never suggests a frayed or mussy ribbon, no matter how exquisite its coloring. Even the men are quick to note trifling carelessness in grooming, while the untidy girl is severely criticised by members of her own sex. For this reason, inventors and shopkeepers are constantly offering first aids to tidiness and any little appliance which will add to the smartness and trimness of a woman's appearance commands a good sale, says the Philadelphia Press.

As the face naturally attracts the first glance, the arrangement of the hair and the adjustment of the hat and veil are points upon which the tidy girls expends infinite pains. Next to the importance of keeping the hair in good condition ranks that of dressing it neatly, and the present fashion of arranging the hair low requires an exceptional number of combs. The best arrangement calls for four combs of uniform size about two inches square. Two of these are used to keep the rolls in place and two keep in good order the many stray locks which persist in falling about the forehead and over the ears.

The comb of the hour among girls who prefer simplicity in dress is of light amber, severely plain, but highly polished. To match these come very long hairpins with knob ends like balls. The fancy comb of celluloid and the cheap jeweled comb are not considered good form, and only for dressy occasions does the girl who possesses such an extravagance bring forth her comb of real tortoise shell or amber, studded with gems. Never would she wear such a comb with a severe tailored gown or shirtwaist suit.

MISS PETERS' POPULARITY

By Della Campbell MacLeod.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Little Miss Peters toiled up the three flights of steps to her tiny hall bedroom. She threw her bag on the bed and walked deliberately to the mirror, only stopping to throw up the blind for more light. She sat down deliberately before the hideous little glass and began to take another inventory of her good looks.

Not even one who loved her—she smiled bitterly at the thought—could call her pretty. She was homely. Not with that piquant sort of plainness that is almost as attractive as beauty, but with a sort of ugliness. The forehead bulged, the eyes were dull and sunken, the cheeks presented no contours to speak of, and the whole expression was owlishly pathetic.

She examined each feature as callously as if it were a statue she were appraising. The face was the same. As hateful to her as ever. She closed her eyes wearily. She was plain, unattractive—ugly. And if one ever wants good looks it is when she is 20. Miss Peters was barely that, but she looked almost any age, up to 40.

She slipped the pins out of the tight little knot at the back of her neck and shook her hair down over her shoulders. It was not pretty hair. It was thin and scraggly and mouse colored. In the hand mirror she raised to get a glimpse of her profile she could see her bent little shoulders reflected. A bookkeeper who bends over his work from 8 in the morning until 6 at night rarely has pretty shoulders.

And $75 is not much to pay a girl who does the work of two men. Miss Peters sent $50 of this amount home every month. After her board was paid, little was left to waste on feminine finery.

"I wouldn't care!" (she had fallen into the habit of talking to herself), "I wouldn't care if I were ugly and poor if any of them liked me." She buried her face in the pillows and began to cry. "I never have any fun." She lay staring at the ceiling, thinking hard. And her thoughts were even more pathetic than her face. One by one she took the girls in the boarding house, and studied their faces from memory—and their friends. There was only one of them who had ever manifested the slightest friendliness for her, and that was Miss Mathis. She did not wonder that people loved Miss Mathis and thought her beautiful—she was. She remembered Miss Peters always of a queen who had strayed somehow into a cheap boarding house incognito, that she might learn to know and love the least of her subjects. Miss Mathis, with her gorgeous hair and eyes, was so beautiful and magnetic, no one could keep from loving her. But it was the others she wondered about—the dozens of stenographers, bookkeepers and school teachers. Very few of them were really pretty, yet they had friends. The landlady's daughter was no beauty, but all the men liked her.

"I know," exclaimed Miss Peters, with sudden energy, "it's only the gay girls that are popular. I will make 'em like me too!" Her face had emerged from the pillow. A new light was in her eyes, the light of one who determined to conquer. "A girl who goes along, tending to her own business and living up to her ideas of what a lady should be. What's coming to her?" Unconsciously she fell into the slang of the other girls.

She rose with fresh determination and began to dress for dinner. She pulled out her best frock, the one kept religiously for Sundays, and her good slippers. She would dress up like the other girls. She would even "make up" like Daisy, the landlady's daughter. To do this she had to improvise cosmetics. A rose petal from her best hat put color into her cheeks and lips. She darkened her brows and lashes. She almost fancied that she saw in the face reflected a likeness to Mrs. Lively, the wife of a drummer further down the hall. Then she began to comb her hair. Not in the usual knot, but in an elaborate and much tangled pompadour.

By the time she had her dress buttoned the dinner bell rang, and, without taking time to consider her daring, she ran lightly down to the dining room. She did not see, fortunately, the elevated brows behind her back, or hear any of the whispered comments on her appearance. It was a pity she did not know that one man, Mr. Hughes, the kindly-faced new boarder, was disappointed in her. Before this he had felt a certain shy friendliness for the modest little bookkeeper, who reminded him somehow of a fragrant clover blossom in a bunch of artificial flowers. And so, he was thinking, as he watched her flippant and painted, that she was like the others, after all. He felt a mild sort of pity that he could not have explained to himself, but all the time he knew that the others were making fun of Miss Peters behind her back.

But the little bookkeeper, with an almost fierce gaiety, was chattering away to a commercial student who sat next to her. After dinner she followed the others in the parlor, still determined to be one of them. Her companion at dinner was at her heels, encouraging her. Later she went to sit on the steps to the side gallery with him while he smoked a cigarette.

"Have one?" he invited, companionably. "Daisy smoked one with me last night." For an instant Miss Peters' face went white under the paint—with anger. Then she remembered she must be like the others if she wanted to be popular. No one could be popular and be a prig.

She reached out for the cigarette, and the young man offered her a light from the one he was smoking—and moved up nearer. Two whiffs of the cigarette turned her deathly faint.

"I think I'll go up to my room," she faltered, throwing it aside with a little forced laugh.

"Don't go," he begged. "Ain't you game enough to finish it? Must be your first one."

"It is," she admitted, fighting back her disgust for her companion. "Good night."

"Aren't you going to kiss me good night?" he whispered, rising. "Daisy always—"

"How dare—" But Miss Peters did not finish. She stumbled blindly through the dining room and on up the three flights of stairs to her own room. She slammed the door and dropped on her knees beside the tiny white bed.

"O God!" she sobbed, "what have I done?" Why did you let me do it? What did it matter if I were ugly? That I had no friends. Nothing matters any more! I have lost everything now. My self respect is go-one for-ev-er—"

And she was on her knees, still sobbing and praying in the dark, when the last boarder came in for the night and passed whistling to his room at 1 o'clock.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday, "Under Southern Skies."

"UNDER SOUTHERN SKIES."

"Under Southern Skies," which will appear at the Lyceum Friday and Saturday is said to have one of the largest and most expensive dramatic companies now traveling, as the company numbers twenty-seven people, twenty-three of whom appear in speaking parts, and every piece of scenery used in the production is carried with the company. "Under Southern Skies" is now in its fifth season, having had four phenomenally successful seasons in the East.

BRILLIANT PRIMA DONNA

Mme. Anna Hellstrom, Swedish Singer Delights Large Audience.

Mme. Anna Hellstrom was welcomed by a fine audience at the Lyceum last evening and the great Swedish prima donna must have been delighted with the warmth of the greeting extended her, for it was not merely an audience there to hear the voice of which they had been told so much, but an assemblage of her countrymen to welcome one from the fatherland and to hear its folk songs and national music sung as only one of their own people can sing them. Every number was received with tremendous applause and encores were freely given.

Mme. Hellstrom is a brilliant singer and a gracious woman. Her face is always expressive of lively interest and betrays plainly the fact that hers is a vivacious and animated nature, interested in the people before her and their pleasure, as well as in the music she is giving them. Her voice is a soprano of brilliant quality, finely toned and splendidly developed. It is rich, full and clear and in range is extensive, running from deep chest notes to high lyric tones. Throughout her work the smoothness and repose of the artist is evident and it is indeed a rare pleasure to listen to her. Her place is easily among the great singers of the world.

The large number of her program was the familiar recitative and aria from "Traviata," by Verdi, and she executed it finely. The technical excellence of her work was exhibited in this more than in the other numbers and while Duluth has heard it sung as well, it has never heard it sung better. The remainder of the program was largely given over to folk songs of Sweden and they were received with great enthusiasm. There was much disappointment because she omitted from the program "Solveig's Song" by Grieg.

Mrs. Carl Sheldon of Duluth gave violin numbers appearing twice on the program. They were well rendered and she was encored.

Miss Christine Nilsson of Minneapolis, the accompanist, was satisfactory in every way.

A grand chorus composed of the Orpheus society and other singing organizations and led by Prof. Lundholm, appeared twice, singing Swedish numbers and they were enthusiastically encored.

AMBASSADOR REID RENTS BIG ESTATE.

London, Aug. 16.—Ambassador Reid has taken a lease of the late Earl Cowper's country estate, Wrest Park, near Amptihll, Bedfordshire, and Mr. Reid and his family will take up their residence there for the winter within a couple of months. Wrest Park is a fine place of 7,000 acres, on which there is good shooting. The mansion is almost as large as Dorchester house and is richly furnished and well equipped with everything for the entertainment and comfort of house parties.

The estate is thirty-five miles from London and Mr. Reid proposes coming to the city daily in his automobile.

SPREADING RAILS CAUSES WRECK OF TRAIN.

Corry, Pa., Aug. 16.—The night Pittsburg express, on the Allegheny Valley road, which left Buffalo at 11 o'clock last night, was wrecked by a spreading rail near Hightown, early today. The rear engine and seven cars left the rails. The passengers had narrow escapes, but only two received slight injuries. The track was torn up for 100 yards, and traffic was blocked until late today.

CALLS IT THE SHARK.

Cleveland Man Has Invented New Submarine Boat.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—A special from Cleveland, Ohio, says: Luther C. Thompson has invented a submarine boat which the United States government is examining with a view to adapting to the navy department. The new invention looks like a shark, and that is the name Mr. Thompson has given the vessel.

"I have studied the actions of the fish for twenty-five years, and my boat is constructed to sink just as a fish does, by means of diving blades," said Thompson last night. "The present steering gear used on the submarines is not adapted to the kind of work that vessels of this class are expected to do."

THE FIRE CHIEFS.

Duluth is honored by the visit of the members of the International Association of Fire Engineers, which began its thirty-third annual convention here this morning, and it hopes that the delegates will go away pleased with the city and with the quality of their entertainment.

There is perhaps no feature of municipal government so thoroughly a one-man affair as the fire department. Most cities have mayors and councils and fire boards and fire commissioners, under one name or another, who are above the fire department in authority; but the department itself is almost invariably the reflection of the character of one man—the chief engineer. The discipline, efficiency and economy of the department depend upon him first, last and all the time. No matter how good the men in the ranks, no matter how expensive and up-to-date the apparatus that is purchased by the city; no matter how liberal the taxpayers are with funds for the department's use; if the "chief" is not a man of character, who can instill into his little army the proper spirit, and bring them into a coherent and effective unit, the results will not be the best.

Practically all of the fire chiefs have come up from the ranks. Step by step, from the lowest positions in the department they have fought their way through merit to the top. They know the business of fighting fire in all its phases. They know its dangers, its hardships, its sacrifices. They must know these things, and their men must know that they know them, to earn the respect and affection it is necessary to have in the ranks in order to get the most efficient service. They have braved the many dangers themselves, and often do yet when occasion requires. They are usually a wholesome, manly, courageous and efficient lot of fellows, to whom their home community is indebted for a host of acts of heroism.

It is with more than the usual pleasure Duluth takes in welcoming guests that it welcomes these fighters of fire, these knights of the trumpet who do their deeds of valor amid the perils of smoke and flames instead of upon the field of battle. Theirs is a noble work, and upon their integrity, courage and efficiency the safety of every citizen, to a greater or less degree, depends. May they live long and prosper, and may they like Duluth so well that they will come here again, individually or as a convention.

THE CHINESE BOYCOTT.

Probably few people realize how earnest that Chinese boycott of Americans and American goods has grown to be, and how intelligently and effectively it is being directed. The resentment against this country that is being instilled into the minds of the Chinese in this juncture will remain for many years, and it will be a long time before relations will be restored to the condition of amicability and good feeling that existed before our treatment of Chinamen landing in this country stirred the celestials up to this boycott.

The Outlook shows that the agitation is by no means confined to anti-Christians. Much of it was begun by Chinese Christians, who are as sensitive to the injustice we have shown Chinese students, officials and merchants as are the "heathen Chinee." Among the first to undertake by public speeches to arouse public opinion against us were the secretary to a Chinese marquis and the son of a Chinese judge. Both speakers were officers of the Young Men's Christian association in Shanghai.

Five Shanghai newspapers fanned the flames of resentment daily, and finally a mass meeting of Christians was convened to consider the allegation that "Americans demand entry into China, but refuse to admit us to America." So immediate was the influence of this meeting that in a Christian college an attempt was made to call out—on a sort of strike—the entire student body of 250. In another college eight seniors protested against American teachers and left. In a Christian high school the entire senior class left. Other cities, meantime, were falling into line, and the feeling was spreading to the remoter parts of the empire.

This is an index to the condition of Chinese feeling against Americans. When American education and American teachers suffer so much, it can easily be imagined what the effect is upon American commerce. There has been practically none since the boycott started, and it will be a long time before there is as much again as there was before the trouble arose. President Roosevelt promptly took note of the matter and produced different treatment of Chinese students, travelers and merchants, but a feeling of the sort thus engendered is one likely to take deep root and retain its hold for a long time.

The Chinese trade will have to be worked up all over again, and it is not unlikely that the process will be much more difficult than it was upon the start.

PATHOS VERSUS JUSTICE.

The local columns of The Herald last night told the story of an Italian woman who is held in the county jail to answer a charge of selling liquor without a license. She was bound over to the grand jury, which meets next month, and in default of $50 bail she had to go to jail, where she was accompanied by her youngest child, a baby in arms. Her husband remained behind on their claim near Aurora to take care of the other children, and they have no money for bail.

It seems that the county authorities in their campaign against the crime of conducting blind pigs—a crime altogether too common in this county—sent witnesses out to secure evidence. These witnesses bought from the Italian woman two small bottles of beer, and then had her arrested. When she was brought to Duluth to answer to the charge she was forced to bring along her nursing child, which is confined in the county jail with her.

Arrests for this crime are not uncommon, and in many cases the accused persons have been women, as in this case. But because this particular woman is accompanied by a wee baby, because she knows no English, and because she probably has but a vague idea of what it is all about, the case has an unusual atmosphere of pathos. Much sympathy has been expressed for her among those who read the story in last night's Herald.

It is true that, on the face of things, the woman has committed an offense against the peace and dignity of the state of Minnesota. It is true that her offense is a common one, and one that should be stamped out as quickly as may be. It is true that the law cannot recognize the element of pathos in the face of guilt, and that the enforcement of any law necessarily involves hardship for the guilty and for their innocent associates.

Yet it will not fail to be noted that that law, which is so harshly, rigidly, inexorably bent upon enforcement in this case, is weak, cringing and futile against offenders vastly more culpable than is this dismayed, mystified mother. It cannot fail to be noted that the law, so exacting of its pound of flesh in the case of this poor woman who sold the county's spies two small bottles of beer, is blind to the offense of the high and mighty who rob the poor of millions. The Herald does not by any means wish to deprecate the policy of enforcing the law against the illegal sale of liquor in this county. On the contrary it is its opinion that the law should be rigidly enforced.

Yet— There is no wholesome spectacle of outraged justice being avenged in this case. Justice should ever be tempered with mercy, and this is one of those hard cases where strict justice seems unnecessarily cruel. The law is to be obeyed, and infractions are to be punished. Yet— This sort of justice leaves a bad taste, when compared with some of the offenses the law has overlooked.

FIREPROOF BUILDINGS.

The need of attacking the fire fiend by methods of prevention rather than by attempt at cure—in other words, by the use of fireproof building methods—is startlingly set forth in a circular issued by F. W. Fitzpatrick, of Washington, D. C., a former Duluthian, now secretary and treasurer of the International Society of State and Municipal Building Commissioners and Inspectors. This circular shows the appalling havoc wrought by fire in human life and property in recent years, and it shows, too, that the proportion of loss is increasing rather than diminishing.

In 1904 fire destroyed in this country 6,672 people, an average of eighteen deaths from fire every day in the year. Though this country spends millions of dollars every year in futile efforts to cure the evil, a smaller expenditure would tend in a large measure to prevent it. Though fire departments are improved and water supplies increased, the losses grow more appalling yearly. Our present ratio is nine lives lost by fire every year to every 100,000 of population; in 1900 the ratio was eight lives, and in 1890 it was only five for every 100,000. Though the railroads are credited with causing the greatest number of deaths through accident, the fire losses crowd them closely.

In six years fire has destroyed property worth $1,000,000,000. No country on earth, according to the circular, not even Japan with its paper and bamboo building materials, can show such a pro rata loss by fire. The fire losses are equivalent to a tax of $25 per family every year. Our total gold production would only pay for one-third of the losses. The iron ore product would no more pay for them. Last year $230,000,000 went up in the most complete loss known to modern life—fire.

The remedy proposed by the society is fireproof buildings. We burn up three theaters, three public halls, twelve churches, ten schools, two hospitals, two asylums, two colleges, six apartment houses, three department stores, two jails, twenty-six hotels, 140 flat buildings and nearly 1,600 homes every week of the year. If these were built of fireproof materials the change could easily be imagined.

Insurance helps some, but it will not pay for human lives, and for every dollar received in losses the people of the country pay the insurance companies $3 in premiums. Fireproof buildings would be a much better and much cheaper fire insurance. The cost is not greatly in excess of that of highly inflammable buildings, and when the difference in insurance rates and the higher rental value is figured in, it is claimed that the use of fireproof materials exclusively is actually an economy.

Yet there are but 3,000 really fireproof buildings in this country.

Hotel Gossip.

"The lid is on altogether too tight in St. Louis," said R. S. Dowling of St. Louis at the Lenox. "The thing is being carried to extremes. It would be better if they expended their reform efforts over a long period and acted in a reasonable manner than to do the way they are doing now, putting all their energy, apparently, into one grand attempt. They will almost arrest a man down there if he looks at a saloon window on Sunday, and it would not surprise me much to see them arrest a man for taking a glass of rye in his own house on Sunday.

"A case in point was a mixup a friend of mine got into a week or two ago. He was a traveling man and, with five other men, was engaged in a friendly game of poker in one of the leading hotels. They were playing in a private room. The whole bunch was arrested for gambling. They were jailed and held for two or three hours, until bail was forthcoming.

"Two special police made the raid. Without any show or pretense of being officers of the law, the two entered the hotel lobby shortly after 9 o'clock. After looking at the register, and not being recognized by the clerks, they went to the elevator and got off on the floor of the room where my friend was enjoying himself. No suspicion was aroused as they walked down the hall to the room they were looking for. It was occupied by a traveling salesman. In some manner they had learned there was a game there the night before. They probably listened for a few minutes at the keyhole and, hearing the click of chips, tried the door, found it unlocked, and walked in.

"The six men were very much surprised to learn that they were under arrest, the chips, cards and money, about $30 of the latter, were gathered together and the fellows were marched to the lockup. The officers were considerate enough not to make them ride in the patrol wagon. Of course, I may be mistaken, but that is what I call altogether too much of a good thing. The reform movement in St. Louis is getting about as bad as the yellow fever epidemic in New Orleans."

"The Southern Association of Wholesale Saddlery and Harness manufacturers was recently organized at Atlanta, Ga., for the purpose of regulating the terms of sale used by harness and saddle manufacturers and more definitely associating the Southern manufacturers with other associations of a like nature," said J. M. Host of Chicago at the St. Louis.

"The newly-formed association is composed of nearly every important harness and saddle manufacturing company in the South, and practically all firms have expressed a desire to become members. The Southern dealers have heretofore had no organization, and only a few of the firms were members of the National association. For this reason, terms of sale were not regulated, and have caused much difficulty to both buyer and seller."

How the Trouble Began.

Law Notes: In Moore vs. State, 44 Tex. Cr. 46, which was a murder case, the reporter opens his statement of facts with the following suggestive sentence: "It was near Christmas, Saturday night, the 22nd of December, 1900, when a large number, almost the entire male population in and around Gober, met at Tom Fittswaters' place of business, a local-option dive, and proceeded to 'tank' up on local-option bitters, make merry in anticipation and in honor of the birthday of Jesus of Nazareth, and play a little draw poker 'for revenue only.'" Surely a fine foundation for criminal doings.

The Weather.

All's well that ends well, and the northeaster appears to have blown itself out. It cleared up last night, and the moon shone forth in its fullest splendor, though the wind still continued to blow forth over the lake and to keep the temperature down. This morning dawned "brite and fair," to quote Plupy Shute again, and if the morning's brightness was dimmed later by fleeting clouds conditions were still pleasant and the outlook, from an amateur standpoint, was promising.

The temperature yesterday was higher than on the day before, touching a maximum of 64 against 60 Monday. The outlook is that the wind will get back in a warmer quarter about tomorrow, and that the mercury will go up to its August normal of somewhere above 70 and below 80.

It will be partly cloudy tonight and tomorrow, says the weather man, and there may be local showers. The winds will be fresh and will retain an easterly tendency until tomorrow, when they will become "variable." The hope is that if they become variable it may be possible to shake them loose from the east and get them turned around to blow from the west and south.

Showers fell during Tuesday or last night over the southern lake region, Ohio valley, Atlantic and Eastern gulf states, Southern Kansas, Oklahoma, Tennessee, the Dakotas and Western Canada. It was much cooler this morning in Wyoming, Montana, Assiniboia and Western North Dakota, with frost in Yellowstone Park. The barometer was low off middle Atlantic coast states and over Saskatchewan and Southwestern states. In the lake region the winds continued fresh northeasterly with partly cloudy weather.

Following were the highest temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

Works for All Comers.

St. Louis Republic: The United States seems tolerably full of people when the last census was taken, but the more we have the more we get. What are we going to do with our 1,000,000 of emigrants a year? Put them to work, of course. That we have work at which to put them, and that few of them are going hungry or roofless is a remarkable proof of the growth of American industry in the present era.

A Summer's Night.

The moonlight is a keen, white sword of pain,
That pierces through the armor of my mind,
The gentle winds are treacherously kind;
I dare not hear the nightingale's refrain.

Is the soul sickness ages old or new?
The world is summed for me in this night's stress,
Summed in a yearning, savage tenderness,
Summed in a thousand bitter thoughts of you!

—ETHEL WATTS MUMFORD in Smart Set.

Trekking With De Wet.

Robert McCaw in National Magazine: The mind cannot grasp the awful wretchedness, the hellish mystery, of that weary trek. One afternoon a sergeant of the Welsh Fusiliers sat down on the road side, dead beat, and leaned his head on his hands; his limbs had given out, and even his heart refused to carry him further. One of the guards went up and lashed him with a whip, but the man did not stir. There was a volley of oaths and the cruel lash curled around his neck. The man looked up; there were white furrows on his face where the tears had run down. "God Almighty!" he sobbed, "has the soul gone out of the world? Have men with reason sunk lower than the beasts?" The whip turned with a hiss around his face amidst a volley of curses and kicks—"Get up, you English pig, get up!" Through all those days of suffering most of the men retained their indomitable spirit.

She Did Not Pay.

San Francisco News-Letter: An interesting dialogue between a woman and a railway conductor, in which the woman got the best of it, is reported by the Philadelphia Press:

"I shall have to ask you for a ticket for that boy, ma'am."

"I guess not."

"He's too old to travel free. He occupies a whole seat and the car's crowded. There are people standing."

"I can't help that."

"I haven't time to argue this matter, ma'am. You'll have to pay for that boy."

"I've never paid for him yet."

"You've got to begin doing it sometime."

"Not this trip, anyway."

"You'll pay for that boy, ma'am, or I'll stop the train and put him off."

"All right; put him off if you think that's the way to get anything out of me."

"You ought to know what the rules of this road are, ma'am. How old is that boy?"

"I don't know. I never saw him before."

Song of the Baldheaded Man.

Great Caesar's classic head was bare,
And likewise Socrates';
Peter and Paul were forced to wear
Thin capillary fleeces;
Shakespeare, earth's literary king,
And Johnson, Pope and Gibbon,
Being short of hirsute covering
Wore wigs tied deft with ribbon.

But Achan, J. Iscariot,
Ananias (of truth chary),
Herod, the Pharisees, I wot,
All sported caputs hairy;
Later came Danton, Robespierre,
And Marat, bloody trio;
Guy Fawkes and Jeffries, Glencoe Stair,
Thick-thatched like fiddling Nero.

Nor will the eye, in sooth, oft see
Bald Hottentot or Arab,
Kamchatkan, aboriginee,
Kurd or man-eating Carib;
Nay, nay, but of the human breed
The greater in earth's story,
Are those who lead in thought and deed
Crowned not with hair, but glory!

LAUGHING LINES.

Philadelphia Ledger: Magistrate—Have I not seen you twice under the influence of liquor?

Prisoner—Well, judge, if you was under its influence mebbe you did see me twice.

Washington Star: "Your youngest son is quick to learn," said the summer boarder.

"Yes," answered Farmer Corntossel. "The vocabulary he has picked up in the few weeks he has been a caddy is something amazing."

Cleveland Leader: McBrakes—You'll have a bad fire in this store if you don't remove that barrel of oil from near the gas jet.

De Graft—I've often thought so.

McBrakes—Then it's a case of carelessness?

De Graft—No—a matter of policy.

Chicago Journal: Dr. Pillsbury—You have a bad cold. Now, my method of treating a cold is to strike at the cause of the trouble.

Mr. Wise—Then, doc, you'll find the baby in the next room.

Philadelphia Press: "Jimmy!" exclaimed the first farmer, "ain't yer struck water yet? How deep hev ye gone?"

"'Bout a hundred foot," replied the other, placidly.

"My! ain't yer discouraged?"

"Oh, I dunno. I kain't say I ain't gettin' a long well."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Fergus Falls Globe: Now that the public understand something about high financing it is becoming more difficult to float take companies.

Roseau Region: What Northern Minnesota demands hereafter it will get. It might as well be understood now as at any later time, the counties of this section are going to stand together hereafter, and their power will be felt in anything they undertake, and drainage is the first and foremost business they have in hand.

Aitkin Republican: Each year the difficulties of the pioneer are becoming less troublesome, and when the state gets down in earnest to the business of drainage, which there is every reason to expect it soon will do, we may look for Northern Minnesota to take on a growth that will be a surprise to even those who have had the faith to expect great things.

Long Prairie Democrat: An Eastern man 100 years old attributes his longevity to the fact that he eats only two meals a day. Would he be 200 now if he had been in the habit of eating only one meal a day?

St. Paul correspondence Northfield News: Odin Halden of Duluth is still being considered by a large following of his fellow citizens as an ideal candidate for state auditor, it being quite generally believed that the present incumbent will not be a candidate to succeed himself. Mr. Iverson may retire to look after his private interests. But whether he does or not, Mr. Halden would still be considered a formidable candidate should he again conclude to make an effort to secure the nomination.

Bemidji Pioneer: The horde of ills, rust, dry rot, boll weevil, hail, rain, a leaky heaven, the grasshopper, which each year threaten to lay waste the fields of the Northwest have but a bare two weeks in which to work their worst. God speed the harvest!

Howard Lake Herald: The man who is possessor of a piece of land has the game in his own hands. There is no promoter or stock gambler who can jeopardize his investment. Where it is purchased with judgment, land is worth the money paid for it and it is bound to increase in value. It cannot be destroyed or carried away. It requires only industry to make it profitable and productive. It constitutes a source of independence in any condition of the money market and amid all mutations of speculative enterprise.

Eveleth Mining News: State Auditor Iverson says he has fought the forestry humbug six years. Nobly done! Now he can put in some time on the state land humbug, which is several times more paramount than the other humbug.

Virginia Virginian: By all means let the state of Minnesota invest its surplus money in local bonds in preference to those of other states. The state is in a position to assist counties and townships to build a system of splendid roadways from one end of the commonwealth to the other if the matter is gone about in the right way. There ought to be some better system devised for co-operation of the state and counties in the matter of roads.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: Some people take a lot of satisfaction out of never being satisfied with anything.

It is a great economy to smoke cigars and feel the habit is so expensive you can't afford to own an automobile.

A girl is sure a man is going to propose to her when he doesn't like her little brother, but gives him nickels to prove it.

When women say a girl is awful good to her mother and has a sweet disposition they mean she has no chance to get married.

A mother's ambition for her son is to have him either be a clergyman or marry a rich wife, and her dream of heaven is to have him do both.

Great Riders at Mallard.

Mallard Call: Bassie Patten and Rog Bovee was out boat riding Blanche Bovee and Ralph Stevens was out Bicycle riding Ollie Chapman was out buggy riding last week.

Patience.

Bishop Ellison Capers, in an address at Columbia, S. C., praised the virtue of patience. "We may have industry," he said, "sobriety, ambition—all the virtues that make for success; and yet, without patience, we will accomplish nothing. A young man was overheard on a street corner, the other night, reproaching a young girl. That young man was patient. He had so highly developed this excellent quality that I shall not be surprised some day to see him a millionaire, a college president or even a bishop. The young man said, as the young girl drew near him, on the corner:

"'What a time you have kept me waiting!'

"The girl tossed her head.

"'It is only 7 o'clock,' she said, 'and I didn't promise to be here till quarter of.'

"The young man smiled a calm and patient smile.

"'Ah, yes,' he said, 'but you have mistaken the day. I have been waiting for you since last evening.'"

The Ole Dinner Bell.

There's music in the lowin' of the cattle on the hills,
An' in the lazy laughter of the waterfalls and rills;
In the singing of the bluebird an' the hummin of the bee,
An' the ole woodpecker peckin' on the holler sugar tree.
There's music in the blossom an' the clear blue of the sky,
In the screamin' of the chicken hawk a-circling 'way up high;
But the sweetest songs of June time ain't nowheres near a smell
To the music 'long at noontime of the ole dinner bell.

When plowin' in the distant fields, clean out o' sight o' home,
A-wishin', too, with all your heart that dinner time would come,
You watch the furries stretch away aroun' the lower bend,
An' potter 'round a bit before you start for t'other end;
An' you bend your head an' listen to ketch the welcome sound,
An' calc'late it's put' nigh noon by shadders on the ground,
When through the hazy atmosphere, your longin' to dispel,
Comes the fur-off silv'ry music of the ole dinner bell.

When the harvest day is over an' toilers' work is done,
Over waving corn an' clover tinted by the settin' sun,
Low an' sweet the distant music of the ole bell floats along,
Borne upon the evenin' breezes, mingled with the reapers' song,
And you look across the medder, past the old creek windin' through,
Where the ringer sweet is waitin' with a welcome there for you,
Oh, there ain't no joys of summer that can strike you quite as well
As the ringin' when you're hungry of the ole dinner bell.

What He Died Of.

London Chronicle: When the shah of Persia was in Paris last year he was accompanied by an official named Mahmoud Khan, who is not with him now. A French journalist who remembered Mahmoud well put some questions about him the other day to a member of the shah's retinue. "What has become of Mahmoud Khan?" inquired the journalist. "He is dead, monsieur," was the answer. "Poor fellow! But surely he was young, and seemed to enjoy excellent health." "It was excellent," assented the Persian functionary. "Was he ill very long?" "No, monsieur. He was not ill at all. He died quite suddenly." "Indeed! How did it happen?" The Persian functionary explained with a slightly embarrassed air: "He was not sympathetic to the grand vizier."

Baltimore American: Every country in Europe, even Great Britain, seems to brood continually upon the contingency of a great war. Costly Errors By Patterson Crowd Responsible For Defeat.

RESULTS YESTERDAY.
Duluth, 8; Superior, 1.

GAMES TODAY.
Duluth at Superior.
Fargo at Winnipeg.
Crookston at Grand Forks.

Patterson's gang of fen-dwellers from the suburbs continued their mad chase toward the Northern league subway yesterday by allowing the Champs to wrench away the second game of the series in easy fashion by the score of 8 to 1.

Baseball is booming in Superior these days, and the box office must have taken in fully $13 at yesterday's game, as compared with $11 the day before. The fanatics in the city of the unburied dead are such enthusiastic fellows when they really go in for anything.

It is like robbing cripples to take a game from the Suburbanites. They need every game they can collect to keep from nosing Crookston out of her comfortable bed at the bottom of the bunch, and the Champs have nothing further to fear from the Tigers.

Duluth's elongated Norseman was tossing them over for the Champs and allowed the Villagers but four hits. The Champs did not do much better with Mr. Severoid, and collected but five safe singles, the errors of the Superior fielders being responsible for most of the runs.

The score board made quite a presentable appearance for eight innings, but instead of allowing the game to peacefully end with a presentable score, the Champs had to start after Severoid in the ninth inning, and aided by the untimely errors, collect five runs that weren't needed. These deathbed rallies are all right when they are needed, but the Champs should learn not to scatter them about promiscuously in this manner. There is no necessity for airing their little accomplishment on every possible occasion.

The Champs cinched in the game in the very first session. Menelce was given a walk, stole second and went to third on Somerville's error. O'Dea walked, stole second and he and Menelce both scored on Erickson's long single over second base.

Patterson's dock-wallopers took their first and only run in the second inning on a two-bagger by French, a sacrifice by McShane and Howell's long drive to right field.

The Bugville contingent pulled off a pretty piece of work in the third which drew three hearty cheers from the forty-seven fanatics crowded into the bleachers and the lone occupant of the grand stand.

Powell had made a safe one, and had been sacrificed along by Newman. Bennett drove one through Howell and Powell went to third. Bennett promptly started to steal second, but was caught between the bases on Ripley's throw to White. Then started a game of tag up and down the line while White kept his eye on Powell. Just as Bennett was tagged Powell gathered himself together and got his paddles started for the plate. White made a pretty throw and caught him by three feet.

The next four innings were uneventful, but a hit, a walk and three costly errors gave the Champs five runs in the ninth that they didn't need.

SEVERELY BRUISED.

Two Men Hurt By Caboose Being Derailed.

Two Harbors, Minn., Aug. 16.—S. C. Hannon, one of the oldest conductors in the employ of the Duluth & Iron Range road, and B. M. Bryant, an old employe, were both severely bruised and considerably cut up in a train accident between here and Knife river at 6:45 o'clock yesterday morning. The train was running twenty miles an hour when some logs rolled off one of the cars, near the rear end of the train, and derailed the caboose. It turned over several times with the men in it. They are now at their homes here.

IS SPORTY COURSE

Twin City Golfers Perturbed at Duluth's Hilly Ground.

Winner of State Tournament Will Have to Play Golf.

St. Paul and Minneapolis golfers are considering, with just a touch of anxiety, the links of the Northland Country club, and wondering what will be the outcome of the play here in the state tournament next week.

Since the visit of the players from the Bryn Mawr club to Duluth, stories of the "sporty" nature of the Duluth links have been carried back to the Twin Cities, and golfers who have been used to level fields and artificial hazards are somewhat troubled at the prospect of hilly country and natural hazards, and the consensus of opinion is that the winner will have to play golf in the Duluth tournament.

The Duluth course is, in fact, one of the most unique and difficult courses in the country. With the numerous natural hazards, such as the creeks, ravines and hills, the player has to keep well in the course or endless trouble will result.

In many places on the course a topped ball means a struggle out of a ravine through tall grass, while in other places a sliced ball or an overplay will cause almost as much difficulty.

Bogey for the course is 42 strokes, divided as follows: 4, 5, 5, 4, 4, 5, 5, 5, 5—42.

The principal hazard in the first hole is a ravine at the start, which requires a 175-yard drive to clear. Once over that the hole is an easy one.

The second hole is a hard one, about 375 yards in length. A good drive from the tee leaves the golfer facing a 40-yard ravine, which must be cleared, and great care must be taken not to go too far, as forty yards beyond the ravine is "out of bounds."

The third hole requires a 150-yard drive to cross the same ravine on the way back. Once across the ravine it is plain sailing to the green, with a bogey 5. This is the longest hole on the course, being over 400 yards.

The fourth hole is 200 yards in length, the principal danger being in a pulled or a badly sliced ball which would get the golfer out of his course into rough ground.

The fifth hole is a comparatively easy one with few difficulties, but the tall grass which must be avoided.

From the sixth tee a drive of 150 yards is necessary to clear a marsh, the street railway tracks and two fences.

The seventh hole presents an upright and very difficult bunker about 150 yards from the tee, after which comes a difficult mid-iron or mashie shot over a ravine and then a difficult approach to a raised green.

The eighth hole presents some difficulties in the way of long grass which would be encountered with a topped ball, but with a 150-yard drive from the tee, no further obstacles would present themselves.

The ninth hole gives a chance to make a long drive valuable. A 200-yard drive would land the ball where a good mid-iron shot would clear the ravine, but anything under 200 yards on the drive would make it very risky to attempt the ravine without another stroke. Once across the ravine the course is clear.

W. SANGER PULLMAN DIES FROM INJURIES.

Redwood City, Cal., Aug. 16.—Walter Sanger Pullman, who was injured in a runaway accident last Sunday, died last night at his home in Belmont. An investigation disclosed that his skull was fractured.

This August Blanket Sale Is a Notable Event to Housekeepers.

It's a great thing to be prepared. Russia wasn't—Japan was. Months ago, when business was at the lowest ebb with the mills, we placed our orders for blankets. By virtue of this foresight we secured these low prices, that are your inducements to buy blankets in August

At Prices Impossible at Other Seasons.

Today prices are much higher than a few months ago, on both wool and cotton—and still going up. Yet, on the six-months-ago basis, experienced housekeepers will recognize these August savings as big and unusual. You careful folks will need no urging to buy fall blankets right now.

At 39c
Gray or tan cotton blankets — good weight — are very soft and fleecy—the regular 50c kind.

At 59c
10-4 cotton blankets — gray, tan or white—with or without colored borders—best quality cotton.

At 79c
11-4 heavily-fleeced cotton blankets, with fancy borders—full size—you'd pay $1.00 elsewhere.

At $1.00
$1.25 and $1.50; 12-4 cotton blankets with pretty borders and shell stitched ends — tan, gray and white—all special values.

At $1.35
Fancy robe blankets selling at $2.00, $2.50 and $2.75—only one or two of a kind.

At $2.98
All wool blankets, full four pounds in weight. Cannot be matched at the August price.

At $3.95
Gray wool blankets, 76x84—shrunk and well made—would be a bargain at $5.00.

COOPER'S NEW DISCOVERY REMOVES IMMENSE PARASITES

Every Sufferer From Stomach Trouble Should Read This Interesting Letter.

The Cooper Medicine Co., Gentlemen—

For five years I have suffered from stomach trouble in its severest form. During that time I have not had a well day. I was tired all the time and the slightest exertion completely exhausted me.

I had terrible spells of dizziness and nausea. My stomach was bloated and hurt me continually, and I had very severe headaches.

I could not sleep at night and when I arose in the morning, I was worn out.

I had a good appetite most of the time, but the sight of food made me sick.

I had only taken three doses of Cooper's New Discovery when a monstrous tape-worm, 92½ feet long passed from my system.

I am feeling greatly improved and am gaining rapidly in strength and flesh. Signed, Mrs. D. Hyde, No. 22 Twenty-third street, Milwaukee, Wis.

STOMACH TROUBLE IS FREQUENTLY CAUSED BY PARASITE.

A few bottles and oft times a few doses of Cooper's New Discovery will remove these monstrous worms, which prey upon the vital organs of the human system.

Cooper's New Discovery costs $1.00 per bottle, three for $2.50, six for $5.00. Cooper's Quick Relief, the assistant remedy, costs 50 cents per bottle. Buy from our agent, or where we have no agent, send the price of the medicine you wish direct to the Cooper Medicine Co., Dayton, Ohio, and the medicines will be forwarded to you, charges prepaid.

OPENING DAY OF TRI-STATE RACES

Close Finishes and Fast Time In All Events.

Protests Entered Against the Winners—More Fine Contests.

Under a clear sky, and with a cool breeze from off the lake, a small crowd witnessed the fast and interesting events at the opening of the tri-state circuit yesterday afternoon. Two races were pulled off, in both of which fast time was made on a track which has never been in better condition. The finishes were all close enough to be exciting although the winners took three straight heats.

Protests were made against the winners, George F in the 2:22 trot or pace and Wyman S in the 2:40 trot or pace, both stake event. Harvey Snyder, driver of Lady Option, in the 2:22 pace, claimed that George F, owned by George F. Barnard had not been properly identified and had been entered in the wrong class. Mr. Snyder claimed that the horse had been protested a few days previous at Sauk Center, Minn., on suspicion that he was a "ringer" and he insisted that the owner identify him to the satisfaction of the track authorities or keep out of the money.

J. W. Glazier of Duluth, owner of Lochinvar, protested Wyman S, an Ashland horse, owned by George Wilkinson, on the ground that in a race for a side bet of $100, recently, the Wilkinson horse went a mile in 2:30 and should not be eligible to the 2:40 class.

Both protests have been taken under consideration and the claims will be investigated before the money is paid over to the winners.

Each event yesterday had five starters. The races were started without any of the delays that are so often experienced, an arrangement that proved very satisfactory to the spectators.

George F won three straight heats in the 2:22 class, the first heat being paced in 2:22 flat and the succeeding heats in 2:19¾ and 2:19¾ respectively, which the horsemen claim is as good as 2:15 racing on a mile track and where the turns are not so sharp.

In the second and third heats of this race, with the horses all well bunched at the finish, there was a pretty contest between George F. and Dr. E. from the head of the stretch to the wire. George F., although handicapped by a sore knee, which he seemed to favor, showed a surprising amount of gameness and won by a narrow margin each time, when it looked as though he was almost certain of defeat. Byron W. and Lady Option had an exciting finish in the third heat for third place.

The summary of the race follows:

2:22 PACE OR TROT, PURSE $400.

George F., b. g. p. (George F. Barnard	1	1	1
Dr. E., g. s. p. (Lon Matthews)	2	2	2
Byron W., b. g. p. (E. M. Fay)	3	3	3
Lady Option, b. m. p. (H. Snyder)	4	4	4
Little Willie, b. g. p. (Con Shannon	5	5	5

Time, 2:22, 2:19¾, 2:19¾.

* * *

Wyman S. demonstrated that he had a little speed held in reserve every time he was called upon in the 2:40 event, and Dr. C. caused him to draw on this reserve frequently in the three heats, both horses making the circle without a skip and finishing less than a length apart. Lochinvar, a Duluth horse driven by William McGraw, showed up well and gave Dr. C. a very nervous moment in the last two heats when the two approached the wire, fighting for third place. The time in which all three of the heats were paced was a surprise, all being under 2:27.

The summary of the race follows:

2:40 TROT OR PACE, PURSE $300.

Wyman S., b. g. p. (M. Wilkinson)	1	1	1
Edward C., b. g. p. (M. Corcoran)	2	2	2
Dr. C., b. g. p. (M. McDaniel)	3	3	3
Lochinvar, s. g. p. (William McGraw	4	4	4
Tutsey B., br. m. p. (E. Kennedy)	5	5	5

Time 2:23¼, 2:23¾, 2:25.

* * *

This afternoon the races scheduled comprise a 2:30 trot or pace, purse $400, with four starters; a 2:18 pace, purse, $300, with seven starters, a running race and a pony race.

Thursday afternoon, the closing events will consist of another 2:30 pace or trot, purse, $400, with the following horses starting: Walter J., Omega, Black Chief, Viola C., Navajoe, Little Willie, Wyman S., Lochinvar, Dr. C., and Dr. E. The event is expected to be a lively one with so large a number of the speedy horses, and particularly so as there is a side wager of $200 on position between the owners of Wyman S., and Walter J.

The special race for county horses failing to fill, the management has arranged for a special race for all the fast ones for which a liberal purse will be hung up. There will also be a good running race.

IS NOT A RINGER.

George Barnard Denies Snyder's Claim and Will Bet.

George F. Barnard, the owner of the grey gelding George F, which won in yesterday's race for the 2:22 class, is much incensed over the allegation of Harvey Snyder that his horse is a "ringer."

Mr. Barnard appeared at The Herald office this morning to deny the statement, and posted a draft for $100 as a bet that Mr. Snyder or any other man could not show that George F had ever been raced under any other name, or that the gelding was ineligible for the 2:22 class.

Mr. Barnard claims that the gelding's record is 2:19¼ and that he was staked in due time for the race, and was as eligible as any other animal in the field.

"The trouble is," said Mr. Barnard, "that Mr. Snyder has a horse that is not fast enough for a good buggy driver, and because it can't win he is kicking because someone else has a good horse. I am willing to bet this $100 I have posted and $400 more that my horse is not a ringer, and that it never raced under any other name. If Mr. Snyder means business he will cover that money or any part of it and back up his claim with something besides talk."

STRIPPING MEN

At the Morris Mine Start Peculiar Strike.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 16.—Fifty-five men employed at the Drake-Stratton stripping works, at the Morris mine, walked out as the result of a misunderstanding with the company. The men have lately been raised to $2 a day from $1.75, but they were required to report at the mine on rainy days, and for this they were not paid unless there was some work done. The men claim that they should receive some time for reporting for duty on rainy days whether they work or not.

PROBABLY INSANE.

Norwegian Confined In the Jail at Crookston.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Constantly pursued by an unseen foe, who has not allowed him to sleep a wink during the past five months, or since the month of March, imagining that he is under the influence of a hypnotizer, and that a wireless message station has been established in his head, by means of which he is constantly receiving messages, William Gustafson is confined at the county jail and will be examined for his sanity. Gustafson claims Minneapolis as his home. He is a Norwegian, about 30 years old.

INTERNATIONAL FIRE FIGHTERS' CONVENTION

sure you that on behalf of the citizens of Duluth we extend you a most heartfelt greeting. I hope sincerely that nothing will happen to mar the pleasure of your visit."

• • •

Theodore Hollister, president of the fire board of Duluth, was next introduced to welcome the chiefs and their ladies on behalf of the fire board and the fire department. Mr. Hollister was in a happy mood and made an instantaneous hit with his hearers. Said he:

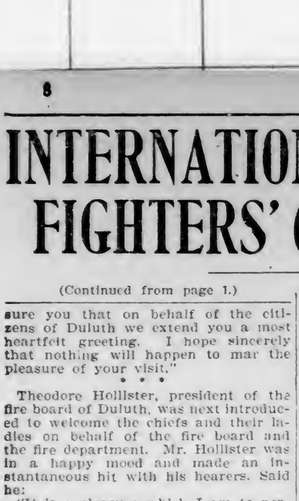

"It is a pleasure which I am to perform in welcoming you to our city in behalf of the fire board and the fire department. We are proud of our city, of its climate and of its atmosphere. If there is one thing of which we have an excess it is atmosphere, especially when we get a northeaster. We welcome you to all of it and hope you will make yourselves at home with it. It is not the part of members of the fire board to talk, but to do. We do very little and put that onto the chief. Fire chiefs are a great aid to fire commissioners. The fire commissioners are supposed to know the price of hay and coal and the most advantageous time to buy each, but we leave it to the chief. The fire commissioners are supposed to know all about a fire engine and the difference between gas pipe and hose, but we leave it to the chief. We are supposed to know all about a horse from his teeth as long as he has any to every other detail, but we leave it to the chief after the horse has no teeth and is of no more use for the department to trade that horse off for a young and healthy animal and get money to boot.

"We of Duluth are proud of our fire department. We believe we have one of the best departments in the United States and that in John Black we have one of the best chiefs in the United States.

"I will say nothing more for there are too many eloquent men to follow me, who will better express our ideas to you than can I. But in the name of the fire board and the fire department, I extend to you our most hearty welcome and hope that you will enjoy your visit to us to the full."

• • •

Chief Black introduced E. L. Millar to the audience to welcome the visitors in behalf of the Commercial club. He added that Mr. Millar is considered one of the best speakers of this part of the country, and it would seem from the hits he made in his address that the audience was heartily endorsing Chief Black's introduction.

E. L. MILLAR,
Whose Witty Welcome Made a Tremendous Hit.

Mr. Millar said that after the eloquent remarks which had been made since the mayor had presented to the visitors the keys of the city and Mr. Hollister had given them the number of "the room," there seemed nothing left for him to do but to send up a few highballs for the gentlemen and ask the ladies what they would have. Mr. Millar went on to say that he had been at a loss for the correct name of the association, but that while coming up from the hotel he had been posted by one of the visiting fire fighters that the name of the association was the "International Association of Fire Engineers." The speaker said that that made him understand the situation at once; the men were the engineers and their wives were the chiefs.

Mr. Millar then commended the Duluth fire department saying that Duluth's department and the chief of that department are considered by the business interests here as second to none in the United States. Said he in regard to Chief Black:

"A member of the association told me this morning that the greatest fire chief in the universe is his Satanic Majesty. But I disputed the point. I told that member that Chief Black could beat the devil."

Mr. Millar then paid a very neat and glowing tribute to the ladies present and said that their presence confirmed him in his first impression that the chiefs present were men of good hard sense.

"Duluth," said Mr. Millar, "is a good deal like a pretty woman. She is beautiful, coy, and you don't know what to expect next. (Laughter.) God created the heavens and the earth and they were without form and void. Then he created the American woman, but she was too dangerously beautiful for heaven so he created the United States to put her in, and things have been going along all right since. This afternoon the ladies will go driving and I wish it were possible that I could ride in each and every brake with the ladies, so that my attention should be undivided. We will drive you around the boulevard that you may see the beauties of our city and our highway of commerce. We teach people to look up to Duluth by looking down on it. The view from the boulevard shows the beautiful bay and its entry out of which rides each year 30,000,000 tons of commerce onto God's great highway, Lake Superior, to the world at large. We show you the great St. Louis river, whose current twists and winds down to the lake and lay and on which you Knickerbockers have loaned us $10,000,000 to develop a water power which when finished will drown the greatness of your own roaring Niagara.

"I am here to welcome you on behalf of the Commercial club, and I am glad to have the opportunity to welcome you, both ladies and gentlemen, to extend a ringing, royal and red-hot welcome to you all. You are welcome to anything in the city except our wives and you have such nice ones yourselves that you won't need ours." Applause.

Mr. Millar was given an ovation as he took his seat.

• • •

Chief Joynor of Atlanta, the president of the association, said that he would call upon Chief G. W. Horton of Baltimore to give the response to the address of welcome as he did not feel able to answer the glowing words of welcome which had been given by the local speakers. He said that first he wished to call to mind that this convention marks the thirty-third milestone in the association's career and that this is the second convention the association has held in Minnesota the first time being in Minneapolis in 1888, at which time also he was president of the association.

Chief Horton said that he has not had a chance to prepare an address in response, but he, together with all of the visitors, felt that words would be inadequate to express their pleasure at being

CHIEF G. W. HORTON, Baltimore,
Who Responded to the Address of Welcome.

in beautiful Duluth on this occasion. He said that he hoped this thirty-third convention would prove the thirty-third degree, the capstone of the success of the assembly. He thanked the mayor and the other speakers for their warm words of welcome and assured them that the visitors would embrace every opportunity to make themselves at home.

After the band had played a selection, E. L. Millar arose and begged the convention's indulgence for a moment while he introduced H. B. Knudsen as chairman of the committee appointed by the Commercial club to take care of the ladies.

"Whenever you see that golden dome of thought," said Mr. Millar to the ladies, "ask for what you want."

This was greeted with a prolonged roar of laughter and at the demand of all present, Mr. Knudsen was seized and forced to the front of the stage where he bowed and blushed his acknowledgements.

• • •

Then the convention got down to business. The first communication read was from John L. Fuller, manager of the North American Telegraph company, who offered the visitors the free use of that company's wires for any messages they desired to send. Silberstein & Bondy also had a communication in, inviting the visitors to a reception to be held on the second floor of their store tomorrow afternoon, at which refreshments will be served and music provided.

The roll call then took place, after which A. J. Lerlnin, W. B. Martin and Louis Schaetzle were appointed a committee on credentials. The minutes of the previous meeting were passed without reading, and the convention took a recess of five minutes to allow the ladies to retire.

On reassembling a communication was read regarding the proposed insurance rates on houses containing ammunition of all kinds. It was from the representatives from several cartridge companies, and stated that while the insurance underwriters do not claim that the ammunition is dangerous in a fire, it causes the firemen to put less confidence in themselves in fighting the fire. The communication also claimed that the cartridges, while they explode in a fire, do not do so with sufficient force to injure anybody, and that it is scarcely more than a puff of smoke and the release but not discharge of the bullet. It was stated in the communication that this will be demonstrated at a test which will be given on the grounds next the armory tomorrow morning at 9 o'clock.

A discussion followed this communication. Chief McQuade of Chattanooga said that this test is a thing he wishes to see. He himself, he said, does not know positively if the statement is true, but that it was claimed that at his neighboring city, Memphis, at a fire, bullets flew across the street out of brass shells.

Chief Higgins of Albany, N. Y., claimed that he has seen it demonstrated that copper shells do not so explode.

Chief Rosetta of Nashville says he has never considered cartridges dangerous in a fire.

A representative of the Winchester Fire Arms company asked that the exhibits committee go with him and the representatives of the other cartridge companies to the wholesale houses here and satisfy themselves that the cartridges which will be in the test are not fixed up but that the are taken from regular stock.

A letter was received from Chief Chris O'Brien of Shreveport, La., expressing his regret that he could not be present because his town is tied up with the yellow fever quarantine.

Chief Tyson of Louisville asked that every member of the association be out to the memorial services for dead brothers at the Lyceum tonight, and in this connection President Jaynor of Atlanta announced that Mayor Howell of Atlanta, who was an honorary and esteemed member of the association, died last week. The convention then adjourned until 2 o'clock this afternoon.

SOUR STOMACH (ACID DYSPEPSIA.)

Now Reconized as the Cause of Serious Disease.

Acid Dyspepsia, commonly called heartburn or sour stomach, is a form of indigestion resulting from fermentation of the food. The stomach being too weak to promptly digest it, the food remains until fermentation begins, filing the stomach with gas, and a bitter, sour, burning taste in the mouth is often present. This condition soon becomes chronic and being an everyday occurrence is given but little attention. Because Dyspepsia is not immediately fatal, many people do nothing for the trouble.

It is now well known among able physicians that the whole constitution is gradually undermined and weakened, that the nerves and vital organs are seriously affected by any form of dyspepsia. This is plain, as every organ, every nerve in the body is nourished by the blood and the blood is replenished from the food digested. If the food is properly digested the blood is pure, the nerves steady, but if supplied from a sour, fermenting, decaying mass the blood is vitiated, poisoned and the result is shown in sleeplessness, lack of energy, poor appetite, nervousness. Every trifle is magnified and the dyspeptic sees nothing but the dark side of everything.

Within a recent period a remedy has been discovered prepared solely to cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles. It is known as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and it is now becoming rapidly used and prescribed as a radical cure for every form of dyspepsia.

It is not claimed to cure anything except dyspepsia and stomach weakness in its various forms, but for this is has been shown to be unequalled. The eminent specialists, Reed and O'Leary, have recently stated that they considered Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets an unfailing specific for disorders of the digestive organs, and the remarkable cures made in cases of long standing dyspepsia proves that this remedy has extraordinary merit.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been placed before the public and are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package, and while it promptly and effectually restores a vigorous digestion, strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite and makes life worth living.

TRAINED NURSES

Wanted In Panama and For Indian Service.

Civil service examinations will be held on Sept. 13, for trained nurses for the Indian service and for the Panama service. The position vacant in the Indian service is at Carson, Nevada, and will pay $60 with the further inducement of being able to gaze on the spot where Fitzsimmons licked Corbett for the world's championship.

While the position of nurse in the Indian service is open only to women, that for trained nurse in Panama is open to both sexes. In the Panama matter the age limits is between 20 and 35 years and the compensation offered is $50 with board and quarters. The applicant's own physique must be sound.

The quartermaster's department at large in Washington and other points need architectural and structural draftsmen and examinations for such positions will be held on Sept. 13 and 14. The salary amounts to $1,500 a year.

vented from completing her work of civilization in that province, where she has spent millions of Russian roubles, retaining in return only unpleasant memories, and now they say that it is better to give Manchuria to nobody than to Russia, for to return Manchuria to China means to return that province to the state of barbarism. It is, however, asked if even the railroad which cuts this province in three portions, and an instrument of civilization and development of her riches, will be abandoned to Chinese neglect. With regard to the Harbin-Liatung railroad the institution of a Chinese administration had been understood as this line has no strategic legitimate value except for China. But it is quite different with the line uniting Vladivostok to Russia, which it is impossible for the Muscovite empire because of its strategy to make valuable to depend on a Chinese railroad. Technical researches have shown the enormous difficulty of uniting Vladivostok and Port Arthur with Europe around the Amur. So the civilized world welcomed the decision of Russia to build a railroad through Manchuria. Russia made this immense effort which, considering the policy of the open door, will be of great and equal advantage to the commerce of the world. It is therefore just that Russia should have the material guaranty that the railroad line should not run the least risk of being destroyed or cut by the brigands or that it should suffer in case of a misunderstanding with China. The commerce of the world will gain very much if Japan should be entrusted with the guarding of the line and Russia with the protection of the north line, mutually pledging themselves to follow the policy of the open door in the whole province."

RUSSIANS THINK

Japs Have Secured More Than Previously Dreamed of.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 16.—According to the Russian view, Japan has already secured all and more than she dreamed of claiming before the war. To insist upon a foe who has still half a million men confronting her in the field footing the bill for the cost of the war as the price of peace would, the Russians say, change the character of a military struggle henceforth from one for certain principles to one for the exaction of "blood money."

All questions relating to Korea and Manchuria except the cession of the Chinese Eastern railroad and the main Siberian line running through northern Manchuria from the station "Manchuria" on the Amur via Harbin to Vladivostok, are settled in the five articles already adopted. Some confusion has arisen about those articles and the following resume can be accepted as absolutely accurate:

1. Recognition of Japan's "preponderating influence" in Korea.

2. Mutual obligation to evacuate Manchuria, Russia to retrocede to China all special privileges.

3. Japanese obligation to restore the sovereignty and administration of China in Manchuria.

4. Mutual obligations to respect the territorial and administrative integrity of China and the principle of the "open door."

5. The surrender of the Russian leases of the Liaotung peninsula, including Port Arthur, Dalny and the Blonde and Elliott islands.

The remaining seven articles (not given in numercial order) are:

The cession of Sakhalin, reimbursement for the cost of the war; the cession to China of the Chinese-Eastern railroad, the article relating to that portion of the main line of the Siberian railroad running through Northern Manchuria, which includes provision for policing of the road by China and not by Russia; fishing rights on the Siberian coast north of Vladivostok to the Bering sea, the article affecting Russia's naval power in the Far East and that providing for the surrender of the Russian warships interned in Far Eastern waters. To all of these Russia has more or less objection.

Besides indemnity and Sakhalin, M. Witte will strenuously oppose the surrender of the interned warships, the limitation upon Russia's naval power and the cession of the Chinese-Eastern railroad to China.

The article relating to the Chinese-Eastern railroad is number seven and comes up at the session today. The Russians are prepared with documentary evidence, if the article is not passed over, to show that the railroad is a private corporation owned by the Russo-Chinese bank. M. Pokotiloff, one of the Russian delegates, was manager of the bank in St. Petersburg until a few months ago, when he was sent to Pekin as minister, upon the death of M. Lessar.

M. Berger, the attorney of the bank, is also here and the fight upon this article is sure to prove extremely interesting and possibly prolonged, as Russia will contest the Japanese contention that the Russian government is the real owner of the railroad and that it was built for purely strategic purposes.

The only jar in the sessions of the conference yesterday occurred at the morning session when a rather spirited controversy occurred over the question of the publicity of the proceedings. Each side manifested a disposition to charge the other with being responsible for the "leaks," and it was settled by renewed pledges to observe the strictest secrecy henceforth regarding the proceedings. As a result the correspondents experienced additional difficulty in securing information.

JAPS FORGOT TO DEMAND OPEN DOOR IN SIBERIA.

Tokio, Aug. 16.—The Ashai, in discussing the proceedings of the peace conference at Portsmouth, suggests that Japan omitted to demand the open door in Siberia and the opening of Siberian river to the navigation of the world. Vladivostok, as a free port, it declares, would not benefit Japan much but it would greatly assist the development of American commerce.

MEMORIAL TOWER

To Ethan Allen Dedicated at Burlington, Vt.

Burlington, Vt., Aug. 16.—Vermont's state holiday, the anniversary of the battle of Bennington, was signalized today by the dedication of a memorial tower to the revolutionary patriot, Ethan Allen, in this city, with Vice President Fairbanks as the principal speaker. President Roosevelt was represented by Secretary of the Interior Hitchcock, and Governor Bell of Vermont and Governor McLane of New Hampshire also participated.

ONG LEONG TONG

Victim Belonged to Tong Which Killed Chinks In Theater.

New York, Aug. 16.—The back room of Hop Lee's little laundry at No. 609 East Eleventh street, was splashed with blood when the members of the Ong Leong Tong left him, hacked to pieces and dying, a victim beyond the skill of the ambluance surgeons. And as the white-coated young doctor from Bellevue fairly threw his rolls of gauze away in attempts to bandage Hop's score of wounds, the neighboring tenement population gathered outside the door and marvelled on the workings of the Celestial avenger.

Hop Lee belonged to the reform tong, the Hop Sings, who killed four in the Doyers street theater Sunday evening. Ever since that date the Ong Leongs have been threatening to kill a few of the reformers as an example. Hop was the first victim. He died soon after reaching the hospital.

The manner of his death was well calculated to strike terror to the hearts of his fellow-tongers. A meat cleaver with a keen edge about eight inches long was the instrument of death.

The five Ong Leongs who assailed him, albeit Patrolman Drescher of the Union Market station, was running as fast as he could toward Hop's laundry, cut their victim to bits.

Hop Lee had stretched himself out on his bed in the back room for a quiet smoke. It was early morning and not many people were stirring in the street. Chinese beds are strange things. A few boards stretched aross two sawhorses, a rag to mitigate the hardness, and a leather block for a pillow—these made up Hop's couch. Over one end hung a queer shaped Chinese banjo covered with dust, and pegs along the wall held his hat and a few spare coats.

Charles Smith was standing in front of the quarters of Engine company No. 28, nearly opposite Hop Lee's laundry, when he saw five Chinese dodge into Hop's place. Charley knows a thing or two about Chinese feudists and he divined that the five visitors were "Long Knives," or members of the Ong Leong entertainment committee.

He called Patrolman Drescher, who happened to be near, and Drescher rushed into the laundry. The murderous visitors had Hop Lee pinned down to his bed and were hacking at him with the cleaver. When they saw Drescher they ran out the back way and took to the roof, where the policeman and his reinforcements chased them all along the Eleventh street and Avenue B fronts. Three of the five were captured.

The three were listed as Charley Joe of No. 109 Ninth avenue; Mon Wong of No. 11 Mott street, and Lee Toy of No. 18 Mott street, which is said to be the headquarters of the Ong Leongs.

Mon Wong was the last one caught. Drescher found him hiding in one of the tenements, and when he gave chase the Chinaman fell donstairs, breaking a number of ribs, and thus gaining admission to Bellevue. Lee Toy and Charley Joe were arraigned before Magistrate Moss in the Essex market court and were remanded to the coroner without bail. As soon as they were brought into court they forgot all they knew of the English language.

MERCURY

WORSE THAN THE DISEASE

The effects of Mercury and Potash are worse than the effects of Contagious Blood Poison, for which these minerals are generally used. They cannot cure the disease, and in addition set up a poison of their own, producing dyspepsia, by drying up the gastric juices, salivation, sores, mercurial rheumatism, and often necrosis of the bones.

Bowling Green, Ky., Mitchell House.

Gentlemen:—For over four years I suffered greatly from a severe case of Contagious Blood Poison. I went to Hot Springs, staying there four months at a big expense. I then consulted physicians, who prescribed Mercury. Nothing did me any good, in fact the treatment proved more harmful than beneficial. Thus I continued to suffer for four years. I mentioned my case to a friend, who told me that S. S. S. had certainly cured him. I at once commenced its use, and in six months could find no trace of the disease whatever. This was about two years ago, and there has been no signs of return. D. M. SANDERS.

S. S. S., a remedy made from roots, herbs and barks, is the only known antidote for Contagious Blood Poison. It thoroughly and permanently eradicates the poison from the blood so that no sign is ever seen of the disease in future. S. S. S. builds up instead of tearing down the system, as do Mercury and Potash, and when it has cured the disease every part of the body has been toned up by its purifying and tonic effects. S. S. S. also removes any effects of the mineral treatment from the blood. We offer a reward of $1,000.00 for proof that S. S. S. contains a particle of Mercury, Potash or any other mineral. Home treatment book and any medical advice will be given without charge,

PUBLIC IS AROUSED.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 516 St. Clair Ave., Columbus, O., writes: "For several months, I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak, from useless doctors' drugs, that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed at all druggists; price 50c.

GETS ALONG ON $10 A YEAR

Garden and Lake Supply Food, Money His Clothes and Tobacco.

Delton, Wis., Aug. 16.—Near Mirror lake, Sauk county, is a log cabin in which a man has lived for forty years on $10 a year. George Skinnner is his name and he seems perfectly contented.

The old man is a civil war veteran. When he was discharged at the end of the war he had money enough to purchase an acre of ground on the shores of picturesque Mirror lake. In this acre of ground he planted vegetables and fruit trees. Close to the house there grows a thick cluster of blackberry bushes and in the garden behind it there are long rows of strawberries. Over the fence that separates the yard from the road are wild roses. Here the veteran makes his home.

How does he live?

Each day he takes his fishing rod and goes down to Mirror lake. That is his pork barrel. The fish that he draws out of those waters supply his dinner, likewise his breakfast.

The vegetables and meal made from corn grown in his garden complete his diet. For his lake fishing Skinner has built himself a boat which is as unique as himself. In order that he may fish and propel his boat at the same time he has invented an extraordinary contrivance.

At the stern of his boat he has a paddle like that of a river steamer. This is turned by means of a chain running on cogs and attached to a crank that the old man turns with one hand as he trolls with the other. From the strange craft, nicknamed "the flying machine" by the people of Delton, Skinner does his angling.

Skinner lives during the winter as well as he does in summer. From the over-abundance of one season he saves enough to meet the necessities of the other. During the summer days he fishes continuously. He catches on an average of 100 fish a day, mostly small ones. Ten of these suffice for his two simple meals.

The other ninety are carefully cleaned and stored away in great barrels of brine kept in the cellar of his cabin.

When he has enough barrels of fish stored away to last him through the winter, he stops fishing, as he thinks it is a sin to kill any creature, even a fish, except for food.

From his garden he cans his vegetables and berries. Everything that he needs is supplied from nature's "pork barrel."

The $10 which he spends annually goes for tobacco, fish-hooks and clothing.

GETS RID OF WIFE

New York Publisher Pays $6,250 to Arrange Matter.

Has Now Married Girl Named as the Co-respondent.

New York, Aug. 16.—Augustus Ralph Keller, for many years president of Gebbie & Co., publishers of editions de luxe in this city and Philadelphia, has finally made peace with his first wife, Annie Louise Keller. He is no longer compelled to sequestrate himself from the eyes of Sheriff Etlanger's deputes, even in so pleasant a spot as Plainfield, for the purpose of evading orders of arrest issued by the supreme court because of his failure to pay her alimony. He will be permitted henceforth to live with his second wife, who was the co-respondent named in the first Keller's suit for an absolute divorce, without fear of molestation.

To secure this happy state of affairs Mr. Keller parted with $6,250, according to the papers receiving the approval of the supreme court justices.

Mr. Keller is inclined to look upon the transaction as a good bargain, for when negotiations were first opened looking toward a settlement, it is understood that the first Mrs. Keller held out for the purchase of an annuity which would have cost her former husband $28,000. As it is, the litigation, covering a period of many years, is said to have cost Mr. Keller in the neighborhood of $30,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Keller were married in this city in 1883. Three children were born to them, Arthur, the youngest, still living with his mother by order of the court. They lived together in this city until 1899, when differences arose, and in 1897 it was suggested that they should live apart. An agreement was entered into to that effect, and, according to Mr. Keller, some time later negotiations were opened looking to a divorce. Proceedings to this end were begun in the supreme court by Mrs. Keller in January, 1902, she naming as co-respondent a beautiful young woman who she declared had been employed by her husband as a stenographer and typewriter in the Philadelphia office of her husband's firm. On April 21 of the same year Justice Fitzgerald of the supreme court granted Mrs. Keller a decree of absolute divorce, and awarded her the custody of the minor child, Arthur Ray Keller.

Under the terms of the same decree Mrs. Keller was awarded alimony at the rate of $85 a month, while her husband was prohibited from remarrying. Prior to this time, Mrs. Keller asserted, her husband had been allowing her $115 a month for household expenses, "while at the same time he was maintaining a richly appointed establishment in Larchwood street, Philadelphia, for the co-respondent, upon the evidence of whose relations with the defendant the decree was secured, and which co-respondent is now the wife of the defendant."

Justice O'Gorman issued an order adjudging Keller in contempt for failure to pay the alimony, and committing him to the custody of the sheriff. Mr. Keller retained Lawyers Moses H. Grossman and Alfred Beekman of House, Grossman & Vorhaus, to take an appeal to the appellate division. While these proceedings were pending in the courts Mr. Keller stuck pretty closely to his New Jersey home. The appellate division reversed the order of the lower court, directing the imprisonment of Mr. Keller for contempt of court in failing to give a bond of $5,000 to secure the payment of alimony, on the ground that he had never been served with the papers in the proceeding; but it upheld the appointment of Sampson H. Weinhandler as receiver of Keller's property in this city and the order increasing the alimony from $85 to $112.

This decision led to negotiations for a settlement, which have proved successful.

ST. CLAIRE WINS THE SECOND

Detroit Yacht Will Undoubtedly Secure the Lipton Cup.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Under ideal conditions, St. Claire, the Detroit yacht yesterday captured the second of the series of races for the Lipton cup. Queen Saba, the Chicago yacht club representative was second and Mendota, the Milwaukee yacht third. Hoosier, the other Chicago boat met with an accident and did not finish.

When the starting gun was fired promptly at 2 o'clock the quartet of yachts set sail to a beautiful start, with the St. Claire in the lead by a boat length, followed by Queen Saba, Mendota and Hoosier, in the order named. For the first half mile St. Claire and Quien Saba sailed almost on perfectly even terms, while the Mendota and Hooster some distance back were also running close together. For a brief moment the Quien Sabe showed in front, but remained there only a short time. St. Claire quickly picked her up and gradually drew away from the Chicago boat, which lead was steadily increased during the remainder of the race. Quien Sabe had a good margin over Mendota at the finish. The race was over a 12-mile course, windward to leeward, three miles to the leg, twice around.

Today's race, which will be the last of the series is over a quadrangle course, and unless an accident prevents, there seems little doubt but that St. Claire will capture first place in all three races.

SOME WAR BETS.

Some extraordinary bets have been made on the Japanese-Russian war. A number of Japanese officers have bet that they would be killed in battle. The money was to go to their widows. One officer, on starting for the front, made the following wager: If he were killed within a month his heirs was to pay his opponent 10 yen ($5) a day until he had survived 100 days, after which the bet was to cease. He undertook to expose himself to danger only when military conditions demanded it; in other words, he would not willfully let himself be killed.

CHILDREN AT WORK

Strikes at Life of State as Well as People.

An Argument For Enforcement of Child Labor Legislation.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 16.—At the nineteenth annual convention of the International Association of Factory Inspectors, held here today, Oren R. Lovejoy, assistant secretary of the national child labor committee, spoke on the enforcement of child labor legislation, saying in part:

When industry lays its hands upon childhood and makes conscripts of the defenseless, then industry strikes at the life of the state, for the state is a vital organism, not a crystal. The economic theories of the manufacturer, if applied in the industries under his control, become directly the affair of society, and here lies the justification of legislation governing employment.

The men and women who come from the ranks of child labor into our almshouses and hospitals, together with those youth who, having passed the period of childhood and not yet arrived at maturity, stand idle in the market because they will not compete at the wages with the labor of little children and cannot compete with the more exacting labor of adults, and that larger standing army of workless men whose places in the factory have been taken by little hands that can tend the almost human machines and yet command only a child's pay for a man's work, these fasten upon society that millstone which it was long ago declared might justly be hanged about the neck of him who causes one of these little ones to stumble.

Despite the efforts to reduce the army of wrking children in America, during the perior from 1880 to 1900, while the population of the country increased only 50 per cent the number of boys from 10 to 15 years of age engaged in mechanical and manufacturing pursuits increased 100 per cent, while the number of girls between the same ages and in the same class of industries increased 150 per cent.

All the duties of the factory inspector, to criticise laws to investigate conditions and to interpret information, have for their purpose the enforcement of law. But this does not relieve the private citizen of obligation. Ours has been called "a government by complaint." All legislation is the direct result of concentrated influence brought to bear upon law makers. Naturally the interests directly affected are first to present their claims, and representatives of various industries are always at hand to oppose restriction of night work, the raising of age limits, and other child labor legislation, one cotton manufacturer recently even asserting that the machinery of his industry is especially constructed to accommodate the height of children 10 and 12 years old.

But who will present the cause of the army of toiling children? Who will array the pale faces and crippled limbs and hollow chests and dwarfed intellects and moral fatigue of these little laborers to plead for them? Who will show that this army is a menace not only to itself, but to society? Who will demonstrate that one of the greatest forces lying at the root of the "labor problem" is this inarticulate juvenile army which a short-sighted industrial economy keeps on hand as raw material to force the labor market? These children are not conscious of their need and are most frequently arrayed against any effort to emancipate them. To expect a few inspectors to plead alone a cause which is the concern of all society is a cowardly shirking of responsibility which cannot be indulged without the atrophy of the social conscience. The greatest menace to our democracy is delegated responsibility.

Private enterprise must undertake the collection of information that cannot be gathered by an official. For example, the law in Pennsylvania forbids the employment of children under 14 in the coal breaks and the records of the mines show that the law is obeyed. Yet in May of the present year an investigation by the national child labor committee showed that in one small borough of 7,000 population, among the boys working in the breakers thirty-five were 9 years old, forty were 10, forty-five were eleven, and forty-five were 12. Over 150 boys working illegally in the single borough. The extent of the field of mine inspection and the defects in the law regarding proof of age, left the inspector powerless to correct this abuse.

The proprietor of a successful glass house recently with pride brought me to a small boy who sat on a low stool tying glass stoppers into small bottles. He sat bent over his work, the bottles held between his knees and the bundle of string at his hip, his body thrown forward and his chest contracted, his thin arms flying with the swift and accurate motion of a perfect machine, as he hurried in his labor for ten hours a day. Three knots were made for each and his daily task was 300 dozen bottles. As a machine he is perfect, but as the precursor of a healthy man he is a failure. He has been reduced to a bundle of quivering nerves and can doubtless tie knots at lightning speed easier than he can sit still. The boy is already above the legal age, having spent six years of his life on that stool. Since no law is violated the inspector is helpless. Only aroused public sentiment can correct such evils as this.

It is rather too much to hope that the near future will witness uniform child labor legislation in the different stacs, but it is one of the aims of the national child labor committee to hasten the harmonizing of legislation as rapidly as social and economic interests will justify a rising standard. We place ourselves at your service and the service of the state, unhampered by official obligation and including in our membership advocates of this cause from all sections of the country regardless of state boundaries, and we desire to co-operate with all possible forces until in every corner of our land child life shall be secure against the stupidity of ignorance and the cupidity of selfish interest.

NOTHING WRONGFUL

In Death of Pugilist on Board Cruiser Yankee.

Washington, Aug. 16.—Secretary Bonaparte, after a thorough examination of the records in the case of Raphael Cohen, the coal passer on the converted cruiser Yankee, whose death resulted from injuries received in a boxing contst held on an American warship in Dominican water on July 9, said that from an investigation of the records he saw nothing wrongful, although of course, it was extremely deplorable that Cohen should have lost his life. He added that boxing and athletics generally are encouraged in the service, because of their beneficial influence on the health of the men, as well as to relieve the tedium of a sailor's life. The court found that neither Cohen's adversary nor any other person was in any wise culpable and recommended that no further action be taken.

Admiral Bradford approved the finding of the court as at present formed, and the department finds nothing in the case that calls for action.

CAUSE OF BOYCOTT

Is Discourteous Treatment to Sons of Infiuential Chinese.

San Francisco, Aug. 15.—J. W. Davidson, acting consul general at Shanghai, who arrived from the Orient yesterday, says that the cause of the Chinese boycott is the discourteous treatment which the sons of influential Chinese officials have received at the hands of immigration officials on landing at San Francisco.

Mr. Davidson thought that the fact that orders had already been placed for six months ahead for delivery of American goods would prevent the boycott being successful, but he admitted that a popular anti-foreign feeling might be aroused which would carry the fight beyond control and result in serious consequences.

"The purposes of the boycott," said Mr. Davidson, "has never been to secure the admission of coolies but to gain a proper treatment of the exempt classes."

UNACCOUNTED FOR.

"Old" Gorton of Manchester was an ardent disciple of Izaak Walton, says the Boston Herald. On one occasion he was sitting upon the railroad bridge in company with some of the young men of the town, pursuing his favorite occupation. The fish did not bite well, however, and one of his companions, becoming impatient, unnoticed by the old man, got up, wound up his line, and started for home, throwing a couple of fish into Gorton's basket as he passed.

After a time Gorton, too, tired of his poor luck, prepared for departure. Lifting the cover of his basket, he looked incounted his catch, and said, with a surprised and disappointed voice: "Why, I had five cunners, and now there ain't but seven! Where the devil's tother two?"

DEFAULT HAS BEEN MADE IN THE conditions of a certain mortgage made and executed by John A. Goheen, unmarried, mortgagor, to Byron T. Randall, mortgagee, dated May 28, 1889, and recorded July 23, 1889, at 5 o'clock p. m. in the Register of Deeds' office, St. Louis county, Minnesota, in Book 39 of Mortgages, page 414. Said default consists in the nonpayment of the principal sum secured thereby and of the interest thereon from May 28, 1892. There is claimed to be due and is actually due at the date of this notice, on said mortgage, the sum of Nine Hundred Thirty-nine Dollars and forty-six cents ($939.46), and said mortgage contains a power of sale which has become operative by reason of the default above mentioned, and no action or proceeding at law or otherwise has been instituted to recover said debt or any part thereof.

Now, therefore, notice is hereby given, that under and by virtue of the power of sale contained in said mortgage, and pursuant to the statute in such case made and provided, said mortgage will be foreclosed by a sale of said premises therein described, situate in St. Louis County, Minnesota, viz.: Lots numbered fourteen (14) and sixteen (16), in block numbered two (2), in Superior View Addition to Duluth, according to the recorded plat thereof; which said premises, with the hereditaments and appurtenances thereunto belonging, will be sold by the sheriff of said St. Louis County, at the front door of the Court House in the city of Duluth, said County and State, Sept. 21, 1905, at ten o'clock a. m., at public auction, to the highest bidder for cash, to pay said debt and interest, and taxes, if any, on said premises, and Fifty Dollars ($50), attorney's fees, stipulated in said mortgage in case of foreclosure, and the disbursements allowed by law, subject to redemption within one year from the date of sale, as provided by law.

Victim Belonged to Tong Which Killed Chinks In Theater.

New York, Aug. 16.—The back room of Hop Lee's little laundry at No. 609 East Eleventh street, was splashed with blood when the members of the Ong Leong Tong left him, hacked to pieces and dying, a victim beyond the skill of the ambulance surgeons. And as the white-coated young doctor from Bellevue fairly threw his rolls of gauze away in attempts to bandage Hop's score of wounds, the neighboring tenement population gathered outside the door and marvelled on the workings of the Celestial avenger.

Hop Lee belonged to the reform tong, the Hop Sings, who killed four in the Doyers street theater Sunday evening. Ever since that date the Ong Leongs have been threatening to kill a few of the reformers as an example. Hop was the first victim. He died soon after reaching the hospital.

The manner of his death was well calculated to strike terror to the hearts of his fellow-tongers. A meat cleaver with a keen edge about eight inches long was the instrument of death.

The five Ong Leongs who assailed him, albeit Patrolman Drescher of the Union Market station, was running as fast as he could toward Hop's laundry, cut their victim to bits.

Hop Lee had stretched himself out on his bed in the back room for a quiet smoke. It was early morning and not many people were stirring in the street. Chinese beds are strange things. A few boards stretched across two sawhorses, a rag to mitigate the hardness, and a leather block for a pillow—these made up Hop's couch. Over one end hung a queer shaped Chinese banjo covered with dust, and pegs along the wall held his hat and a few spare coats.

Charles Smith was standing in front of the quarters of Engine company No. 28, nearly opposite Hop Lee's laundry, when he saw five Chinese dodge into Hop's place. Charley knows a thing or two about Chinese feudists and he divined that the five visitors were "Long Knives," or members of the Ong Leong entertainment committee.

He called Patrolman Drescher, who happened to be near, and Drescher rushed into the laundry. The murderous visitors had Hop Lee pinned down to his bed and were hacking at him with the cleaver. When they saw Drescher they ran out the back way and took to the roof, where the policeman and his reinforcements chased them all along the Eleventh street and Avenue B fronts. Three of the five were captured.

The three were listed as Charley Joe of No. 109 Ninth avenue; Mon Wong of No. 11 Mott street, and Lee Toy of No. 18 Mott street, which is said to be the headquarters of the Ong Leongs.

Mon Wong was the last one caught. Drescher found him hiding in one of the tenements, and when he gave chase the Chinaman fell donstairs, breaking a number of ribs, and thus gaining admission to Bellevue. Lee Toy and Charley Joe were arraigned before Magistrate Moss in the Essex market court and were remanded to the coroner without bail. As soon as they were brought into court they forgot all they knew of the English language.

MERCURY

WORSE THAN THE DISEASE

The effects of Mercury and Potash are worse than the effects of Contagious Blood Poison, for which these minerals are generally used. They cannot cure the disease, and in addition set up a poison of their own, producing dyspepsia, by drying up the gastric juices, salivation, sores, mercurial rheumatism, and often necrosis of the bones.

Bowling Green, Ky., Mitchell House.

Gentlemen:—For over four years I suffered greatly from a severe case of Contagious Blood Poison. I went to Hot Springs, staying there four months at a big expense. I then consulted physicians, who prescribed Mercury. Nothing did me any good, in fact the treatment proved more harmful than beneficial. Thus I continued to suffer for four years. I mentioned my case to a friend, who told me that S. S. S. had certainly cured him. I at once commenced its use, and in six months could find no trace of the disease whatever. This was about two years ago, and there has been no signs of return. D. M. SANDERS.

S. S. S., a remedy made from roots, herbs and barks, is the only known antidote for Contagious Blood Poison. It thoroughly and permanently eradicates the poison from the blood so that no sign is ever seen of the disease in future. S. S. S. builds up instead of tearing down the system, as do Mercury and Potash, and when it has cured the disease every part of the body has been toned up by its purifying and tonic effects. S. S. S. also removes any effects of the mineral treatment from the blood. We offer a reward of $1,000.00 for proof that S. S. S. contains a particle of Mercury, Potash or any other mineral. Home treatment book and any medical advice will be given without charge,

GETS ALONG ON $10 A YEAR

Garden and Lake Supply Food, Money His Clothes and Tobacco.

Delton, Wis., Aug. 16.—Near Mirror lake, Sauk county, is a log cabin in which a man has lived for forty years on $10 a year. George Skinnner is his name and he seems perfectly contented.

The old man is a civil war veteran. When he was discharged at the end of the war he had money enough to purchase an acre of ground on the shores of picturesque Mirror lake. In this acre of ground he planted vegetables and fruit trees Close to the house there grows a thick cluster of blackberry bushes and in the garden behind it there are long rows of strawberries. Over the fence that separates the yard from the road are wild roses. Here the veteran makes his home.

How does he live?

Each day he takes his fishing rod and goes down to Mirror lake, That is his pork barrel. The fish that he draws out of those waters supply his dinner, likewise his breakfast.

The vegetables and meal made from corn grown in his garden complete his diet. For his lake fishing Skinner has built himself a boat which is as unique as himself. In order that he may fish and propel his boat at the same time he has invented an extraordinary contrivance.

At the stern of his boat he has a paddle like that of a river steamer. This is turned by means of a chain running on cogs and attached to a crank that the old man turns with one hand as he trolls with the other. From the strange craft, nicknamed "the flying machine" by the people of Delton, Skinner does his angling.

Skinner lives during the winter as well as he does in summer. From the over-abundance of one season he saves enough to meet the necessities of the other. During the summer days he fishes continuously. He catches on an average of 100 fish a day, mostly small ones. Ten of these suffice for his two simple meals.

The other ninety are carefully cleaned and stored away in great barrels of brine kept in the cellar of his cabin.

When he has enough barrels of fish stored away to last him through the winter, he stops fishing, as he thinks it is a sin to kill any creature, even a fish, except for food.

From his garden he cans his vegetables and berries. Everything that he needs is supplied from nature's "pork barrel."

The $10 which he spends annually goes for tobacco, fish-hooks and clothing.

GETS RID OF WIFE

New York Publisher Pays $6,250 to Arrange Matter.

Has Now Married Girl Named as the Co-respondent.

New York, Aug. 16.—Augustus Ralph Keller, for many years president of Gebble & Co., publishers of editions de luxe in this city and Philadelphia, has finally made peace with his first wife, Annie Louise Keller. He is no longer compelled to sequestrate himself from the eyes of Sheriff Ellanger's deputes, even in so pleasant a spot as Plainfield, for the purpose of evading orders of arrest issued by the supreme court because of his failure to pay her alimony. He will be permitted henceforth to live with his second wife, who was the co-respondent named in the first Keller's suit for an absolute divorce, without fear of molestation.

To secure this happy state of affairs Mr. Keller parted with $6,250, according to the papers receiving the approval of the supreme court justices.

Mr. Keller is inclined to look upon the transaction as a good bargain, for when negotiations were first opened looking toward a settlement, it is understood that the first Mrs. Keller held out for the purchase of an annuity which would have cost her former husband $28,000. As it is, the litigation, covering a period of many years, is said to have cost Mr. Keller in the neighborhood of $30,000.

Mr. and Mrs. Keller were married in this city in 1883. Three children were born to them, Arthur, the youngest, still living with his mother by order of the court. They lived together in this city until 1889, when differences arose, and in 1897 it was suggested that they should live apart. An agreement was entered into to that effect, and, according to Mr. Keller, some time later negotiations were opened looking to a divorce. Proceedings to this end were begun in the supreme court by Mrs. Keller in January, 1902, she naming as co-respondent a beautiful young woman who she declared had been employed by her husband as a stenographer and typewriter in the Philadelphia office of her husband's firm. On April 21 of the same year Justice Fitzgerald of the supreme court granted Mrs. Keller a decree of absolute divorce, and awarded her the custody of the minor child, Arthur Ray Keller.

Under the terms of the same decree Mrs. Keller was awarded alimony at the rate of $85 a month, while her husband was prohibited from remarrying. Prior to this time, Mrs. Keller asserted, her husband had been allowing her $115 a month for household expenses, "while at the same time he was maintaining a richly appointed establishment in Larchwood street, Philadelphia, for the co-respondent, upon the evidence of whose relations with the defendant the decree was secured, and which co-respondent is now the wife of the defendant."

Justice O'Gorman issued an order adjudging Keller in contempt for failure to pay the alimony, and committing him to the custody of the sheriff. Mr. Keller retained Lawyers Moses H. Grossman and Alfred Beckman of House, Grossman & Vorhaus, to take an appeal to the appellate division. While these proceedings were pending in the courts Mr. Keller stuck pretty closely to his New Jersey home. The appellate division reversed the order of the lower court, directing the imprisonment of Mr. Keller for contempt of court in failing to give a bond of $5,000 to secure the payment of alimony, on the ground that he had never been served with the papers in the proceeding; but it upheld the appointment of Sampson H. Weinhandler as receiver of Keller's property in this city and the order increasing the alimony from $85 to $112.

This decision led to negotiations for a settlement, which have proved successful.

ST. CLAIRE WINS THE SECOND

Detroit Yacht Will Undoubtedly Secure the Lipton Cup.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Under ideal conditions, St. Claire, the Detroit yacht yesterday captured the second of the series of races for the Lipton cup. Queen Saba, the Chicago yacht club representative was second and Mendota, the Milwaukee yacht third. Hoosier, the other Chicago boat met with an accident and did not finish.

When the starting gun was fired promptly at 2 o'clock the quartet of yachts set sail to a beautiful start, with the St. Claire in the lead by a boat length, followed by Queen Saba, Mendota and Hoosier, in the order named. For the first half mile St. Claire and Quien Saba sailed almost on perfectly even terms, while the Mendota and Hoosier some distance back were also running close together. For a brief moment the Quien Sabe showed in front, but remained there only a short time. St. Claire quickly picked her up and gradually drew away from the Chicago boat, which lead was steadily increased during the remainder of the race. Quien Sabe had a good margin over Mendota at the finish. The race was over a 12-mile course, windward to leeward, three miles to the leg, twice around.

Today's race, which will be the last of the series is over a quadrangle course, and unless an accident prevents, there seems little doubt but that St. Claire will capture first place in all three races.

SOME WAR BETS.

Some extraordinary bets have been made on the Japanese-Russian war. A number of Japanese officers have bet that they would be killed in battle. The money was to go to their widows. One officer, on starting for the front, made the following wager: If he were killed within a month his heirs was to pay his opponent 10 yen ($5) a day until he had survived 100 days, after which the bet was to cease. He undertook to expose himself to danger only when military conditions demanded it; in other words, he would not willfully let himself be killed.

CHILDREN AT WORK

An Argument For Enforcement of Child Labor Legislation.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 16.—At the nineteenth annual convention of the International Association of Factory Inspectors, held here today, Oren R. Lovejoy, assistant secretary of the national child labor committee, spoke on the enforcement of child labor legislation, saying in part:

When industry lays its hands upon childhood and makes conscripts of the defenseless, then industry strikes at the life of the state, for the state is a vital organism, not a crystal. The economic theories of the manufacturer, if applied perfect, but as the precursor of a healthy man he is a failure. He has been reduced to a bundle of quivering nerves and can doubtless tie knots at lightning speed easier than he can sit still. The boy is already above the legal age, having spent six years of his life on that stool. Since no law is violated the inspector is helpless. MARKET IS FIRMER

Wet Weather and Higher Cables Cause Advance In Wheat.

Trading Is Light—Flax Slow and Slightly Firmer.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 16.—Wheat was firmer today, and wet weather in the Northwest and lower temperatures near the northern part of this country was the principal cause. The Liverpool market closed ⅜@½d higher, and that added to the strength.

The September option advanced ⅝c in Duluth, ¾c in Minneapolis, ½@⅝c in Chicago, ⅝@¾c in New York and Kansas City and ¼@⅓c in St. Louis.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 37 against 22 last year, and at Minneapolis 95 against 55 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 132 against 77 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 745,000 bus, last year 1,010,000 bus. Shipments 385,000 bus, last year 544,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 26,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ⅜@½d higher. In the Chicago market September corn closed ⅝c higher. September oats closed unchanged. Primary receipts of corn were 678,000 bus, last year 345,000 bus. Shipments 493,000 bus, last year 307,000 bus. Clearances were 119,000 bus.

The Duluth market was extremely dull. The old September opened unchanged at 83⅞c and advanced to 84⅝c at 11:50, falling back to 84⅛c at 12:45 and closing there, a gain of ⅝c for the day. The new September option also gained ⅝c, closing at 80¼c.

Flax was rather lively at the opening but quickly subsided into dullness. The October option opened ¾c higher at $1.13¾, advanced to $1.14⅜ and fell back to $1.13⅞. It rallied again to $1.14¼ and closed at $1.13¾, a gain over yesterday of ¼c. The November option sold ¾c up to $1.14½ and closed unchanged at $1.13¾. September closed ⅛c higher at $1.15½.

Oats advanced ⅛c and rye was unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—On track, No. 1 northern, 83¼c; No. 2 northern, 82½c; durum, new, No. 1, 80c; No. 2, 68c; September, old, 84½c; September, new, 80⅛c. Flax—To arrive, $1.21; on track, $1.48; August, $1.21; September, $1.15½; October, $1.13¾; November, $1.13¾; December, $1.13. Oats—On track, 26c; to arrive, 26c. Rye—August, 55½c; September, 55½c. Barley—Feed, 36@40c.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 37, last year, 22; oats, 4; rye, 3; barley, 5; flax, 1, last year, 1.

Receipts—Wheat, 38,229; oats, 22,026; barley, 5,796; rye, 2,544; flax, 4.

Shipments—Oats, 4,250.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wet Weather Causes Firm Sentiment In Wheat.

Chicago, Aug. 16.—Continued wet weather in the Northwest, together with reports of low temperatures near the Canadian border, caused a firm sentiment in the wheat market here today. Commission houses and local shorts gave active support. September started ⅛c lower to ¼c higher at 81⅜ to ⅝c, and was advanced to 82c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 260 cars, against 147 cars a year ago.

The reported confirmation of crop damage news from Russia and France held the market firm. September advanced to 82¼c under free covering by shorts. At this point influential selling, supposedly by a leading long, caused a reaction to 81⅞@82c for the near option. The close, however, showed a return of the early bullishness, finial figures being but a shade under the top for the day. September closed firm at 82@⅛c, a gain of ½@⅝c.

Wheat strength was chiefly responsible for a moderately firm corn market. September was a shade to ⅛@¼c lower at the start at 52⅝c to 51¾c, but more than overcame the early loss, advancing to 53¼c. In spite of large receipts, offerings were light, and were readily absorbed by a good general demand. Local receipts were 370 cars of which 276 grade contract.

Oats held steady. September, after touching 53¼@⅜, closed with net loss of ⅛@¼c at 53⅛c.

Covering by shorts gave oats a firm feeling. The tone of other grains was the influence. September starting unchanged to ⅛c higher at 25⅝c to 26c, subsequently sod a shade up at 26@¼c. Local receipts were 263 cars.

Provisions were easy under the influence of large receipts of hogs. Support was lacking and prices suffered a loss of 7½c throughout the list. September pork was in little demand at $14.30. Lard was quoted at $7.72½ and ribs at $8.72½.

Close: Wheat—August, 81¼c; September, 82@⅛c; December, 85⅝@⅞c. May, 86¼c. Corn—September, 53⅛c, old, 53⅝@⅝c; December, 44⅝@⅜c; old, 46¼c. May, 48⅜c. Oats—August, 25⅞c; September, 25⅞c; December, 28¼@⅜c; May, 28⅜@⅞c. Pork—September, $14.20; October, $14.30; January, $13.20. Lard—September, $7.67½; October, $7.77½; November, $7.56; December, $7.72½. Ribs—September, $8.00; October, $8.72½. Rye—Cash, 59c; September, 57½c; December, 58¼c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.16; southwestern, $1.06. Timothy—September, $3.65; October, $3.55. Clover—August, $12.75. Barley—Cash, 33@46c.

Cash wheat, 2 red, 81@81½c; 3 red, 82@83¾c; 2 hard, 81¾@91½c; 3 hard, 81@81½c; 1 northern and 2 northern nothing doing; 3 spring, 85@86c. Corn—2, 51½@51¾c; 3, 51½c. Oats—2, 25c; 3, 24½c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

North Dakota: The past week was quite warm, with light to heavy showers in most parts of the state, accompanied by damaging hailstorms in the northern portion. Rust does not seem to have made any progress, and the grain is maturing so fast that it is almost all out of danger of damage from that source now. Wilt is affecting flax in the northern part of the state, but the crop is generally very good. Considerable smut is found in wheat in the southern and central portions. Wheat harvest has just commenced in the southern and central portions, but will not be general until the latter part of this week. Most of the barley and rye as well as the early oats have been cut and are now in the shock. Some barley has been thrashed in the southern part of the state, with a very good yield. Corn has made great progress during the hot weather of the past week, but is still considerably behind the season, and needs a great deal of hot weather to mature it.

Minnesota: Barley cutting is finished in all sections but the extreme north, where it is progressing favorably. Spring wheat and oat cutting is nearly finished in southern portions, and well advanced in central portions, while the extreme north wheat harvest is expected to begin on the - - - of 19th. A good deal of stacking has been done in southern and central portions, and threshing from the shock has been progressing well, with spring and winter wheat yielding satisfactorily, oats splendidly, and barley hardly as well as expected, with the grain somewhat discolored. There are some reports of injury by black rust, smut and blight in the uncut wheat, but principally from late fields on lowlands. Flax is generally a fine crop, and much of it is cut. Corn has grown splendidly during the warm weather, and many ears are in the roasting ear stage.

• • •

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Today's market was a repetition of recent sessions only a little improvement was shown in the tendency of the market. There seemed more of a disposition to buy wheat on the easy spots. Cables were moderately helpful, and the possibilities of prediction of light frost in part of the spring wheat country caused moderate short covering. Market continues to be a fairly good trading affair, but the fact that wheat is showing more stubbornness during the past two or three sessions is making some converts to the bull side. We feel at the moment considering action of the market would buy wheat on set backs.

Corn—Less rain through the corn belt gave a little relief to the bull side, and notwithstanding large receipts in the Southwest market was strong from the start. Trade, however, is not very active. Trade is subject to occasional spurts. It seems like a two-sided market.

Oats—A dull uninteresting market with no change in price from yesterday. Speculative situation seems unchanged.

Provisions—Speculative market eased off almost from the start due to profit taking, possibly caused by larger hog receipts. As for some time past, the packers control the market.

• • •

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—Cables, weather and statistics joined hands to help today. While no single item in the news was convincing enough to cause much of a movement by itself, all of them helped to raise prices about a cent over last night's closing figures. Cables opened about yesterday's figures. The weather in the Northwest was unfavorable to threshing, and numerous early morning rains were reported. The predictions for tomorrow are rather better generally. Some alarm was caused by a forecast of frost from South Dakota tonight, but wheat in that section is beyond the reach of frost save it might affect shocked grain. The cash market exhibited a better tone today. One or two places in North Central Minnesota sent in word that grain was ripe and could not be cut on account of the mud. These localities near St. Cloud may suffer some loss on account of the delay. Heavy rain was reported this afternoon at Grafton and Grand Forks, but the last word from them indicates that the sticks are clearing. The forecast tonight and tomorrow is mildly favorable. Wheat advanced, as we thought it would do, today, but we rather lean to the opposite course of the market for tomorrow. Under these circumstances we believe that a scalping position on the short side is logical and should prove profitable.

• • •

J. A. Patten, Chicago: It seems to me that this wheat is down very near the bottom. While the reports from Russia have been very contradictory, I believe that there is a serious shortage in that country. The political situation prevents the true facts being given out. The amount on ocean passage is being reduced weekly and it seems to me that there is more money in buying wheat on the depressions than in attempting to make money on the short side.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston: The market was the direct opposite of yesterday. All the copper stocks were strong and active under the lead of Copper Range which advanced from 68 to 69½. Franklin was well bought and showed the most strength for a long time on the report that they had found ore opening on the Kearsarge lode. Rhode Island and Tecumseh were strong in sympathy. North Butte was listed this morning, opened strong at 35 and holding around that price all day. Isle Royale was scarce and advanced easily to 23½. The feeling in general is better tonight and unless the developments in Copper Range become more disturbing we expect a higher and more active market for coppers.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS, ETC.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis, —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, August 15, 1905.

In the Matter of the Estate of John H. Packard, Deceased:

On reading and filing the petition of Edward A. Packard, Administrator of the estate of John H. Packard, deceased, representing, among other things, that he has fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of his administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

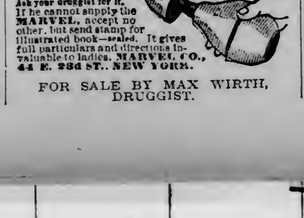

It Is Ordered, That said account be examined, and petition heard by this Court, on Monday, the 11th day of September, A. D. 1905, at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office, in the Court House, in the City of Duluth, in said County.

And It is Further Ordered, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this Order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County of St. Louis, Minnesota.

Dated at Duluth, Minn., the 15th day of August, 1905.

STRENGTH SHOWN

By Stock Market With Union Pacific In the Lead.

Profit-Taking Well Absorbed and Close Active.

New York, Aug. 16.—Realizing of profits contended with new buying orders to make the opening in the stock market today very irregular. The principal changes were a gain of ⅝ in Chesapeake & Ohio and a decline of ⅝ in United States Steel. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo dropped 1½. The changes were small, but the dealings were large.

A more uniform tendency developed after the opening orders had been disposed of. All of the representative stocks were quoted fractionally above yesterday's close before 11 o'clock. Great Northern preferred improved 2¼, New York Air Brake 3⅜, Westeinghouse Electric 1½, St. Louis & San Francisco second preferred and Federal Mining preferred 1⅜ and St. Paul, Union Pacific, Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Wisconsin Central preferred, St. Joseph & Grand Island second preferred, Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic preferred, Metropolitan Street Railway and Corn Products preferred 1. Northern Pacific and Delaware & Hudson which had been depressed 1 to 2 at the outset made full recoveries, but Lackawanna did not retrieve any of its 5 point break.

The trading became dull for a time and prices sagged. Large buying of Reading, however, carried that stock up 1⅝ to a record price. Copper also became strong and rose 1¼. Missouri Pacific, Northern Pacific, American Ice, Pacific Mail and Corn products gained 1 and Wisconsin Central preferred 1¾. The sympathetic effect of these advances was reflected in the course of the whole market except that Northwestern declined 1½. Reading reacted a fraction before noon. Bonds were irregular at that hour.

Excited buying of Reading started it upward again with a rush and it reached 112¼, a rise of 2¼. There was very little inquiry for the other coalers, aside from Ontario & Western which rose a point. Some of the western stocks hardened a fraction and the undertone generally was quite firm. Pacific Coast advanced 2, Locomotive preferred 1½ and St. Louis Southwestern preferred and United States Pipe preferred 1. United States Realty fell off 3 and Biscuit and Pacific Coast second preferred 1.

Dealings contracted in Reading and other leaders and expanded in Chesapeake Ohio. That stock was the feature of the late dealings. Large orders carrying it up 1¾ to 57¼. Some of the railroad equipment stocks improved after the locomotive stocks had been bid up 1½@2½. Rock Island preferred and Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred were lifted a point and there was a large absorption of Atchison and Southern Pacific at fractional gains. Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis and Biscuit preferred lost 1½. The closing was active and strong.

STOCK GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market closed active and very strong. At the opening prices seemed to hesitate and list somewhat irregular, but buying in special stocks of an aggressive sort gave to the market a better tone, which lasted throughout the session. Late in the day a big demand for Union Pacific gave decided strength to the entire list. The market is a great, big affair and the volume of business is reported by commission men as showing daily improvement, indicating an increase in outside demand. A little halt or set back would not be unnatural, but the list gives every indication of selling higher. On set backs we still advise purchase of stocks.

• • •

Dick Bros. to Paine, Webber & Co.: Market has been very strong with Union Pacific once more in the lead. There was no important news, but aggressive buying continued and resulted in advances throughout the list. Short covering was in evidence at times. Profit taking was at all times well absorbed. The strong features were Union Pacific, Southern Pacific, St. Paul, Missouri Pacific, Rock Island, Amalgamated and C. & O. Market closed very strong with big buying in Union Pacific.

MIDWAY HORSE MARKET.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, Aug. 16.—Money on call, easy, 1¾@2 per cent; offered at 1¾. Time loans, steady and dull; sixty days, 2¾@3 per cent; ninety days, 3@3¼; six months, 3¼@4. Prime mercantile paper, 4@4½ per cent. Sterling exchange steady with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.86.70@75 for demand and at $4.84.70@75 for sixty days; posted rates $4.85½ and $4.87¼; commercial bills, $4.84⅝. Bar silver, 60¼c; Mexican dollars, 46¼c. Government bonds, weak; railroad bonds, irregular.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Aug. 16.—The cotton market opened quiet at a decline of 1@3 points in response to lower cables; rallied to a net advance of 1@2 points on covering inspired by less favorable weather reports, but soon eased off again under bear pressure, and in the middle of the morning was barely steady at a net decline of 5@6 points. Trading was quiet all the morning session and confined chiefly to local professionals.

Cotton spot closed quiet; 10 point lower; mid up, 10.50; mid gulf, 10.75; sales 25 bales. Futures closed steady; August, 10.09; September, 10.14; October, 10.29; November, 10.31; January, 10.45; February, 10.48; March, 10.52; April, 10.54; May, 10.56.

LISTING IS COMPLETE

North Butte Quoted on Boston Exchange—Large Earnings.

The stock of the North Butte Mining company was regularly listed on the Boston Stock Exchange today. The formalities incident to getting the stock placed on the board were completed some time ago and today the quoting of the stock began. The trading in it was active and the price held around $35 all day, closing with that price bid.

Although not officially reported, it is understood that the net earnings of the North Butte company in the month of July were $196,000. The earnings in the months of August and September will not run as high because the company is now installing the new machinery in the Speculator shaft and is raising its ore through the High Ore claim shaft of the Anaconda property adjoining. Through this shaft it cannot raise as much by about 150 tons daily and is raising about 600 tons as against 750 through the Speculator shaft.

BLAZE AT WEST DULUTH

The best that Duluth has yet been able to do in the way of a fire for the visiting chiefs, was a small blaze which broke out this morning in the residence of C. Zanger at 410 South Sixty-ninth avenue west, and none of the visitors knew of it until it was all over.

The fire started in the attic of the house. Owing to the distance of the dwelling from the nearest hydrant, the firemen had to make a second trip after more hose before they had enough to reach the blaze with the water.

The upper part of the house was badly damaged, about half of the roof and the upper story being destroyed.

Insurance to the amount of $500 was carried on the house and $200 on the furniture, and it should about cover the loss.

ARRESTED FOR FORGERY

Accused of having attempted to pass a forged check for $37 in Panton & White's store, Alex Shilin was arraigned in the municipal court this morning, and asked for a preliminary hearing which was set for Sept. 9.

Shilin is claimed to have presented a check at the Glass Block for $37, signed by John P. Dolan, anu made out to the order of G. Gebhart, and it is alleged that he represented himself as Gebhart.

The alleged misrepresentation was discovered in the store, and an officer summoned to place Shilin under arrest.

COL. HICKS STARTS ON WAY TO CHILE.

Milwaukee, Aug. 16.—A special from Oshkosh, Wis., says: Col. John Hicks, appointed July 14 to be envoy extraordinary and minister plenipotentiary of the United States to Chile, left today for Washington. After a few days at the state department he will go to New York and from there sail to Colon, cross the Isthmus of Panama, and take a steamer on the Pacific for Valparaiso. The journey from New York will require from thirty to thirty-five days.

IN CRITICAL CONDITION

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—Ole Olsen, whose home is in Garness township, Red Lake county, lies in a precarious condition as the result of a vicious assault made upon him by one of his cows. The cows broke out of the Olson pasture and Mr. Olson, accompanied by his brothers, went out in the highway to turn them back into the barnyard where they belonged. The particular cow which gored Olson ran down the road and, when pursued by its owner, turned face about and made a vicious drive at him with her horns and later attempted to trample the earth with him in much the same manner as an enraged bull. Olson was very seriously hurt and may not live. The horns entered the lower left side of his abdomen and penetrated several inches, at the same time penetrating upward. Two physicians labored for several hours sewing up the ugly wounds and since that time Mr. Olson has hovered between life and death. The cow was killed immediately after the affair.

LA CROSSE HAS A SCANDAL

La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 16.—The La Crosse city council, by an unanimous vote, has demanded the resignation of City Engineer Frank C. Powell, and has given him until Aug. 20 to resign or subject himself to impeachment. Powell is charged with being interested in city contracts, and with improper conduct of the engineering department during a course of years, but the council's action was precipitated by a recent scandal, in which several of the leading men and women of La Crosse were involved, and as a development of which Mrs. Powell committed suicide. A $10,000 damage suit is pending, in which Powell is suing L. P. Philippi, a wealthy business man, for the alienation of his dead wife's affections. Powell refuses to resign, and will demand an investigation.

DULUTH HEIGHTS WILL WAIT A YEAR

Will Forego Water System to Benefit City at Large.

Department Needs the Money For Duplicate Main Project.

Duluth Heights will not have an auxiliary water system installed this year.

Acting on the request of the board of water and light commissioners the citizens of the Heights have generously agreed to waive their right to the immediate installation of a water system for which they have been working so hard, in order that the people of the city may have the benefit of a duplicate pipe system to the reservoirs so that the water in those receptacles may be kept in circulation and prevented from becoming stagnant and stale.

By reason of this acquiescense the water department is now assured of funds enough to go ahead and make an improvement which recent breaks in the water mains have showed to be practically a necessity, if the city is to be kept supplied with fresh water in an emergency when the supply main from Lakewood is shut off.

The proposition of the board of water and light commissioners that the work be postponed until next spring, was discussed at some length at a mass meeting held in the fire hall on the Heights last evening, and the citizens by vote decided to acquiesce in the board's request.

At a meeting of the board of water and light commissioners held Aug. 10 a committee of three, representing Duluth Heights' citizens, appeared with reference to the request for a postponement. The matter was gone over carefully and the board explained its position, promising that if the citizens would consent to the postponement of the work, that the pipe would be ordered right away and construction work would be guaranteed to begin next spring. Resolutions were also passed to be presented to the citizens of the Heights together with a letter of explanation.

The letter, setting forth the reasons of the board for the postponement of the work, follows:

"To the Citizens of Duluth Heights: At a conference with your committee last Thursday, this board explained fully the emergencies and needs of this department, and which will be submitted to you at a meeting next Tuesday.

"Briefly, the obligations already assumed, including the installation of the system at the Heights, amount to about $165,000, of which $140,000 is obtained from the sale of bonds and the balance from the probable savings of the department this year.

"The absolute necessity of a duplicate pipe to the new reservoir, in order that the water therein may be kept in circulation and to prevent its becoming stagnant, has been recently impressed on us by the break in the pipe on the 30th ult.

"The only way to accomplish this great good to our whole people is to gain your consent to a brief postponement of the installation of your system.

"If your consent be obtained this board will adopt and place in your hands the following preamble and resolution:

"'Whereas, The people of Duluth Heights having of their own good will, for the benefit of the whole city, generously waivd their right to the installation of their water system the present season, in order that the department may provide the new reservoir with sufficient circulation that will prevent serving the people of the city with stale or impure water, therefore, be it

"'Resolved, That the necessary pipe for the installation of the Duluth Heights system be immediately ordered and distributed on the ground, in order to facilitate the early completion of the work in the spring of 1906; and, further,

"'Resolved, That this board pledges itself to the completion of the said work at that time, subject to the petition now in course of preparation by the residents of that locality.'"

The meeting of the citizens of Duluth Heights last evening resulted in the organization of a permanent club to take an interest in public affairs genrally and especially in those relating to the Heights. C. H. Merritt was chosen chairman of the club. A public affairs committee comprised of W. E. McEwen, chairman, C. H. Merritt, J. O. Walker, C. A. Marshall, W. D. Tomlin, F. A. Noble and W. P. Pennell was chosen, and arrangements will be made for regular meetings of the citizens.

RECOVER BODY

Long Search For Grey Holston's Remains Finally Successful.

Services Will Be Held at Glen Avon Church.

After grappling and dragging for nearly three days the body of Grey G. Holston, the young man who was drowned Sunday morning, was recovered about 1 o'clock this afternoon by some of the employes of H. S. Patterson, who have had a rowboat on the spot during the greater part of the time since the accident occurred.

The search for the body has been conducted in the most energetic and persistent mannner. Six or seven rowboats mannned by the life saving crew, police officials and employes of Patterson's boathouse have been almost constantly at work endeavoring to locate the body. Owing to the manner in which the accident occurred, and the speed with which the sailboat was traveling when he slipped off, it was impossible to locate with any degree of certainty the spot where he fell, and the searchers have had a large territory to cover in their dragging.

The body was finally brought to the surface about 1 o'clock this afternoon and taken to Patterson's boathouse in the launch of the life-saving station.

From the boathouse it was taken to Stewart's undertaking rooms, where it will be embalmed for shipment to Minneapolis. The funeral services will be held at Glen Avon Presbyterian church tomorrow at 3 o'clock.

Aside from some discoloration of the skin on the face, the body is not greatly disfigured by its long contact with the water.

PRAYED ON STREET

After walking the sixty-five miles from Knife river to Duluth, Oscar Olson, a Swedish youth, 19 years of age, was found standing on the corner of Eighteenth avenue east and Superior street, this morning, by Officer Nelson, with his hands clasped in an attitude of prayer, and moving his arms slowly up and down.

His strange actions frightened a number of women and children in the vicinity, and several reports were sent in to headquarters concerning him. The officer went out from headquarters to investigate the matter, and found the young man still in the position described. People living near the corner stated that he had been there for over an hour, acting in that strange manner.

When brought into headquarters and questioned, he stated that he had walked all the way from Knife river.

"What did you come to Duluth for?" asked the desk sergeant.

"God sent me," was the unexpected reply.

"What did He send you to Duluth for?"

"Because I was foolish," was the answer, that was productive of not a little merriment among the bystanders.

The young man was plainly suffering from some kind of a fit, or else from some form of mental derangement. He was locked up by the officers until arrangements could be made to take him before the judge of the probate court.

As soon as he was placed in the jail he walked to the rear window overlooking the lake and again commenced his strange actions, slowly moving his arms up and down, and mumbling some inarticulate sounds. The officers asked him if he wanted food after his long walk, but he did not answer.

"Don't you want a drink?" one of them asked.

"I will never drink again," the young man replied.

As far as could be learned from his answers to questions he had no friends or relatives in the city, but a man named Gust Johnson, whose address he could not give.

KILLED BY ROCK SLIDE

Fifteen Bodies Already Taken From Quarry at Ormrod, Pa.

Allentown, Pa., Aug. 16.—A quarry accident occurred this afternoon at Ormrood, the site of the Lehigh Portland cement company's big mill. Report says fifteen are killed. Coroner Scheirer left for the scene. The local hospital has received instructions to prepare to receive six injured men. Thirty-five men were caught in a slide of rock from the side of the quarry. All the dead are still buried and a large force of other employes are removing the mass to uncover the bodies. All the killed were foreigners.

Fifteen bodies have been recovered, and out of the twenty still in the quarry it is feared many are dead. As fast as the injured are taken from the pit they are being rushed by teams to the Allentown hospital. The cave-in was caused by recent heavy rains.

New Fall Things Are Arriving Thick and Fast!

In fact, so much so that we are sorely puzzled for room, even with our new Annex—which gives us a third more room than we had — consequently we are offering strong inducements to present buyers of new things, to keep stocks moving along, and at the same time keep our sales force and workrooms busy, even in the supposed dull period.

How well we are succeeding can be seen at a glance in our show rooms — where we have turned dull days into busy ones!

There's much to be gained by getting your fall needs now—stocks are large and you get early choice of materials, which may become scarce as the season advances. Especially is this true of novelty materials, or new shades, that mills in this country and Europe haven't prepared too heavily on. Particularly is this true of the various shades of grays, reds, greens and pastel effects, which promise to be worn by smart dressers this Fall!

Then, again, we are in a position to save you considerable on your purchases, because we contracted with our makers early and took advantage of July and August prices, when tailors are willing to work for less than in the rush season.

You can select your garment—(suit, coat, wrap, skirt, or whatever it may be) NOW—have it fitted to you by our expert fitters, and it will be ready for you to wear at the first turn of the leaves—or on the cool days and evenings of August!

So you can readily see that there is much to be gained by buying now—and you can feel assured of your styles if you get them here—that you know.

Coat Suits, 21 to 24 inches, start at $15.00 and run to $49.50.

Long Coat Suits, 48 to 55 inches, start at $19.50 and run to $85.

Coats start at $8.75 and run to $45.00.

Wraps for party, evening, theater or any kind of dress functions, start at $19.50 and run to $125.00.

Costumes and Dresses start at $18.50 and run to $150.00.

More new skirts keep arriving on about every express. Plaits, circular and novelty styles, in fall weight Voiles, Panamas, Mannish Gray Worsted, etc.

NINE FEVER CASES ARE DISCOVERED IN STATE OF MISSISSIPPI

Have Been In Existence There Since the Middle of July.

City Council of St. Charles Defies State Board of Health.

New Orleans, Aug. 17—The announcement of the discovery of nine cases of yellow fever, at Mississippi City, within three miles of Gulfport, the terminus of the Gulf & Ship Island road, and the fact that the fever has been in existence there since before July 20, the time when the announcements were made here, is expected to soften somewhat the severe criticism of Mississippians against New Orleans for protesting against their quarantine.

The family in which the fever first appeared at Mississippi City arrived there from New Orleans, July 2, and the fever is stated to have been in Mississippi since the 20th. The family is that of Maj. Gee of Corrilton, Miss., which stopped a week in New Orleans on their way to Mississippi City. Only one of the cases is seriously ill. Troops have drawn a cordon around the infected section, and every effort will be made by Surgeon Wasdin of the marine hospital service to confine the disease. All towns on the Gulf coast, as well as the towns on the Gulf & Ship Island road, have slapped on quarantines.

The relatively insignificant number of deaths here in the past twenty-four hours at a time when it was expected that there would be some increase over the maximum figures reported, has made a fine impression on the local public, confirming the frequently expressed view that the disease is losing its virulency in contact with modern forms of treatment. Of the nineteen new squares infected twelve are immediately adjoining squares previously reported as infected, showing the slight spread of the disease. A list of eighteen suspicious cases reached the marine hospital officers after the report closed and were under investigation today. A fine showing was made by the physicians, forty-seven of the sixty-six cases being reported from their private practice. Ten more were reported by the emergency hospital. Twenty-two of the cases were in the originally infected area. Only five new foci were above Canal street, three adjoining squares already infected.

Governor Blanchard has wired Chairman Janevir of the citizens' committee announcing that he has complimented Surgeon White by making him a colonel on his staff.

"Tell him," the governor said, "that it gives me great pleasure to show him this recognition as a token of appreciation of the great fight he is making for us in New Orleans."

The city council of Lake Charles, in defiance of the state board of health, has declared that no freight can enter that town from New Orleans or other infected points, whether authorized by the state board or not.

Large quantities of wire screen are now being brought into the city for the purpose of screening cisterns. The screen is so urgently needed that there is no time to ship it by freight, and the express companies are bringing it in daily, in lots of from 8,000 to 10,000 pounds. Cheesecloth screening was a temporary makeshift, and is not provided for in the city ordinance. The fact that there is a supply of wire screen here will enable the authorities to prosecute successfully all landlords who disobey the ordinance.

THE PEACE ENVOYS FAIL TO AGREE ON JAPS' REIMBURSEMENT CLAIM

Discussion Occupied Entire Session of Plenipotentiaries and Subject Then Laid to One Side.

Evident That the Final Struggle Is Close at Hand and Both Sides Are Making Preparations For It.

Portsmouth, Aug. 17.—The peace envoys adjourned for luncheon at 1:30 p. m., having spent the entire morning discussing Article 9, which, it is believed, includes the question of Japan's reimbursement for the cost of the war. No agreement was reached and the commissioners temporarily laid it aside and proceeded to discuss the following article.

The official statement of the proceedings follows:

"At the morning session of the conference of Aug. 17 the envoys discussed Article 9. Not being able to reach an unanimous decision, the conference decided to record the divergence of views and proceeded to the discussion of the following article. The conference recessed until 3 p. m."

The morning's discussion developed an absolute impasse. Both sides were obdurate. Neither would budge or yield an inch.

Agreement being found to be impossible the plenipotentiaris decided to spread on record their respective views and proceed to the consideration of Article 10, which provides for the surrender to Japan of the Russian warships interned in Far Eastern waters. This article was being debated when recess until 3 o'clock was taken.

It can be stated with almost absolute positiveness that the two remaining articles are in the following order:

Article 11, limitation of Russia's naval power in the Far East; Article 12, the grant of fishing rights in the Russian littoral from Vladivostok to Behring sea.

Portsmouth, N. H., Aug. 17.—Five articles of the possible "treaty of Washington" remained to be considered when the peace envoys resumed their session at the navy yard today—Sakhalin upon which it had been impossible to agree and which had been passed over, indemnity, limitation on Russia's sea power, the surrender of the interned warships and the grant of fishing rights on the Littoral of the maritime provinces. Remuneration for the cost of the war it is believed is No. 9, the first article to come up today. How far it will be threshed out before it is "passed over," is problematical. Fishing rights Russia will yield. There only remain limitation on Russia's sea power and the surrender of the interned warships.

The final struggle is close at hand and preparations are being made for it. When the remaining points of possible agreement are demonstrated an adjournment will be taken, probably until Monday when the envoys will show their last cards.

The Japanese are in the closest touch with their government. They are keeping Tokio advised of every development of the proceedings. It was 6 o'clock this morning when last night's stream of cables to Japan was completed.

The weather since the arrival of the envoys has strangely followed the prevailing sentiment as to the outcome. Today was bright and cheery. The sun shone gloriously. It was another page out of the wonderful weather book to which New England has treated her distinguished foreign guests. Last week the heat was unbearable and the envoys were testy and angry. Saturday was cold and dreary and it looked as if a storm would break. But it did not and the fear that negotiations might be broken off when the meeting occurred in the afternoon after the presentation of the Russian reply was happily averted. Sunday was fair and bright. Tuesday it stormed and in the conference room the first unsurmountable barrier appeared—the cession of Sakhalin. On yesterday afternoon the weather cleared and the envoys while returning to the hotel were treated to by Baron Komura and Mr. Sato, came down to the veranda and received the usual respectful greeting from the guests who invariably gather to see them off. The Russian envoys were half way to the navy yard when the Japanese set out.

ARTICLES 7 AND 8

Are Agreed Upon By the Peace Envoys.

Portsmouth, Aug. 17.—The following official statement was issued by Mr. Sato last evening:

"At the afternoon session of the conference, Articles 7 and 8 were discussed, Article 7 was settled in principle, and Article 8 accepted unanimously.

"The conference, at 6:30, adjourned until 9:30 Thursday morning."

It was officially explained that there remained not a difference to be adjusted on Article 7, but only the elaboration of a single point.

Article 7 is the cession of the branch of the Chinese Eastern railroad, from Harbin southward, and Article 8 provides for the retention by Russia of the portion of the line through Northern Manchuria connecting the trans-Siberian road with Valdivostok.

the sight of a glorious New England sunset.

The peace envoys, who have alternately sweltered and been chilled, shivered and besoaked, seemed in fine spirits when they started away from the hotel today.

Most of the Japanese mission were busy in preparing cables, last night, that they were, in consequence, a little behind the regular hour in getting down stairs this morning. It was close to 9:30 before Mr. Takahira, followed

EXCURSION TRAIN PLUNGES THROUGH AN OPEN DRAWBRIDGE

Many People Are Reported as Either Killed or Injured.

Every Physician In Norfolk Has Been Summoned to Wreck.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 17.—A report just received here says that an excursion train over the Atlantic Coast Line railway from Kingston, N. C., bound for Norfolk, shot through an open bridge near Bristol. The train was bringing some 500 persons from Kingston and intermediate points to Norfolk for a stay of two days. The first report of the wreck is that a draw over the Western branch of the Elizabeth river was open for a tug to pass through and the train engine, with one coach, went overboard into 25 feet water. Every physician has been summoned to the scene. Many people reported killed and injured, but authentic details are yet missing. A relief train has left Portsmouth for the scene. The wrecked train was due to arrive here at 1 o'clock this afternoon. Following this train was another excursion train over the same road, bringing 300 excursionists from Rocky Mount. Preceding the wrecked train there was still another excursion train to arrive here over the Atlantic Coast Line road, this being composed of some 300 merchants and others. This first train arrived here at 8:30 this morning without accident.

MANY SECRETS IN TILDEN MANSION

Workmen Discover Staircases, Vaults and Three Roofs.

New York, Aug. 17.—Subterranean passages, leading from a secret staircase to stone vaulted chambers beneath the old Tilden mansion, in Gramercy park, have been brought to light by the contractors engaged in tearing out and remodeling the structure, which is now under course of transformation into a home for the National Arts' club. Many other peculiarities exist in the mansion, which must have been the conception of Samuel J. Tilden himself, and which have remained undiscovered up to this day, although the famous old dwelling has housed many tenants since his removal to Greystone, in 1879, where he died in August, 1886.

There is a legend among the old-time residents of the neighborhood that Tilden, who roused a host of enemies by the part he took in the exposure of the Tweed ring, had a fear of secret assassination, and built his house accordingly.

The interior of the mansion, was a work of art in its day, and is scarcely equalled in some respects even now by the palaces of upper Fifth avenue. In the work of remodeling, now under way, the secret staircases and underground passages were discovered. As the builders, like Mr. Tilden, long since joined their fathers, no explanation can be given for the mysterious passages other than that mentioned by old neighbors. It was found that the building had three roofs, instead of one, and that a tiny staircase led to a secret passage from the second floor. Entrance to it was gained by pressing a knob on a beautifully carved walnut panel.

In the cellar a puzzling labyrinth of vaults and passages were found leading to a bricked tunnel, the walls of which are covered with mold, but which was otherwise perfectly dry. The tunnel, so far as it could be explored, led straight south from the mansion, but its terminus evidently had been closed for many years, and the air was found so bad that the wreckers have not ventured more than twenty-five feet into the passage.

A GREAT CONSPIRACY UNEARTHED AT LAST

Millionaires and Men of National Reputation Said to Be Involved.

Milwaukee, Aug. 17.—In an attempt to prove her right to a share of an estate of $1,500,000, Mrs. Frank G. Curtis, wife of a Milwaukee automobile dealer, has been with her mother, Mrs. Ruby Woodman, traveling through the mining districts of Colorado for the past two years, and, it is claimed, is assisting to unearth one of the greatest conspiracies involving murder and as successful a fraud as ever known, says the Milwaukee Journal.

The conspiracy involves several multi-millionaires, men of national reputation, men known in the highest circles of national politics and finance.

In the early '60s John Murphy was a poor prospector in Nevada. In the latter part of that decade he met in Nova Scotia Ruby Fox, daughter of a farmer of that district. After a short engagement the two were married and went West. Shortly after they returned and located in New York City. Later he returned to the West, leaving his wife in New York. She did not hear from him for some months. He returned later and took her to Chicago, where he deserted her, it is claimed.

Within a year after their marriage the first child, Ona, who is now the wife of Mr. Curtis, was born. During the woman's stay in Chicago, after being abandoned by her husband, a second daughter, Elizabeth, was born. She was loath to inform her father of the disastrous end of her marriage, and attempted to support herself and children by work.

The youngest child was given to a family by the name of Duncan at Logansport, Ind., and was adopted. Later the father of Mrs. Murphy came to Chicago and took the daughter back to Nova Scotia with him. In 1872 news came to her that Murphy had been murdered in Carson. During his stay in New York at the time he was accompanied by his wife. Murphy had purchased property valued at that time at $50,000.

Shortly after his death his wife received letters at Nova Scotia discouraging her coming West and saying that the property was of but little value. Six years ago one of the four bodyguards whom Murphy had employed before his death, died at Truckee, Cal. In his possession were found many of Murphy's papers, which claimed to prove him to be a millionaire.

One of the properties has been occupied by a wealthy real estate man named Purdy, who claims that the property was legally transferred to him, but since the investigation has disappeared. The valuable mining properties in Nevada were transferred, it is claimed, in the same way by a man and a woman who impersonated Murphy and his wife.

Among Murphy's papers was found a will leaving all his property to his two daughters. He carried large deposits with the Wells-Fargo Express company, as they admit, but they do not say what the balance was at the time of his disappearance. No effort has been made to get this money or several thousand dollars which he is said to have had in New York banks.

In regard to Murphy's death it is said that it occurred during one of his excursions to his properties in Nevada. At the time he was killed it is said, he was about fifty miles from Carson City. Some weeks after the murder some of the body guards who accompanied him stated that he had been shot from ambush while some distance away from camp. They found the body and interred it. Some of these are now men of national reputation. Two of them are dead.

Murphy's papers were found in the strong box in possession of one of the former bodyguards. It is said that strenuous efforts have been made on the part of the people who are interested in the property for many years to keep the disclosures from coming to the public. Several years after the death of Murphy his wife married a Mr. Woodman.

A PERMANENT COMMISSION TO REGULATE TARIFF ADVOCATED

Friends of Reciprocity Present Resolutions Urging Concessions to Foreign Countries.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Chairman Packard called the reciprocity conference to order today and the committee on organization announced that the following gentlemen would make addresses: Governor Cummins of Iowa, A. B. Farquhar of Pennsylvania, E. Rosewater of Nebraska, W. C. Maybury of Michigan, Mr. Howser of Wisconsin, E. S. Lockridge of Indiana.

The first speaker was A. B. Farquhar of Pennsylvania. The chairman then called for the report of the committee on resolutions and Chairman Foss read the following resolution, which will be considered at a later hour:

"The national reciprocity convention, representing more than 200 agricultural, commercial and industrial associations of the United States by delegates assembled at Chicago Aug. 16 and 17, 1905, hereby make the following declaration of principles:

"Whereas, the agricultural, manufacturers and other industries of this country, have expanded to such an extent that they can no longer depend on the home market for the consumption of their entire product; and

"Whereas, the export trade has become a vital support to many of our industries; and

"Whereas, The present commercial attitude of the United States largely owing to our failure to carry into effect the reciprocal trade provisions of Section 4 of the Dingley law, is antagonizing foreign nations, whose good will we desire and on whom we have hitherto depended as purchasers of our surplus products; therefore, be it

Resolved, First, that this convention, recognizing the principle of protection as the established policy of our country, advocates reciprocal concessions by means of a dual or maximum and minimum tariff as the most adequate and practical method of relieving the strained situation with which we are now confronted.

"Second, that the question of the schedules and items to be considered in such reciprocal concessions, preferably be suggested by a permanent tariff commission, to be created by congress and appointed by the president, which shall consist of economic, industrial and commercial experts.

"Third, that it is the sense of this convention that our set tariff affords opportunity for such concessions without injury to industry, trade, or the wages of labor.

"Fourth, that we urge action on congress at the earliest time possible.

"We recommend that a permanent organization be formed under the style of the American Reciprocal Tariff league; and that a committee of fifteen be appointed by the chair to have full power to organize and further prosecute the work for which the convehtion has assembled. Said committee shall have power to increase its membership and to fill vacancies when necessary.

"Respectfully submitted."

Edward Rosewater, editor of the Omaha Bee, was introduced. He said he was secretary of the committee on resolutions of the eRpublican national convention of 1900, and wished to contradict the statement made in the reciprocity convention that the Republican party, in its platform of 1900, had pledged itself to a revision of the tariff, and that it had violated its pledge. "The Republican party's greatest pledge," he said, "was a continuance of prosperity, and we have got it. (Applause). Now, are we at the crossing of the roads, or are we not?

"But remember that there are methods of reaching the Republican congress that must be pursued by you here today, or you are not going to accomplish very much. You cannot accomplish by denouncing the tariff as a graft. There is graft in church, and there is graft in Masonry and other fraternal organizations, but you would not denounce the church or Masonry because men have been found in the ranks who are grafters. There is graft, of course, in connection with the tariff, but as a principle, the protective system has built up the industries of this country, and it is of great benefit to all. You never would have been heer but for the fact that 1,500,000,000 of American products have found their way into foreign countries within the past year. I believe in carrying out the letter and spirit of the constitution: that reaches these questions by reciprocity.

"I do not believe you can do it by a double standard. That is precisely what you propose here, the double standing of tariff, which means simply a minimum tariff and nothing else."

Governor Cummins of Iowa was the next speaker. He said in part:

"I do not pretend to be master of the subject that you have under consideration, but I do know something of the consequence of standing for that policy. I have on my political body some scars and some wounds received in the fight I have endeavored to carry on during the last few years. (Applause.) Reciprocity has been damned with faint praise and with false friends long enough. (Applause.) The time has come to unmask so that the people may know who stands for and who stands against this doctrine. (Applause.) The friends of reciprocity, the advocates of reciprocity, have passed through years of depression and discouragement, simply because it has been coddled in conventions and crucified in congress. (Cheers.) It has been eulogized in the abstract and condemned the concrete And the hour has arrived in which it is fair to ask those who are hostile to the policy to avow it; and I am gratified beyond measure that in the course of this struggle there appears to be some sign now that those who fight it will come out in the open. I for one have a persisting confidence in the judgment of the plain, common, simple people of the land, and I want to settle this question in the good old fashioned way appointed by the constitution for the determination of public policies. Let us fight it out by appeal to the people. If we lose, let us abandon the attempt; and if we win, let those who are skulking in the shadows of concealment retire to places that are appropriate for cowards and traitors to the policies of our government. (Cheers). If the decision of the people be for reciprocity, there must then be no further juggling with words, and the promise that is kept to the ear must be broken to the hope. The gravity of the situation is manifest, and it is acknowledged, I believe, on all hands, that we must meet it in one or two ways—retaliation or reciprocity. 'The stand patters' have raised the banner of the former and we march to the music of the latter.

"Many people think that this question is confined to treaty with particular powers, but it is not so, for it con be accomplished through general tariffs as well as through special arrangements. Indeed, it can be said that with us, if attained in the near future, it must be attained through a general law by a revision of our schedules, for it has been made clear to the dullest mind that no trade treaty, however advantageous to the people of this countr, can command two-third of the United States senate. It involves always, invariably, whether attained in the one way or the other, some change in our import duties, and here the trouble begins. It is useless to attempt to close our eyes to the obvious fact that the efforts to introduce reciprocity as an effective policy of the government have failed because many well intentioned, intelligent people have believed and still believe that it means the destruction of the system of protection to which the great majority of the voters are firmly, and I hope, enduringly, attached. The protective tarrif was not originally intended to exclude competition, but rather to create competition. No foreign nation could justly complain of this equalization and, so far as I know, no nation has ever complained of such a criterion for import duties. With schedules arranged with any fair regard for this definition of protection, reciprocity would be already secured, and retaliation would be the weapon with which to punish any country that refused to deal fairly with us.

"Our present schedules, however, are, in the main, intended to be prohibitive if American products are sold at a fair and reasonable profit. It is only when, through unusual demand, the home manufacturer lifts the prices into the region of robbery that his foreign competitor can enter at all.

"There is no conflict, and can be none, between protection and reciprocity, if we abandon the selfish interest of a particular producer or class of producers, and ascend to the higher standpoint from which we may view the commonwelfare. The only justification for interference with absolute free trade is first, to provide a revenue, and, second, to diversify and increase the products of the country and it is just as essential and just as beneficial to our producers to preserve and enlarge their markets abroad as it is to preserve and enlarge their markets at home.

"The folly of maintaining a tariff schedule that will enable us to sell $1,000 of manufactured goods in our own markets, but which will prevent the sale of $10,000 of manufactured or agricultural products in foreign markets, is so striking that it can only be explained upon the hypothesis that we have surrendered to a senseless fear of disturbing commercial tranquility. Tranquility is very desirable, but to be lasting, it must be founded on industrial justice.

"The demand we make is not new. The men who today are the exponents of the stand pat theory of government are not protectionists; they are exclusionists. They have no title to the leadership of the party of protection, and they are using the policy for a purpose that would be indignantly repudiated by its most distinguished champions were they now in the land of the living." (Applause).

BROOKLYN HAS A FEVER SCARE

New York, Aug. 17.—A yellow fever scare was caused yesterday in First avenue, Brooklyn, when a doctor summoned to a tenement found John G. Murphy, a laborer, violently ill. In a lucid moment he said he came from Panama a few weeks ago. At the Norwegian hospital, the physicians agreed that Murphy had a mild case of yellow fever. The health department was informed and its agent reported that he found certain symptoms of typhoid malaria and had grave suspicions that his fellow physicians were right in their opinion that Murphy has yellow fever. He ordered Murphy placed in an isolated ward. An effort will be made to find what steamer brought Murphy here.

HE TOOK STRYCHNINE

But Attempt to Commit Suicide Was Frustrated.

Crookston, Minn., Aug 17—Bound over to the grand jury by Judge Bishop of Thief River Falls for taking indecent liberties with a girl, Ella Safford of that place, Frank Lemere, a balloonist, who attended the recent Red Lake county fair, Tuesday evening, attempted to commit suicide by taking a large dose of poison. The attempt was frustrated by the timely arrival of the police and the injection of an emetic.

The case in which Lemere is involved is the sensation of the hour at Thief River. He was arrested several days ago upon the complaint of the Safford girl's mother that the child was with Lemere in his room over a saloon. At the trial the girl, who is but 13, told of what had occurred in the two days in which she was in the showman's company, the evidence making a shocking story.

Lemere did not deny the truth of the girl's statement, and was bound over. He is from Paterson, N. J., and is believed to be the runaway son of wealthy parents. The disgrace of the affair was too great a strain upon him and he endeavored by strychnine to end his troubles.

WILL GET BACK HIS LEG.

Peculiar Agreement For Advancing of Money.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Emil Johnson is to get his leg back. Emil was a transient in Crookston early last spring and was shy of cash. He wanted to go to Duluth and applied to Chairman Misner of the poor committee for aid. He had just arrived here from Winnipeg and was not properly a city charge. He explained, however, that he had a well-to-do brother at Duluth, and that if he was supplied with a ticket to that place he could care for himself.

Alderman Misner agreed to advance the money, provided Johnson would leave one of his legs as a hostage—which Johnson agreed to do, forthwith, depositing his wooden one, as it was more easily detached than the one that grew naturally. He was given his ticket and went on his way rejoicing. Johnson was later heard from in Minneapolis, where he wrote back for his leg, having secured employment in a restaurant there. His letter was answered and inquiry made regarding the $7.50 advanced for his ticket while here, but no reply to this missive was received.

Chairman Misner has decided now, however, to return the leg to Johnson, gratis. He says there are no prospects for a one-legged alderman who might use the artificial limb, and to keep it longer would be running a big chance of getting it warped, necessitating sending it to Mount Clemens or Hunter Hot Springs, Mont., for restoration to its normal condition.

If Johnson will send his address to Alderman Misner, his second leg will be forwarded at once, no questions asked and the incident be wound up. His brother in Duluth has been notified.

PLEASED WITH INTERVIEW

Jews Feel Better Times Are Coming For Russian Brothers.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Adolf Kraus has returned to Chicago well satisfied with the result of the conference of Jewish representatives with M. Witte in Portsmouth, Monday night.

"There is no doubt," he said, "from present indications that the Russian assembly when called will take up seriously the question of settling the Jewish rights. M. Witte fairly and candidly discussed the conditions as they exist in Russia and taking it all in all we were pleased with the interview and feel that better times are coming for our people there.

"I notice in some papers the statement that the interview was prompted by Russia's need for money. This is unwarranted for while unquestionably great financiers were present, such a statement is unjust to M. Witte and to the other men present. There was not the slightest reference made to finances."

KING AND KAISER TO MEET.

New York, Aug. 17.—An interview between Emperor William and King Edward will take place when the king is returning home after the cure in Marienbad, says a Times dispatch from Berlin. The interview is said by the correspondent to have been arranged by the friendly offices of Emperor Francis Joseph.

GREAT MEMORIES.

When M. Coquelin, the great French comedian, was asked a short time ago if he ever forgot a part he had once played, he replied that he could at a moment's notice repeat any part he had learned in his early years on the stage, says Tit-Bits. "I have only to open my mouth," he said, "and the speeches come out like a ribbon that is being unwound from a reel. But I am of the opinion that after forty a man's memory hardens. At all events, if I have to play a part that I learned in later life I require just one rehearsal in order to be quite sure of myself."

The astonishing nature of such a feat as this is only realized when one remembers the enormous number of parts an actor of necessity has to master in his early years. "During my first four years on the stage," Sir Squire Bancroft, for instance, says, "I acted 346 characters, repeating many of them with various actors and in different theaters—an average of between 80 and 90 parts each year."

During his first season he played forty fresh characters within six weeks, "long hours of the night, generally by the light of a smoke candle, being often given to copying my parts from well-thumbed prompt books. In one memorable fortnight he had to act the following seven fresh parts: Cassio in "Othello," Gratiano in "The Merchant of Venice," de Mauprat in "Richelieu," Eugene de Lorme in "Love's Sacrifice," Wellborn in "A New Way to Pay Old Debts," Icilius in "Virginius" and Leonardo Gonzago in "The Wife."

Sir Henry Irving had a still more amazing record of varied acting in his "prentice days." During three years in the provinces he appeared in no fewer than 694 parts—an average of nearly four new characters every week during the whole period. Although more than forty years have gone Sir Henry committed these parts to memory, there are few of them which he could not repeat today without even a glance at the book. Oddly enough, if ever the great actor's memory shows any declination to play him false it is in the characters which he has assumed the oftenest.

"It is a curious thing," he has said, "that the more perfect you are in a part, the more likely you are to 'stick.' It is often the case after you have been playing the same character a hundred or more nights. The worst part of it is that when you want the prompter he is never there."

Mr. J. L. Toole, the veteran comedian, is another actor who has been dowered with a remarkable memory, and few men have needed it more. His was a most laborious apprenticeship, and it is doubtful whether even he could say, within a hundred, how many parts he has learned in his time. "I have played as many as eighteen parts in a week," he stated not long ago. "Often I have been studying another part while I have been playing a new one; and many a time after rehearsal in the morning and acting at night I have gone home to sit up studying a part for rehearsal next day." Well might he say, "Those were the days when an actor had to work like the proverbial nigger."

The late Wilson Barrett was blessed with such a remarkable memory that he was "letter perfect" in a part of average length after reading it through twice; and to his last day, it is said, he could repeat without prompting any part he had ever played. But, so far from being content with mastering the words of a character, he would study the most insignificant impersonation, even a walking part, with as much care as if he were about to appear in a first performance of "Hamlet" before a London audience.

A FUTURE BEDROOM.

It is beautifully proportioned, says "A Modern Utopia." There is no fireplace, and I am perplexed by that until I find a thermometer beside six switches on the wall. Above this switchboard is a brief instruction: One switch warms the floor, which is not carpeted, but covered with a substance like soft oilcloth; one warms the mattress(which is of metal with resistance coils threaded to and fro in it); the others warm the walls in various degrees, each directing current through a separate system of resistances. Beside the bed, and to be lit at night by a handy switch over the pillow, is a little clock, its face flush with the wall. The room has no corners to gather dirt, wall meets floor with gentle curve, and the apartment could be swept out effectually by a few strokes of a mechanical sweeper. You are politely requested to turn a handle at the foot of your bed before leaving the room, and forthwith the frame turns up into vertical position and the bed clothes hang airing. You stand at the doorway and realize that there remains not a minute's work for any one to do.

WORKS BEST LATE.

"I am a firm upholder of the theory that a man's best work is done after midnight," said Samuel M. Shortridge to the San Francisco Chronicle. "Twelve o'clock is the shank of the evening and just about that time a man's wits get to working well. I will assert that the wittiest tales, the brightest bonmots and the truest words of wisdom are uttered between the hours of midnight and daybreak. A man's work for the day is then ended, and he feels that uplifting of soul which results in flashes of genius. Had I lived in the days of Socrates I would have been one of his most earnest followers. Just think of the sage spending the night with pleasant fellows, dropping pearls of wisdom from his lips and thinking nothing of his wife at home tearing up the furniture, and then, when the night was ended, instead of steeping himself in brutish sleep, how he would walk down to the market and engage the fisherman in conversation replete with wit and humor. As poor old Tom Moore said, 'The best of all ways to lengthen your days is to steal a few hours from the night, my dear,' and upon that theory have I ordered my life, with the result that I am still young and have seen and done more than any one of your early-to-bed men could compass in a century."

CLAIM NO LOSS

Striking Telegraphers Assert That Their Men Are Firm.

Roads on Other Hand Say Strike Is Thing of Past.

Ranks of the striking telegraphers at the Head of the Lakes appear to remain practically unbroken, so far as returning to work for either the Great Northern or Northern Pacific roads is concerned. A good many of the operators, it is said, are finding employment with other companies, and Chairman Hogan made the statement this morning that even if the roads do agree to the terms of the telegraphers and announce that they will take the old men back, there will still be a shortage, owing to the fact that so many of the strikers have taken positions with other roads.

Mr. Hogan says that none of the strikers on the Lake Superior divisions has returned to work. The stations of Huston, Brevator and Sandstone, on the Great Northern, were closed yesterday, according to the claims of the strikers, who say they prevailed upon operators at these points to refuse to work any more for the company until the strike has been settled. At Sandstone three men quit work, it is said. This is too third lot of three men pulled off at Sandstone, say the strikers.

"At least two delays resulted yesterday at Huston because the operator there left his position," said Mr. Hogan, today. "A freight was delayed an hour and a half and a passenger train was delayed thirty minutes. We are confident of victory in the end. The roads are greatly bothered by the strike, but the trouble now amounts to little when compared to what may be expected when the rush of grain from the Western fields begins. The wheat will start moving in a few days and the roads will find that they cannot care for the business without a full force of competent operators."

Great Northern and Northern Pacific officials say the strike is now a thing of the past, and that business is normal in all ways. The strikers also claim to have persuaded a man engaged to work at Buhl to return to his home in Indiana. They say the true situation was misrepresented to him at St. Paul, where he was engaged, and that when he arrived at Duluth and found just how things stood he refused to go to work.

West Duluth.

Sixty members were initiated in the A. O. U. W. at Great Eastern hall last evening. The work was conducted by Grand Master Workman W. B. Anderson of Winona, assisted by Charles E. Larsen of St. Paul, grand recorder; Alexander Van Prague of Owatonna, grand trustee, and the officers of West Duluth lodge, No. 145.

The grand lodge officers arrived on the 6:55 Northern Pacific train from the Twin Cities. They were met at the depot by a delegation of the local lodge and escorted to the residence of E. D. Nickerson, where they are being entertained during their sojourn in the city.

The exercises in the lodge rooms were preceded by a parade from Mr. Nickerson's home to the hall. Chestalk's band furnished the music for the occasion. The size and general appearance of the parade reflected credit on the order.

The initiation exercises were impressive and entertaining. A short social session was held following the business meeting. The grand lodge officers expressed their thanks and appreciation of the manner in which they were entertained and the enthusiasm with which the members of the order conducted the work. Much of the success of the event is due to the progressiveness and ability of E. D. Nickerson and Charles S. Ehle.

Grand Master Workman Anderson and his party will be in attendance at the picnic held this afternoon at Lester Park, under the auspices of Fidelity lodge, No. 105, A. O. U. W. This evening they will assist in initiating a large class in the Rice's Point lodge, No. 80, at their lodge rooms, in Sloan's hall, West end.

COMPLETE RETURNS

Show 368,200 Votes For Dissolution and 184 Against.

Christiania, Aug. 17.—Complete returns from last Sunday's referedum on the question of the separation of Norway from Sweden show that 368,200 votes were cast for dissolution and 184 against it. The size of the vote is very gratifying to the leaders of the storthing, and has aroused intense interest. At the last general election for members of the storthing only 236,641 votes were cast.

OUTBREAK OF ACHINESE.

Amsterdam, Aug. 17.—A telegram received from Batavia, Dutch East Indies, reports an ugly outbreak of Achinese rebels, who attacked the Dutch post at Rambong, killing two officers and twenty-two men. Only six men of the post succeeded in escaping and these were wounded.

Do You Enjoy Music?

And Are You Unable to Play the Piano?

The Autopiano

Our Self-Playing Piano Will Interest You.

You have undoubtedly often made the remark, "Oh! if I could only play the piano, what wouldn't I give?" when hearing some good musician playing your favorite piece. And you envy the person's knowledge and ability to play so well. But do you know that it is possible for you to play your favorite piece, you who are not a musician, just as well as the one who is? And how much more enjoyable playing it yourself.

One of our self-playing Pianos enables you to play any music you desire. A "cake walk," a patriotic selection, or a piece from the best composers—and to play it with rare interpretation and exquisite feeling.

This marvelous instrument is a superb Piano—open a panel in front and a panel at the foot, insert a music roll and move the bellows—a little practice with the levers that control the expression and you are a perfect musician.

Truly a wonderful instrument, and the price, including twelve music rolls (different pieces) but—

$485

Come in and hear it at any time, and remember the playing machinery does not interfere in the least with the instrument being used as a Piano.

Sold on Easy Payments If Desired—$25 Cash, $10 a Month.

WHO WILL BE APPOINTED?

Washington Gossip Regarding the Federal Offices In Duluth.

A Washington dispatch to the Minneapolis Journal says: The terms of Postmaster Fisher, Register Culkin and Receiver Smith of the Duluth land office, and of Collector of Customs Lee Willcuts of Duluth, will expire during the next ten months, and to Congressman J. Adam Bede will fall the task of making three of the four new appointments. The collectorship of customs is a senatorial appointment, and it has been agreed that Mr. Willcuts shall serve another term, making twelve years in all.

It is almost a certainty that two new officers will be named to run the land office. Messrs. Culkin and Smith have each had eight years' service. They were appointed by Judge Morris and while personally Congressman Bede has no feeling against them, it is said that he believes that these two offices should go to new men, with a view to preserving the political equilibrum of the district.

As to the Duluth postmastership it is understood that Mr. Fisher, who has had two terms of four years each, would not make any outcery if he were deposed; still, he would not decline another commission which would put him in the twelve-year class also. As with the land officers, Bede has no personal objection to continuing Fisher, and may do this, although there is a rumor that he may appoint Guy Eaton, who has been chairman of his congressional committee for four years. There is a strong sentiment among the Duluth business men for the retention of Mr. Fisher. He has been an efficient official and is probably in that class covered by a rule adopted during Mr. Cortelyou's term as postmaster general that the fact that a presidental postmaster has been in office eight years shall not be in itself a cause for making a change. There have been cases when the postmaster general has waived the enforcement of this rule, and it may be that Bede will have a strong enough pull with Mr. Cortelyou and the president to induce them to appoint Eaton, especially in view of the fact that Mr. Fisher would not make any objection to going out.

It is understood, here, that Congressman Bede will take up the question of filling these offices while he is home this fall, and that the full slate will be announced before he comes to Washington to attend the session of congress. The politicians in his district have been agitated over these places for some months, and it is Bede's intention, as understood here, to select the men for all the offices some months in advance of the creation of the vacancies, so that he may be saved a lot of bother this winter, when he will be busy with other matters of importance to the district and state.

LEAVES SERVICE.

Capt. Frank Maginnis Retires From Army.

Capt. T. Frank Maginnis, accompanied by Mrs. Maginnis and their children, have arrived from Washington and will occupy their residence at 1015 East Second street. Invalided home from the Philippines in the fall of 1903, Capt. Maginnis has been on sick leave in Georgia, Florida, Richmond and Washington. When he entered the Philippine campaign he was in splendid health, but the rigors of that hot climate were too much for him. He also saw service in Porto Rico, under Gen. Miles. Capt. Maginnis graduated from West Point in 1898.

THE CHINESE BOYCOTT

May Have Considerable Effect on Breadstuffs, Thinks Hill.

Minneapolis, Aug. 17.—President J. J. Hill of the Great Northern road, who returned from New York Sunday night, yesterday gave out a short interview on the crop situation and the trade prospect for the coming year:

"If the present Chinese boycott prevents the export of our flour to China, this will force about 20,000,000 bushels of wheat into other markets, mainly in Europe, the effect of which will be the reduction of prices there, and in that way it will affect the price of breadstuffs in all the wheat growing sections of the United States."

Mr. Hill has been going over the crop situation very carefully since his return from the East, and has, in fact, kept well informed ever since the crop began to mature. He believes that the Northwest crop will be fully up to the average, if not above. The fact that the Chinese boycott enters into his review of the situation is evidence that the Chinese situation is causing grave concern among the handlers of the Northwest's wheat crop.

JOHN D. ROCKEFELLER

Giving Away Much More Than His Income.

New York, Aug. 17.—Is John D. Rockefeller trying to emulate the example of Andrew Carnegie in trying to avoid dying rich?

The Standard Oil company declared a dividend of $6 a share this week. This amounts to a distribution of $6,000,000, of which Mr. Rockefeller's portion will be a miserly $2,400,000.

In the past three months he has given away at least $11,500,000, or $3,000,000 more than he will receive from Standard Oil. He is also considering a $50,000,000 gift to the Chicago university if he has not already decided upon the gift.

In all, Mr. Rockefeller will probably receive $15,000,000 this year as his share of Standard Oil. If his other investments yield him $10,000,000 his total will be $25,000,000.

Within three months he has given away $11,500,000. In the preceding five months he gave away about $2,500,000, or a total of $14,000,000 so far in 1905. If he makes the $50,000,000 gift to the University of Chicago, the total will be $64,000,000 at least, for the year, or about two-and-a-half times his income.

Should this come to pass, Mr. Rockefeller for the first time in his life will be poorer at the year's end than he was at its beginning.

RUSSELL SAGE

Expects to Reach the Age of 100.

New York, Aug. 17.—Russell Sage, who recently celebrated his 89th birthday, was reported in financial circles yesterday to have told a friend that he expects to reach the age of 100, and that he also expects to see Missouri Pacific stock go to 200 before he dies. This remark circulated upon the floor of the stock exchange caused much amused comment, as it was only a few years ago Mr. Sage denounced an upward movement of the same stock as rank manipulation that would hurt the railroad by exciting the anger of the farmer legislators. Mr. Sage has been noted for long-time predictions in the stock market that came true.

When one broker on the exchange heard of Mr. Sage's prediction about living to be 100 he remarked tersely: "I don't see why Providence should wait for him to reach par when he can be got around 89, if economically managed, and can be expected to earn carrying charges."

BRISTOW STARTS

On Trail of His Enemies In Kansas.

Washington, Aug. 17.—Gen. Joseph L. Bristow has started for Kansas to even some old scores. He intends to assume at once active control of two newspaper properties in the Sunflower state, one at Ottawa and the other at Salina, and, free of all restraint, he will pay his respects to his defamers and critics.

Mr. Bristow, as fourth assistant postmaster general, directed the investigation of the postal scandals and made a number of enemies by his fearless and impartial work. He has been criticised strongly, and, while remaining in the government service, has not had the opportunity of replying. He has completed his work as a special commissioner in connection with the Panama railroad, and, once more a plain citizen, will have something interesting to say.

It is expected he will return to Washington soon as a senator from Kansas.

SEVERAL PEOPLE CALL ON THE PRESIDENT.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 17.—Postmaster General and Mrs. George B. Cortelyou were guests for a few hours today of the president and Mrs. Roosevelt. The postmaster general is on his vacation and he and Mrs. Cortelyou have been passing a few days at their home in Hempstead, L. I. Mr. Cortelyou does not expect to return to Washington until about the middle of September.

Edwin H. Conger, ambassador to Mexico, was a guest of the president and Mrs. Roosevelt at luncheon.

During the day two or three other visitors were received by the president, among them being Dr. E. J. James, president of the Illinois university.

TAKES EXCEPTIONS TO CORONER'S VERDICT.

Cleveland, Aug. 17.—H. S. Storer, general superintendent of the Lake Shore road, who has kept in close touch with all the investigations in connection with the wreck of the Twentieth Century limited at Mentor, Ohio, made this statement today in reference to the verdict rendered by Coroner Siegelstein of this county, concerning the accident:

"No testimony or evidence has been discovered or produced before either of the coroners who have had the matter under investigation, which shows or tends to show who the person was that was guilty of opening the switch. Coroner Siegelstein in his verdict held that the switch was opened by Walter F. Miner, night telegraph operator at Mentor. The coroner admitted that there was no direct warrant to place the responsibility on Miner and that the 'finding was by deductions.'"

GAY PRINCESS MARIE

Finds Life at Roumanian Court Too Slow.

London, Aug. 17.—Princess Marie, the flighty young crown princess of Roumania, has again escaped from the irksome round of royal duties in Bucharest, and is paying a series of visits to her European relatives. She is now at Buckingham palace, the guest of her uncle, King Edward.

Princess Marie, 29, is known as the most incorrigible royal flirt in Europe. She is of a very vivacious temperament, which she inherits from her mother, the Grand Duchess Marie of Russia, and she is the handsomest member of the European royal family. She was married at 18 to the crown prince of Roumania. She has served as the prototype of many princesses drawn by authors in the "Prisoner of Zenda" style of novel.

She is sometimes called "the American princess," because of her vivacity and ability to keep clear of scandal at the same time.

The dull court life of Bucharest does not appeal to the tastes of the young princess, nor does she find congenial the literary circle of her mother-in-law, Carmen Sylva, the queen of Roumania.

King Charles of Roumania calls the crown princess his "topaz-throated hummingbird," and is very proud of her. She is a splendid horsewoman, a crack shot and has nerves of steel.

TOURING PHILIPPINES.

Taft and Party Supposed to Be at Samboagna.

Manila, Aug. 17.—The transport Logan, with Secretary Taft, Miss Roosevelt and party on board, was due at Samboagna on the Island of Mindanao at 2 p. m. on Wednesday, Aug. 16. She will remain there for nineteen hours and then proceed to Jolo, on the Island of Jolo, arriving there at 6 p. m. today, Aug. 17. There has been no communication with Mindanao during the past twenty-four hours, owing to a break in the cable, which probably will take five days to repair.

The next port at which the party will call will be Cebu, in the Viscaya islands, where the steamer is due to arrive on Monday, Aug. 21. The date set for the banquet to the party at Hongkong is Tuesday, Sept. 5.

LOST IN MOUNTAINS.

Party Is Searching For a Montana Woman.

Philipsburg, Mont., Aug. 17.—Mrs. Martin Richards is lost in the mountains near here. A party led by Sheriff McDonald and Undersheriff Morgan is in the hills looking for her. She is a demented woman who was released from the asylum about eighteen months ago. She wandered away from home night before last accompanied by two dogs, one of which has returned. She is about 50.

DEVIL BULL MOOSE.

A Weird Story Told by Veracious Guide.

Ugly and black, with ragged clouds curtaining the stars, night had settled over the valley says the Brooklyn Eagle. From the farther end of the lake came gusty heralds of the storm—squalls that drove the ripples with louder splash against the stalks of lily and beaver hut and upon the rocks that fringed the mouth of the neighboring brook. Flashes of lightning, distant but dazzling, momentarily disclosed the straggling array of water killed birches, spectral outposts of the forest benighted, the line of invasion where the spring freshets had pillaged the uplands along the course of a torturous inlet. From beyond the ridges that these same flashes occasionally lifted into view, where the Misgnadavic—"River of the Hills" swept with broken torrent to meet the Fundy tides, swelled, subsided, and rose again the ominous grumbling of the thunder. We sat upon a fallen log in front of the shack, watching the blinding pyrotechnics of the sky. In the intervals of the lightning the guide's burning pipe was the only relief to the intense and appalling blackness.

"More rain," I remarked sagely, as a skirmishing drop hit me on the nose; "that's bad for trout."

"Yep," observed George. "Lake's as full as a bottle now and all riled up. That's why we ketched no fish in the inlet pools tonight."

On these self-evident and painful facts no comment was returned.

George continued, punctuating with puffs:

"You see, it's different on this end of the lake from what it is down at the outlet. Now, if you was to go to the Devil's Eddy tomorrow you'd most likely—Great Scott, look at that!"

"Look at what."

"Keep your eyes on the mouth of Clear Brook," hissed George, in great agitation, grabbing my arm to emphasize the force of the request, 'and wait for the next flash.' I waited until an illumination of surpassing brilliancy threw into bold relief a giant figure with the lordly antlers of the full grown moose.

"Same feller, I'll bet a dollar to a carpet tack," exclaimed George, as darkness veiled the lake again and the dripping of the foliage and the crackling of twigs told that the bull had taken flight. He was crashing his way toward the shelter of the tall timber.

"Friend of yours?" I ventured.

"Sure," returned George, "and, by golly, he ought'er know me better'n to go rarin' and tearing clear across the county, jest because he happened to light on me unexpected like."

"Perhaps I scared him," I suggested.

"Most likely. He never does take to me kindly when I've company. Always sort of shy and backward about comin' forward. You see, me'n and him's met each other lots of times in the last seven years, ever since they passed that blasted law that won't let a man shoot a moose between this bank of the St. John and the Maine line. First time I seed him was through to Crazy lake. He wasn't more'n a two-year old then. Next we fetched up together when I was togue fishin' to West Long and the same day I followed me through to Cundy and raised ructions round the camp half the night till I fired hardtack at him and cussed him back into the woods. Came across him six weeks ago on the trail in from Sturgis, jest where you get clear of the swamp, and the old devil grinned and pawed the ground and wiggled his chin whisker, jest as if he said, 'Bless your soul, don't I know them boys up to Fredericton have put another year onto my close season.' Most of the time he's as tame as a cow, but once in a while he cuts up rusty when he finds me along with somebody. He's awful cool and critically tonight."

"Lucky he didn't behave this time as he did one night last year when he found me here with Barney Kelly. We was mighty tired, for we'd come clear in from below the Devil's Eddy and had hauled the best part of two deer along with us. We saw the bull for a minute over by the inlet as we pulled the canoe up on the beach, but he jest look at us and made himself scarce before you could snap a finger. There was a cloudy moon that night and after supper Barney started down to the lake with a tin pail to get some water for dish washin'. Pretty soon I heard him holler. I ran to the brow of the hill and I sez, 'What's up,' sez I.

"Somethin's after me," he yells.

"'Chuck it,' sez I, 'and don't you drink no more of that Honny River whisky or you and me don't go deer huntin' again.'

"But Barney kep' a-hollerin' and makin' track for the shack and swearin' like all possessed, 'special y when he fell smack on his face in that patch of blueberry bushes yander, and in a minute I seen, right after him, ker-splashin' through the pads at the edge of the lake, that old limb of Satan with horns and goatee. When Barney picked himself out of the blueberry patch he made a dive for that half grown birch and shinned up to the crotch quicker'n it takes to tell it. The old boy comes to the foot of the tree puffin' and blowin' and swearin' in moose talk so's you could have heered him nigh over to Lake An'tony Bluff. Pretty soon he spies the tin pail that Barney dropped when he clumb the tree. He looked at it scornful like, and then gave it a kick with his forefoot so hard that it bounced over my way. Perhaps he liked the noise he made on the tin or maybe he on'y wanted to see me, but whatever way it was he come in my direction. I had time enough to get a rifle and shoot him if I'd a-wanted to, but I knowed that Barney Kelly had a loose tongue and if he ever got talkin' of the job through to the village the story that I said the old beggar out in self-defense. So, all of a sudden, I made a run and grabbed the tin pail and swung it aroind my head and yelled, 'Don't ye come a step farder, you villian, or I'll knock you stiff. Of course, he knowed I was on'y bluffin', but he stopped short in his track and sat down to think it over."

"Sat down!" I gasped.

"Sure, why not?" continued the veracious George. "And while he sat there I begins to beat a tattoo on the bottom of the pail with my fist in Salvation army style, half to keep my courage up and half to see if I couldn't scare him away. But he wouldn't budge an inch. The more I hammered the better he liked it. After a little I changed the tune to 'My Own Canadian Home,' and gave it to him good and hard with a lot of variations that I learned when I played the kettle drum in the band down to St. Andrew's. Next I tried 'The Blue Bells of Scotland,' and 'Oft in the Stills Night,' and 'The Old Oaken Bucket' and 'Annie Laurie,' and the big fellow snorted, and grunted, and set them horns of his swayin' from side to side tryin' his level best to mark good time. Still, he wouldn't quit, and I jest had to keep on thumpin,' while Barney sat up in the crotch damnin' all the moose from here to Miramichi and tellin' me I was several Kinds of a jay because I didn't git a Winchester.

"Well, sir, perhaps you won't believe it, but for nigh an hour and a half that bull sat there as comfortable as if he was in a gallery seat in the St. John Op-ry House, while I played everything I knowed from 'Garryowen' to 'The Dead March.' Think's I this concert's goin' to last all night, when Barney hollers, 'Say, George give him 'God Save the King' and maybe he'll know enough to go home!'

"'Heavens,' sez I, 'what a lobster I was not to think of that afore.' You see it's the custom to end every music show in these parts with the national anthem, and the audience ain't supposed to quit till it gets that. So I no sooner struck up the first bar than the bull riz on all fours and bowed his head, jest for all the world like I've seen 'em do at the op'ry house in St. John, and stood quiet and respectful like till I finished. Then he turned and walked back to the lake, givin' Barney's tree a kick as he passed that near jarred Barney out of his seat. Last I see of that moose he was swimmin' in a bee line for Birch P'int."

THE TRANSLATOR.

One of the literary lights of the Ghetto earns a comfortable living, as incomes there are estimated, translating and transferring into English equivalents the names of the dwellers there who are weary of the names they brought to this land with them, says the New York Sun. Usually his duties are confined to translation, and he rarely has to exercise the poetic gift which has been responsible for some of his greatest successes. He still refers with pride to the fact that it was he who first turned Gruenberg into Vermont, which was a philological feat of no mean order. That change has stretched from one end of middle Broadway to the other, but the credit is claimed by this East side poet, who explains to his less informed compatriots that such a name, for instance, as "Himmelreich" had much better be translated for commercial reasons into "Heavenrich" than "The Kingdom of Heaven."

Oscar Johnson and Frank Servant Go to the Reformatory.

Both Plead Guilty to Charges of Attempted Forgery.

Pleading guilty to attempted forgery in the second degree, Oscar Johnson, aged 23 years, and Frank Servant, aged 20 years, were this morning sentenced to the state reformatory at St. Cloud by Judge Cant. Both young men were in custody at the county jail, awaiting an investigation by the grand jury which meets next month. They took advantage of the new state law which permits persons accused of certain offenses to enter a plea of guilty and receive punishment without waiting for the grand jury to act.

Johnson was charged with attempting to pass a forged check of $62 purporting to have the signature of J. Anderson, while Servant attempted to pass a forged $10 check on Peter Deloyea, at West Duluth. Both will be taken immediately to the state reformatory to enter on their indeterminate period of confinement.

Up to the present date there have been since last May, twelve persons who have acted under the provisions of the new law and pleaded guilty without coming before the grand jury or to trial. This record is believed by the county authorities to demonstrate beyond a doubt the wisdom and the benefit of the act.

MAN HANGED

Proved That His Death Was Not Immediate.

Jersey City, N. J., Aug. 17.—Rev. Emil Menrv, who is to serve on the sheriff's jury at the hanging of Edward F. Tapelev in the Hudson county jail, made this astonishing statement last night:

"I have seen seven unfortunates hanged. One was Paul Genz, who was executed in the Hudson county jail April 13, 1897. In the fight I shall make to abolish capital punishment in New Jersey, I shall argue that sometimes a man is conscious after his neck is broken.

"Paul Genz and I discussed the question whether a man's brain might be active after his cervical vertebrae were broken. Genz was certain he would be conscious after his neck was broken. He said to me:

"'Watch me close. After my body is jerked upwards and I fall to the rope's end my neck is broken. I will wait about a minute; then I will close my hands twice, then once, then twice again. I arrange this signal now so that none of the doubters who may be looking at me can say that my movements are only involuntary but officer shall be

"When Genz fell after being jerked into the air by the fall of the weight, his body stiffened. About three-quarters of a minute passed. Then Genz clenched his hands twice, opened them again, closed them once, then twice again. I distinctly saw his pinioned hands make the signal he said he would give me. So did six other men whom I had told Genz' promise of what he would do. The horor of it was almost overwhelming."

Our Mexican Trade.

Our trade with Mexico has been steadily increasing since 1870 when our exports and imports only amounted to about $2,000,000 each. This year they will reach $46,000,000 each. There has also been a steadily increasing demand for Hostetter's Stomach Bitters, because more people are learning of its wonderful cures and have decided to try it for their own satisfaction. If you are still hesitating get a bottle today and give it a chance to prove its merit. You'll find it perfectly safe and reliable, in fact the most delicate system can easily retain it. For over fifty years it has been curing poor appetite, heartburn, insomnia, belching, dyspepsia, indigestion, costiveness and female ills without fail. We urge every sick man and woman to try it at once.

BUCK STILL IN JAIL.

Effort to Secure Bail Not Yet Successful.

Mankato, Minn., Aug. 17.—A. A. Buck has not yet succeeded in furnishing $5,000 bail for his appearance at the November term of the district court, although efforts are being made to get signers to the bond. The idea of obtaining signers at Mapleton has been abandoned. It is understood that some who were free with offers to sign did not care to do so when the opportunity came, or were found not to be qualified. Several persons have offered to sign for limited amounts, such as $100 each.

An effort is being made to settle the claims against Judge J. B. Ogle on the basis of 30 or 40 cents on the dollar, and there is some prospect of success. In case a settlement is made, it will be with the understanding that no criminal prosecution will follow.

PHIPPS BOYS ARE ARRAIGNED IN COURT.

Inverness, Scotland, Aug. 17.—Jay S. Phipps and Henry Carnegie Phipps, sons of Henry Phipps of Pittsburg, Pa., were formally arraigned today in the high court on the charge of shooting at Salmon fishers on the Beauly river, and pleaded "not guilty." The case was remitted for trial at Edinburgh. The defendants contended that they merely fired in the direction of supposed poachers and had no idea of hitting them.

KOMURA GIVES $500.

Seattle Aug. 17.—President Takashi, of the Seattle Japanese association, has received $500 from Baron Komura, donated by the distinguished statesman to the Japanese school of this city. The course of the school consists principally of Japanese language and literature.

STORM DOES DAMAGE.

Kansas City, Aug. 17.—Last night's rain and wind storm, which wrought minor damage in Kansas City, also caused some destruction in Western Missouri and Eastern Kansas. About three inches of rain fell. At Lamonte, Mo., Lawrence, Leavenworth and Emporia, Kan., awnings and plate glass windows were smashed, and trees and sheds were blown down.

If, in store advertising, "the wish is father to the thought" of effective publicity, and grandfather to the act, the trio should form a happy family.

MAKING UP TO JAPAN

Commodore Perry's Dangerous Visit Half a Century Ago.

Only Eight Men Now Living Who Shared His Experience.

New York, Aug. 17.—"There are only eight men living that may relate as a personal experience the story of how the United States opened Japan to the world," said William Speiden of the first division of the custom house in New York, the other day. "That is not counting members of the ships crews. The eight are:

"Lieutenant George B. Balch, now retired as rear admiral, U. S. N., Washington, D. C.

"Passed Midshipman H. H. Upshur, now retired as rear admiral, U. S. N., Washington, D. C.

"Second Assistant Engineer Edward Fithian, now retired as chief engineer, Bridgeton, N. J.

"Midshipman George J. Morrison, now retired as lieutenant commander, U. S. N., Washington, D. C.

"Midshipman Oscar F. Stanton, now retired as rear admiral, U. S. N., New London, Ct.

"Third Assistant Engineer Edward D. Roble, now retired as commodore, U. S. N., Washington, D. C.

"Purser's Clerk William Speiden, now in the United States customs service, port of New York.

"Captain's Clerk John S. Sewall, now a clergyman at Bangor, Me.

"You will observe by these titles," said Mr. Spiden, "that for the most part time has dealt well with the survivors; with three rear admirals and a commodore in the list.

"On July 14th last," Mr. Speiden continued, "we had a reunion of the survivors at my home, No. 107 East Seventieth street. It was unique in many ways; most of all, because it was the first reunion of the old sea fighters in all the fateful years that followed the memorable expedition.

"Minister Takahira wrote us a letter saying that but for Commodore Perry, Japan would not be the Japan of today, a recognized power among nations. The Mikado of Japan sent us cigars from his own private stock and greetings. The reunion and dinner commemorated the landing of the Americans in Japan, on July 14, 1853.

"The incidents of the cruise are as vivid in my mind as if we had returned but yesterday. It was may fortune to be appointed as clerk to my father, who was selected by Commodore Perry as purser of the United States steamship Mississippi, which vessel was to convey the commodore on his mission.

"At that time scarcely anything was known by the Western world of Japan. The Dutch had found some favor in the Mikado's land, but they guarded their trading privileges so jealously that the world was no better off, and Nippon was closed to the rest of the world.

"The Japanese desired then to remain in seclusion and were quite willing that the world should leave them to themselves. That's not much like the Japan of today.

"In the early part of 1852 an expedition of some size was determined on by the United States government, and the navy department was in a quandary for some time as to what officer should be selected for the extremely delicate mission of making friends with the Japs against their will. Commodore Matthew Calbraith Perry, who successfully commanded the naval forces during the war with Mexico, was finally designated. He prepared himself by reading up on Japan and exhausted every available work, of which there were few reliable at that time.

"So sooner had it become generally known that the United States was to send an expedition to Japan than applications for places came in from every country of the civilized world. Adventurers of all sorts, soldiers of fortune, who hoped for loot, blacklegs and cashiered officers wanted to go. Commodore Perry picked his men with care and refused all such as could not furnish spotless credentials.

"President Fillmore, the secretary of the navy, and other members of the cabinet, came on board at Annapolis a few days before the ships left Norfolk, and bade godspeed to the commodore and his officers. It is interesting to remember right here that the present emperor of Japan was born the month we sailed, on Nov. 3, 1852.

"The fleet touched first at the Island of Madeira. Writing home from there, I remember, I quoted the words of the commodore in speaking of his policy toward the Japs: 'I believe that the people of the islands, if treated with strict justice and gentle kindness, will render confidence for confidence, and that after awhile the Japanese will be our friends.'

"We reached Hong Kong, China, on April 1, 1853, after touching at Saint Helena, Cape Town, Mauritius, Ceylon and Singapore, every one of which ports was a perfect mine of interest to us young officers. At Hong Kong the Mississippi received a thorough overhauling.

"Finally, the commodore secured a foothold at Napa, Lewkew, a small group of islands just south of Japan, and from there, on the second of July, 1853, a squadron of four vessels, instead of the ten the commodore expected, sailed northward. On the eighth of July the United States steam frigate Susquehanna, with the United States sloop of war Saratoga in tow, and the United States steam frigate Mississippi, with the United States sloop of war Plymouth in tow, entered the bay of Yeddo, prepared for any emergency. The same day the four warships anchored off the town of Orugawa, in Uraga Bay.

"With binoculars we could almost make out the inscription on the placards the Japanese had placed in every village: 'So long as the sun shall warm the earth, let no Christian be so bold as to come to Japan; and let all know that the king of Spain himself, or the Christians' God, or the great God of all, if he violate this command, shall pay for it with his head.'

"Evidently the Japs didn't consider the Dutch Christians, but they meant those words in deadly earnest. Commodore Perry realized the tremendous task he had in hand to sooth and placate a whole people prejudiced by centuries of isolation.

"During the expedition I kept a regular dairy of the events almost daily as they occurred, and the record written by the unpracticed hand of a mere boy enables me to recall the stirring scenes.

"It was not long, my dairy tells me, after we anchored in the little bay before the waters fairly swarmed with boats filled with Japanese officials and watermen in brilliant and picturesque dress. They all endeavored to board the American ships, and uttered cries like wild sea birds suddenly disturbed by the coming of a strange animal.

"Finally, the vice governor of Uraga, Nagazzima Soborosuke, and his interpreter, were allowed to mount the gangway ladder of the Susquehanna, and were invited into the captain's cabin, where a conference was held. Commodore Perry kept himself secluded in his own cabin, and communicated with the Japs through his aid only. He wanted the vice governor to understand that the power and dignity of the United States required that only a high official from Yeddo, properly authorized to receive the president's letter, would be received in person by him.

"The vice governor went over the side greatly impressed. After that Japanese officials of high and low degree were in communication with representatives of the commodore, and after a good deal of their shillyshallying the commodore informed them that if the Japanese government did not see fit to appoint a high official to meet him he would go ashore and deliver the letter in person, no matter what the consequences might be.

"Those were anxious days on board the fleet. But on July 14, 1853, the high officials arrived and the first landing of an American force in Japan took place.

"There were 7,000 Japanese soldiers, all tolerably well equipped, and our own force numbered 300 officers and men that went ashore. The president's letter was delivered with much formality and ceremony, and with the thrilling events of that day the long-closed door was unlocked.

"Then and there at Kurihama the United States and Japan shook hands. A monument to Commodore Perry stands now on the spot where he met the mikado's envoys.

"There was a general feeling of satisfaction on the part of the landing party at the successful result. Yet we all felt that, had our newly made friends so willed, their well conditioned soldiers could have swept the handful of Americans off the face of the earth, although the steamers were so placed as to command the landing place with their guns.

"On the morning of the fifteenth the commodore came on board the Mississippi and we proceeded up the bay to within sight of the capital city of Yeddo. During the few remaining days of our stay many officials from different towns came aboard, presents were exchanged and we officers made use of the opportunities to secure for our sisters and sweethearts all sorts of useful and beautiful Japanese art objects, things of which they had never even read at home.

"The seventh of August found us again at Hongkong, where the commodore decided to winter while waiting for the preparation of the mikado's reply to the letter of President Fillmore. It was the original intention of the commodore to wait until spring before again proceeding North, but suspicious movements on the part of the Russians and French induced him to change his plans, and the squadron left Hongkong for Lewkew on Jan. 14, 1854, for the second peaceful invasion of Japan.

"Monday, Feb. 13, 1854, will long be remembered. It commemorated the second entrance into the mikado's country.

"It was a bright, bitterly cold, but beautiful day. Away on the port side stood noble old Mount Fuji, covered with snow, and the hilltops, as far as the eye could reach, were robes of spotless white.

"The flags were flying and the bands were playing on board all the ships. The fleet then consisted of the Susquehanna, the Mississippi, the Lexington, the Powhatan, the Vandalia and the Macedonian.

"At Uraga the Japanese officials came aboard. Among them, I remember, was a very great man announced as Kurikawa Kahei and two interpreters. There were also three gray-robed Japs who appeared to use their eyes to great advantage. It turned out that they were metsuke, dwantingen, literally cross-eyed persons, or those who look in all directions—in other words, spies.

A great effort was made to have us retrace our steps to Kurihama and hold further intercourse there, but the commodore's idea was to hold the ensuing conference as near the capital as possible, and the present great city of Yokohama, then a village of a few hundred inhabitants, was fixed upon as the meeting place.

"Dark looks and suspicion seemed to give way to smiles and confidence on the part of the Japanese people. Commodore Perry visited the treaty-house on March 8, 1854, and then invited the high commissioners to visit the ships. We were then permitted to walk where we pleased in the city and the Japs had every liberty aboard the fleet.

"Many of those who visited us had paper and small hairbrushes for drawing. Nothing escaped their notice. They made drawings of every object that excited their interest.

"One of the most interesting occurrences was a banquet aboard the Powhatan, to which all the high officials, some seventy of them, came. On board the Mississippi one day I saw my first jiu jitsu. Wrestlers gave an exhibition of their strange art that amazed the jack tars.

"The treaty was received on Friday, March 31, and the mission of the commodore was at an end. At the treaty-house the commodore signed three drafts of the treaty in the English language and delivered them to the commissioners, with three copies in Dutch and Chinese. At the same time the commissioners handed the commodore three copies in Japanese, Chinese and Dutch and signed by four of their number especially designated by the emperor.

"It was on Sunday, May 25, 1855, that the old Mississippi was fastened to the dock at the navy yard, Brooklyn, after three years of the most interesting and exciting experiences."

Mr. Speiden is still hale and hearty and does a young man's work for Uncle Sam in the custom house. After his return from Japan in 1855 he went officially to China, where at Hongkong he remained in charge of the United States naval agency until 1864.

"It should not be denied an old fellow," said Mr. Speiden, "if he felt his spirit kindle at the thought that in these days of Japan's triumph as a great power he is one of the few left that helped take Japan against her will out of the darkness of the ancient times and made it possible for her to become a great nation."

Mr. Speiden is well acquainted with Baron Komura and Minister Takahira of the Japanese peace commission. He visited Baron Komura several times while the latter was here, the baron being intensely interested in Mr. Speiden's accounts of old Japan as he found her on the memorable expedition.

REMARKABLE POSTCRIPT.

Miss Carey Thomas, the president of Bryn Manr college, talked at a luncheon about the ingenuousness of children, says the Los Angeles Times.

"A friend of mine," she said, "once showed me a letter that her little son had written her from Andover. The letter ran like this:

"'Dear Mother, I am well and hope you are well. Will you please send me $2? I know the last did not last long, but it is all spent now, and I need $2 badly, I hope you are well. I am well. Please do not forget $2.

"Then there was this postscript:

"'I was so ashamed to ask for money so soon after the last you sent that I sent after the postman to get this letter back, but it was too late, he had gone.'"

PAID FOR CONTEMPT.

The following anecdote is told of Gen. Gilman Marston, a once famous lawyer in New Hampshire, by the Boston Herald: Gen. Marston was attending court at Dover, when a young attorney made a motion that was denied by the court. The young man remonstrated against what he thought was the wrong ruling of the judge. So vehemently did he remonstrate that he was fined $10 for contempt of court. An older attorney took the matter up and he was fined a similar sum. Still another, who thought he stood a little better with the judge, endeavored to straighten the matter out, but he, too, enriched the coffers of the state by paying a "ten spot" for contempt.

Gen. Marston was then seen to rise in his seat and advance to the clerk's desk. Taking his long pocketbook from his pocket, he took out two $10 bills and laid them on the desk.

"What is that for?" said the court.

"I want you to distinctly understand," said the general, "that I have just twice as much contempt for this d—— court as any man here, and I am paying for it."

EZEKIEL'S TOOTHPICK STORY.

Los Angeles Times: Moses Ezekiel, the Roman sculptor, said at the luncheon that preceded the unveiling, in Fairmount park, Philadelphia, of his statute of A. D. Drexel:

"Whenever I see a tooth pick I think of a dinner that was given in Rome in honor of two Turkish noblemen.

"I sat beside the younger of the noblemen. He glittered with gold embroidery and great diamonds, but nevertheless I pitied him sincerely, for he was strange to our table manners, and some of his errors were both ludicrous and painful.

"Toward the dinner's end, a servant extended to the young man a plate of toothpicks. He waved the plate away, saying in a low and bitter voice:

"'No, thank you. I have already eaten two of the accursed things, and I want no more.'"

MEMORIAL SERVICE FOR DEAD CHIEFS

Living Members Pay Tribute to Those Who Have Gone.

Eloquent Address at the Lyceum By Rev. M. S. Rice.

The memorial services for former members of the International Association of Fire Engineers, members who have solved the great mystery, were held last night at the Lyceum theater. The services were marked with a simplicity which showed no attempt to parade a feigned honor and grief for the dead, or a worked up sentiment, but demonstrated the sincerity of the sorrow felt by those who took part, over the death of their former comrades. There was no attempt at decoration, and most of the addresses were informal, but touching, with no attempts at oratory, but full of the direct plain speech which comes from the heart and lays bare the feelings.

The principal speech of the evening was given by Rev. M. S. Rice of the First Methodist church, who also opened the meeting with prayer. It is needless to say that Mr. Rice's speech was eloquent. It was that type of eloquence which was not made, but which welled up from the soul of the man in an enthusiasm which communicated itself to his hearers. Seldom, indeed is a case seen where a speaker has so fascinated his audience, and has afterwards become the subject of such universal congratulation. At the close of the meeting the audience crowded up on the stage of the theater seeking to grasp the hand of Mr. Rice and to tell him how delighted they were with his address. This continued until the theater employes hinted that it was time to go out, by turning the lights off and on. The crowd then went out, and Mr. Rice was compelled to hold a reception on the sidewalk. The demonstration of approval was the more remarkable in view of the fact that the delegates to the convention are for the most part reticent men.

During the evening Flaaten's orchestra played several selections in its usual fine manner, and the Arion quartet, consisting of C. P. Pettit, first tenor; E. L. Eva, second tenor; W. H. Hancock, first bass, and Louis Dworshak, second bass, sang several numbers in good style. They were accompanied on the piano by Miss Florence Clement.

President W. R. Joyner of Atlanta, Ga., introduced the several speakers, the first of whom was Former Chief Benedict of Newark, N. J., and the second, Chief N. S. Humphreys of Pittsburg. Chief Tyson of Louisville also spoke from the first balcony.

At the suggestion of President Joyner, a motion was passed to send telegrams of sympathy to the widows of the chiefs who have died during the past year. These chiefs were Henry A. Hills of Wyoming, O., who died a natural death, and who was secretary of the association at the time; Herman Meninger of Milwaukee, who died only a few months ago from inhaling nitric acid in a bad fire, and G. P. W. Schelvers of Springfield, Ill., who was killed while answering a call of fire by colliding with a switch engine. Mr. Rice, on being introduced, said:

"Your brothers in your noble calling, Henry A. Hills of Wyoming, Ohio; G. F. W. Schievers of Springfield, Ill., and Herman Meninger of Milwaukee have passed away the last year. We are here to do them our honor. I need not say they were heroes. To men in your calling this would be no news. They had to be heroes. One died a natural death, one collapsed at a severe fire and never recovered, one was crushed by an engine in an unavoidable collision while in the performance of duty. They died as firemen. The fact of heroism in their death must be noted by us outside your rank, for it is no distinction to men who are strung to it always. I realize that I am now to speak to men who know the path of peril.

"I confess to an appreciation of the honor conferred upon me in this hour. And I desire to express my approval of an hour like this set aside in the important program of an assembly with much practical matter to be attended to in an intensely practical day. It is a good thing that all men should stop for a time and solemnly take memory of departed brothers. I am not a pessimist, but I do at all times wonder at the carelessness the world of men is displaying one for another. And the small time we really have for those who have gone. I confess, indeed, to a profound welcome to that which will check us in our delirium of application to our so-called business nowadays. We need somehow to catch the truth that there are things big enough to demand attention from a world as busy as is this one of ours. And no spirit is worth so much to us to straighten our purposes and sweeten our relationships one to another as that spirit of reverence we naturally feel when we name the names of our dead and uncover our heads in memory of their lives, still ours. I like this hour. It makes me feel more than ever that you, as a company of men, have hold of the large issues of living. That you have caught an eternal principle in your relations which treasures the lives of brethren. For that we are all hungry. It will put a mighty shoulder under many of the problems of living.

"I met a little slender maid
A rosy burden bearing.
'Isn't he heavy, dear?' I said,
As past me she was faring.
She looked at me with grave, sweet eyes,
This fragile 'little mother,'
And answered as in swift surprise,
'Oh, no, sir; he's my brother.'

"We larger children toil and fret
To help the old world onward;
Our eyes with tears are often wet,
So slowly it moves sunward.
Yet, would we all the secret seek
Of this dear 'little mother,'
Unwearying we'd bear up the weak
Because he is 'my brother.'"

"Ah! That's good. I believe in that. I am in favor of anything that will bring men more interestedly together as brothers. That will make us catch strong hold of each others hands. Great big sympathy! That's good! Why, it makes any man strong to know that he really has the manly sympathy of another. For a really bruised and broken heart no poultice is so good as another heart held right on to it. We need not stop to fumble about in such sweet consciousness as this for the philosophy of it. We don't care about philosophy there; it is a fact, and that helps. Ah, the ministry of pure sympathy! The very consciousness of the fact that our fellows stop to think about us and really have their hearts go out toward us makes us strong. Why, that's the might of friendship. I have read much of Job's so-called friends and wondered at what they called their comfort to him. May God save us from such friends. What a sufferer was he, sitting in the ashes of all he had cherished. His case seems enough to strike sympathy from granite. You cannot dig into human hearts with a geologist's pick.

"About as much as any one thing, we are growing today very, very hungry for sympathy. We want such hours as this. Men need to find out that after all we recognize our relationships. It is said that after the battle of Salferino, what with the mortal fear of the barbarity of the French soldiers of which they had heard, hundreds of the wounded Austrians crept out of the fields into the ravines and coppices and thickets and that after three days had been passed in searching for them many were still lying unfound in distress. There are hundreds of men living in the ravines and thickets on the battlefield of life who need healing care and consolation.

"I am glad to face a company of practical men as are you, who set apart an hour like this, and assure you, you cannot do anything more practical. Practicality when you remember that the primary dealing of this world is with living men, does not consist alone of iron and wood and stone. The throbbing questions and hunger of these hearts of our cannot be stilled by machinery.

"We come now to call the roll of our dead. Our dead! We do not let them go. There is a spirit couched in the very custom here displayed that walks on over the grave. And man, with his yearning and desire reaches out a long arm and holds fast the lives of his loved ones gone. All of us have many times felt the pull of this prophet of our larger selves.

"And we come here now to call the honored roll of the men who have passed from your ranks. It is said that the great French soldier d'Auvergne was the hero of many battles, but refused to leave the rank of a common soldier. Napoleon loved him greatly and gave him a sword and the official title 'The First Grenadier of France.' When he was killed the emperor ordered that his heart should be entrusted to the keeping of his regiment and that his name should be called at every roll-call and his next comrade should make answer 'Dead on the field of honor.'

"This evening the same answer leaps to your lips, I know, for I am very sure that men never laid down their lives on any more honorable field than that one where many noble firemen have fallen. It would be a good thing if your association adopted the idea of Napoleon into your roll call. Whenever the name of one of your dead is called let it be answered 'Dead on the field of honor.'

"You have touched me hard in the commission you gave me. I can recall incident after incident I have read and shed tears over under the glow of your heroism. No heroism appeals to the boys more strongly than yours. I wish you would always cherish that. There is a distinct hale about a fireman seen from a boy's eye. And I confess to the sight in large degree and few have been the influences that have put me upon my feeling of manhood more potent than the deeds I have both read and witnessed that have come from the the hands of your fellows. If it were but mine to know the inside stories of any one of these men whose names we honor here tonight, I am very sure I could unfold for you deeds and impulses that would thrill your deepest sympathy. For the fact is patent that the very sentiments about which everyone of your lives are formed are such as make adamant foundation for the structure of character.

"The first is vigilance. I'm very sure that no man will deny this as the prime esential of a fireman. In fact it is the very first mark placed as equipment in the earliest work of fire departments. At a very early date the ancient city of Rome was placed under the watch of the triumviri—three chosen men. They kept fire watch and police care. They employed what they called vigils and from that Latin term the word I have placed here as your first characteristic has come. Just about the time of the birth of Christ a regular fire service was thus maintained and several cases are recorded of their work. They used buckets and axes chiefly. But they were called vigils and their vigilance was the work of their calling and of yours. A case is recorded thus: 'P. Villius, the triumvir of the night was accused by P. Agulio, tribune of the people, because he had made the circuit of the guard-posts carelessly. And still more interesting for us is this record from the same age: 'M. Molvious, C. Lollius and L. Sextillus, triumviri, were accused to the people on the aforesaid day by the tribune of the people, inasmuch as they had come late to put out a fire which had begun on the Via Sacia, one of the main streets.'

"Vigilance—it has been the prime foundation of your calling. And the genius of all the equipment you possess in your work has been forged at the anvil of her shop. It is the sufficient justification of the sliding pole, of the harness that snaps to its position, of the automatic stalls, of the ready kindling on engine, of the electric signal boxes. Vigilance—You stand forever. If I were turning through the index of our national life for comment on this fine quality of character I would stop at the page of our firemen and read there. There is a clause in the Bible thus: 'If the man of the house had known when the thief would come' etc. Vigilance says 'Be always ready.' Don't expect to be able to set the alarm of your life beforehand so it will stir you at the right time. Arrange an alarm that will stand as a ready signal for danger. There is no special hour at which you can lie awake and feel ready for the expected. The expected is ever your plea. Caesar used to have a special legion of soldiers whom he called the 'Allanda.' Upon every sword, helmet and shield was engraved a lark with outstretched wings in an effort of flying upward. It was the symbol of alertness for an ever ready company of men. You are the Allanda of our civilization and we lie down to our beds at night confident in your care. We learn vigilance at your door.

"But there's another quality that must be found in all—courage. I need not speak of this as essential. I mention it for our sakes. We like to watch you for we know you as courageous. It goes with your jobs. And I presume the good portion of you men who meet here now as the chiefs of the men in the business in America, if we could unfold the secrets of your positions we would find you filled with incidents of great courage. Never a day ticks past your door but your courage may be needed. It don't take long to discover a coward if you place him in the courage to go when others are left behind. And I want to say that that is one of the finest and most decisive measures to be put to us all. What is the ultimate requirement of a man's success in life? Some would say intellect, some prudence, some sobriety, some piety. All these I own, and all men own to be primary things in man. But here is a quality without which every one of these things will be neutralised. It is courage, the spirit of daring. I mean courage all the time, courage always ready to leap to its hard duty when no eye watches and walks on calmly to die, if need be, unseen, because courage could do none else. Ah, I like that element. 'Tis not much trouble to seem brave when thousands look on ready to cheer. But you men must be equipped with a courage that never flags. No eye to watch you often, but the eye of your conscience; no voice often to be heard calling 'Well done' but that of duty. Your life is not to be one long tournament. No visible battlefield shall constantly attend you. No audible condition where multitudes clap their hands. Yours must be a field bare of spectators, a combat whose fierceness and intensity are felt by yourself alone. A courage is required of you which will solve every emergency, one that can go to sleep every night on a restful pillow liable to be called to extreme exertion any minute; not a courage to be carefully worked up to a pitch of endurance by the concentrated gaze of people, but one that leaps to its duty in the dark streets when the people sleep, and when there is no incentive to act save duty. You remember the incident of the famous Prussian Zedlitz. When a lieutenant in the army he was ordered to attend the great Frederick in a bit of reconnaissance. While crossing a bridge the king suddenly said to the young soldier: 'What would you do if both avenues of the bridge were in possession of the enemy?' 'I would do this,' said Zedlitz, and leaped his horse over the rail into the Oder. He swam safely ashore and was saluted by the delighted king as major before he landed. Courage to act, and act at once.

"I like you gentlemen. I like the sentiment of your calling. You make me more the man I want to be. Incidents crowd every one of your lives that would stiffen the spine of any man to know. There is a hidden something in your lives that teaches us duty, that teaches us how nobly a man is bound who is bound by only duty. To stand with a smile upon your face against a stake from which you cannot yet away—that is heroic; but true glory is resignation to the inevitable. To stand unchained with perfect liberty to go away, held only by the higher claims of duty, and let the fire creep up to the heart—that is heroism. Of course we have time in a world where character is and ever must be the supreme product, to pay our honors to the men who have died from such ranks. The famous remark of the sergeant of New York's department to the new recruits who entered as they were called 'The Red Ink Squad,: 'So you want to be a fireman, eh? Huh! Can yuh eat smoke and get fat on stiffe?' Why to the living man, in your calling I am ever ready to do honor to the dead who have died, clad in your uniform there is nothing too sacred to offer. The truest sentiment of life is under your every hour. I honor your lives and all men do the same. And we would do our most reverend honor tonight in the memory of those who have died."

TO SAFEGUARD INVESTMENTS

Grand Aerie of Eagles Desires to Make Change In Its Laws.

Denver, Aug. 17.—Delegates to the grand aerie of the Fraternal Order of Eagles, yesterday, adopted a resolution extending "hearty and respectful greetings to the most illustrous member of the order, Theodore Roosevelt, president of the United States and a member of the Cheyenne (Wyoming) aerie No. 128."

During the afternoon the body went into committee of the whole to consider the report of the judiciary committee seriatum, and a number of sections were disposed of. The report of the grand trustees was received and referred in sections to apropriate committees.

Recommendations include a large investment of surplus funds summary treatment of delinquent aeries and a new official receipt, supposedly for protection against members suspended for unworthiness.

On the principal changes the grand aerie seeks to effect in their organization is to bring it closer to the laws that its investments can be better safeguarded and its responsibilities known.

The aeries in Oklahoma have made known their desire to have the national home located in Oklahoma should the grand aerie decide to father such an institution. Heretofore Montana has stood practically alone in the demand for the home. A number of the leaders are persistent in the opinion that the time is not ripe for an Eagle home.

Telegrams were received from San Francisco, Seattle, Washington, from Mayor Dunne of Chicago and from Acting Governor Davidson of Wisconsin, urging the selection of Milwaukee in 1906.

BRIEF TELEGRAMS.

A severe wind and rain storm accompanied by much electricity struck Kansas City Wednesday afternoon, doing considerable damage to property. Trees and awnings were blown down, plate glass windows broken and the wind and lightning interfered with telephone and street car service. One residence was struck by lightning, but no one was injured and little damage was done.

A Memphis Commercial Appeal specialy from Lake Cormorant, Miss., says that Henry Young, the negro who shot and killed Edward E. Berry on the Bass plantation near Lake Cormorant, last Sunday, was taken from Sheriff Withers and a deputy last night, and at the scene of his crime hanged by an armed mob.

It took National Champion H. Chandler Egan 22 holes to defeat Bruce Smith of Unwentsia in their contest at Chicago Wednesday in the first round of play for the Exmoor cup. Playing even with Egan every extra hole, the Yale player sliced to the woods on the twenty-second hole and lost it 6 to 4 after taking three shots to get on the course.

FAIL TO FIND BELCHER.

Honolulu, Aug. 17.—After a search of the steamer Zonoma and inspection of the passengers, the police believe that W. H. Belcher, the ex-mayor of Paterson, N. J., accused of embezzlement, is not among those on board the vessel. While none of the passengers who have been examined answer the description of Belcher, the police are continuing their investigations.

How to Save Baby From Being Sick

In This Heated Season, When Serious Illness Strikes Down So Many, Be Careful What You Feed Your Children.

BY A MOTHER WHO KNOWS

The proper care of babies, most especially during the summer months when the intense heat so frequently brings serious illness upon little folks who are not nourished as they should be, involves great attention to the subject of what baby is to eat.

Every mother should avoid the possibility of sickness befalling her children in this season. And, of course, most mothers do honestly try to avoid such possibilities, but many do not appreciate the one great essential.

Feed the little folks good, healthful, pure, strengthening food and there need not be any fear.

We all know that for many years physicians of highest standing in their profession have prescribed malt extracts, which contain a large percentage of maltose, or malt sugar, but which cost from 10 cents to 75 cents per pound. Malta-Vita, the crisp, delicious whole wheat food, contains from eight to ten per cent of maltose.

"Malta-Vita" is no meaningless coined word, it stands for its literal translation from the Latin and means exactly what it says—"Malt Life." The original phrase "For the blood is the life" is the starting point and final winning post of Malta-Vita, on account of its large percentage of maltose, a natural sweetening agent, easily digestible and readily assimilated by the human economy, forming rich healthy blood. Malta-Vita is especially beneficial for children and it is so good to eat—not at all like the tasteless variety of breakfast foods—that the little ones always welcome its appearance on the table.

"We have used several boxes of Malta-Vita and think it is the finest food we have tried," writes Mrs. Miles McCormick of South Bend, Ind. "We had almost despaired of finding something our baby could eat without being distressed. He had, since birth, been a constant sufferer from constipation and a general derangement of the stomach and bowels. Since we began feeding him Malta-Vita he has improved wonderfully and is entirely cured of constipation. In fact my husband and I, too, realize a great benefit since using the food. We find it gives life and tone to the entire system."

Malta-Vita is sold by all grocers. Big package 10 cents.

Welcome, Firemen! A cool and pleasant visit to you!

THE OPERATOR OPENED SWITCH

Coroner Returns Verdict In the Twentieth Century Train Wreck.

Cleveland, Aug. 17.—Coroner Siegelstein of this county yesterday rendered a verdict in connection with wrecking of the Twentieth Century limited on the Lake Shore road at Mentor, Ohio, on the night of June 28, in which nineteen lives were lost. The coroner has holds that Walter F. Miner, the telegraph operator at Mentor, opened the switch, which caused the accident.

The coroner states that the Lake Shore officials greatly facilitated his investigation by willingly co-operating with him. They produced all witnesses in the railroads employ promptly, as well as train sheets, railroad message books and other important data having a bearing upon the investigation.

The coroner declares that in the testimony taken at the inquest, "there appears not one word tending to show the presence of any one but Miner, who was in charge of the station that night, the immediate vicinity of the depot or the switch immediately preceding the wreck or afterward.

He can only come to the conclusion, which is reinforced by other points of the evidence, that Walter F. Miner, opened the switch, but whether he did so of his own volition or by telegraphic orders of a superior officer, I am not prepared to say."

TRAIN HITS TROLLEY CAR

Three Killed and Ten Injured In Wreck Near Cincinnati.

Cincinnati, Aug. 17.—Through the mistake or negligence of some one, a fast running through express from New York to Cincinnati on the Baltimore & Ohio Southwestern crashed into a Winton place trolley car last night and three people were killed and ten others injured.

The dead:

ROBERT J. SMITH, a retired grocer of Winton place.

WILLIAM TUETTING, JR., carpenter.

Unidentified man.

The injured: A. H. Newton, mail clerk, back crushed; S. P. Spaulding, engineer of Chillicothe, Ohio, cooked by steam, will probably die; Wilbur Maish, 12 years old, crushed about the head; William Gallivan, traveling engineer, crushed about the head; Mrs. Warner, cut about head; Frank W. Lindsley, slight cut. Two others whose injuries were slight, and who refused to give their names.

According to an eye witness of the wreck, John Driscoll, the gate tender at the crossing, had let the gates down to allow a freight train to pass the crossing. The engine of the freight emitted heavy clouds of smoke and after it passed the gate tender did not notice the passenger train bearing down at a high rate of speed toward the crossing. He raised the gate and gave the signal for the car to proceed across the tracks. With a frightful crash the engine struck the back part of the car and it was tossed in all directions.

The engine and mail car were also thrown from the track and plowed through a truck garden and demolished three outbuildings. The motorman and conductor of the street car jumped to safety, but the passengers were either killed or injured.

Fireman Brown of the passenger train jumped, but Engineer Spaulding stuck to his post and was scalded by steam from the boiler.

TRUANT OFFICERS

To Enforce Compulsory Education Laws Proposed.

St. Paul, Aug. 17.—Few boys and girls of school age will be wandering on the streets of Minnesota cities and villages during school hours, if Governor John A. Johnson, Superintendent of Public Instruction J. W. Olson and Labor Commissioner W. H. Williams carry out a plan which they have under consideration.

These officials, who held a conference yesterday, propose to draft a law for submission to the next legislature providing a comprehensive system of truant officers to enforce the compulsory education and child labor laws.

It is proposed to appoint a truant officer for each of the nine congressional districts and to give him full power to compel children to attend school. It is suggested the truant officer work in conjunction with the inspectors of the state labor bureau. The inspectors will keep on the lookout for children and report their names. The truant officer will compel the parents to send the child to school.

RAILROAD STATISTICS

For the Year 1904 Presented By Interstate Commerce Commission.

Washington, Aug. 17.—The annual report of the interstate commerce commission giving the railroad statistics for the year 1904, shows that there were at the end of that year 297,073 miles of railroad in the United States, of which 212,243 were single track, 15,824 second track, 1,467 third track, 1,467 fourth track, and the remainder yard track and siddings. The increase in single trackage for the year was 5,927 miles, exceeding the increase for any previous year since 1890.

The number of railway corporations included, in the report, was 2,104. The number of persons on the payrolls of the railroads in the United States as returned for June 30, 1904, was 1,296,121. The wages and salaries paid for the year amounted to $817,588,810.

The par value of the amount of railway capital outstanding on June 30, 1904 was $13,213,124,679, which represents a capitalization of $44,265 per mile. The amount of dividends declared during the year was $221,941,049, being equivalent to 6.69 per cent on dividend paying stock.

The number of passengers reported as carried in the year was 715,415,693, an increase of 20,528,147.

The number of tons of freight carried was 1,309,899,165, which exceeds the tonnage of the previous year by 5,591,842 tons.

The gross earnings were $1,975,144,091, being $74,227,184 greater than for the previous year. Their operating expenses were $1,338,896,253, an increase of $81,357,401.

The total number of casualties to persons on the railways was 94,201, of which 10,046 represented the number of persons killed and 84,155 the number injured.

FERN COMING UP THE LAKE

Visited By Hundreds at Marquette—the Gun Problem.

A Marquette dispatch says that the United States steamship Fern, manned by the Minnesota naval militia, lay in port all day yesterday, and was visited by hundreds of people. Her crew consists of 102 naval reserves, including twelve officers and the Naval Reserve band of sixteen pieces. The boat, having been out of commission for several years, presents a shabby appearance. She is badly in need of paint and her upper works will require much attention from ship carpenters. All day long middies in overalls and jackets scraped at her upper works and smokestack, removing a deep crust of paint, with a view to replacing it with a fresh coating in order to present a better appearance when the Fern reaches Duluth. She cleared last night for Duluth and should reach here tomorrow.

A Washington dispatch says that Secretary Bonaparte has called upon the department of state for a decision as to whether our treaty with Canada will permit the Fern being armed with heavy rapid-fire guns on the Great Lakes. The guns for the Fern are being held at the Washington navy yard pending the decision of the state department. The armament for the Fern consist of four six-inch and four three-inch guns.

GETTING READY FOR CONTESTS

Alleged Settlers on Fond du Lac Lands Make Entry.

Settlers on some of the land in the Fond du Lac reservation, which was thrown open a few days ago, have begun to appear at the local land office, and have commenced to lay the foundations for trouble for those who participated in the long vigil prior to the opening, and who have already filed on the lands.

Oliver C. Olson of West Duluth, who is said to be a squatter on the southeast quarter of the southeast quarter, and the north half of the southeast quarter, and the northeast quarter of the southwest quarter of section 10-50-18, filed for entry yesterday on the tract on which William C. Johnson of Cloquet, who was here at the opening, has already filed.

Charles E. Rice of this city claims prior rights to 160 acres in sections 14 and 15-50-18, which was filed on at the opening by Anton Christenson of Superior. Harry McKenny of Sawyer asserts priority of claim to 165 acres in section 36-49-19, on which Charles G. Early filed last Tuesday morning, just thirty-four minutes later than the alleged settlement.

Arthur J. McGuire of Grand Rapids alleges settlement on 160 acres in section 26, on which Gust Kallberg of Cloquet filed shortly after 10 o'clock Tuesday morning.

All the contestants that have appeared allege settlement at 9 o'clock sharp.

Several smirches were left on the reputation of the premier twirler of the Pattersonian gang of swamp-dwellers, when the Champs got through maltreating him at the Superior driving park yesterday afternoon, and the said Mr. Smith emerged from the game very much the worse for wear.

Sam Menefee took to Smith's shoots like a duck to water, and collected three singles and a two-bagger from the stocky twirler out of five times up.

Smith was no dark mystery to the other hitters, either, and the safe ones came when they were most needed.

Miller essayed the stellar role for Duluth, and aside from an occasional tendency to heave the ball over the grand stand, he pitched a good game, allowing but five hits.

The Champs scored enough to win in the first inning. Newman drew a base on balls, Menefee hit safely, and then Erickson scored them both with a long three-bagger.

Boots by McShane and Smith allowed second and third bases to become occupied in the fifth, and a long single by McAleese scored them both. Newman followed with another safe one, after Nehr and Miller had been retired, and the catcher scored.

A base on balls, Menefee's single and a long fly brought in another in the seventh, and another was added in the ninth on three hits.

FARCICAL GAME.

Tigers Win Fierce Slugging Match From Crookston.

Grand Forks, N. D., Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—It stopped raining long enough yesterday for the Tigers to defeat the Crookstonites by a score of 13 to 7, in a long drawn out game. For a while it looked as if the visitors were going to walk away with the game. They touched Bond for three hits in the second inning and took four scores. Eight hits, four bases on balls, and two men hit is ordinarily enough to tabulate a victory for the opposing team, but the Crookstonites were up in the air, and the Tigers landed on Potts for thirteen hits, and Schlatter for four hits in one inning. Potts received ragged support, but Schlatter was put in in the seventh, and Potts was sent to the bench. Maloney was put on first. Schlatter did even worse than Potts, issuing two passes in one inning, and allowing four hits.

The visitors scored in the first, second, fifth and ninth inning. In the first Baker scored on an error by Spanton. In the second three hits and two men sent to first by Bond, accounted for the four scores. Olsen led in the fifth with a single, and was sent to second by Ludwig and later scored on Wing's hit. In the ninth Schlatter went to first on a two-bagger, and stole third. Livingston struck out, and Olsen was issued a pass. Ludwig went on a fielder's choice, and Olsen was put out on second, and Schlatter scored on the play. Wing hit a foul fly to Leach, and ended the game.

It was not until the third inning that the Tigers got to scoring. Bond who got a life on an error and was sacrificed to second by Anderson scored on a hit by Leach, after Varco had struck out. Hanrahan went on an error by Baker, but was thrown out on second by a fielder's choice. In the fifth Varco, Leach and Hanrahan each took a hit, and Potts forced in Varco by hitting Spanton. Caldwell took a hit and sent home Leach and Hanrahan. Jarvie, Treadway and Bond failed to get to first. In the sixth after two men were out Leach took a single, his fourth hit of the game, and Hanrahan took a two-bagger sending him home. Hanrahan scored on a wild pitch. Spanton struck out. At the end of the sixth the score was tied 6 to 6. In the seventh Caldwell led with a hit, and Jarvie sacrificed. Treadway struck out, but was safe on a wild pitch. Bond took a hit, and then by a series of complications too tangled for the official scorer to straighten out Caldwell and Treadway scored. Every man who touched the ball after Bond clouted it threw wild, and Crookston tried hard to lose the ball. Anderson went on an error by Livingston. Then Potts was sent to the bench, and Schlatter finished the inning.

Hanrahan, the first man up in the last inning drew a pass, then three hits by Caldwell, Spanton and Jarvie scored Hanrahan, and filled the bases, and then some wild throwing by the center fielder, Olsen, allowed Caldwell and Jarvie to score, after Spanton had stolen home on Treadway's put out. Bond took another hit, and Anderson struck out. Varco walked, and Leach ended the inning by going out from Baker to Maloney.

ST. CLAIRE WINS THE LIPTON CUP.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—In a beautiful finish the St. Claire from Detroit, won the third and final race yesterday for the Lipton cup, crossing the winning line forty-five seconds ahead of the Quien Sabe. Mendota, the Milwaukee yacht, finished third over four minutes behind the local yacht. The St. Claire won three straight victories, finishing with a percentage of 300, Quien Sabe finished with a percentage of 200 and Mendota with 175. Hoosier, the fourth contestant, did not start in yesterday's race because of an accident to her sails.

FATALITIES AT MINES.

Charles W. Kurlin and Anton Painko Are Killed.

Hibbing, Minn., Aug. 17.—Charles W. Kurlin, a German-American, about 25 years old, whose parents reside at Buffalo, N. Y., was killed at the Stevenson mine by falling under the wheels of a car on which he had been riding.

At the Utica mine, Anton Painko, an Italian, 32 years old, was killed by being caught and crushed under a dinkey carload of earth while on the dump of the stripping works. The accident was caused by the car dumping its load on the opposite side to which it was intended. He has a brother residing in Hibbing.

Mrs. Johanna Pritchard, 61 years of age, dropped dead of apoplexy, at her home, 408 Center street. She was the wife of Rev. Samuel Pritchard, a retired Episcopal clergyman. They have resided here about two years. Mrs. Pritchard was the mother of Dr. D. B. Pritchard of Winona, Minn.; R. M. and C. S. Pritchard of Hibbing, and of daughters, both trained nurses, Ida, with the United States government at Panama, and Adelaide of Bay City, Mich. Her maiden name was Bannerman, and she was born near Winnipeg, Man.

NO MORE RACES

Driving Association Calls Off the Final Harness Events.

Fast Racing and Close Finishes Fail to Draw Crowds.

Duluth will not have any more horse racing for some time to come. After eleven heats of some of the fastest and most exciting racing that has been witnessed at the Driving park for a long time, the Duluth Racing association decided to balance its books. When it was found that the total expenditures for purses for the two days was $1,400 and the total gate receipts were only $250, the promoters decided that the balance was too much to their disadvantage and the races for today were declared off.

Only two races were pulled off, yesterday, before a crowd comprised of not more than 200 people, but it took eleven heats, one of which was a dead heat, and four hours and a half of the "real sort" of racing to decide the winners in the events. An effort was made by the association management to have the final heat in the 2:30 race pulled off today, but the horse owners interested insisted that it would work a hardship to their horses and drivers and pointed out that under the rules no race could be postponed after starting except on account of darkness or bad weather. The last heat was trotted shortly before sundown.

When Duluth was included in the Tri-State Racing circuit and assurance was given that a number of outside horses would be brought here to participate in the harness events, the promoters believed that interest would be awakened in the sport here and that it would be patronized. This demonstrated that horse racing has no attraction for Duluthians and it will be dropped.

* * *

The 2:30 trot was started at 2 o'clock with four horses facing the wire. For six heats there was the hottest kind of a fight for place with a horse distanced in the second, one in the fifth and finally, in the last heat, Black Chief, who had won two heats, was distanced by Lora Moir, a game little brown mare, the only remaining horse in the race.

Lora Moir, owned by F. M. Millard of Canby, Minn., and Black Chief, a local horse, that also has a record for staying qualities and speed, put up a pretty contest which was finally won by the former, after the local horse made a bad break that put him clear out of the contest.

Frank M., a speedy sorrel gelding driven by G. G. Matthews, made a game fight and it was a matter of regret to the spectators when he was finally flagged in the fifth heat.

In the first heat Lora Moir won by a neck. In the second she broke and fell too far behind, Black Chief disputing every inch to the wire. In the third heat Frank M laid up to the wheel of Black Chief's sulky to the head of the home stretch in a rattling pace, but when the horses were within 300 feet of the wire, Lora Moir, coming up like a small whirlwind, swung out from behind and nipped in the bud Frank M's hope for second place, nearly overtaking Black Chief in the lead. Excitement ran high in the fourth heat, following the display of speed by the Canby mare. This time she played close to Black Chief's wheel to the back stretch on the second time around when the horses were going neck and neck. She had been crowded a little too fast, however, and broke, but gained ground and brought the excitement to a fever pitch by making a rattling drive home and finishing nose to nose with Black Chief in a dead heat. Lora Moir repeated her speed bursts and breaks in the fifth heat, closing a big gap and taking the heat from Black Chief in a hard drive home, both horses urged to their utmost by whip and rein. Frank M dropped behind the flag in this heat so that in the sixth heat, the decisive battle, only Black Chief and Lora Moir appeared. It looked like a close thing from the start, but the long strain seemed to be telling on the black horse and in the back stretch he broke so badly that Lora Moir gained an eighth of a mile lead, a lead the black could not overcome. The fact that E. J. Jenks then drove the speedy little mare at top speed with the evident intention of shutting out Black Chief, after he had made so game a fight, was permissible under the rules, but it did not find favor with the crowd and the driver came in for a roasting by those who had stayed to the finish.

Summary:
2:30 trot, purse, $400.

The 2:18 race was less interesting, with four starters and pretty well split up for four heats, requiring the fifth to decide the winner. The contest in this race was between Alice, the speedy pacer owned by L. T. Totman, of this city, and Beulah Smith a game brown mare owned by E. M. Fay, of Amery, Wis. Although no heat was paced as fast as 2:18 the time was fast, the second heat being finished in 2:20 flat.

Alice won the first heat by a narrow margin, but lost the second to Beulah Smith by nearly a length, after a pretty race in which Lady Strathbury, a roan mare finished close to the leaders. The third heat was a repetition of the second, Alice losing by nearly a length in a hot contest from wire to wire. In the fourth heat Beulah Smith left her feet on the back stretch in the first half and fell back, but came up strong to a neck and neck position only to repeat her first break at about the same location on the second circuit of the ring. She closed the gap with a burst of speed in the stretch, but was beat to the wire by half a length, by Alice. In the final heat Beulah Smith lapped the wheel of Alice's sulky to the home stretch when both horses came home under a hard drive, Alice winning by a scant neck.

CONTRACT IS LET FOR TAR MACADAM

Warm Discussion of Paving By Superior Street Owners.

Hugh Steele Must Complete Work Before Nov. 15.

After a discussion which lasted from 7:30 o'clock until nearly midnight, tar macadam with a foundation of six inches of crushed rock, was finally decided upon as the proper pavement for Superior street from Eighth to Twenty-fifth avenues west, with the exception of the two blocks between Thirteenth and Fifteenth avenues, where the grade is steep, and where Telford macadam will be put down.

The contract for the work was awarded to Hugh Steele on his bid of $80,798, on condition that he will file a guaranty bond to perform the contract according to specifications, and have it completed before November 15 or pay a penalty of $15 per day for every day after that that the work is left unfinished.

After the meeting had been called to order by President Haven, City Attorney Bert Fesler stated that all of the bids except those on tar macadam with crushed rock foundation, Telford macadam and sandstone blocks, were illegal, and that if it were desired to let the contract for either asphalt or tar macadam with a concrete foundation, it would be necessary to again advertise for bids, in which case the contract could not be let before October 15.

President Haven then stated that owing to the fact that all of the arguments had been pretty well gone over at previous meetings, he would limit the speakers to five minutes each, and not allow more than four persons to speak in support of any one kind of pavement after the agents of the different paving companies had been heard.

C. M. Carpenter of the Barber Asphalt company used his full time limit in discussing the merits of the asphalt paving. He stated that large sums of money had been expended in advertising tar macadam, but that it had been found to be impracticable for heavy traffic, and that it was a complete failure in St. Louis and Portland, where it has been extensively tried.

Hugh Steele, the lowest bidder on tar macadam, called attention to the good satisfaction that had been given on First avenue west with tar macadam, and said that when properly laid tar macadam would make a most satisfactory pavement.

"I represent as owner or agent, more than 11,000 feet," said George M. Buck. "I wish to vote that amount for tar macadam, which I believe will answer the purpose. Sandstone is 60 per cent more expensive, and the city is already taxed to death, while the property owners are being continually called on for heavy assessments."

"Outside property owners are becoming disgusted at the high taxes and assessments which are levied in our city," said H. H. Hanford, "and industries are being driven away by such high rates. The city purchased a tar macadam mixing plant, and I believe it was a wise move. We have the plant, we have the stone and we have the tar, and I am satisfied that they will give a substantial street."

C. A. Britts of the St. Louis County bank spoke strongly in favor of asphalt.

"If the property is cheap property," he said, "we can't make it valuable by laying a 15-cent pavement. These outside property owners should be considered, but so should the home people that have to live or do business on the street. I'll guarantee that if these outside owners have their property improved they are making a good income out of it."

George H. Crosby favored sandstone for the eastern section and asphalt for the western.

"I was one of those who favored tar macadam for East Superior street," he said, "and I have regretted it since. The pavement is already disintegrating, and it is very slippery."

"Two assessments have already been levied for West Superior street," said J. J. Moe. "While we are about it now, let us put down a good pavement like asphalt, which will be guaranteed for ten years, and which should be good for at least fifteen."

A petition, signed by owners of 1,926 feet of property west of Garfield avenue, had been secured by C. M. Carpenter for the asphalt company, but when it was learned that asphalt could not be laid this year, W. W. Allen, Lane MacGregor and Henry Christian, voting for 350 feet, switched back to tar macadam, leaving but 1,576 feet for asphalt. There were present at the meeting owners or agents for 2,105 feet of property west of Garfield who wanted tar macadam.

The meeting took a recess, while the board of public works met and awarded the contract for Hugh Steele. The board reported, and the award was confirmed by the council.

FIVE LOSE LIVES IN ALPS IN ONE DAY.

Innsbruck, Austrian Tyrol, Aug. 17.—Five Alpine fatalities were recorded yesterday. Two tourists from Meran, while hunting for edelweiss were killed on the Peugal in the Zillerthal Alps.

While climbing the Hoefats group a Bavarian lawyer fell and was killed.

Four students from Dresden, who were ascending the Hohrgoell fell down a precipice. One was killed and the others probably were fatally injured.

Another youth of 16 was killed on Mount Mythenstock. He fell 900 feet and his body was reduced to a pulp.

TO DROP LOOMIS.

Will Not Be Assistant Secretary Much Longer.

Springfield, Ohio, Aug. 17.—Francis B. Loomis, assistant secretary of state was yesterday shown the report from Lenox, Mass., that Col. W. C. Sanger was to be made assistant secretary of state when Mr. Root assumes the portfolio.

Mr. Loomis made a statement in which he for the first time indicates his intention to resign from the state department. He also said that upon leaving his present position he expects to be given a diplomatic post and that at present he has no idea to what country he will be assigned.

LA CROSSE JAIL NOT VERY SAFE

Second Bad Man Breaks Out Within Two Weeks.

La Crosse, Wis., Aug. 16.—For the second time in two weeks a jail delivery occurred here today, and Andrew Cunningham, third member of the Fay-Trainer gang of postoffice robbers, is at liberty, and all the work done by United States officers in running the men to earth has been lost. Fay, the leader of the gang, escaped from the Janesville, Wis., jail several months ago. Trainer, Fay's chief lieutenant, broke out of the La Crosse jail just two weeks ago, and today Cunningham is missing. No clue has been obtained of any of the fugitives. It is expected the United States court, as the result of the double escape, will order an investigation of conditions at the La Crosse jail.

Summer Diarrhoea in Children.
During the hot weather of the summer months the first unnatural looseness of a child's bowels should have immediate attention, so as to check the disease before it becomes serious. All that is necessary is a few doses of Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrhoea Remedy followed by a dose of castor oil to cleanse the system. Rev. M. O. Stockland, Pastor of the first M. E. Church, Little Falls, Minn., writes: "We have used Chamberlain's Colic, Choelra and Diarrhoea Remedy for several years and find it a very valuable remedy, especially for summer disorders in children." A NORWEGIAN REPUBLIC.

A report that pending negotiations for the establishment of a new kingship in Norway are likely to fail, and in that event that a republic will be created in that country, will be the cause of great rejoicing among the Norwegians of America, and indeed among all lovers of the republican form of government regardless of their nationality.

The report has little of satisfactory definiteness as yet. It was simply a brief dispatch from Berlin, published in The Herald last night, stating that the plan for Prince Charles of Denmark to ascend the Norwegian throne, which plan had Great Britain's support, had failed. The expectation was that Norway would establish a republic.

Those who have watched with close interest the separation of Norway and Sweden, and the efforts in the former country to establish a permanent government, will watch the news more closely still since there is a chance that there may be a Norwegian republic. That the Norwegian people are fitted for a republican form of government there can be no doubt. In fact the soil is more suited to the growth of republican principles than it is in most of the other European countries. Norway's people are intelligent, educated and independent, and there are plenty of statesmen who have already grown to presidential size.

The hope has been from the start that a republic would eventually result. Considering itself bound by ties of loyalty to the Swedish royal house, every honest effort possible has been made to place a member of that house upon the Norwegian throne. That effort failing, the obvious thing to do is to form a republic, and everybody in this country will hope that events have really shaped themselves to make that result possible.

VIVA VOCE VOTING.

In Kentucky the people will shortly vote upon the question of returning to the old-time viva voce method of voting in place of the present method by secret ballot.

It seems strange indeed to find a people thinking of harking back to methods almost pre-historic, yet to anybody that is familiar with elections as they are carried on in some parts of Kentucky it is not so strange, either, because almost any method would seem to offer chances of improvement upon the present system, which, as election after election has shown, has permitted systematic violation of law and corruption almost incredible.

The argument for the change is that under the open-voting system there is less opportunity for corrupting the voters or of wrongfully manipulating the count. It is also claimed that the viva voce system tends to promote a higher conception of civic responsibility and a manlier and more fearless expression at the polls.

These arguments are diametrically opposed to all that has been learned from experience in Minnesota. Here it is unquestioned that the ideal ballot is the most secret, instead of the most open. Under the Australian ballot law every effort has been made to guard the voter from the necessity of exposing his manner of voting, and successfully, though in the case of the primary election the voter is still under the necessity of stating his party preference in a public manner in order to participate. This is an inconsistency that may ultimately be wiped out, as the spirit and theory of the Australian system is wholly against it, though strongly-entrenched parties in power object to the change.

But it is useless to compare Minnesota elections with those of Kentucky. The Goebel election board, which practically decides elections regardless of the expressions of the voters, would be an impossibility in this state. Minnesota has had its election frauds, but never, in the wildest days before the adoption of the Australian system, has this state seen such brazen violations of law as Kentucky witnesses under its present methods. While Minnesota would as soon think of harking back to the tallow dip as it would of returning to the viva voce method of voting, perhaps that is just what Kentucky needs, with its different methods and different conditions.

THE PROPER SPIRIT.

There has been much professional comment upon the action of the New York World recently in devoting a page to a "write-up" of Arthur Brisbane, the editor of the New York Evening Journal and the moving spirit of the entire Hearst system and method of journalism. It was a leading feature of a Sunday issue, that write-up of the editor of a leading competitor, and it is unique because of the silly habit many newspapers have of ignoring their rivals and conspicuous lights in the newspaper field who happen to be engaged upon competing papers.

The old-time attitude, thus most thoroughly and effectively shattered by the World's action, was puerile. In its discussion of personalities, a newspaper should recognize ability in the newspaper field as much as in any profession or calling, regardless of the fact that the person calling for treatment happens to be employed upon a rival newspaper. Arthur Brisbane is the soul of what is called, with more or less aptitude, yellow journalism. He is the creator of the Sunday magazine, the Sunday comic supplement, and a number of other features now more or less generally imitated. He is the writer of the vigorous half-page editorials that appear in the Sunday Hearst papers, which owe their strength to the fact that they touch upon subjects of vital human interest and deal with them in a literary style characterized by the greatest virtue style may have—simplicity, which is always strength.

The Editor and Publisher, in commenting upon this incident, says: "Big men who are rivals may now do open justice to each other without affecting circulation figures. The public wants the news and the truth about rival newspaper editors as much as about anything else. It was a splendid act of savoir faire on the part of Mr. Pulitzer and was appreciated by his greatest rival, Mr. Hearst. And yet the country editors have shown this spirit of fairness, gentleness and chivalry for years."

The old time policy of ignoring rivals because they are rivals, and because of a fear that giving them justice would favorably influence the circulation and standing of the journal on which they were employed, is less sensible and logical than the fabled policy of the ostrich which hid its head in the sand and thought itself concealed.

UNIFORM DIVORCE LAWS.

It is generally accepted that the best remedy for the divorce evil is to be found in uniform divorce laws. Some would ask the abolition of the divorce, but that can never be. While the divorce privilege is being abused so it has become a national scandal—we lead all nations in the proportion of divorces—it is a necessity in many cases. Life is too short to ask people to bear patiently a hateful and irredeemably mistaken marriage contract; to ask a pure, noble woman to go through life yoked to a despicable, brutish, abandoned man. The trouble with divorce is that in many states it is granted for causes too trivial, so that it becomes a too simple and easy way of severing the marriage relation. In most cases simple separation will accomplish as much as is necessary, without the doubtful resource of divorce and the still more doubtful remarriage.

Probably few people know that there is such an organization as the Commissioners for the Promotion of Uniformity of Legislation in the United States, but there is, and it is going to meet Aug. 18 at Narragansett Pier and take up the subject of uniform divorce laws. The organization is comparatively old, having been started in New York in 1889. It has already accomplished something in smoothing out the difficulties in mercantile procedure between the states. The divorce evil, however, is the most important subject it has yet attacked, and its proceedings will be watched with keen interest.

At present there is an absolute lack of uniformity in divorce laws. South Carolina, for instance, grants no divorces at all, while some states grant it for the most trivial causes, such as that vague ground "incompatibility of temperament," under which almost any couple could get a decree if they wished it. A case of "incompatibility of temperament" might be worked up out of a disagreement over the temperature of the coffee at breakfast.

Uniformity of marriage laws might be taken up as an adjunct to this movement with good effect. Almost every state that throws any restrictions at all about the process of embarking upon the sea of matrimony has its neighboring state where restrictions are less, and which therefore becomes a Gretna Green for those who speed heedlessly and thoughtlessly into the marriage relation with no more consideration than they would use in starting out upon a 25-cent excursion on a steamboat.

In the old days when Wisconsin required no marriage license, and when all a couple had to do to get married was to march before a preacher or a justice and say so, thousands of Minnesota couples shot over the line into wedding ties, and shot back over the line into the divorce court. Then Wisconsin legislated the marriage license into being with the further stipulation that it must be procured five days ahead of the ceremony, and Wisconsin ceased to be Minnesota's divorce-breeding ground. Since then Wisconsin people who wished quick and quiet matrimony have come to Minnesota.

So perhaps a little uniform restriction of the marriage ceremony would do almost as much good as uniform divorce laws.

Hotel Gossip.

"The real estate business offers more money-making opportunities for the man with a small capital than any other line I can think of," said A. A. Page of Bemidji at the McKay. "More men have become well-to-do through its agency than any other. It does not take a great deal of cash to start in as a dealer in lands, unless a person desires to start in on a large scale in a big city, and the profits, in the right location, come fast.

"I do not mean to say that every man in the business is getting rich. This is not the case. If it were, the real estate offices would soon be as numerous as saloons. But the man who is a hustler, with an aptitude for business, is pretty sure of getting along all right if he becomes a real estate agent in a good town. The difficulty is in finding a good town. Bemidji was one of this sort for a few years, and is yet, for that matter, only so much money is not to be made in real estate there just now as formerly, although the agents seem to e doing a good business right along.

"Almost any new town in a new country is a good place for a fellow to start an agency. The same applies to old towns that are just beginning to wake up. I have known men to begin with less than $100 capital. With that and their nerve and the commissions on the first few sales they laid the foundations for nice little fortunes. There is room in a lot of these new Western towns for young men who do not know just what they want to do to get ahead in the world. It would not take them long to get onto the ropes if they go at it in the right way, and once they are started they find themselves in a pleasant line of business, with a chance of making good money. I know one old fellow down in Wisconsin who is getting along fine as a real estate man. Up to two years ago he was making barely a living as book agent. Following the advice of a friend he located in one of the small towns in the Northern part of the state, and the first year cleaned up nearly $10,000. He happened to get in at just the right time.

"A good deal of money has been and is being made by investors who bought up the cut over timber lands from the lumber companies. In many cases this land is fine for farming purposes. The lumber concerns are satisfied with their profits after they have logged the district, and are ready and willing to dispose of the land in large tracts at small prices. Some men make it their business to buy up these lands and hold them for an increase in value. Generally, by buying so much at once, they get the land at much less than its market value to start with."

J. McMenamon, the New Zealand rancher who was in the city this week, stopping at the Miller hotel, is, or at least appears to be, a typical Englishman. John Bull is stamped on every lineament. When The Herald man was looking for him for a talk on his country, he was told to approach the first man he saw who looked like King Edward. The reporter did this, and found that he had the person for whom he was looking. Mr. McMenamon is a much larger man than the king, and the resemblance, as to outward appearance, does not go much farther than the beard, but about him there was a general air that seemed to smack of England. All this being true, it is no more than natural that the Englishman should come in for more than the ordinary attention while traveling in America.

"We English have the reputation of not being able to see the point of a joke," said the rancher, "and the Americans I meet seem to take particular delight in finding out for themselves whether we do or not by experimenting with me. I really believe I can appreciate a good joke just as much as any resident of the United States.

"These joking efforts were even more numerous in the West than in the East. One day while I was in the grove of giant trees in California the guide pointed to a fallen giant and asked me to observe its size. I did so. It was something immense. No telling how long ago the tree had fallen. I should like to have been there when it toppled over. While I was wondering at its great size and length, the guide asked me if I knew how the grove came to be discovered. I said no, and at once expressed my curiosity.

"'Well,' he said, 'I'll tell you. A good many years ago there was a party of white men 100 miles from here, hunting. It so happened that this tree fell while they were that distance away. They heard the great crashing and determined to find out its cause. After following the echo for six weeks they came to this grove, and found the big tree.'"

Good nature is supposed to always go with large size in a person. Mr. McMenamen is no exception to the rule, and takes everything in good part. He likes the Americans and their ways, and evidently gets as much enjoyment out of a joke, even if it is on himself, as they do.

The Weather.

Though the wind this morning still clung with persistency to the northeast, the harshness had all gone out of it, and it had become as gentle as anybody could desire, and as mild as a spring zephyr. The clouds, too, which have been rather persistent for several days, had scattered in the night, and the sun appeared jovially upon a background of clear, blue sky.

The thermometer made another gain yesterday, touching 66 as the high point against 61 the day before and 60 the day before that. The outlook is that it will reach another higher point today and tomorrow, for the spell of the northeaster is broken. The weather man says that the winds will be fresh easterly to southerly, which means that they will turn into the southerly quadrant some time to night or tomorrow. It will be partly cloudy, and there may be local showers or thunderstorms, he says.

Showery weather continued over the Red river, Lower Missouri and Lower Mississippi valleys, New England states and Tennessee, and rains also fell over Oregon and Washington during either Wednesday or last night. Temperatures have risen over Utah, Wyoming and Montana compared with Wednesday morning, and it is cooler over the Red River valley. The barometer remains low over Saskatchewan. In the lake region the winds continue fresh easterly, but the weather in that section is generally pleasant.

Following were the highest temperatures recorded during the twenty-four hours ending at 7 o'clock this morning, as reported by the weather bureau:

Department of Agriculture, Weather Bureau, Duluth, Aug. 17.—Local forecast for twenty-four hours ending at 7 p. m. Friday: Duluth, Superior and Vicinity—Partly cloudy tonight and Friday with possibly local showers or thunderstorms. Fresh easterly to southerly winds.

H. W. RICHARDSON,
Local Forecaster.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Forecasts until 7 p. m. Friday: Wisconsin—Partly cloudy tonight and Friday, with showers and thunderstorms in north portion.

Minnesota—Local rains and thunderstorms tonight and Friday. Cooler Friday.

North and South Dakota—Fair in west, local rains in east portions tonight and Friday. Cooler in east portion Friday.

Upper Lakes—Fresh southeast shifting tonight to south winds and fair weather, except showers and thunderstorms over western Superior, Friday.

Politics Is Needed.

Remidji Sentinel: We look for a good deal of politics in this matter of drainage—enough to make every politician hasten to put himself right on that question as soon as he can get anyone to listen to him.

There's no bug-a-boo about that kind of mixing up politics and business, and since we expect that it will be the politicians who are to compose the next legislature and the next congress, and that it is a politician who will be elected governor of Minnesota, and that these men are going to be elected by politicians voting in every precinct in the state, you are mighty right when you say there is going to be politics involved in this matter of drainage. If there is not, we will get about as much benefit from this agitation as though the state had never been admitted to the Union. We need a good deal of politics in the deal—and it looks as though we were going to get it and then some.

"Sockless Jerry" and the Hat.

Pittsburg Dispatch: "It was not I who discovered Dingley's hat," said "Sockless Jerry" Simpson, the Populist statesman from Kansas, who is ill at Roswell, N. M. "It was a Republican member. Dingley used to wear a fine plug hat that was a regular cloud of smoke by day and a pillar of fire by night. We Populists used to take a shot at it every once in a while. When he was in the house Dingley always kept it standing up on a corner of his desk. One day a Republican happened to look into it and said to me: 'Jerry, go over and look into Dingley's hat.' I did so, but didn't find any eggs or anything and said so. I was told to look again. Then I saw the word 'London' and sailed into Dingley, the high priest of protection, for wearing a London-made hat. It was in fun, but Dingley took the matter very seriously, and spluttered and fumed and said: 'It's all rot. That hat was made in Connecticut, and the London was put into it to catch the dudes.'

"Then I said: 'Well, I caught a dude from Maine with it.' He wouldn't speak to me for a month on that account."

It Worried Her.

Boston Transcript: From England comes a confession of the American girl that many here may long and in vain have yearned to hear from the lips of the said girl herself.

"What I like," said the deputy lieutenant on their stroll in the London park, "what I like about you American girls is your independence. Now, you, for instance, have come over here alone, a good fellow, ready to go anywhere, as one might say, and do anything. So different to our English girls that you always are thinking are setting their caps'—(the deputy lieutenant squirmed out of a grammatical muddle). "Now do you ever," he continued, in more intimate vein, "do you ever think of matrimony?"

"Think!" said the American girl, wrinkling her brows, calculating the deputy lieutenant's income, dividing it by his years. "Think! I worry!"

The Sage of Sauk Center.

Frank M. Eddy in Sauk Center Herald: A gift without sacrifice is no gift.

Courtship is a pleasure yacht, but matrimony is often a battleship.

Men and women will often die for principles they won't live for.

Children are like canoes—unless they are rightly paddled they go crooked.

Politics make strange bedfellows, and sometimes politics compels a men to sleep on the floor by himself.

When men vote as they think and not as they are told there will be a considerable shaking up in politics.

If men were as careful of all their money as they are of that which they contribute to churches there would be more millionaires than there are now.

Talk about there not being any money in the newspaper business. Last month we cleared enough to buy us an automobile. It has one wheel, blue side-boards and red handles. Our hated rivals call it a wheelbarrow.

Chicago Tribune: "Why do you always seek the deepest pools?" asked the grayling.

"In order to be where the sunshine can't strike," answered the trout. "I freckle so easily."

New York Sun: Adam had just discharged the office boy.

"He wanted to lie under the old apple tree," he explained.

Stung by the insult, he hastily inserted an ad.

Pittsburg Post: Junior Partner—I guess it's time to fire the cashier.

Senior Partner—Caught him gambling, have you?

Junior Partner—No; but he's begun teaching a Bible class.

Washington Star: "You would advise a young man in politics to start out boldly as a reformer?"

"Certainly," answered Senator Sorghum, "it is getting so that the public won't give anybody a chance at the plum tree unless he claims to be a reformer."

Philadelphia Press: Mrs. Housekeep—I don't believe you have ever went to work.

Weary Willie—O! honest, lady, many's the time. But I'm such a strenyous feller dat every time I start ter go ter work I go clean past it.

Detroit Free Press: "What, may I ask, was the keenest disappointment of your career?" asked the anxious interviewer.

The great financier stared coldly at the ink bottle. "It was when I was four years old, I think," he drawled, "when I woke up one morning and found my red balloon shrunken to one-fourth the size of the day before."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

St. Peter Free Press: Ex-Governor Van Sant contemplates moving from St. Paul to Minneapolis. That's right. He will be in more congenial company if reports are true that he intends to enter politics again. Perhaps he intends to combat congressional honors as a Democratic candidate with your Uncle Loren at the next state election.

Badger Herald-Rustler: Which ever side loses out at the Portsmouth conference had better engage permanent quarters in America.

Red Wing Republican: The yellow journal continues to occupy the center of the stage as the deadliest yellow peril which America has to face.

Kelliher Journal: If, as is claimed, pine stumps and knots have a value of $3 per cord, there is a fortune, that will rival Rockefeller's in it for some enterprising man. He can have all he wants for the digging.

Red Wing Republican: The new Minnesota game law forbids the taking of pike less than fourteen inches in length. Such a law is nothing less than foolish. No one ever heard of a man catching a pike or any other kind of fish measuring less than three feet.

Moose Lake Star: Cloquet is the best city of its size in Minnesota. It always was a match for any other place and now they are going to manufacture matches by the wholesale.

International Falls Border Budget: The way people are rushing for land at the opening of the Indian reservations is a pretty fair indication that Canada does not hold first mortgages on all the good soil and that the state could dispose of all its land to good advantage if it would pursue the right policy.

Northome News: Ex-officials of the agricultural department will soon be numerous enough to form a club.

Anoka Herald: The best life preserver that you can buy, rent or steal to take to the lake or sea shore with you is the simple art of knowing how to swim.

Anoka Herald: City brod people often smile at the actions of a countryman in town, but a farmer gets about twice as much fun out of the antics of his city cousin when on the farm.

Walker Pilot: North Minnesota farmers on Mississippi have three obstacles to contend with—the lumbering interests, the milling industries and the steamboat traffic below St. Paul. With three against one is it any small wonder the farmer is getting the worst of it?

ECHOES OF HARMONY.

Blue Earth Post: Why is it that every alleged Republican newspaper that supported John A. Johnson for governor last fall is so fearful lest the true blue Republican papers may say or do something that will make votes for Johnson—help him in his campaign for the governorship in 1906? They seem to think it treason to the interests of the party to even speak of their late treason to the party. The fellows who stood by the Republican nominee have no regrets, nor any insane desire to let the dead past bury the dead. There is no law prohibiting those same fellows from supporting Johnson in 1906.

St. Paul Review: The Dunn knockers got in their work last week with a vengeance. They hunted for seven entire days to find a man they could unite on, and the nearest they came to the captain for their diminished host was Van Sant, whom they have about agreed to trot for the third time, rather, the 'steenth. They are beginning to show some wisdom. The Wadena end of this Johnson Republican deal will be careful to avoid a four-flush this trip.

Eveleth Star: Self-seeking politicians may howl about the condition that makes the maintenance of party discipline necessary, but they cannot mend the tear in the party trousers with glue. It would not stick.

St. Cloud Journal-Press: A few of those who are suffering from heel bites have not recovered their mental pose, and their "arguments" should provoke only an amused and tolerant smile!

Eveleth Star: Talk of harmony upon the part of men with personal ambitions, designed to further their own interests, are worthy of no more consideration than is the blatant vaporing of the heel-biters who attempt to have the people forget their political shortcomings by shouting independence.

It were better to have honorable defeat for principle than to win and be dictated to later by men who have only personal ambition as their guide post.

Brainerd Dispatch: It's those fellows who are giving aid to the enemy while claiming to be true blue that are making the trouble.

Sauk Center Herald: If the Republicans are determined to pay off grudges instead of energetically working together to elect their candidate the grudge debt will be bigger than ever after the next election and we will have a Democratic governor.

Rush City Post: The Republicans who nominated and voted for Hon. R. C. Dunn at the last state election are the Republican party of the state of Minnesota; there is no getting away from that proposition and there will be a contesting delegation in every precinct where an attempt is made for the Johnson Republicans to butt into the next state convention.

Three Shadows.

I looked and saw your eyes
In the shadow of your hair,
As a traveler sees the stream
In the shadow of the wood;
And I said, "My faint heart sighs,
Ah me! to linger there,
To drink deep and to dream
In that sweet solitude."

I looked and saw your heart
In the shadow of your eyes,
As a seeker sees the gold
In the shadow of the stream;
And I said, "Ah, me! what art
Should win the immortal prize,
Whose want must make life cold
And heaven a hollow dream?"

I looked and saw your love
In the shadow of your heart,
As a diver sees the pearl
In the shadow of the sea;
And I murmured, not above
My breath, but all apart,—
"Ah! you can love, true girl,
And is your love for me?"
—DANTE GABRIEL ROSSETTI.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: If a woman is afraid of a man it is a sign she isn't married to him.

Half the enjoyment of being married is thinking what a lot of enjoyment you had before you were.

If you ask a girl if she had to learn to like olives, right away she thinks you are trying to get engaged to her.

If the ministers preached how wrong it was to go to church on Sunday there would be millions of men who would insist on going.

Raising a family is 99 per cent condition and 1 per cent theory, with the parents firm believers that the figures are the other way round.

Vague Threats.

St. Louis Republic: The man behind the honk, judging him collectively, is a close relation to that other long-necked bird that blows the same kind of a whistle and flies with about the same speed—only it doesn't smell so bad. Speed mania periodically gets too gay and invites a reprimand. The populace declines to be hounded and honked to death. Hysterical automobiling is a species of polite hoodlumism which will sooner or later compel more stringent and uncomfortable regulation than any heretofore contemplated, if it doesn't learn to behave itself better. It will be an easy matter for law to disqualify and prevent careless violators of the speed limit from operating machines at all. If the man behind the honk knows what's to his advantage, he will suppress his gaseous volatility of gasoline spirits and keep from getting in worse odor with the proletariat pedestrian who, after all, has a good deal to say about the laws and the police.

THE FIRE ENGINEERS CONTINUE SESSIONS

IMITATES WAR

Cartridge Demonstration Was Spectacular and Important.

Fire Chiefs Satisfied But the Insurance Men Are Not.

The fire chiefs held no business session this morning, but their business consisted of watching and investigating practical tests of appliances for fire departments and hearing as well as watching demonstrations by the Winchester Repeating Arms Co. This demonstration was for the purpose of showing that in a fire in a building where rounds of ammunition are stored there is no danger of firemen being killed by bullets when they go in to fight the fire. Fifty thousand rounds of ammunition of miscellaneous sizes were exploded in fires created for the purpose. The first demonstration was in a pine board shack which had been erected for the purpose. Twenty-five thousand rounds of ammunition in boxes and loose were piled in this building together. This was set on fire and in a few seconds the whole of the inside of the structure was ablaze.

The explosion came with the rapidity of a dozen rapid fire guns in action at once. Shells came out through the openings that were left in the incomplete structure and some of them flew as far as 80 and 100 feet. A few bullets broke their way through, but dropped only a few feet beyond the shack, doing no damage to anything or anyone, although the crowd by this time had closed up on the structure and youngsters were at its very portals.

But the next demonstration was the real thing. Twenty-five thousand rounds of ammunition, loose in boxes, were piled up in the open and a fire set to them. It is true, that while these bullets and shells flew some distance, and in quite a number of instances hit people, nothing more than a slight bruise resulted.

This cartridge demonstration was given for two reasons. The first was, as has been stated, to convince the fire chiefs so that they could convince their men, that there is no danger of death from flying bullets in a burning building. The other reason, and to some the more important is that the insurance underwriters are figuring on taking steps to increase the rate of insurance on buildings which contain cartridges.

This morning the insurance fraternity was about as well represented on the grounds as the fire chiefs. Chief Black of Duluth, and Chief John Quigley of Syracuse, under whose supervision the test is made, voicing the sentiment of the fire chiefs generally speaking, claim that the test was satisfactory. Said Chief Black:

"The demonstration proves to our satisfaction that there is no danger of death under the circumstances, and while a man may be cut or bruised by flying missiles from these explosions of cartridges, he need not lose his nerve for just as he gets the water on the cartridges they cool and the explosions cease.

W. L. McLennan, one of the insurance men, when asked what he thought of the demonstration, said;

"It has been a very good demostration as far as it has gone, but it does not prove anything very much. In both of these demonstrations this morning the cartridges have been piled up in a heap and it is only natural that they would not fly to any distance. But suppose these cartridges were piled against a brick wall with the butt of the shell against the brick, as is often the case in wholesale houses and storerooms, and a fire started. Those shells with the backing of brick could not jump back and something, naturally, would have to fly. Therefore it would be the bullet. Under such conditions would not the bullet have almost as much killing or injuring force as a bullet fired from a gun? That will be the real test if a test is wanted."

A number of demonstrations of nozzles, water tours and hose couplings were also made.

This afternoon the chiefs and their ladies were to go up the St. Louis river on the steamer Newsboy and this evening will resume their business sessions.

AFTERNOON SESSION.

Several Interesting Papers on Practical Subjects.

At the afternoon session of the fire chiefs' convention yesterday, a number of interesting papers were read and were followed by discussions, which showed keen interest in the subjects on which the papers were written. A number of the papers down on the program for reading had to be omitted, for various reasons, most of them being the absence of the chiefs who were to have read them. One or two others were put over until tonight's business session.

The only decisive action taken by the convention was on the paper read by Chief Rufus R. Fancher of New Haven, Conn. His subject was "The Best Fire Protection on Excursion Boats and Passenger Steamers." In his paper, Chief Fancher dwelt at length on the reforms which the great Slocum disaster had worked in government rules regarding steamers and excursion boats. After reciting the condition attending the Slocum disaster, and the defects shown in equipment when the frightful affair happened, Chief Fancher said:

"The fact that a certificate of inspection current at the time of the disaster was issued May 6, 1904, and the utter worthless condition of the fire hose, proved conclusively the laxity or inefficency of the inspectors in the matter of inspection—and to my mind the appointment of more inspectors to enable the ground to be better and more often covered and that they be paid larger salaries so that there would be no incentive for overlooking defects or withholding licenses.

C. E. SWINGLEY, St. Louis.

"Since the disaster to the Slocum—during the last session of congress—a number of amendments were made to the statutes and several new laws were passed relative to the fire fighting appliances required on passenger and excursion steamboats, and more especially pertaining to the duties of steamboat inspectors.

"In the main part it appears to me that the requirements are adequate but unless they are strictly adhered to, and the appliances retained in first-class condition, and without a trained and efficient crew or body of men to use them intelligently, in case of emergency, the laws and requirements will lose their effectiveness.

"To assure the best fire protection the crew should be in uniform and drilled daily in fire duty, every man at his post. On excursion boats—in addition to the uniformed crew—one or more experienced uniformed firemen, either active, or retired from the fire department, located in the jurisdiction, or starting point of any excursion steamboat, (the number of such firemen to be regulated according to the number of passengers carried,) should be required by law to accompany every excursion—to inspire confidence in the passengers, to properly handle a fire at its inception, and if necessary lead and direct the crew which is usually composed of ignorant and dependent men—for it is a fact that an excursion party should be taken care of in every particular as it cannot take care of itself in times of threatened danger.

"The hose should be the best 2½ inch rubber lined cotton hose that can be purchased and a sufficient number of 50-foot lengths should be distributed about the vessel—not rolled in coils, but so hung as to be accessible to the crew and out of reach of the passengers—so that one or more lengths could be immediately placed in service at any part of the vessel.

"To my mind the efficiency of the standpipe system on steamboats would be materially increased if the fire pumps were supplied with relief valves so that a water pressure could be constantly maintained and thus be present immediately when the use of the hose be required.

"I fail to find any laws or provisions applicable to electric light plants and electric wiring on board steamboats. From the experience which probably all of us have had with the fire producing electric spark on land, you gentlemen can see the necessity and vital importance of legislation for the protection against the great possibilities of fire from this source on steamboats.

"I may, therefore, add in conclusion, and this should be indelibly impressed on every one, that the great controlling power of the United States government shall never cease its vigilance in strictly and rigidly enforcing its protecting laws at all times, that the click of the telegraph and the heralding of the mightly press to the world may never repeat the sad news of another Slocum disaster."

A motion was made and passed to have the secretary of the convention have the paper printed and the paper and the suggestions it makes brought to the attention of the proper United States authorities and an attempt made to have further reforms in regard to facilities for fighting fire on excursion and passenger boats.

Another good paper was that by Chief Charles S. Allen of Trenton, N. J., on "The best means to bring about and create a greater interest by the public at large in the annual meetings of the Internation Association of Fire Chiefs."

F. C. Stover of Chicago, who is a fire alarm expert read a paper on "Advantage of fire alarm equipment in fire departments." In this paper he strongly supported the establishment of auxiliary systems in business and private houses, put in at the expense of the cities and paid for as a man would pay for water being put into his house. Mr. Stover asserted that it is a fact that where alarms are turned in within a minute after a fire is discovered the losses are comparatively small and that a minute's difference in time works marvels. He said that the telephone is a good auxiliary system, but with difficulty in raising central or making mistakes, the fire hall operator hearing "Vine" instead of "Pine" street and the like are frequent and fatal. Therefore he advocated auxiliary boxes.

This paper was entered into the minutes of the convention and a motion passed endorsing an auxiliary system.

Chief Frank Manley of Dalton, Ga., who was down for a paper on "How to Organize and Maintain a Volunteer Fire Department," was not present, but sent his paper, which was read by A. A. Farrington, the official stenographer. It made many interesting suggestions, and was applauded at the finish.

Chief George M. Kellogg of Sioux City, Iowa, read a very interesting paper on "Suggestions Regarding Conflagrations, Their Cause and the Best Plan for Their Prevention." In view of the fact that Chief Kellogg but recently had a harrowing experience with a conflagration that licked up $2,000,000 worth of property in his city, gave him a good basis for suggestion. He said that that fire was caused by a careless display of inflammable material, and it spread because of old buildings, which had no fire shutters, and no protection other than firemen could afford. His suggestions for prevention of these conflagrations is to enforce slate or tile roofs, fire shutters, or wire glass, fire hose in each large building, also sprinkling systems, prohibition of all display of inflammable material, and a rigid daily inspection.

Chief C. E. Swingley of St. Louis, Mo., read a paper on "The Advantages of Automobiles Over Horses for Fire Service." He uses an auto himself in fire, and says that in the five months he has had it he finds that it is much more serviceable than horses, and is cheaper to keep. The work an auto will do, besides giving more speed than horses, would kill a dozen horses, he says. In the discussion which followed a number of the chiefs disputed the point that, as an all-round vehicle for fire service, autos would prove as reliable as horses. One asked Chief Swingley if he had a water or an air cooler. The chief said he had a water cooler.

"Wait till winter comes," said his questioner, "and see how good that machine will be after it has stood outside for a while while you are fighting a fire."

F. N. Griswold of the National Fire Protective association spoke on exposures to fire, and this brought up the indignation of a lot of the chiefs against the way the insurance companies act. The insurance companies got theirs all right in the discussion which followed Mr. Griswold's address. The fire chiefs declared that the actions of the insurance companies and their agents in many cases almost encourage exposure.

Chief Higgins, as chairman of the committee on indemnity and insurance, presented an outline for a plan of association life insurance, which was read with the understanding that it would be discussed later on. Chief LeMoine of Grand Rapids, Mich., who is against association life insurance, moved that the report be laid on the table and the committee discharged. This was voted down, and the matter will be discussed. The convention then adjourned.

During the session it was voted to send the following telegram to ex-Chief Hendricks of New Haven, Conn., and ex-Chief J. S. Damurell of Boston, both of whom are very sick and may not recover:

"The International Association of Fire Engineers, in session, remembering with pleasure your long and continuous attendance, regret your enforced absence. We greet you with fraternal expressions of good will."

years, and is one of the oldest men in fire department work, attending the convention.

Mr. Provost is one of the four Canadian chiefs in the city at the present time, the others being from Toronto, London and Hamilton.

The position of chief at Ottawa, where the magnificent government buildings with their valuable records are located, is a doubly responsible one.

MILLION FEET OF PINE

Will Be Auctioned Off By the State.

St. Paul, Aug. 17.—(Special to The Herald.)—Minnesota will auction 1,000,000 or more feet of state pine on Oct. 17 at the capitol. The sale and date was agreed on today at a meeting of the state forestry board. Considerable jack pine and tamarack will also be offered at the sale.

The board extended a number of small timber permits and settled trespass cases involving about $800. The full penalty was exacted.

MAY HONOR BLACK

Duluth Chief Most Prominent Candidate For Next President.

Chief Canterbury of Minneapolis His Most Formidable Opponent.

Barring the possibility that Chief J. R. Canterbury of Minneapolis will draw votes from Chief John T. Black, the head of the Duluth fire department will be the next president of the International Association of Fire Engineers.

The two Minnesota men are about the only candidates whose names have been freely mentioned for the presidency.

John Stagg of Paterson, N. J., and George M. Kellogg of Sioux City, Ia., the two vice-presidents, and Chief Higgins of Albany have been mentioned as candidates, but Chiefs Black and Canterbury are the most prominent figures in the race.

Neither of the two men are making any canvas for the office, which is purely an honorary position, but their friends are conducting the campaign in their behalf.

The campaign is being conducted in the most friendly way, as is evidenced by the fact that Chief Black was one of the first to support the candidacy of Chief Canterbury.

James McFall, chief of Roanoke, Va., will probably be elected to succeed himself as secretary.

The elections will be held tomorrow morning at the same time as the choice of a next convention site will be made.

WOMEN ENTERTAINED.

Reception at Silberstein & Bondy Company Store.

A delightful affair was the reception this morning at which the Silberstein & Bondy company entertained the visiting women in attendance at the convention of fire chiefs. A large number of the Duluth hostesses and out-of-town guests met in the spacious hall on the second floor of the company's store and visited informally with each other. The guests were presented with dainty flowers, and during the receiving hours, 10 to 12 o'clock, Flaaten's orchestra played. Delicious punch was served and the affair was welcomed by the women as a time for a session of pleasant informal visiting.

Among the Duluth women as hostesses at the convention were: Mrs. John T. Black, Mrs. J. W. Kreitter, Mrs. T. P. Bradley, Mrs. E. M. Ferguson, Mrs. W. A. Abbett, Mrs. H. B. Knudson, Mrs. M. M. Gasser, Mrs. Theodore Hollister, Mrs. M. B. Cullum, Mrs. C. S. Wilson, Mrs. D. S. Forsy, Mrs. E. A. Tessman, Mrs. J. A. Waugh, Mrs. C. H. Farmer, Mrs. F. L. Farmer and Misses Emma Waugh, Sadie Black and Olive Kreitter.

One of the most interesting figures of the convention, particularly to the women, is "the woman of the convention," Mrs. Fillmore Tyson of Louisville, Ky., who is ardently interested in having Louisville entertain the convention in 1906. The most formidable rival is Dallas, Tex. Little else is talked of among the women, and they stand almost to a unit for Mrs. Tyson and Louisville. The choice of the place of meeting will take place tomorrow at the business session, and it will be interesting to see how victory or defeat will affect Mrs. Tyson. If it is victory, and Louisville is the choice of the members, she will be more than human if she can refrain from saying "I told you so," for she speaks in this wise of failure:

"Failure? Why, my dear, there is no such word. I'm planning my new gown now that I'll wear at the convention at Louisville next year. To begin with, if we went to Dallas, it would take all our money to get there, and we would be stranded and have to be sent home by the town. Now that is not what the city wants. The town always expects to make something out of people attending conventions, and for my part I always take my badge off when I go shopping. I don't mind being done, but I don't want to later be held for accessory in crime. But really Dallas is too far away and too hot. Now try," says she in a coaxing tone, "to come to Louisville next year, won't you?"

This afternoon the visitors were entertained at an excursion on the lake, and Mrs. Tyson, with innumerable little dainty blue badges, bearing "Louisville, 1906," talked Louisville, Louisville, and again Louisville to any and all of the male creatures who had a vote in the convention. The women of the convention are proud of her, and loyally applaud her efforts, but it is nevertheless a one-woman campaign, and her efforts are worthy of a true Southerner. Few elections will be watched with greater eagerness than the one of choice of place for next year's meeting.

FIGHT IS KEEN

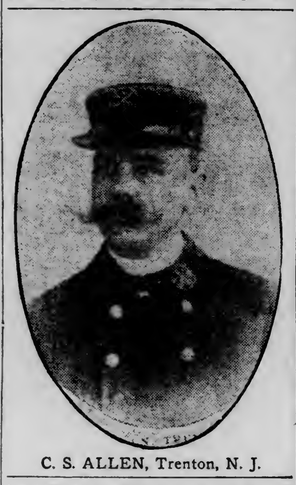

Dallas and Louisville After Chiefs' Convention In 1906.

Woman Is Conducting Fight For the Kentucky City.

The attractions of Louisville, Ky., and of Dallas, Tex., are being held up by their different representatives in the campaign which is in progress for the selection of a site for the next convention of the fire chiefs, which will be made tomorrow morning.

Last year Dallas was Duluth's most formidable opponent.

This year Dallas went into the fight early. Chief McGee of the Dallas department arrived on the ground early, reaching the city Monday morning. He immediately started in to boom Dallas for the convention in 1906. During the two days previous to the opening of the convention he succeded in getting nearly all of the delegates who arrived early, lined up for Dallas.

But meanwhile a bomb was being prepared for the energetic chief of the Dallas department. On board the steamer North West were Chief Fillmore Tyson of Louisville, and Mrs. Tyson. Nearly 190 delegates to the convention were also on board the steamer. Chief Tyson is one of the most popular members of the association, and Mrs. Tyson is what is known to politicians as a "good mixer."

Assisted by Mrs. J. M. Gilbert of Akron, Ohio, Mrs. Tyson cooked up a little political deal to spring on the convention when it opened in Duluth, and when the steamer arrived the North West party presented almost a solid front for Louisville. Before she had been in the city two hours Mrs. Tyson had a number of badges printed and had pinned them on the lapels of half a hundred delegates.

This was the bomb that was sprung on Chief McGee Tuesday night, but the Texan buckled down to work with renewed zeal, and the delegates have gradually divided themselves into two sections, the Dallas and the Louisville contingents.

There is little question but that the choice lies between these two cities, but the result will not be known until after the vote tomorrow morning.

LED THE BAND.

John D. Rockefeller was 66 years of age recently, but he did not celebrate the event. He arose at the usual time, attended to his mail, with the aid of his secretary and stenographer, played golf in the afternoon and received calls. He retired early. While he was on the golf links a boys' Hungarian band marched upon his premises and serenaded him. The "Oil King" was so delighted with the ovation that he dropped his golf stick, hobbled over to the band and with his hand as a baton led the youthful musicians.

DEATHS.

McCARTHY—Pat McCarthy, aged 50 years, died Aug. 15, at St. Luke's hospital.

DULINSKI—Helen, the infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Peter Dulinski, of 823 Fifth avenue east, died Aug. 17.

ORDER TO EXAMINE ACCOUNTS.—State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis, ss.—In Probate Court, Special Term, August 17th, 1905.

In the Matter of the Estate of Elizabeth McGinniss, Deceased:

On reading and filing the petition of Joseph H. McGinniss and W. S. McGinniss, executors of the estate of Elizabeth McGinniss, deceased, representing, among other things, that they have fully administered said estate, and praying that a time and place be fixed for examining, settling and allowing the final account of their administration, and for the assignment of the residue of said estate to the parties entitled thereto by law.

IT IS ORDERED, That said account be examindd, and petition heard by this Court, on Monday, the 11th day of September, A. D. 1905, at 10 o'clock a. m., at the Probate Office in the Court House, in the City of Duluth, in said County.

AND IT IS FURTHER ORDERED, That notice thereof be given to all persons interested, by publishing a copy of this Order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in the Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at the City of Duluth in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minnesota, the 17th day of August A. D. 1905.

BURNS OUT WIRES

Lightning Plays Havoc In The Herald Composing Room.

Two Small Fires Also Caused By the Storm.

Lightning made The Herald composing room look like a country job office for a little while this afternoon.

As the type-setters were busy at their machines, a bolt of lightning shot in through the open window, and glanced from the radiator to the powerful electric motor which operates the battery of ten linotype machines.

The wiring was burned out and the machines were thrown out of commission.

The result was that the operators had to return to their cases temporarily; and a greater part of the late "copy" in The Herald this evening, was set in the old-fashioned method.

This raised havoc with late news, for the order to "boil to the finest notch" immediately went out.

The storm also caused a fire in the house owned by George Muncey on Fifth street between Ninth and 10th avenues east. The flash struck the chimney, ripped it to piece and tore off the gable. The resultant fire did little damage.

Another alarm was turned in from a building at the corner of Twenty-fifth avenue west and Superior street, which was struck.

NUMBER IS SMALL

But Few Deaths Occur In City During July.

Only One Death Is Reported From Contagious Disease.

Only seventy deaths occurred from among Duluth's 65,000 people during the month of July. Seventeen were residents of outside cities or towns, who were brought in to Duluth hospitals suffering from incurable maladies.

Eight more met their death in some violent manner, leaving but forty-five who died from illness during the month, or a little over one a day. Of these forty-five, four died of old age.

Tuberculosis was by far the most fatal of the diseases reported, having been the cause of sixteen deaths during the month.

Contagious diseases were responsible for but one death, this one being due to diphtheria. Typhoid caused two deaths during the month.

Meningitis was responsible for four deaths, and peritonitis three, and aside from these there was no disease which caused more than one death.

The list of violent deaths was once more a large one. Five persons were killed in various kinds of accidents during the month. One was drowned, one met his death from a fractured skull and one committed suicide.

The total number of births reported during the month was 106. Of this number 54 were males and 52 females.

LUMBERMEN HAVE MEETING

Many Prominent Men In Business Gather at Cloquet.

The log rolling contest at Cloquet yesterday, for the championship of the world, drew quite a number of Duluth people to that place, including several lumbermen. During the day quite a number of the prominent lumber and timber interests in this part of the country were gathered in Cloquet and a sort of informal meeting was held at which affairs in general relating to the log and timber business was discussed.

Among the prominent lumbermen who attended the meeting were Frederick Weyerhaueser and F. E. Weyerhaueser, St. Paul; Edward Hines, Chicago; William Irvine, A. A. McDonell, Chippewa Falls, J. E. Lindsay, E. D. Lindsay, Davenport; Irving D. Burgh, A. Gowan, Duluth and William Laird, Winona.

The log rolling contest was had in a small lake in the park at Cloquet, and was witnessed by several thousand of people.

PERSONALS

W. H. Crossland of Minneapolis has joined his wife and family, who are guests of his brother, H. G. V. Crossland, on Park Point. Mr. Crossland is on his way to Winnipeg.

Thomas Shevlin, Jr., the famous Yale athlete and football man, arrived in Duluth from the Twin Cities last evening. He brought his $12,000 automobile along, intending to remain in the city for some little time.

Mr. and Mrs. John McAlpine left for Portland, Or., this morning.

J. Schilling left for Portland, Or., today.

D. Horrigan left for Winnipeg yesterday.

John A. Ryan, chief hotel inspector of the State of Minnesota, is in the city today, stopping at the McKay hotel. After an inspection of the local hotels he will leave for the range towns.

Miss Laurie M. Brown of Denver, Col., arrived in the city this afternoon, to make her home with her sister, Mrs. G. M. Smith.

Theron H. Greene left today for Mystic, Conn.

Said one of the lady visitors to our city yesterday--

"You certainly have a store that your city and its women can feel proud of. For not only is it beautiful, but the things you sell would do credit to any metropolitan city!

"Your prices, too, seem very reasonable. This coat that I am paying you twenty-five dollars for, I am sure I couldn't buy in my own city for less than thirty to thirty-five dollars!

"I was told about this place by a friend who came up the Lakes by boat last summer. Her wrap was so stylish and reasonable that I decided to buy my coat here!"

This is but one of the compliments we get from visitors every day, and we can assure you that we appreciate it.

For after all, business is not all "Dollars and Cents"—we like to know that our efforts are appreciated.

We know that Duluthians appreciate them from the way our business has grown, and the kind words of strangers within our gates, are doubly appreciated!

One of our newest models in Long Coat Suits at $35.00.

New things for Autumn are here galore — Suits, Coats, Wraps, Skirts, Waists and the "fixings." We're rummaging through the Summer things, and "selling them for a song," so to speak.

More new models in Raincoats and Traveling Coats arrived today at $18.50 to $27.50.

This is undeniably the age of reverential bowing to higher education and mental culture, but the needs of the body are too insistent to be passed over lightly. Many of the women's clubs of the city are restricted in a large extent to mental stimulation and to those who desire a more practical course of study one of the announcements in the year book of the Twentieth Century club for 1905-06 will be read with interest and pleasure. The announcement comes under the head of the home and education department and reads as follows "If a sufficient number desire it a class in 'First Aid to the Injured' will be conducted under competent instructors." The notice is attracting a great deal of attention among the members of the club and is receiving much favorable comment by women outside the club, whose attention has been called to the possibility of establishing such a class.

Comparatively few people are immune from injuries, accidents and serious hurts, and there are few but have at some time been in the presence of an accident, slight or severe. Few again are the people who have not had that perfectly helpless feeling when the only thought upon which the mind will seemingly center is "Where is the doctor book?" Cut fingers, a severed artery, painful burns, fractures and sprains are names familiar to everybody and the injuries themselves are daily happenings in some household, if not in your own then in your neighbor's. To the mother of the household the need of a slight knowledge of intelligent procedure in case of injury is most to be desired. From the time her small son in search of practical demonstration of the law of gravity, practices tumbling from every possible bed and couch to the time he tests the heat of all hot objects with an enquiring forefinger until the day he becomes some other woman's special care, a knowledge of the first treatment in such cases is simply another form of life assurance. Indeed so generally is the need recognized that it scarcely seems necessary to advocate the class in the smallest particular.

In the East these classes have been widely established and largely attended. In Eastern hospitals the course is one that is obligatory in the training of nurses and in this course, instruction which is furnished in no other is offered. The instruction has not been confined to nurses' training, however, but classes for matrons, young and old, for young frivolous society girls, who, perhaps, began the study as an interesting fad, but who, nevertheless remembered much of the instruction and were able to apply it practically many times. The last few years have seen a change in this one particular which was, perhaps, brought about by the loss of life through ignorance of procedure at just the critical moment. In almost every memorandum book after the page with the interesting spaces to be filled telling how tall and how heavy one is, one's name and residence, is a page devoted to "What To Do In Case of Accidents," but after one careless reading, one is in doubt whether to roll the child with convulsions over a barrel and to put the drowned person in hot water or vice versa.

One of Duluth 's prominent women who has completed the course of instruction as offered in New York is most enthusiastic over the possibility of establishing such clases here. "In my estimation," she said, "a more practical or beneficial line of study could not be undertaken than one offering instruction in how to act in offering the first aid to an injured person. The lack of knowledge is simply appalling, a mere fainting spell happening among a number of people will cause a commotion and the poor afflicted one is often treated in weird and wonderful ways. The course is one that ought to meet with a prompt and thankful acceptance by Duluth women."

There is no doubt that one and maybe more classes will be formed. It is hoped that the club women will be in readiness at the opening of the club year in October to make the classes in "First Aid to the Injured" some of the best attended and most profitable of the club.

JONES-McVAY.

A Quiet and Beautiful Home Wedding.

Though quiet, an especially beautiful wedding service was that at which Miss Alice Margaret Jones, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Araspus C. Jones, became the bride of William Henry McVay, Jr., of Portland, Or. The wedding was a home affair and took place at 8 o'clock last evening. Sweet peas were used entirely in the decorations, being the only flower used throughout the entire ceremony. The parlor in which the service was read was beautiful in decorations of dainty ferns and white sweet peas. In the library, the same flowers in exquisite shades of pink were used and in the dining room red sweet peas were used.

The service was read by Rev. M. S. Rice of the First Methodist church and the wedding music was played by Flaaten's orchestra. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Lulu Jones, and Chester McVay of Yankton, S. D., was the best man. The bride wore a dainty gown of white chiffon over taffeta and carried a shower bouquet of white sweet peas. The bridesmaid also wore white and carried pink sweet peas.

Mr. and Mrs. McVay left on the evening train for Portland, where they will be at home.

DRESSER-DEUTSCHBEIN.

Pretty Wedding at an East End Home.

The wedding of Miss Frances Ethel Dresser, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Dresser, and Harry J. Deutschbein of Albany, N. Y., which took place last evening at the Dresser home at 16 South Ninteenth avenue east, was a very beautiful affair. The decorations throughout the rooms were pink and white, making a charming setting for an exceedingly pretty ceremony. In the parlors and dining room pink and white roses were used and the gowns of the wedding party further carried out the scheme of color adopted.

At 8 o'clock La Brosse's orchestra played the wedding music from "Lohengrin" and the wedding party entered the parlor. Little Miss Ethel Ebert was the ring bearer carrying the golden circle in the heart of a white rose. The bridesmaids were Miss Isabel Meads and Miss Ann Christensen and the maid of honor was Miss Marguerite Deutschbein of Albany, N. Y. The bride was immediately preceded by a little flower girl, Myrna Ebert. The groom's attendant was Albert Dresser. The service was read by Rev. T. H. Cleland of the First Presbyterian church.

The bride wore a beautiful gown of point d'esprit trimmed in lace and she carried a shower bouquet of roses and lilies of the valley. Miss Deutschbein wore pink chiffon and carried white roses. The little flower girl and ring bearer wore dainty white gowns.

Mr. and Mrs. Deutschbein left during the evening for an Eastern wedding trip and will later go to Albany, where they will be at home.

SIX DELEGATES.

Y. W. C. A. To Be Well Represented at Conference.

The local Young Women's Christian association will have six delegates to the Geneva city conference which will be held at Geneva, Wis., from August 18 to August 23 inclusive. The delegates from Duluth will be Miss Jennie S. Moody, Miss Marie Cameron, Miss Mabel Dean, Miss Lida Willson, Miss Kezia Bennett and Miss Ruth Roberts. The last named will on her return from a vacation at Indiana stop at Geneva. The delegates will be well provided with banners and streamers in green and white, the local association colors. The conference is the fifteenth annual city conference of the Western Y. W. C. A. associations. At the ten day session a great many helpful suggestions will be made in the building up of association work and special attention is given the devotional and spiritual side of the work. The local members are delighted at having so large a representation. The members from Duluth who will attend as delegates left this afternoon on the 5:30 train.

Fink-Roth Wedding.

The wedding of Miss Teresa L. Fink and Joseph A. Roth took place, yesterday morning, at the German Catholic church on East Second street. The service was read at 9 o'clock by Father Kosmeri. The bridesmaid was Miss Dola Fink and the best man was Fred Roth. After the ceremony a wedding breakfast was served at the home of the bride's mother. Mr. and Mrs. Roth left on the afternoon train for a wedding trip to Chicago and Eastern points and after October 1 they will be at home at 630 West Third street in this city. Among the wedding gifts was a chest of silver from the office employes of the Iron Range road.

Personal Mention.

Mr. and Mrs. John Uno Sebenius are on a ten days' trip about Isle Royale in their yacht, Trianon.

• • •

Mrs. H. H. Scoble and daughter, Alma, have returned from Colorado where they spent the summer with Mrs. F. Barbrick of Pueblo.

• • •

Mrs. F. S. Wood of 1108½ East Second street and guest, Miss Margaret Riley of Oconto, Wis., left, yesterday, for a trip to Buffalo, Niagara and the East to be gone two or three weeks.

• • •

Mrs. Kenneth McLennan returned to the city, today, after a visit with friends at Quincy, Mich.

• • •

Mrs. George Featherly, 817 East Second street is at her summer home at Pike Lake.

• • •

Touched Their Vanity.

Miss Frances Keller of the Woman's league of New York illustrated admirably at a recent dinner party a point which she wished to make in reply to a man who had said "women are vainer than men," says the Philadelphia Ledger.

"Of course," Miss Keller answered, "I admit that women are vain and men are not. There are a thousand proofs that this is so. Why, the necktie of the handsomest man in the room is even now up on his collar."

There were six men present and each of them put his hand gently behind his neck.

Her Cure For Gossips.

It is told of Hannah More that she had a good way of managing talebearers. It is said that whenever she was told anything derogatory of another her invariable reply was: "Come, we will go and ask if this be true." The effect was sometimes ludicrously painful. The talebearer was taken aback, stammered out a qualification or begged that no notice might be taken of the statement. But the good lady was inexorable; off she took the scandalmonger to the scandalized to make inquiry and compare accounts. It is not likely that anybody ever a second time ventured to repeat a gossipy story to Hannah More. One would think her method of treatment would be a sure cure for scandal.

LITTLE SUNSHINE.

The Sensational Serpentine Dancer, After a Successful Tour of the World, Returns to the Scene of Her Former Triumphs.

This announcement, in gigantic letters, is seen on all the boardings and bill-posting stations. It is read with interest by men about town who are familiar with the career of the diamond-decked beauty, whose notoriety has been far more profitable than any little talents she is supposed to possess. It is read by hosts of envious young "artistes" whose ambitions are centered on becoming a star in the vaudeville world, no matter what the cost. And it is read early each morning by one man—infirm, ragged, decrepit old John Maudsley—as mechanically he creeps along toward his place of business, idiotically muttering the words of Thomas Moore:

"Sunshine, broken in the rill,
Though turned aside, is sunshine still."

Very little sunshine had ever come into John Maudsley's life. The office in which he had worked since boyhood, from early morning until late at night, appeared to have been buried in a block of big buildings for the express purpose of shutting out any stray rays of sunshine which might otherwise have striven to penetrate the everlastingly unwashed windows. The head of the publishing firm which he had served long and faithfully seemed to have acquired the habit of stilling anything in the least resembling sunshine, probably as the result of their systematically smothering the hopes and ambitions of budding authors.

The home which, with much husbanding of his scanty income, John Maudsley had built up, sometimes stole a stray ray or two which fell foul of the smokestacks of the big tenement house and tumbled down the airshaft, but even these were dead when John returned from his work. So it had happened that the sun shone only once a week for John. That was on Sundays.

It was during one of the brightest of these, in summer time, that John first met a little living sunbeam. A girl who seemed to make the sun shine brighter; to absorb the rays of the great lifegiver; and to shed them again on the innermost recesses of the poor fellow's heart. Then it was that he began to dream wild dreams of how his little home might be brightened with a perpetual sunshine, always on tap, so to speak, when he ought to have known that it is a dangerous experiment to bottle up sunshine, of the feminine gender, in such obscurity.

He it was who first called her "Little Sunshine," and when he had won her consent to illuminate his home, it seemed to him that henceforth every day must be a summer Sunday.

There was great gaiety in the heretofore dismal little flat, both when John was at home and when he was away at his work, for the golden glory of that little head must have subjects to shine upon.

Then came to John what was the mystery of mysteries. It was no eclipse. It was simply that while the man's whole soul still circled around the first sweet sun, another lesser orb of love was born and shed new rays of gladness on his heart. Sunshine! The skies, the home, his life was full of it.

But, oh! The pity of it! The sun which with its brightness transforming crawling worms to butterflies, also breeds such vermin as one might shudder at.

The sunshine of that little home was broken in the rill and turned aside by one of these reptiles. John returned from his work one night to find it night indeed.

"Little Sunshine" was gone, but the lesser orb was left. Cruelly deserted husband and child together sobbed through the first dark night. Dawn came and brought no Sunshine. Never after that came sunshine to their hearts.

It was always night. Night to the child who lived her little life, untended and uncared for, in the gloomy home. Night to the man who saw that baby life fast fading away, while he must work even harder than before to provide such luxuries as might prolong that life, which really needed the lost luxury of a mother's love.

"Heavens! Give me sunshine! Little Sunshine, come back to me!" he often cried aloud. "Come back, if only to keep the last little ray of happiness from fading from my life."

But Little Sunshine never "returned to the scene of her former triumphs." The wretch who had lured her into the glamor of the footlights had already found means to make her beauty and her grace a source of profit.

"Mamma! mamma!" murmured the fever-stricken child. "Me wants my mamma!"

But those tiny tones never reached the woman's ears, in which were ringing the plaudits of a brainless, heartless throng, as she posed and pirouetted in a state of semi-nudity. No longer a sun, she had degenerated into a star.

The little one died. The last gleam of sunlight sank beyond the horizon of John's life as his baby girl was lowered into the grave. But secretly, that same night, he went to a vaudeville theater, a gay and garish place where the "Sensational Serpentine Dancer" was to make her New York debut.

He saw huge bouquets of costly flowers passed across the footlights to "Little Sunshine." He had been too poor to purchase more than one solitary sunflower to place upon the casket of their child.

He never even let the mother know of his loss. Why should he? She looked so bright and happy, even as she had before he had dared to hide her brilliancy for a time in the obscurity of his dismal home.

Again she has "returned to the scene of her former triumphs." Perhaps the greatest of her triumphs is that she never sees, and no one knows the identity of that broken-down man, that wreck of humanity, who each night occupies a back seat in the gallery. No one hears him as he murmurs:

"Sunshine broken in the rill,
Though turned aside, is sunshine still."

The Stage.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Friday and Saturday and Saturday matinee, "Under Southern Skies."
LYCEUM—Monday, "The Chaperons."

"UNDER SOUTHERN SKIES."

"Under Southern Skies," the attraction which will appear at the Lyceum, Friday and Saturday, with a matinee Saturday, is one of the most successful plays now before the public. "Under Southern Skies" is unlike the usual run of Southern plays. It deals with the social side of aristocratic southern people, and the story woven about them is one that could occur in no other part of our country. The customs, habits, and ways of speech of the high bred Southerners and their darkey servants are delightfully set forth, and the play is full of life, color and gayety. A Hallowe'en celebration is one of the big hits of the play. Nothing like it has been put upon the stage, and it delights old and young alike.

THE POPULAR "CHAPERONS."

No musical comedy ever written has become more universally popular among all classes of theater-goers as Isidore Witmark's successful piece, "The Chaperons," which will be seen at the Lyceum next Monday.

The production has always been kept at the very top-most notch of excellence as regards company, equipment and stage-management, a fact which, no doubt has much to do with the remarkable vitality of this piece. The production this season is even more elaborate than ever before—an entire new dress of scenery has been painted, and a costly new wardrobe provided, while the company has been described as one of the best musical organizations in America. Some of the members of the company are: Madelyn Marshall, Ruth Lloyd, Doris Goodwin, Harry Ladell, John Price, George Lydecker, Frank Wooley, W. W. Strunz and others.

BEN HUR COMING AGAIN.

Klaw & Erlanger were so immensely pleased with the great patronage extended to "Ben Hur" in Duluth two seasons ago, that they have booked the Wallace play with Manager Marshall for the entire week of September 11. Many new surprises are in store this season for those who witnessed it on the previous occasion, for the scenic and machanical equipment that will be employed, is none other than that which was used at the Drury Lane Theater, London, four years ago, when it was presented to the English public at the Drury Lane Theater, London. On that occasion its stupendousness and brilliancy were recognized by His Royal Higness King Edward. He witnessed the first performance, and was so thoroughly charmed that he commanded a royal box to be built in the middle of the pit, (the pit is the rear portion of the lower floor of an English play house,) of the Drury Lane Theater, that he might more thoroughly view the spectacle and the thrilling chariot race. These effects are admittedly acknowledged to be the most costly and colossal ever prepared as a setting for a dramatic spectacle. They were imported to this country for the run of "Ben Hur," at the World's Fair, St. Louis, last year, and were afterwards utilized at the big Chicago Auditorium, and are now being taken to Portland, Oregon, where "Ben Hur" is scheduled to be the star feature of the closing days of the Lewis and Clark exposition.

When "Ben Hur" was staged in Duluth, two seasons ago, large theater parties were formed in Ashland, Marquette, Ishpeming, Calumet and other points about and it is more than likey such arrangements will be duplicated again, for all the railroads entering the city have arranged to make low excursion rates during that week.

RECIPROCITY CONFERENCE

Listens to Speech on Trade Relations By Congressman Foss.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Upon the opening of yesterday afternoon's session of the reciprocity conference, permanent officers for the conference were recommended as follows: Permanent chairman, Hon. S. E. Packard, Iowa; first vice chairman, William C. Maybury, Michigan; second vice chairman, I. T. Prior, Texas; third vice chairman, Andrew G. Webster, Massachusetts; secretary, W. R. Corwin, Iowa; assistant secretary, Frederick Larrabee.

Senator W. B. Dean of St. Paul addressed the conference at some length, saying that a delegation had come from Minnesota because of the fact that their state, not being protected under the present tariff laws, their commercial prosperity was threatened, and people of Minnesota were in consequence stirred to their very depth. As a means of bringing about a revision of the triff, he urged that the representatives to congress be impressed with the fact that their election would be doubtful unless they honestly and diligently represent the wish of their constituents in the matter of tariff revision.

Eugene N. Foss of Boston spoke of "Reciprocity as a Political Issue." He said in part: "Granted that the day of new policies has come, that the principle of reciprocity at last is to be given its rightful place in our economic system, we yet must recognize the necessity of proceeding carefully, intelligently and scientifically. It is easy to propose but difficult to execute; we must avail ourselves of the highest skill, the ripest knowledge and the broadest experience in modifying old or framing new legislation.

"Whether or not it shall appear that the maximum and minimum tariff system is advisable, as some of us are inclined to believe, the country will demand that the whole problem shall be considered by impartial experts. This duty rests primarily upon the members of the national house of representatives. It is to them that we should be able to look for relief. If however, by reason of improper control, sectional considerations, prejudice or partisanship, there are not to be found in that body men whom the people can trust, we must look to the executive to find them.

"President Roosevelt has been tested and proved equal to the task of such discovery. The character of the commission to investigate and settle the coal strike gives sufficient evidence of that. His influence in the struggle for Cuban reciprocity committed him long ago to this cause; had it not been for his resolute advocacy with congress, we would not enjoy with Cuba the measure of reciprocity that we enjoy today.

"In the working out of a practical scheme of reciprocity the country will need the interest, the influence and cooperation of the farmer, the merchant, the manufacturer, the shipper, the miner, the wage earner, the professional or salaried class, as well as the counsel of the specialist, the colonial administrator, the wise diplomat of the order of the lamented John Hay. All these interests should be effectively represented in the committee or commission to be charged with the duty of instituting an economic system which shall be equitable, permanent and flexible.

"Such a commission as this would command public confidence and the support of all parties. Congress would hesitate to ignore the findings of such a body supported by the intelligent interests and approval of the country. There might be disagreements and modifications by congress, which would be wholly proper; but if the spirit of the constitution recommended by the commission were violated or its beneficient purpose destroyed, the president in his inevitable veto would know that he had the country back of him.

"Let us not deceive ourselves regarding the German situation. It is not Germany alone, with which we have to deal, but all Europe, all of the civilized world. Germany is only the leader. I believe, broadly speaking, that the peace and prosperity of the twentieth century is dependent, in a great degree, on the wisdom and skill with which our statesmen meet the situation with which we are now confronted. In the direction of the greatest breadth and liberality lies the guarantee of universal peace."

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

A Stranger In the Forest Near Escanaba Dies Unattended.

Escanaba—Mortally ill, several days without food and able to quench his thirst only with the drops of rain he was able to catch in his mouth, Louis Shaulis of Chicago was found lying on a bed of leaves in a forest near here. A physician was summoned the moment the unfortunate man was found, but his life-thread snapped before the doctor could reach him. The only means of identification was a paper in one of the dead man's pockets, giving the above name and city with the address as 133 South Halsted street. The man was well dressed and his white, uncalloused hands indicated that he was not a laborer.

Searchers who have been hunting through the woods in Baydenoc township in an attempt to find Norman Williams, who disappeared from his home Aug. 8, believe he was murdered for the small sum of money which he carried, and his body secreted.

The township authorities offered a reward of $100 for the finding of the body of Ole Sundberg, who has also disappeared, or information leading to the conviction of the murderers.

Hancock—Remarkable as it may seem, there is a settlement in upper Michigan where a church is to be organized before the advent of a saloon. This rather unusual incident is found at Drummond's island, Lake Huron, where Miss Maggie Walz of Calumet, a leader of her people, recently located a colony of Finns.

Watersmeet—Carrie A. Moscrip, who for about fourteen years has been postmistress at Watersmeet, Gogebic county, has resigned and has been succeeded by Joseph Kelly.

Ironwood—Robert Garvey, a shoemaker, who sustained a fractured leg by falling on a sidewalk on Lowell street, at Ironwood, on June 10, threatens to sue the city for $8,000 damages if it does not pay him $2,060 dollars in settlement of his claim.

Charles Nelson, who sold his farm north of Ironwood about a year ago and removed to Manhem, Vilas county, Wis., was injured by a stroke of lightning at the latter place last week. The lightning killed the team of horses he was driving.

Masonville—W. H. Plucker and William Anderson, Masonville, Delta county, fishermen, were arraigned before Judge Linden and heavily fined for using hoop like nets, which are prohibited by the game and fish law. The arrests were made by the deputy game warden.

SIBLEY CHOSEN

By Speaker Cannon For Treasury Watch Dog.

Washington, Aug. 16.—The man now being most talked of as chairman of the committee on appropriations of the house of representatives is Joseph C. Sibley of Pennsylvania.

The report comes to Washington that Speaker Cannon, who has been spending a week or so with Sibley on Lake Champlain, will appoint him as head of the most important committee of the house.

Sibley is a very successful business man, an able debater and popular in congress. He served as a democrat during the Cleveland administration, but could not stand for that party. During his first term he came into prominence by a speech in which he severely criticized President Cleveland.

Representative Theodore Burton of Ohio, who was considered as probable chairman of the appropriations committee, is in Washington. He stated to some of his friends yesterday that he did not expect the appointment, and would be very well satisfied to remain at the head of the rivers and harbors committee.

Mr. Burton is interested in Mississippi river work, and thinks the examination into reservoirs in Minnesota by the engineer board will produce good results.

Vacation days will soon be over---Enjoy them while you may.

DISUNION CRISIS

In Norway and Sweden Is Nearer to a Solution.

Negotiations For Final Treaty Likely to Begin Soon.

Christiania, Norway, Aug. 17.—The overwhelming mandate of the people of Norway, given in the referendum of Sunday for the permanent dissolution of the union with Sweden was no surprise to Norwegian statesmen, however unexpected it may have been to those Swedish leaders who have maintained that the Michelsen program has never had the support of the people. Its first result has been to clear the atmosphere not only here but in Stockholm, and to bring the final peaceful solution of the crisis nearer than it has ever seemed before.

The storthing, at its resumed session next week, will no doubt enter at once into negotiations with the Swedish riksdag, that will result in a final treaty between the two countries.

The riksdag's proposal of July 25 will form the basis of these negotiations, and no doubts are entertained here that common ground will easily be found.

The more Sweden's proposal that the frontier forts be demolished and a neutral zone established with an agreement on both sides not to fortify, is examined, the fairer it seems to be. In the end, Norway will probably accept this condition, in the belief that it will lead to permanent peace, and amity between the two nations.

The other conditions, relating to unhampered transportation on the Swedish-Norwegian railroad to Narvik on the Ofoten fjord, and to pasturage in the Norwegian mountains for the Swedish Lapps, will present no obstacles.

The one critical point in the negotiations will be Sweden's demand that the act of June 7, when the storthing declared Norway's independence, be retracted. It is not likely that Norway will ever consent to this. The act of June 7 is an accomplished thing, and it can never be retracted. All of the ministers and leaders in the storthing are agreed upon this point, and if Sweden presses it, the negotiations will fail.

The point, of course, is not of practical importance, so long as the independence of Norway is conceded by Sweden. It is a matter of sentiment on both sides. Sweden does not want to admit formally that Norway had the right to dissolve the union and set up its own government. Norway does not want to admit that its course was in any single particular illegal or unconstitutional. So it is plain that one country or the other must swallow its pride, if a peaceful issue of the crisis is to be secured.

With the clearing of the political skies, the question of Norway's permanent form of government becomes of great moment. There is no reason to alter the prediction that the monarchy would be continued in spite of the fact that the people of Norway want a republic. This prediction was based on the statements of leading members of the present government. They all admit that a referendum on the subject would probably result in a mandate for a republic, but they add that there is little diefference in substance between a republic and a constitutional monarchy, and that Norway would be much more quickly welcomed into the family of nations with a king than with a president. For expediency sake, therefore, the ancient kingdom of Norway will be perpetuated.

The question of a king to found the new dynasty thus becomes of present moment. It is well known here that King Oscar is at heart anxious to have his son Carl on Norway's throne. Owing to the state of feeling in Sweden, he has been obliged to conceal this desire and to assert loudly that no Bernadotte could ever ascend the Norwegian throne. Later on, he attached an important condition to this assertion. He declared that the only possible circumstance under which he would consider the matter would be that the riksdag of Sweden requested it. This revealed his real desires and purposes.

So the only thing that now stands between Prince Carl and the scepter is the riksdag. If a treaty of peace is reached it may be found that one article of it provides that Carl is to be king. The talk of Carl of Denmark has aroused the opposition of the kaiser, who would not like to see England's already great influence here increased by putting King Edward's son-in-law on the throne. It is proper to add that all this talk of the Danish Carl has come from outside sources. Nothing either official or unofficial has come from the Norwegian government on the subject. Norway has offered the throne to a Bernadotte and will wait for an answer before offering it elsewhere.

But there is some restiveness here and hints are thrown out that Norway will not wait much longer. C. C. Berner, the venerable and conservative president of the storthing, has made a statement in which he says:

"Norway at present desires to continue under a monarchy. This fact and a spirit of conciliation caused our offer of the throne to a prince of the house of Bernadotte. This offer has brought forth no answer.

"Norway, however, cannot wait forever, and in a reasonable time will consider the failure to answer as a refusal, and will invite another prince to occupy the throne.

"The storthing would not take the responsibility of deciding in favor of a republic, but would refer that question to the people."

This last sentence, and the use of the words "at present" in the opening sentence, hint at the possibility of an eventual republic. There is a growing party in the storthing which wants a referendum on the question and it may be difficult to resist the demand that the will of the people be ascertained. Such a referendum would be held in connection with the elections in September, 1906. The provisional government in that case would continue to rule until the matter was decided.

HE IS TAXED MANY MILLIONS

Marshall Field of Chicago Cannot Count His Wealth.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Marshall Field's assessment, made public by the board of review, is on $30,000,000 worth of real estate and $16,000,000 worth of personal property. He will pay over $500,000 into the county treasury.

This sum far exceeds that paid by any other individual taxpayer in Chicago, and it is larger than any Mr. Field has ever been assessed before. Besides his taxes in Chicago, the merchant every year pays millions of dollars on railroad and industrial holdings in other states and on property in all parts of the world.

Never in the memory of the men on the board of review has Mr. Field asked to have the assessed value of his property reduced. Promptly and quietly he has paid millions of dollars into the public treasury.

Marshall Field himself, it is said, cannot count his wealth. One hundred million dollars is the most conservative estimate placed upon his riches, while many declare $200,000,000 is a more correct figure.

"It is a pleasure to deal with Marshall Field," said one of the county officials yesterday. "His complaints are few, and when he does utter one it is just. He is fair and square and does his full duty to the people."

TEN GALLONS AND DEATH

Drank Whisky and Listened to Phonograph Ten Days.

Seattle, Wash., Aug. 17.—Suffering from an incurable cancer, John Anderson, farmer, living near Union City, Hood's canal, bought ten gallons of whisky and a phonograph in this city, two weeks ago, and after a spree of ten days' duration, in which time he drank the liquor and listened to the music of the machine, he went in the woods, near his cabin, and shot himself through the heart.

Anderson was one of the pioneers of the sound, and had lived on a little ranch four miles from Union City for more than twenty years. He was married to an Indian woman and to her he left all his possessions.

Two weeks ago Anderson came to Seattle and was examined by Dr. Jenson, who pronounced his case incurable, a cancer in the mouth was killing him. When the doctor informed Anderson of his condition, the stricken man made no complaint. He first bought ten gallons of whisky and a phonograph, and then bade good-bye to his friends. He told them that he was going home to die, but that he would die happy. How he kept his word was learned when Charles Linn, who lives near Anderson, arrived in this city and informed Anderson's friends of what had happened. Linn's story is as follows:

"We all knew that Anderson meant to kill himself, but we thought he would stick it out a little longer than he really did. Two weeks ago he came back from Seattle, and when I saw him he looked as happy and as carefree as anyone possibly could. He told me that the doctor had given him up, and that he had only a few weeks to live. He also said that he was going to have a good time while he had the chance. He suffered severely. His Indian wife knew that he was contemplating suicide, and she watched closely. For the last ten days Anderson drank the liquor he had bought and listened to the music of the phonograph.

"Thursday morning the last of the whisky was consumed, and Anderson loaded his rifle and started out. His wife followed him, but he eluded her and shortly afterward a shot was heard from a small canyon, near the cabin.

"Search was made and Anderson was found dead, shot through the heart with the rifle still grasped in his hand. The grief of the Indian woman, his wife, is such as to cause her friends to fear for her reason.

"In a sewing machine drawer in the cabin, where Anderson was wont to keep his money, was found a farewell letter to his wife, in which he begged forgiveness for what he contemplated. He also stated that the ranch was clear and free from all debts, and that it was now in her name. He cautioned her not to allow anyone to defraud her of it.

"Before leaving the house Anderson dressed himself in his best suit of clothes, shaved and made all possible arrangements for his burial, even designating the spot where he wished his body to lie."

BRINGS PROBE TO MINNESOTA

Commissioner Greene Will Be In Duluth Next Week.

Washington, Aug. 17.—A shakeup in the internal revenue service is under way, but how extensive it will be the officials decline to state. It is hinted however that several collectors will be compelled to leave the service. So far only two of the four special agents of the bureau, whose resignations have been called for have complied with the request. These are Capt. Charles H. Ingram of the Newton land division and a Northwestern agent whose name is withheld. Special Agent C. H. Burg of the Southwestern division, and another Western agent have not yet forwarded their resignations.

Whether the investigation of the service now being made by H. F. Greene of Duluth, United States civil service commissioner, has anything to do with the house cleaning started by Commissioner J. W. Yerkes, cannot now be definitely learned. Commissioner Yerkes is not inclined to discuss the subject, but he intimates that some weak spots have been found in the internal revenue service, and that it is his intention to strengthen them. Whether charges have been made against any officials in Minnesota, or any other Northwestern state Commissioner Yerkes declines to say. When asked the question he said: "I have no desire to discuss the subject. So far as I know there will be no further changes in the force of special agents."

Civil Service Commissioner Greene left for the West Tuesday. He will be in St. Paul on Saturday and will later go to Duluth. Commissioner Greene has just returned from the South, having looked into the charges of partisan appointments in the internal revenue service, as well as charges to the effect that political assessments have been made by officers in the service.

Mr. Greene said that his work in the Northwestern states would be similar to what he had done in the South, although he took occasion to correct the report that specific charges had been preferred against internal revenue officials in Minnesota.

TWO HUNDRED MILLION DOLLARS

was the amount of the Duluth Jobbing and Manufacturing trade of last year. There must be a reason for it. A reason that has changed in twenty years the outpost of Northwestern civilization to a jobbing center that is supplying the wants of Duluth is the Gateway to the West. Duluth Has Unrivaled Transportation Facilities.

How then with the business ability, push and hard common sense of the Duluth jobber and Western retailer can Duluth avoid attaining in time the proud eminence of

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Town of Antler Will Have Train Service In Few Days.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Antler—The Great Northern railroad track was built into town this week and the sidetracks are being rapidly completed. Train service with a temporary caboose station will be a reality in two or three days. Antler is the new terminus of the Rugby branch. Its natural environments are admirable for a town situated as it is on a hill thirteen and a half miles from Westhope, seventeen miles from Sherwood, twenty-six miles north of Mchall, four miles east and two miles south of the boundary. Furthermore, it is but one and one-quarter miles south of the famous Schells Grove picnic grounds on Antler creek, where all the important outdoor meetings take place from the surrounding country within a radius of sixty miles. Although less than two months old and with no transportation facilities, except the lumber wagon, the place has two lumber yards, two general stores, two poolrooms, two restaurants, a hotel, bank, printing office, meat market, barber shop, furniture store, hardware store, physician and preacher. Plenty of good water is to be had at a depth of eighty feet.

Harvesting will begin in earnest the latter part of the week. The prospects for the largest crop of high grade small grains could not be bettered. A conservative average estimate made by the farmers of the vicinity is oats 75 bushels an acre, barley 40, affix 20 and wheat 25. No rust or smut.

Fargo—Divine services in a printshop seems rather strange, but Bishop Mann of the Episcopla church in this state reports having held services in the building used by the McLean County Gazette at McClusky. He found members of his faith there, but owing to the limited number of buildings in town there seemed to be no place for services until Editor Potter offered the use of his building. There are three newspapers in the state conducted by former preachers, who are generally said by the rest of the newspaper fraternity to have "reformed."

Grafton—The contract for the construction of the septic tank and sewer to connect with the institution for the feebleminded of this city was awarded to the Symms-Powers company of Sioux Falls, at $7,500. The sewer and tank, including site, will cost $9,000, of which the city of Grafton pays $2,000 and the state the remainder.

Clyde—A state bank has been incorporated with David H. Beecher, John W. Ogreen, Grand Forks; Bert Winter, Minneapolis, and N. D. Felton, Hannah, incorporators.

Aisen—F. H. Wellcome, Minneapolis; David Beecher, J. W. Ogreen, Grand Forks, and M. D. Felton, Hannah, have incorporated a state bank here.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—Miss Tillie Sallor, aged 30, is held to await the action of the circuit court in the sum of $300 on the charge of threatening the life of her brother-in-law, Martin Kuehnle, a cigar manufacturer. She came here a short time ago from Montana, and is apparently mentally unbalanced.

Leslie Neumen, the 13-year-old son of A. Neumen, register of deeds, is in a serious condition from the result of the scalding he received last Friday. He is unable to sleep without the use of powerful opiates, but physicians think his chances for recovery are good. About one-third of the surface of his body is scalded.

Pierre—Frank Canton, a workman on the government building, fell about thirty feet, striking a steel beam and breaking his arm, being injured internally. His recovery is doubtful. This is the first accident in the work.

Rapid City—Those in charge of the Indian school are facing the vacation problem. A recent ruling by the United States commissioner of Indian affairs was to the effect that the children attending the non-reservation schools should not be allowed to go home in the summer. This was because it was thought they would improve more rapidly than if they had opportunities to revert to the old life every summer. But the parents objected so seriously that the children were allowed one month. When the month was up the parents began to return with ther offsprings, but the Cheyenne river was high and many of them were detained here without sufficient food. The feeling is strong among the Indians that if they cannot have their children at home for the entire vacation season, they will not send them to school at all.

BEQUEST FOR HORSE.

Provided For In a Pittsburg Man's Will.

Pittsburg, Aug 16.—An amount sufficient to maintain and care for his favorite horse, "Ginger," is one of the bequests in the will of Robert D. McGonnigle, probated yesterday. The amount is left to the executors and it is directed that the horse shall never be ridden or driven except for necessary exercise. The entire estate is valued at a little over $30,000. McGonnigle, however, during his lifetime gave probably a million dollars to charity. He was found dead in his room a few weeks ago under circumstances indicating suicide. He had a few days before paid an undertaker for a first-class funeral, telling him to take charge of the arrangements when the time came.

THE RIFLE MATCHES

At Sea Girt, N. J., Will Be an Important Series.

At Least One Thousand Expert Marksmen Will Compete.

Washington, Aug. 17.—What will undoubtedly be the most important series of rifle matches ever held in the United States will take place at Sea Girt, New Jersey, from Aug. 24th to Sept. 9th inclusive. It will be a joint affair under the auspices of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, the National Association of America and the New Jersey Rifle association. A large number of teams and rifle clubs will be in attendance and it is expected that at least one thousand marksmen, expert with the United States army rifle, will compete for the various prizes. Advices to date show that the following teams will be interested in the National match: United States cavalry, United States navy, United States infantry, United States marine corps; and teams from the National Guard of the following states: Pennsylvania, Georgia, Massachusetts, South Carolina, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, California, Kansas, Nebraska South Dakota, Idaho, Utah, Deleware, New Jersey Connecticut, Maryland, New York, Vermont, Ohio, Mississippi, Maine, Florida, Wisconsin, Oregon, West Virginia, North Dakota, Washington and the District of Columbia. Teams from the Military academy at West Point and the Naval academy at Annapolis will also compete in this match. All the above teams will probably compete in the match for the Dryden trophy which is in charge of the New Jersey State Rifle association.

To accommodate the visiting teams a street forty feet wide will be staked off, beginning in the rear of the 1,000 yard firing point and extending west. Each state will be assigned five conical wall tents and two wall A tents, their positions being in the order of the states' admission to the Union, beginning on the right. On the left will be the affiliated clubs of the National Rifle association and on their left will be the camp of the battalion of the Twenty-third infantry which will be in attendance to mark and score. The camp of the range officers will be near the clubhouse.

The executive officer of the meeting will be General W. P. Hall, U. S. A., one of the members of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice. The post adjutant will be Capt. Rhodes of the general staff, while Lieut. Albert S. Jones, secretary of the National Rifle association and two army officers will act as statistical officers. Capt. Alvin H. Graff, First regiment New Jersey National Guard, will act as post quartermaster, and Capt. Hof, as ordinance officer.

The meeting will not be lacking in social features. A majority of the members of both the senate and house committees on military affairs have signified their intention of being present and numerous other guests are expected, many of whom will be accompanied by ladies. The senators and representatives will be quartered at the Beach house, a comfortable hotel adjoining the grounds. The state of New Jersey maintains a summer cottage for the governor at Sea Girt and Governor Stokes and his staff will be there during the meeting. A full military band will be in attendance which will give two concerts daily in a large marque tent near the clubhouse, one during the noon hour and the other during the evening. As Sea Girt is only a few miles from Asbury Park, Ocean Grove and numerous other watering places along the coast, a large number of visitors are expected. The rifle teams will arrive on the 19th and 20th. This will enable them to get some preliminary practice on the 21st, 22nd and 23rd and two additional days' practice as individuals by entering the National Individual match which will be shot on the 24th and 25th.

One of the most interesting features of the meeting will be the contest between th affiliated rifle clubs for the inter-club championship of the United States. There are now seventy-five rifle clubs affiliated with the National Rifle association and probably half of these will be represented in this match. It is expected that there will be not less than 500 enteries in the president's match for the individual championship of the United States. This match is open to all members of the army, navy, marine corps, naval reserve and state militia, or national guard. The winner will hold the military championship for one year and will receive the championship medal accompanied by an autograph letter from President Roosevelt A prize of $50 goes with the above and there are seven other cash prizes in this match. The recognition accorded this match by President Roosevelt has made it of as much importance in this country as the king's match is in England, which was attended this year by King Edward who personally presented the medal to the winner.

Another interesting feature will be the cadet match shot for the first time. After much effort the national board secured teams from Annapolis and West Point and teams from Princeton and Cornell have also entered. The winning team will hold the "cadet cup" presented by the National Rifle association, for one year. There are no cash or individual prizes in this competition which is strictly between universities. It is hoped this contest will evoke as much friendly rivalry between the schools that rifle clubs will be formed at most of the leading universities and the contest grow in interest from year to year. The range at Sea Girt has been placed in perfect condition and although there will be twice as many teams competing as ever before, no trouble is anticipated.

WITHOUT BAIL

Marsh Is Held By the Police of Brockton.

Brockton, Mass., Aug. 16.—George L. Marsh, who is said to be wanted in Chicago for murder, in police court today was ordered committed without bail on a charge of being a fugitive from justice, to which he pleaded not guilty, and hearing was ordered for Aug. 19. He was also charged with a statutory offense, pleaded not guilty, and on this was held for hearing on the same date in $500 bonds.

WHOLESALE DESERTIONS

Soldiers at Fort Snelling Object to Manual Labor.

St. Paul, Aug. 16.—(Special to The Herald.)—A wholesale desertion of privates from the army post at Fort Snelling was reported at army headquarters here today when it was announced that about fifty privates had quietly left the post without leaving their future address. The cause of the desertions is said to have been a disinclination on the part of the men to do manual labor.

The desertions occurred shortly after Aug. 1, when the men were paid.

The government recently purchased a large tract of land to extend the rifle ranges at the post and instead of hiring common laborers to do the work, impressed the privates to do the leveling and grading.

The strenuous job placed before the men and the hot weather, it is said, caused the men's patriotic spirits to wilt and they decamped. None have been apprehended.

FORT CHANYASKA.

Site Near Fairmont Located By Judge Cray.

Mankato, Minn., Aug. 16.—Judge and Mrs. Lorin Cray has returned from a week spent at one of the lakes near Fairmont. While there Judge Cray drove to Galena township and located the site of old Fort Chanyaska, which he helped to build in the early sixties while in the army.

He was able to find the spot in a field of oats on the Rosskopf farm, in section 36. The only indication left of the fort was a slight elevation of the ground. There was no timber in the vicinity when the fort was built, and it was constructed of sod. It was a small post, and was built as one of the chain of forts established by the government at intervals of fifteen miles along the Indian frontier, to serve as a check to raids by the redskins. The fort was named after a small lake a few rods west, using the Sisseton name. One of the Rosskopf boys presented Judge Cray with an iron spearhead which he plowed up a few years ago near the walls of the old fort.

NO INTEREST

Can Be Collected on Delinquent Railroad Taxes.

St. Paul, Aug. 17.—The state of Minnesota is not entitled to interest on $200,000 delinquent taxes collected from railroads, telephone companies and other corporations, according to an opinion filed by Assistant Attorney General Royal A. Stone.

Mr. Stone says that, in the absence of a specific statute to the contrary, taxes do not draw interest, no matter how long they may be delinquent. Mr. Stone says a tax is not a debt and therefore does not draw interest. Mr. Stone's opinion is addressed to Public Examiner P. M. Kerst, who sought to collect interest from several corporations.

THE BIRTH RATE

Shows Persistent Decrease In United States Since 1860.

Decline Greatest In the North and the West.

Washington, Aug. 17.—A study in the proportion of children in the United States was published by the bureau of the census today as Bulletin 22. This is a statistical discussion, written by Prof. Walter F. Willcox of Cornell university, and based upon data already published in the main reports of the twelfth census.

At the beginning of the nineteenth century the children under 10 years of age constituted one-third and at the end less than one-fourth of the total population. The decrease in this proportion began as early as the decade 1810 to 1820, and continued uninterruptedly, though at varying rates, in each successive decade. This of itself, however, is not enough to prove a declining birth rate, as the decrease may indicate merely an increase in the average duration of life and the consequent survival of a larger number of adults.

But by taking the proportion of children to women of child-bearing age, we are able to get a more satisfactory index of the movement of the birth rate. Between 1850 and 1860, the earliest decade for which figures can be obtained, this proportion increased. But since 1860 it has decreased without interruption. The decrease has been very unequal from decade to decade, but if twenty-year periods are considered, it has been very regular. In 1860 the number of children under 5 years of age to 1,000 women 15 to 49 years of age was 634; in 1900 it was only 474. In other words, the proportion of children to potential mothers in 1900 was only three-fourths as large as in 1860. One is thus led to the conclusion that there has been a persistent decline in the birth rate since 1860.

No attempt is made by the author of the bulletin to determine the probable causes of this decline. An extended argument by Gen. Francis A. Walker is given, suggesting that it is largely due to the influx of foreigners and the resultant shock to the population instinct of the natives. There is also presented a discussion at length by Dr. John S. Billings, pointing out what he considers the reasons for the decline. But Prof. Willcox, while agreeing substantially with Dr. Billings, does not express a definite opinion, claiming that the statistics of the United States are not sufficiently developed to afford a sound basis of judgment. He notes, however, that there has been a similar marked decline in the birth rate of Australia, where there has been no such torrent of immigration.

If this decline were due in large part to the influx of immigrants, we should expect it to be greatest in those sections of the country to which most of the immigrants have gone—greater in the North and West than in the South. It is found, in fact, that in the North and West there has been a more or less regular decline, while in the South the change has been less regular and the decline less marked. In 1850 the proportion of children to 1,000 women in the North and West was five-sixths of what is was in the South; in 1900 it was less than three-fourths.

The states with an increase in the proportion of children in the decade 1890 to 1900 include all the Atlantic states, except Maryland, District of Columbia and Georgia, and also Alabama, Louisiana, Oklahoma and Nevada.

The two states with the largest proportion in 1900 were North Dakota and Indian Territory; the two states with the smallest were District of Columbia and Massachusetts. The proportion in Massachsetts was one-half of the proportion in North Dakota. In other words, in proportion to the number of women of child-bearing age, there were twice as many children in North Dakota as there were in Massachusetts.

Prominent People Discuss Various Topics With the President.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 16.—President Roosevelt entertained at luncheon today Baron Hengelmuller, the ambassador of Austria-Hungary, Senator Dryden of New Jersey, James M. Beck, formerly an assistant general of the department of justice; Charles H. Keep, assistant secretary of the treasury, and Robert Bridges, the author and magazine writer.

Senator Dryden and Mr. Beck are here to discuss insurance problems with the president. The former is president of the Providential Insurance company, and the latter one of the attorneys of the Equitable Life Assurance society. Assistant Secretary Keep, chairman of what is known as the Keep commission, appointed by the president to inquire into matters connected with government printing, came to Oyster Bay to lay before the president the result of the commision's inquiry into the affairs of the government printing office. The inquiry was made with special reference to the letting of a contract for the purchase of seventy-two type setting machines.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Town of Antler Will Have Train Service In Few Days.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Antler—The Great Northern railroad track was built into town this week and the sidetracks are being rapidly completed. Train service with a temporary caboose station will be a reality in two or three days. Antler is the new terminus of the Rugby branch. Its natural environments are admirable for a town situated as it is on a hill thirteen and a half miles from Westhope, seventeen miles from Sherwood, twenty-six miles north of Mohall, four miles east and two miles south of the boundary. Furthermore, it is but one and one-quarter miles south of the famous Schelis Grove picnic grounds on Antler creek, where all the important outdoor meetings take place from the surrounding country within a radius of sixty miles. Although less than two months old and with no transportation facilities, except the lumber wagon, the place has two lumber yards, two general stores, two poolrooms, two restaurants, a hotel, bank, printing office, meat market, barber shop, furniture store, hardware store, physician and preacher. Plenty of good water is to be had at a depth of eighty feet.

Harvesting will begin in earnest the latter part of the week. The prospects for the largest crop of high grade small grains could not be bettered. A conservative average estimate made by the farmers of the vicinity is oats 75 bushels an acre, barley 40, alfx 20 and wheat 25. No rust or smut.

Fargo—Divine services in a printshop seems rather strange, but Bishop Mann of the Episcopal church in this state reports having held services in the building used by the McLean County Gazette at McClusky. He found members of his faith there, but owing to the limited number of buildings in town there seemed to be no place for services until Editor Potter offered the use of his building. There are three newspapers in the state conducted by former preachers, who are generally said by the rest of the newspaper fraternity to have "reformed."

Grafton—The contract for the construction of the septic tank and sewer to connect with the institution for the feebleminded of this city was awarded to the Symms-Powers company of Sioux Falls, at $7,560. The sewer and tank, including site, will cost $8,000, of which the city of Grafton pays $2,000 and the state the remainder.

Clyde—A state bank has been incorporated with David H. Beecher, John W. Ogreen Grand Forks; Bert Winter, Minneapolis, and N. D. Felton, Hannah, incorporaters.

Alsen—F. H. Wellcome, Minneapolis; David Beecher, J. W. Ogreen, Grand Forks, and M. D. Felton, Hannah, have incorporated a state bank here.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Aberdeen—Miss Tillie Sailor, aged 30, is held to await the action of the circuit court in the sum of $300 on the charge of threatening the life of her brother-in-law, Martin Kuehnle, a cigar manufacturer. She came here a short time ago from Montana, and is apparently mentaly unbalanced.

Leslie Neumen, the 13-year-old son of A. Neumen, register of deeds, is in a serious condition from the result of the scalding he received last Friday. He is unable to sleep without the use of powerful opiates, but physicians think his chances for recovery are good. About one-third of the surface of his body is scalded.

Pierre—Frank Canton, a workman on the government building, fell about thirty feet, striking a steel beam and breaking his arm, being injured internally. His recovery is doubtful. This is the first accident in the work.

Rapid City—Those in charge of the Indian school are facing the vacation problem. A recent ruling by the United States commissioner of Indian affairs was to the effect that the children attending the non-reservation schools should not be allowed to go home in the summer. This was because it was thought they would improve more rapidly than if they had opportunities to revert to the old life every summer. But the parents objected so seriously that the children were allowed one month. When the month was up the parents began to return with ther offsprings, but the Cheyenne river was high and many of them were detained here without sufficient food. The feeling is strong among the Indians that if they cannot have their children at home for the entire vacation season, they will not send them to school at all.

BEQUEST FOR HORSE.

Provided For In a Pittsburg Man's Will.

Pittsburg, Aug. 16.—An amount sufficient to maintain and care for his favorite horse, "Ginger," is one of the bequests in the will of Robert D. McGonnigle, probated yesterday. The amount is left to the executors, and it is directed that the horse shall never be ridden or driven except for necessary exercise. The entire estate is valued at a little over $80,000. McGonnigle, however, during his lifetime gave probably a million dollars to charity. He was found dead in his room a few weeks ago under circumstances indicating suicide. He had a few days before paid an undertaker for a first-class funeral, telling him to take charge of the arrangements when the time came.

THE RIFLE MATCHES

At Sea Girt, N. J., Will Be an Important Series.

At Least One Thousand Expert Marksmen Will Compete.

Washington, Aug. 17.—What will undoubtedly be the most important series of rifle matches ever held in the United States will take place at Sea Girt, New Jersey, from Aug. 24th to Sept. 9th inclusive. It will be a joint affair under the auspices of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice, the National Association of America and the New Jersey Rifle association. A large number of teams and rifle clubs will be in attendance and it is expected that at least one thousand marksmen, expert with the United States army rifle, will compete for the various prizes. Advices to date show that the following teams will be interested in the National match: United States cavalry, United States navy, United States infantry, United States marine corps; and teams from the National Guard of the following states: Pennsylvania, Georgia, Massachusetts, South Carolina, Rhode Island, Tennessee, Indiana, Michigan, Minnesota, Iowa, California, Kansas, Nebraska South Dakota, Idaho, Utah, Deleware, New Jersey Connecticut, Maryland, New York, Vermont, Ohio, Mississippi, Maine, Florida, Wisconsin, Oregon, West Virginia, North Dakota, Washington and the District of Columbia. Teams from the Military academy at West Point and the Naval academy at Annapolis will also compete in this match. All the above teams will probably compete in the match for the Dryden trophy which is in charge of the New Jersey State Rifle association.

To accommodate the visiting teams a street forty feet wide will be staked off, beginning in the rear of the 1,000 yard firing point and extending west. Each state will be assigned five conical wall tents and two wall A tents, their positions being in the order of the states' admission to the Union, beginning on the right. On the left will be the affiliated clubs of the National Rifle association and on their left will be the camp of the battalion of the Twenty-third infantry which will be in attendance to mark and score. The camp of the range officers will be near the clubhouse.

The executive officer of the meeting will be General W. P. Hall, U. S. A., one of the members of the National Board for the Promotion of Rifle Practice. The post adjutant will be Capt. Rhodes of the general staff, while Lieut. Albert S. Jones, secretary of the National Rifle association and two army officers will act as statistical officers. Capt. Alvin H. Graff, First regiment New Jersey National Guard, will act as post quartermaster, and Capt. Hof, as ordinance officer.

The meeting will not be lacking in social features. A majority of the members of both the senate and house committees on military affairs have signified their intention of being present and numerous other guests are expected, many of whom will be accompanied by ladies. The senators and representatives will be quartered at the Beach house, a comfortable hotel adjoining the grounds. The state of New Jersey maintains a summer cottage for the governor at Sea Girt and Governor Stokes and his staff will be there during the meeting. A full military band will be in attendance which will give two concerts daily in a large marque tent near the clubhouse, one during the noon hour and the other during the evening. As Sea Girt is only a few miles from Asbury Park, Ocean Grove and numerous other watering places along the coast, a large number of visitors are expected. The rifle teams will arrive on the 19th and 20th. This will enable them to get some preliminary practice on the 21st, 22nd and 23rd and two additional days' practice as individuals by entering the National Individual match which will be shot on the 24th and 25th.

One of the most interesting features of the meeting will be the contest between th affiliated rifle clubs for the inter-club championship of the United States. There are now seventy-five rifle clubs affiliated with the National Rifle association and probably half of these will be represented in this match. It is expected that there will be not less than 500 enteries in the president's match for the individual championship of the United States. This match is open to all members of the army, navy, marine corps, naval reserve and state militia, or national guard. The winner will hold the military championship for one year and will receive the championship medal accompanied by an autograph letter from President Roosevelt. A prize of $50 goes with the above and there are seven other cash prizes in this match. The recognition accorded this match by President Roosevelt has made it of as much importance in this country as the king's match is in England, which was attended this year by King Edward who personally presented the medal to the winner.

Another interesting feature will be the cadet match shot for the first time. After much effort the national board secured teams from Annapolis and West Point and teams from Princeton and Cornell have also entered. The winning team will hold the "cadet cup" presented by the National Rifle association, for one year. There are no cash or individual prizes in this competition which is strictly between universities. It is hoped this contest will evoke as much friendly rivalry between the schools that rifle clubs will be formed at most of the leading universities and the contest grow in interest from year to year. The range at Sea Girt has been placed in perfect condition and although there will be twice as many teams competing as ever before, no trouble is anticipated.

Senator Dryden and Mr. Beck are here to discuss insurance problems with the president. The former is president of the Providential Insurance company, and the latter one of the attorneys of the Equitable Life Assurance society. Assistant Secretary Keep, chairman of what is known as the Keep commission, appointed by the president to inquire into matters connected with government printing, came to Oyster Bay to lay before the president the result of the commision's inquiry into the affairs of the government printing office. The inquiry was made with special reference to the letting of a contract for the purchase of seventy-two type setting machines.

When it was announced that the contract had been let to the Lanston company, the officials of the Mergenthaler company made a protest to President Roosevelt. He directed that the contract be held up until the whole subject could be investigated, and then gave directions to the Keep commission to conduct the inquiry. The investigation occupied many days, voluminous testimony being taken. The conclusions of the commission were contained in the report filed today by Mr. Keep with the president.

INTENTIONAL DUPLICATE EXPOSURE

Heir to the BLACK DOUGLAS

NORTH CORRIDOR of MARBLE HALL

THE EARL of WEMYSS

THE OLD HOUSE of GOSFORD AND THE NEW, FROM THE EAST.

THE COUNTESS of WEMYSS

History and romance contain no more attractive race than the family of the Black Douglas, who, long before the days of Wallace and the Scottish chieftains, battled against the English kings for the freedom of the Scot's country. To this very day, enclosed in a gold casket, the heart of the Black Douglas is worshiped as a sacred relic. A world of romance naturally surrounds the stalwart, but grey-haired Scottish earl who stands today the last of the race of the Black Douglas. The blood that runs through Douglas, Earl of March and Earl of Wemyss, is recognized by the German prince who now rules in England, because of his relationship to the ill-fated Stuarts, as even more aristocratic than that which flows in the royal veins of King Edward the Seventh.

The royal family frequently journey to the historical seat of the Douglas, where in his own ancestral halls the twentieth century heir to the romance and estate of the Clan of Douglas still rules over the Lothian Hills, where the Black Douglas hundreds of years ago gathered his followers and marched to many a bloody battlefield. The head of the house of Douglas is the most aristocratic of the aristocrats, whose blood and race antedate that of every king or emperor in Europe, except the Hapsburgs, who still rule a remnant of their old empire from their Austrian capital, Vienna.

Ancient Home of the Black Douglas

Ten miles of private railroad tracks lead to the bare wind-swept junction of Longniddry, in the Cheviot Hills, close to the shore of the Firth, and just on the southern verge of the extensive and lovely woods surrounding the Douglas palace. Down from the railway platform and striking straight north towards the coast, a few hundred yards brings us quite unexpectedly before the great western gateway of Gosford Castle, an imposing pile that at once seizes the mind and prepares the eye for the noble architectural features of the mansion more than a Scot's mile beyond its portal. "Je Pense Forward" we read above its main arch. The legend is a perpetual source of wonder to the wandering archeologist. It need not minimize the significance of the curious motto to learn that it is really not one motto, but two. "Je Pense" is the motto of the Wemyss, Earl of Wemyss, and "Forward" that of Douglas Earl of March. The walk of over a mile along the avenue is a rare treat to lovers of woodland.

Suddenly through a wide opening of wood looms up the southern front of the mansion. Let us look around before entering. Not such a trifling operation is it, for only when we move out of the magnificent western frontage do we realize the great extent of the building and its imposing setting. Everything is on the spacious scale, sweeping park and lawns, rolling masses of wood, far-extending architecture, piling in exquisitely proportioned design up to the crowning curve of the glittering dome. The eye wanders northward to the sea beyond the near coast line, then come to the low-whispering murmurs of the tide, then back to this noble pile, lonely in its greatness, silent amid its woods and by the sea.

It was in the semiruined pile of the old House of Gosford nearby that the Earls of Wemyss had their dwelling, after the purchase of the estate in the latter half of the fourteenth century by Francis, the fifth earl. A keen hunter, he found his fine mansion of Amisfield, several miles beyond Haddington, rather far away from the vicinity of Gosford. The story is a queer one altogether, for although he built the main portion of the present building at a cost of $5,000,000, he never inhabited it. It was all completed, and the priceless pictures hung in its spacious apartments, when a belief arose that, owing to sea sand having been used in its building, it was damp and unsuitable as a habitation for either human beings or art treasures. Back went everything to the old house of Gosford, and for 300 years the new house stood untenanted, until the present Earl succeeded in 1883.

Lord Wemyss has been long before the public eye. But here beneath his rooftree, amid his neighbors, in the midst of the local activities, always delighted to busy himself, we may see the Earl of Douglas as the public eye has no opportunity of seeing him. Eighty-seven years of age, with a clear eye, muscular wrist and a voice that could yet ring a command easily across one of the battalions he so long commanded. The vigor, the fire of the Celtic blood in his veins cannot be mistaken, and remind us that his race was of the best blood of Scotland right back to the days that lie shadowy on the very verge of history. In the political arena his service is far too long and varied to be more than brought to mind by a word. His military tendencies made him the creator of the volunteer movement in 1859—a movement in which he has never lost interest through all its changes.

Present Douglas a Born Fighter.

To understand something of the hold which Lord Wemyss has upon the county in which he is at once the most popular and venerable of figures one has to go far back among the years. How often that clear-cut, aquiline countenance has looked from the stormy hustings upon forgotten electoral battles fought with a vigor no longer understood. For no fewer than 36 years, from 1847 to 1883, when he succeeded to the title, he represented his native county in Parliament. Lord lieutenant of his country, he guided the largely untried bark with admirable skill, and only a year or two ago left the helm. As a chairman he was the joy of the busy member and the absolute extinguisher of the talkative man who loves to speak for speaking's sake. For him a long night of business has no terrors whatever. Members do not lounge in their chairs when, with swift stride and comprehensive sweep of the eye, he approaches the chair and picks up the billet with the quick swoop that is again suggestive of the eagle. The men settle to their notebooks, for there is no toying with pencils when the Earl presides. An old-time flavor is through it all, with a continual play of quip and humor, and occasionally an argument rapped home with a Scot's proverb given perfectly in the vernacular. A typical Scotsman, his wit has the bite of the winds of the North, and he has all the Celt's love of thinking for himself and "arguing the point." The old board of supervisors was to him an ideal enemy, with all its official circumlocution and red tape entanglement. "The Board of Supernumeries," he dubbed it, and the witty hit stuck to the board till it came to a respectable official finish.

There is no phase of activity in which the Earl does not take active interest. And with all this variety of effort and interest there is the figure, picturesque and revered, which the outside public loves—the figure that is the benefactor of his kind, the ready helper in every useful scheme for the good of those around him. An aristocrat of aristocrats, he is beloved of the humblest worker who toils in the red Lothian soil. Everywhere about Gosford Castle may be noted instances of his well-known care for the preservation and opening up of natural happiness. In the golfing world his popularity is unbounded for his sheer love of the game and the facilities he has afforded for its practice upon the ideal links lying along the shore of the Firth. Gosford Woods, to the north, quite close to the mansion, border upon the well-known golf links of the Kilspindie or Craigielaw, and here hit Lordship's figure is familiar in hodden gray and slouch hat, with a characteristic mixture of clubs ancient and modern, pursuing the flying ball with all the vigor of years he has left far behind.

With regard to art His Lordship's attitude is as keenly observant and discriminating as ever, in proof whereof stands his palatial home. With all this variety of taste, usually making for retirement from the busier, sometimes noisier, interests of life, there remains his intimate touch with the political world and the social demands of the life around him. After a recent visit of the Duke and Duchess of Connaught, the daughter and son-in-law of England's King—to Gosford the Earl drove several miles over to Haddington, where the agriculturalists of East Lothain were holding high festival over the centenary of their county agricultural society. There well toward midnight he delivered a fiery onslaught on the defects of the War Office and the attitude of the government toward the militia. It is this regard for the interests of those around him, the vital, genial connection with all that goes to make the life of the locality, that has won the last of the Douglas among his everyday neighbor the popularity he enjoys and an esteem which is largely mingled with personal affection.

A Palace of Art Treasures.

The architectural gem of the interior of Gosford is the celebrated Marble Hall. The exquisite creation comes before the visitor with all the effect of surprise. The most modest of entrance halls is crossed, a wide door opens, and instantly from the dim light of the hall you are transported into a fairy palace of marbles and alabasters, stairways and pillars, priceless canvasses and rich translucent colorings. It is truly a temple of the beautiful, where the old Greeks might have lounged and been satisfied. The title of the Marble Hall, by which it is known in England, is accurately descriptive, for no common stone finds place in it. It has all sprung as if from the lamp of Aladdin. Naught but the richest marbles, the rarest alabasters and other stones of hue and touch so exquisite and so wondrously sculptured, panelled and wrought together into a perfect whole that one can only wander slowly about and marvel. To even a name a fair proportion of these glories of ancient art would simply mean the writing of a catalogue. Corridors, staircases, apartment after apartment, in nooks, corners—everywhere hang examples of the skill of the immortal of the brush. How richly these time-mellowed panels of color glow in the light—strong faces and fair, saint and sinner, martyr, warrior, Virgin and Holy Child. Observe, too, what names are around us. Botticelli, Pollainolo, Pietro della Francesca, Masolino, Tibaldi, Spagnoletto, Correggio, Rubens, Titian, Raffaele, Vandyck, Rembrandt, Murillo, Tintoretto—is there any master of note whose easel has not furnished something to this harvest of the centuries?

The "Stuart Room" relieves the spell. Here portraits of the royal Stuarts are gathered, lustrous of eye, shapely of feature, centuries old in costume—the glorious line whose history is romance and their romance was history. What a world of tragedy is in their haunting faces! Minstrels sang and fields out of number were stricken for these shadows from long dead centuries. This singular apartment has a spell of its own, and one feels as if brocade would rustle and sword points jingle through the stillness. The loyalty of the very race that now owns this treasure-room carried their representatives into the battlefield behind the last of the Stuarts who struck blow on the soil of England and they shared in the tragic disaster which ensued. In the large salon is Murillo's magnificent "St. John," one of the greatest possessions of all art. The great corridors are especially rich in tapestries and comparatively small paintings. Surely the seat of the modern Black Douglas is worthy of that princely house and the coming American billionaire will covet this historic nest of nobility and romance to gild his millions with the escutcheon and titles of the double earldom of Douglas, Earl of March and Wemyss.

Marriage on Small Means.

Every sensible person knows that it is a foolish thing to marry in haste or without due regard to the future. You cannot marry on nothing, because the chances are strong against your happiness. Just how much you can marry on is another thing. Fear of poverty and hardship never stands in the way of an engaged couple who are honestly satisfied with each other. The passion for each other's society strengthens mind and will, and such obstacles as lack of means and misty prospects instantly vanish. The man has but to think of the woman he loves in order to be confident of accomplishing any purpose he may set his mind to. The woman is ready and willing to suffer anything for the sake of being in her hero's company.

What are a top back room, a supper of bread and cheese, a shabby suit and a light purse if one is supremely happy? They can be borne with laughter, relished and accepted day after day. It is only, perhaps, with a woman who means to be the spur to her husband's ambitions that a man can accept a top back room and bread and cheese. If he fears that she cannot be happy without a villa and rose trees it is not wise to take her into the back room, even if she is willing to go. The right sort of girl will go anywhere with the man she loves and accept any fare. And she will help him to make life a success.

Within the last 50 years Hamburg and the coast of Germany in its neighborhood has sunk five feet nine inches.

Unlucky Gateways.

There are many gates of triumph, ancient and modern, in the world, and Cambridge University, in England, owns, within the precincts of Gonville and Cais College, a Gate of Honor, but unlucky gates are not so well known. The unluckiest gate of which anyone has ever heard must surely be the Traitor's Gate of the Tower of London, for very few of those who enter by its gloomy portals ever emerge again, and then only after bitter captivity and agonized suspense. The Traitor's Gate is, or was, really the water gate of the Tower, the prisoners were generally brought this way by river as the safest route, the most secret and secure against rescue. That all or most of the unhappy prisoners who entered here were traitors or anything more than the unfortunate victims of mediaeval tyranny and caprice is unlikely, but from this especial use of the portal to the grim dungeons of that blood-stained keep first arose the name, by which the gate has so long been known, and, innocent of treachery or not, the prisoner, landed at the steps beyond the frowning arch, was greeted by the constable or the lieutenant of the Tower with the ominous "Welcome, traitor!"

Here Anne Boleyn was brought from that tournament at Greenwich, where she was suddenly arrested, and when the gates closed behind the barge which carried her there they shut her forever from the world. A little later her head fell beneath the ax on the Tower green. Modern men have dealt hardly with the romance of Traitor's Gate. Where the water once flowed the terrace of Tower Wharf shuts out the tidal Thames and the grim gate is now seen sunk in a dry well. In one of the severe restorations, from which every part of the historic Tower has suffered, even the storied stones of the steps leading up into the Tower have been removed and replaced by nice new ones, and the gates themselves were torn down and sold. They were purchased by that enterprising showman, P. T. Barnum, who had a more true appreciation of these Tower relics than their proper guardians, who thus so lamentably failed to guard. The existing wooden gates look very effective, but it will thus be seen that they are not so mediaeval as they seem.

The entrance to Saltwood Castle, near the Kentish town of Hythe, in England, has also always been considered illomened ever since the four knightly assassins of Thomas A. Becket halted here for the night on their way from France to Canterbury to kill the Archbishop in 1170; while at Canterbury itself the entrance to the "Dark Entry" has ever been considered supremely unlucky, for there, on Tuesday nights, the ghost of Nell Cook is, or was, supposed to wander, bringing death within the year to those who were unfortunate enough to see her.

There is a highly picturesque Old Tudor gateway looking out upon the road at Crich-Lowell, in South Wales, a gateway called Porth Mawr, which is Welsh for "Great Gates." It is the sole relic of the once beautiful mansion of Stag Court, a residence of the Herberts, a family formerly rich and powerful in those parts. The court itself has long been demolished, and strangers now occupy the modern mansion built on the spot where the mediaeval house once stood. The Herberts were, in the old days, always at war, or engaged in lesser quarrels with the neighboring Welsh squires, and their methods were not more gentle than those usually prevailing at the time. Thus it chanced that Sir John Herbert hanged a Welsh chieftain, and one Rhodri Ap Meredydd, who was especially beloved by his people, who assembled at the entrance to Cwrt Garw—which is the Welsh for Stag Court—and prayed all manner of curses down upon him and his. His family should become extinct in the third generation, the grass should grow on the spot where his proud mansion stood, and he himself should come to a sudden and violent end. Some of these prophecies have badly missed fire, for this was 400 years ago, and the Herberts, so far from becoming extinct, have risen to be Earls of Pembroke, and have become very great and wealthy landowners. Nor, in actual fact, has the grass grown on the site of Stag Court, but certainly Sir John Herbert himself ended suddenly at this very gate, for, as he was riding forth to hunt the stag or to harry the Welsh—which, we do not know—a heavy stone fell, or more likely was made to fall, on him from the battlemented gateway. It killed him on the spot, and so the ill luck of this particular portal is beyond question.

Lastly, the gateway of Exeter Castle, which is almost all that is left of the ancient fortress Rougemont recall the prophecy that, according to Shakespeare, haunted Richard III., and is likewise associated with misfortune. The allusion is in the play of "The Life and Death of King Richard the III.," and may be found in the fourth act. "Richmond," says the King,

"When last I was at Exeter,
The Mayor in courtesy showed me the castle,
And called it Rougemont; at which name
I started,
Because a bard of Ireland told me once
I should not live long after I saw Richmond."

And a little later he was defeated, and killed at Bosworth Field by the Earl of Richmon's partisans.

TOO MUCH RAIN IN THE NORTHWEST

Wheat Has Heavy Advance In Duluth and Minneapolis.

Wet Weather and Forecast For More Brings the Rise.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 17.—Rain in the Northwest and forecasts for more created a bull market today, the effect of which was felt the keenest in the Northwest, where the markets are more sensitive. In Duluth the advance was 1¾c and in Minneapolis 1¾-⅞c. Chicago and St. Louis were up ⅝-¾c, New York ⅜-½c and St. Louis ¾-⅞c. The Red River valley is complaing of too much rain and is beginning to talk damage. Predictions are made that if the rains do not soon cease a bull market of strong proportions may develop.

Liverpool closed ¼c higher, Berlin 1¾c higher and Budapest 1½c lower.

Minneapolis reports bids for flour as weak. Stocks in that city show a decrease of 575,000 bushels for five days.

Car receipts of wheat at Duluth were 7 cars against 78 last year and at Minneapolis 110 against 102 last year, making a total for the Northwest of 117 against 180 last year. Chicago received 106 against 103 last year.

Primary receipts of wheat were 672,000 bus, last year 783,000 bus. Shipments 635,000 bus, last year 491,000 bus. Clearances of wheat and flour aggregated 51,000 bus.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed unchanged to ⅛-¼c higher. Primary receipts of corn were 420,000 bus, last year 243,000 bus. Shipments 612,000 bus, last year 475,000 bus. Clearaces 124,354.

In the Duluth market trading in wheat was very dull, but prices were firm. The old September opened ¼c higher, at 84¾c and advanced steadily until the close, which was at 86¼c, a gain of 1¾c. The new September also closed 1¾c higher, at 82¼c.

Flax was dull and narrow, but showed a tendency to weakness. Weather conditions are not taken as having any very great effect on flax. October opened ¼c higher, at $1.14, fell to $1.13⅜, rallied ⅛c, and then fell off to $1.13¼ and closed there, a loss of ½c. November closed ¼c lower, at $1.13½ and September ½c lower, at $1.15.

Oats fell ⅛c and rye ½c.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—To arrive, new, No. 1 northern 90¼c; No. 2 northern, 86¼c. Durum, new, No. 1, 70c; No. 2, 69c; September, old, 86¼c; September, new, 82¼c. Flax to arrive, $1.20; on track, $1.18; August, $1.20; September, $1.15; October, $1.13½c; November, $1.13¼c; December, $1.12½c. Oats, to arrive, 26½c; on track, 26½c; September, 26¾c. Rye, September, 56c; August, 56c. Barley, feed, 36@40c.

Cars inspected—Wheat, 71; last year, 38; oats, 3; barley, 15; flax, 1; last year, 14.

Receipts—Wheat, 42,178; corn, 1,100; oats, 9,176; barley, 11,302; rye, 1,981; flax, 533.

Shipments—Wheat, 90,500; oats, 10,019.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Non-Appearance of Frost Gives Wheat Easy Tone.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Nonappearance of predicted frosts in the Northwest over night imparted an easy tone to the wheat market. Under free offerings by local longs September was off at the opening a shade to ⅛@¾c at 81⅞c to 82c, subsequently declining to 81⅝c. Scattered commission house demand, however, saved further loss, steadying the market at the lower level. Duluth, Minneapolis and Chicago reported receipts of 106 cars, against 103 cars a year ago.

Corn was easy in sympathy with the wheat tone. A continuation of excellent weather for the crop also contributed to the bearishness. September started with ⅛c loss at 53c and suffered a further decline of ⅜c. Local receipts were 250 cars, of which 140 graded contract grade.

A demand for cash and export trade in the December and May deliveries gave firmness to the oats market. September profited by the improved tone at the opening, which was ⅛c up at 26c. Local shorts and commission houses took offerings freely. Local receipts 230 cars.

A firm tone in the market for live hogs imparted a similar tone to provisions. September pork was up 12½c at $14.32½. Lard gained 7½c at $7.75. Ribs were up 7½c at $8.67½.

Wheat—Close—September, 82⅝@¾c; December, 84½c; May, 86⅞c. Corn—September, 53c; old, 53¼c; December, 44⅜@¾c; old, 46½c; May, 47¼@⅜c. Oats—August, 25¾c; September 26@⅛c; December, 27@⅜. Pork—September, $14.32½; October, $14.40; January, $13.15. Lard—September, $7.77½; October, $7.85; November, $7.60; December, $7.25; January, $7.22½. Ribs—September, $8.75; October, $8.85; January, $6.90. Rye—September, 58c; December, 58½@59½c. Flax—Cash northwestern, $1.16; southwestern, $1.06. Timothy—September, $3.60; March, $3.65. Barley—Cash, 39@46c. Clover—August, $12.75. Cash wheat—No. 2 red, 84@84¼c; 3 red, 83@84c; 2 hard, 83@91c; 3 hard, 81@85c; 1 northern, new, $1.05; 2 northern, new, $1; 3 spring, new, 85@95c. Corn—No. 2, 54½@¾c; 3, 54½c. Oats—No. 2, 25¾c; 3, 25c.

MINNEAPOLIS WHEAT.

Minneapolis, Aug. 17.—Close: Wheat—September, 86½c; December, 84⅜c; May, 87⅜c; 1 hard, $1.08½; 1 northern, $1.06½; 2 northern, $1.04½.

NEW YORK GRAIN.

New York, Aug. 17.—Close: Wheat—September, 87⅜c; December, 80½c; May, 91½c. Corn—September, 59⅜c; December, 51⅜c.

LIVERPOOL GRAIN.

Liverpool, Aug. 17.—Wheat—Spot, nominal; futures, steady; September, 6s 7⅝d; December, 6s 6¾d. Corn—Spot, easy; American mixed, 4s 10¾d; futures, steady; September, 4s 9½d; December, 4s 8½d; January, 4s 3¾d.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, Aug. 17.—Cattle—Receipts, 6,000; market steady to 10c up. Good to prime steers, $5.40@6.10; poor to medium, $4@5.25; stockers and feeders, $2.25@4; cows, $2.25@4.25; heifers, $2@5; canners, $1.25@2.10; bulls, $2.10@4; calves, $3@6.60; Texas-fed steers, $3.50@4.50; western steers, $3.50@4.75. THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Aug. 17.—The cotton market opened weak at a decline of 2@11 points. August showing the greatest loss under stop loss liquidation and bear pressure inspired by lower cables and apprehension as to the stability of southern holders. The weather map was not entirely favorable owing to continued dry, hot weather in Texas, and rains elsewhere. This attracted fresh support, and with smaller shorts covering, the market rallied to a net advance of 10@11 points by the middle of the morning. Liverpool also ruled after the local opening firm, and private cables were less bearish.

Cotton spot closed quiet, 10 points higher; midding uplands, 10.60; middling gulf, 10.85; sales, 215 bales. Futures closed steady; August, 10.32; September, 10.36; October, 10.52; November, 10.55; December, 10.63; January, 10.69; February, 10.73; March, 10.78; April, 10.80; May, 10.82.

ANTI-MASONIC PRAYER.

It was at the time of the anti-Masonic war which was raging throughout New England and the state of New York that President Finney of Oberlin college was the relentless leader, says the Boston Herald. In New England,' Parson B., pastor of the First Congregational church of Manchester, N. H., was well known as the most rabid and uncompromising champion of "antis."

It happened on a certain occasion that the Masons of New Hampshire and adjoining states were to hold a grand convocation in Manchester. There was, of course, a parade, followed by a public meeting at which men of note were to set forth the excellencies of the order, and to which the public was invited.

It had occurred to some one on the committee of arrangements that it would be a fine thing to invite Parson B. to be present and make the opening prayer. No one thought for a moment that he would accept, but he was duly waited upon and the invitation cordially extended.

The parson had a delightful flop in his speech. "Oh, yeth," he replied, "I should be pleathed to be prethent, and I thank you for the invitation."

The day for the gathering arrived. The populace had been charmed with the splendid parade. The largest hall in the city was crowded to the doors. The meeting was duly called to order and Parson B. formally introduced to "invoke the divine blessing."

Straightening himself up in all the dignity of his high calling, in solemn and impressive tones he prayed: "Oh, Lord, God, maker of heaven and earth! Thou knoweth all things. Thou knowetht this people. Thy thervant dothent know them. If there ith any good in 'em, bleth 'em—if ther ithent, curth 'em, Lord. Amen."

FOLLOWED ORDERS.

Back in the seventies the Knox & Lincoln railroad was built from Bath to Rockland, says the Boston Herald. Mr. White, the old stage driver over the same route, as kind a gentleman as ever lived, now gone to his reward, was made superintendent, or given the difficult position of making it pay, while the towns along were mortgaged heavily, its cost being $80,000 a mile.

Some green hands had to be employed. One coach car and the smoker made up a train. One day a green brakeman was instructed. The superintendent told him, among other things, that when the conductor called out the name of a place in the forward end of a car he must say the same at his end.

After passing the ferry at Woolwich the conductor announced the next stop, "Wiscasset."

"The same at this end," promptly added the brakeman.

HOW JAPS LEARN.

When the United States monitor Puritan was about to get away for the recent naval maneuvers a swarthy young fellow came up to Navigator Bleo and in the best of English asked for a job about the boat, says the Kansas City Journal. The navigator told him there was nothing for him to do, but the other said he didn't want any pay—would like to go along for the fun of it. So Bleo was taken on and through the maneuvers was one of the most industrious and observant of those aboard the boat. When the Puritan returned he shook hands and in a moment was gone. He was lost sight of and Bleo thought nothing more of the affable chap until recently, when he met the Japanese minister, Takahira, taking his usual afternoon auto spin. Beside him was a young man—the lad who scrubbed the decks of the Puritan. Then Bleo understood how Japan acquires her knowledge of what other nations do and how they do it.

IRREGULAR CLOSE

To the Stock Market But Majority Showed Advances.

United States Steel Common Made an Agressive Rise.

New York, Aug. 17.—Missouri Pacific led the opening advance in the stock market with a gain of 1¾. The strength in the market was general and the trading showed animation. Northern Pacific jumped 2 and Reading, Chesapeake & Ohio and Amalgamated Copper got up large fractions. Otherwise the gains were moderate.

Considerable stocks had to be taken before the advance was allowed to proceed, the realizing being notably heavy in eRading which fell back below yesterday's close. Atchison also sold under last night but both of these stocks subsequently climbed vigorously when the advance was in full swing again. The Southwesterns, southern and metal stocks derived the most benefit from the buying, but there was a substantial rise also in some of the other standard stocks. Great Northern prefered ose 2½, Missouri Pacific 2¼, Pacific Mail 2, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo 1¾ and Union Pacific, Atchison preferred, C. & O., L. & N., Atlantic Coast Line, D. & H., Cleveland, C. C. & St. Louis, Mexican Central, Copper, the Locomoitve stocks, Sloss-Sheffield Steel, Biscuit, American Agricultural, Chemical and Corn Products preferred 1 to 1½.

Prices ultimately gave way. St. Paul, O. & W., and a number of the Eastern railroad stocks receded to a fraction below last night, Kansas & Texas preferred dropped 1¾, Duluth, South Shore & Atlantic 1, Lead 1½, Allis-Chalmers 1¼, and the preferred 1¾. Colorado Fuel preferred sold at a decline of 15 points. United States Reduction rose 2⅜, the preferred 3. Corn Products 1, the preferred 3¼. Pacific Coast 1, the second preferred 2 and Reading second preferred 1½. Great Northern preferred rose ½ and the market steadied and became quieter at noon. Bonds were firm.

The spirited buying and selling of the forenoon was succeeded by a dull and irregular market. Most changes in the recognized leaders were of little import aside from a temporary spurt in Erie which carried it up nearly a point to 40¼, a record figure. Locomotive preferred gained 2¼, and Detroit United Railway 2. Northwestern fell off 1¾ and Havana Electric preferred 1. Great Northern preferred sold at 321½.

Reawakened interest in iron and steel groups was reflected in advances of between 1 and 1⅝ in the Republic Steel stocks, Tennessee Coal and Colorado Fuel and 2 in Sloss-Sheffield. The United States Steel stocks were unresponsive. Talk of the lead merger accounted for the liquidation of National Lead, which sold down 3 points to 43¾. Very little was done with the railroad section, the general speculation in the standards being tame and uninteresting. Evansville & Terre Haute moved up 2, United States Realty 3, and Rutland pfd 4 points.

The United States Steel stocks made a belated rise and Reading touched 113. United States met a block of 12,000 shares at 37 and there was further selling at that price before an additional advance of ⅛ could be made. The Locomotive stocks rose 3 and General Electric 3¼ and Long Island, American Car and Pressed Steel Car 1.

Illinois Central fell 1½, Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred and Atlantic Coast Line 1, and Allis-Chalmers preferred 2¾. Pressure to realize again carried a number of conspicuous stocks back to below last night. In the late dealings Great Northern preferred sold at $3.26. United States Steel advanced aggressively to 37⅛ and Union Pacific rose 1. There were some belated rallies in sympathy but the closing was rather irregular.

WERE HEAVY DRINKERS.

What Those of Yore Used to Consume.

The minister's ordination of old was an important social event, says Bonport's Wine and Spirit Circular. It was always celebrated by a great gathering of people from far and near, including all the ministers from every town for many miles around, and, though a deeply religious service, was also an excuse for much merriment.

An "ordination ball" was frequently given. A letter of invitation is still in existence, written by Rev. Timothy Edwards, who was ordained in Windsor in 1694; it was written to Mr. and Mrs. Stoughton, asking them to attend the ordination ball, which was to be given in his house.

There was always given an ordination supper—a plentiful feast, at which visiting ministers and the new pastor were always present, and partook with true clerical appetite. This ordination feast consisted of all kinds of New England fare, all the mysterious compounds and concoctions of Indian corn and "pompions," all sorts of roast meats, "turees" cooked in various ways, gingerbread and "cacks" and a liberal amount of cider, punch and grog was also supplied, which latter compound beverages were often mixed on the meeting house green, or even in the punch bowls on the very doorsteps of the church.

It gives one a strange sense of the customs and habits of the older time to read an "ordination bill" from a tavern keeper, which is thus indorsed: "This all paid, except the minister's rum."

Rev. Mr. Smith, who was settled in Portland in the early part of the eighteenth century, wrote thus in his journal of an ordination which he attended: "Mr. Foxcroft ordained at New Gloucester. We had a pleasant journey home. Mr. L. was alret and kept us all merry. A jolly ordination. We lost all sight of decorum." The Mr. L. referred to was Stephen Longfellow, great grandfather of the poet.

One of the most amusing "ordination bills" is this of the Beverly church in 1755, when Rev. Joseph McKean was ordained:

30 Bowls of Punch before the People went to Meeting	3	..	..
80 People eating in the morning at 16d each	6	..	..
10 Bottles of Wine before they went to meeting	1	..	..
68 Dinners at 3s each	10	4	..
44 Bowles of Punch while at dinner	4	8	..
8 Bottles of Wine	2	14	..
8 Bottles of Brandy	1	2	..
Cherry Rum	1	10	..
6 People Drank Tea			6

Now, some of these "people" were women, who would not have joined in the public drinking, so it is certainly evident that all the parsons and deacons had had a bowl of punch or a bottle of wine before they "went to meeting." And certainly the sixty-eight diners had a goodly amount of liquor, for cherry rum was very cheap at that time, and £1 10s would have bought a large amount. The six economical tea drinkers, with their penny cups of tea, seem to giev a really comic finale to the whole bill.

The church-raising was another great event in church and town. Each citizen was forced by law to take part in or contribute to "raring the meeting hows." Each male inhabitant supplied to the new church a certain "amount of nayles." Logs and lumber and the use of horses and men's labor were given, and a contribution was also levied for the inevitable barrel of rum and its accompaniments.

No wonder that accidents were frequent and that men fell from the scaffolding and were killed, as at the raising of the Dunstable meeting house. When the Medford people built their second meeting house they provided for the workmen and bystanders five barrels of rum, one barrel of good brown sugar, a box of fine lemons and two loaves of sugar. Two-thirds of the frame fell and many were injured.

In Northampton, in 1738, ten gallons of rum were bought for £8 "to raise the meeting house"—and the village doctor got "£3 for Jonathan Strong setting his bone and £3 10s for setting Ebenezer Burt's thy," which, somehow, through the rum or the raising, were both broken. Sometimes, as in Pittsfield, in 1671, the sum of four shillings was raised on every acre of land in the town and three shillings a day were paid to every man who came early to work, while one shilling a day was apportioned to each worker for his rum and sugar.

Our ancestors did not love the liquors which we drink today; they had a great sweet tooth and loved sweet wines and sweetened drinks and even did not care always for champagne. English folk drank the sweet wines of Spain and Portugal; among these sack was the favorite. Sack was a sweet sherry.

"When our grandfathers drank canary they coldly called it canary, its rightful name, but when they spoke of "drinking a bottle of wine"—they rose to metaphor—they always meant port. They bought port by the hogshead, bought it with infinite caution and care; they had it bottled with unstinted pains; they laid it down with solemn satisfaction.

They talked lovingly but with reverent solemnity about their cellars and knowingly about body, warily about beeswing and affectionately about bouquet. They told stories of wonderful port they had tasted and accounts of still more wonderful port that they had once owned. They looked forward as to the event of a lifetime to dining with a certain man renowned for his port. It deserved their love. They tolerated claret, had a decent regard for canary, but they loved port. It deserved all the honor and reverence they paid it, for without doubt port is the king of wines.

Small account was taken at a feast of any one who counted glasses, but a man might count bottles. Philip Francis tells, not as recounting an unusual feat, of two friends who drank a gallon and a half of champagne and burgundy at a single sitting. "I am told," said the king severely to a court follower, "that you love too much a glass of wine." "They have told you falsely," was the answer; "I love a bottle."

William Pitt, at the age of 14, was a terrible sufferer from gout and the doctors ordered two bottles of port a day. This he did for several months, regained his health and kept it till he was killed at 47 by the mortal blow of Austerlitz. Sir Gilbert Elliott wrote of Pitt and other Londoners thus in April, 1787:

"Men of all ages drink abominably. Fox drinks what I call a great deal, though he is not reckoned to do so by his superior. Sheridan drinks excessively and Gray more than any of them, but all in a much more gentlemanly way than our Scotch drunkards and it is accompanied with lively, clever conversation on all matters of importance. Pitt drinks as much as anyone."

Pitt was a "six-bottle man;" Brinsley, Sheridan, Lord Chancellor Eldon, Lord Stowell, Prof. Porsen, could each drink six bottles at a sitting, and often did so. The previous generation drank as deeply. Frederick Reynolds write: "A man who drew the line at the third bottle was deemed little better than a milksop." Dr. Johnson told Boswell that he remembered the time when every decent man in Litchfield got drunk every night.

In the statistics of the sale of liquor in great cities some notion can be had of the amount of liquor drunk. Making ample allowance for all contingencies and unusual effects, it is said that in England in the year 1742 the sale of liquors to adult persons allowed 12 gallons a head annually. In Scotland the amount was practically unreduced, while in Ireland it was about six gallons to a head. It is known to all students of economics that more liquor is consumed in Scotland by the adult population than in any other country.

In two ways is the change in the drinking habit marked today. First, in the accompaniments of the drinking. In olden times the chief drinking seemed to have been done at night, not during work hours; wealthy men met at dinner for their bottles of port and plainer folk gathered in taverns or coffee houses and clubrooms.

They met every night, and over their pipes and hot grog they sang together old catches, glees, balads and drinking songs, of which we have such fine examples in the English tongue. The sounds of the "whack-fol-de-rol" chorus poured forth all over England every night, and America, too, from every tavern, chimney and open door. There were always plenty of songs with that sort of chorus which every man could join in, in that wonderful good fellowship which comes from singing together even more than drinking together.

You can hear these songs occasionally today on the stage where they always stir with pleasure the senses of all those who hear them. But—so I am informed—these songs are no longer known and no longer sung in modern barrooms. Certainly they are not joined in by all present.

The second great change is the temperature and the composition of the drinks. In early days the drink was always hot and generally it was spiced and sweet, hot grog, hot flip, hot toddy, hot punch, rum shrub, mulled ale, hot bishop, hot copus, down to the feeble sangaree and negus. All of these are seldom called for; many are as obscure as hypocras or saloop.

Today there is a general taste for cold drinks, chilled with profuse ice and weakened with mineral water and soured with lemon, and in songless silence we hold and hurriedly drink a frigid health to the good old times.

VERY LOW RATE

Cargo of Rye Goes Forward at Small Freight Charge.

Line Boats Won't Take Wheat at Under Two Cents.

Vessel rates were in rather a peculiar condition this morning. A charter of rye was made at 1⅞c, which is on the basis of 2c for wheat, and a charter of flax, which takes the same rate as wheat, was made at 1¾c. The flax charter was for a boat that has been lying here waiting for a cargo of ore, and has been unable to get it.

Line boats claim they will not take wheat at less than 2c.

As far as can be learned there is nothing doing in chartering for new crop shipment. For the first half of September tonnage is offered at 2c.

THE HANCOCK SUNK.

Survey Boat Struck By Freighter Binghampton.

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 17.—The United States lake survey boat Hancock was sunk in Lake St. Claire yesterday about two miles north of the Grosse Pointe lightship. No lives were lost.

T. S. Wheeler, assistant chief United States engineer, was on board the Hancock making soundings for the proposed 25-foot channel. The Hancock was crossing the channel when the package freighter Binghampton of Buffalo, bound up, struck her bow and damaged the Hancock so seriously that she sank in two minutes. The officers and crew escaped in life boats. The Hancock is 100 feet long and is five years old. She will probably be raised. Capt. Charles L. Wilson of Detroit, who was in command of the Hancock, said that he had exchanged port signals with the Binghampton.

Washington, Aug. 17.—The survey steamer Hancock which was sunk yesterday in Lake St. Clair was employed in the engineer department of the army on work in St. Mary's, St. Clair and Detroit rivers and Lakes St. Clair and Huron.

She was a wooden vessel of 140 tons, built in 1900 at Saugatuck, Mich., at a cost of $8,000. The war department has not received a report of the accident.

PIG IRON IS QUIET

The Steel Corporation Will Not Buy Until September.

Some Moderate Movement In Basic Pig In the East.

New York, Aug. 17.—In pig iron, the week has been rather quiet, taking the country as a whole, says the Iron Age. Purchases by the United States Steel corporation will probably not be made until early in September. In the East there has been a further moderate movement in basic pig, on interest taking 10,000 tons at a concession, while another buyer took 4,000 tons in addition to previous purchases of 8,000 tons. In the Pittsburg districts a leading maker of cast iron pipe has bought 10,000 tons of gray forge pig, while in the Chicago district one foundry is in the market for 65,000 tons.
In the East there has been a little wavering as to prices, one large producing company offering iron at somewhat lower figures.
Steel billets are scarce, and the situation is rather acute, particularly in the Chicago district. At some points accessible to tidewater, small lots of foreign billets have been sold.
Orders for steel rails for 1906 delivery continue to roll in to the works. The Harriman roads have just placed 75,000 tons. It is not known whether this system accepted offers for Pacific coast delivery made by works in Eastern Germany, who are not associated with the other German mills.
The pressure on the structural mills is exceedingly heavy, and the payment of premiums for the prompt delivery and the importing of occasional lots of foreign shapes seems to foreshadow an upward movement.
During the week car builders have gathered in additional work. It is expected that an order for 12,000 steel cars will be in hand either this week or early next week.
In nearly all the heavy lines, the tonnage on the books is enormous, and further work can not be taken in many instances from sheer inability to meet even distant deliveries.
In the lighter lines, the most important development is that a heavy buying movement has set in all along the wire trade. The tonnage in sheets too, is picking up but the merchant pipe trade is afflicted with sharp cutting of prices.
In bars, the agricultural implement makers and other consumers who contract for their requirements for six months and a year ahead, have now pretty well covered. The aggregate tonnage has been very large.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Rooney Must Be Hanged By Prison Warden on Oct. 17.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—The execution of John Rooney, the murderer, is a task that Warden Boucher of the state penitentiary is not contemplating with pleasure. Rooney will be the first condemned man to be executed in the state prison. Former murderers were hanged by the sheriffs in the counties in which the crimes occurred.
Rooney was convicted of the murder of Harold Sweet of White Earth, Minn., in Fargo. He appealed to the supreme court of this state and to the United States supreme court, also to the state board of pardons, but there was no escape from the extreme penalty. His execution is set for Oct. 17. Warden Boucher feels that it would have been more humane if the legislature had enacted a measure providing for electrocution. He will soon have a gallows erected in the state prison.
Rooney is held in close confinement, but will soon be placed in solitary confinement with guards before his cell day and night. He has attempted suicide on several occasions, and has frequently boasted that he would cheat the gallows.
Warden Boucher says the penitentiary is greatly overcrowded and cell room is badly needed. The hospital will soon be completed and several of the trustees will be placed there till more prison room can be provided.
There is such a demand for twine by the farmers of the state that Warden Boucher has kept the prison twine plant in operation and has advance orders for all that he can manufacture.
Rescued from the waters of the Mississippi river nearly twenty years ago when a child, Flood Purcell of Minneapolis is dying in a local hospital from his injuries caused by a fall from the courthouse roof to a concrete floor last week. His fellow workmen say that when a babe he was found floating down the Mississippi in a flood and rescued by Mr. and Mrs. George Purcell, who gave him the name of Flood and adopted him, rearing him as their own. Mrs. Purcell is here attending the boy, but physicians hold out no hope of his recovery.
Greeks, Turks and Syrians were participants in a cutting match here. Charles Morris, a Greek, and Albert Assil, a Turk, were partners in a fruit stand, but had dissolved that relation. Last night Assil went to the place where Morris roomed. He says he was attacked by Morris and Charles Sarcis, a Syrian, and drew a revolver and a butcher knife to defend himself. They assert that Assil attacked them. Both Morris and Sarcis were hurt.
Claiming that her tongue was too peppery, and that she also used profane language, Thomas D. Bishop was granted a divorce from his wife. They were married three years ago in Richmond, Ind. The mother secured possession of their two children.
After preaching here three Sundays the Presbyterian church has called Rev. Charles R. Adams of Kingston, Ind. He has accepted and will soon assume the pastorate, succeeding Rev. Edgar W. Day, who recently resigned to accept a call at Uniontown, Pa.
Officials at Buffalo arrested a stranger, who was acting in a peculiar manner. He cannot talk connectedly and keeps repeating statements about the Fergus Falls asylum, which leads the officials to believe he is an escaped patient from that institution or had formerly been an occupant there.

Devils Lake—Oliver N. and George Dion received $2,000 for nine acres through which the Soo railway was attempting to build its Thief River Falls-Kenmare line. It was a race between the crews and the brothers. The crew was ordered to stop work when they arrived at the Dion brothers farms, which adjoin each other. They did not stop, hence the brothers had to secure an injunction restraining them from continuing work. The Soo officials realized they were beaten and accordingly offered $222.22 an acre or $2,000 for the nine acres which the railroad took up in passing through the land.
Safe crackers entered the Webster postoffice in the dead of night and blew the safe. The work was evidently done by experts for nitro-glycerine was used. Stamps worth $200 and $80 in cash are missing. There is no clue so far.
The dead body of Elef Hegge was found in the road with his skull and body crushed to a pulp. Mr. Hegge started for home on Sunday night with a load of lumber. The horses arrived without him and a search was started and after midnight the body was found two miles from home. He must have died immediately as his head was crushed to a pulp. He was about 40 and was a wealthy farmer. He had a wife and four children.
The divorce suit of Ole Simonson against Rhoda Siminson was tried before Judge Fisk of Grand Forks, at Devils Lake. The original case was tried in 1892, when Simonson was granted a decree. His wife did not then appear. Last year Mrs. Simonson made application to the court to set aside the decree, claiming improper service. Judge Palda denied the motion for a new trial and it was taken to the supreme court. The decree was set aside by an opinion of Judge Fish. The case was tried on the grounds of cruel and inhuman treatment towards Mrs. Simonson and her children. Mr. Simonson is almost 60 and twenty-five years older than his wife, from whom he wanted separation. Judge Fisk has not yet made his decision.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Deadwood—About sixty Indians are encamped at Chautauqua Park just above this city, and are enjoying a holiday. They have some communication which as yet they have not disclosed, which they propose to lay before Congressman Martin.
Every year that the Indians come to Deadwood their degenerate physical condition is more noticeable. They are all victims of scrofula or tuberculosis. A few years ago the Indians who came here to attend court and for their annual powwows were a hardy-looking lot, but now even the children are infected with these terrible diseases, and it is a question as to whether it is wise for persons even to purchase the articles which they have made by hand. They are giving war dances and proving a source of interest to tourists.

Huron—Prof. Osgood has resigned as teacher in the high school and will become manager of a telephone line at Castlewood, S. D.
J. W. Campbell and wife and son have gone to Duluth, and from there will go to New York for a month's stay.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Young Man at Bessemer Instantly Killed By Falling Timber.

Bessemer—Andrew Asplund, a young married man of Bessemer, was instantly killed at the Yale mine by a falling timber in the shaft. Asplund was at the tenth level waiting for the skip to go down, and it failing to reach the level as soon as he expected, he looked up the shaft to see if it was coming. The skip had jumped the track above and a piece of timber, loosened by the mishap, struck him a blow on the head as he leaned over and hurled him to the bottom. A wife and two children survive.

Gladstone—Capt. P. L. Burt of Gladstone is confined to his bed in consequence of a serious accident met with in the performance of his marine duties. He had put his foot in the bight of the hawser which was attached to a raft; and as he stepped across the deck the cable tightened and twisted with a sudden jerk, catching him above the ankle, and breaking both bones of the leg so that they protruded through the skin. It was at first feared that the foot might be lost. The nature of the fracture will make it a hard injury to heal.

Daggett—Paul Ringstrom, the 14-year-old son of P. G. Ringstrom of Daggett, Menominee county was found dead in his bed. The boy was in his usual health in the evening, ate a hearty supper and retired early in order to be ready to go blueberrying in the morning. When Mr. Ringstrom called the boys in the morning one of them told him he had better come up, as Paul looked so queer. When he did he found Paul cold in death, he evidently having died early in the night. Kidney disease is believed to have been the cause.

Ironwood—P. C. J. Miller was thrown from his carriage at Ironwood as a result of the horse he was driving becoming frightened by the animal cages of the Gentry Bros. show. He was severely injured. Attorney Driscoll attached the company's entire outfit on behalf of his client, Mr. Miller, shortly after, and the show people settled the case, it is understood, by paying Mr. Miller $600.

Sault Ste. Marie—Marshall Frazer, grand president of the Brotherhood of Woodsmen, with headquarters at the Canadian Soo, has been convicted of violating the Ontario insurance act and sentenced to pay a fine of $200 or go to jail three months.
Frazer conducted sick and accidental benefit insurance, but failed to supply benefits when needed. He had no license, as required by law. Hundreds of woodsmen working in the Algoma district were his victims. He has also worked in Michigan.

Cooks—Patrick Kelly, a lumberman, fell from a load of hay, at the Fish Dam river, four miles from Cooks, near the Schoolcrafts-Delta county line, and by strinking his head against a log had his neck broken. He died instantly. William Garbett of Cooks, was going to Shay's camp with a load of baled hay and Kelly was riding out with him. Besides these two, Garbett's son, a lad about 9 years of age, was on the load. When crossing the Fish Dam river, the load tipped somewhat, Kelly was thrown to the ground and Garbett suffered a broken leg. The boy escaped without injury, the father throwing him into the river, which was very shallow. Kelly was aged 45, and was single.

Munising—L. W. Forney of Munising, reports an experience which he has no desire to repeat. He left town at daylight to go to Ardison's camp, near Five-Mile Point. When he had reached a point near the range lighthouse he heard the howls of wolves near by. Mr. Forney is an old woodsman and is not easily frightened, but when he heard the wolves he quickened his steps. Before he reached old Bay furnace he found that the brutes were on his track. They rapidly closed up on him and one of the wolves came up to within eight feet of him. There were six or seven in the pack, but they were lacking in courage to attack. The wolves followed him up to within sixty rods of the camp.

Unnecessary Expense.
Acute attacks of colic and diarrheoa come on without warning and prompt relief must be obtained. There is no necessity of incurring the expense of a physician's service in such cases if Chamberlain's Colic, Cholera and Diarrheoa Remedy is at hand. A dose of this remedy will relieve the patient before a doctor could arrive. It has never been known to fail, even in the most severe and dangerous cases and no family should be without it. For sale by all leading druggists.

DOG ATTACKS BOY.

Family Canine Bites For Hour —Boy May Die.

Norfolk, Neb., Aug. 16.—With the terrible teeth of a vicious yellow dog sunk over and over again for more than an hour into every portion of his young body, Willie Leasners, aged 10, of Oakdale, Neb., has lost one arm by mutilation thus far, and his life hangs in the balance as a result.
Sent into the cornfield to drive a herd of cattle back into their pasture from which they had escaped, Willie took a whip and the yellow dog of the farm as aids. Running along through the cornfield, without paying particular attention to his route, he stumbled and fell flat. As he went down the whip fell across the dog's head, and the animal, enraged at the stroke, turned on his young master, biting him wickedly and deep.
Not content with one bite, the dog continued his awful attacks for more than an hour, biting terribly every time the lad made a motion to get up. At length men driving along the road noticed the strange actions of the dog and investigated. In the field they found the mutilated form of the bitten boy, which they tore from the teeth of the dog with extreme difficulty.
Blood poisoning followed and the left arm was amputated yesterday.

CORTELYOU

May Become Secretry of the Treasury.

Washington, Aug. 17.—It is rumored that President Roosevelt has tendered the secretaryship of the treasury to George B. Cortelyou. Mr. Cortelyou, to the surprise of some of his close friends, is hesitating about accepting.
He knows the ins and outs of the postal service, as he grew up in that department. He feels that he can administer the affairs of the organization safely and hesitates about venturing into unknown fields, even though the move would place him nearer the head of the cabinet table and put him in touch with big financial interests.
It is said that if Mr. Cortelyou accepts the president's offer, Harry S. New of Indianapolis will be invited to enter the cabinet as postmaster general. The tender of the postmastership has not been made to Mr. New, nor will it be until Mr. Cortelyou has made up his mind; but there is good reason to believe that the president would like to have Mr. New in his official family.

HAD HIS DOUBTS.

Suspicious at First, But Boyce Acknowledges the Truth Now.

"When I heard that a long Havana filled cigar of regular size, was being retailed in the East for a nickel, I did not think it could be possible," said S. F. Boyce to a Herald reporter. "If it could be done, I wanted to do it, and after a good deal of correspondence, I found that this cigar was made in Binghamton, and was called the Wadsworth Bros.' Chico.
"To make a long story short, I bought a small lot a short time ago, and today am having regular shipments of 5,000 at a time, to supply the demand that has grown up for this cigar. Our best smokers enjoy it, and I recommend every smoker to see how good the Chico is."

CLAIMS INDIAN BURYING PLACE

Frank Magnuson's Filing In Reservation Is Disputed.

In behalf of his charges, Rev. Father Roman Homar, missionary to the Indians, has filed a petition in the local land office asking that the claim of Frank Magnuson of Cloquet to certain lands in the Fond du Lac reservation be denied on the ground that the land is the Indians' church site and burying ground.
The petition is said to raise a question as to whether dead Indians can occupy land within the meaning of the circular letter of the commissioner of the land office, bearing date of May 12, 1884. The question arises through the filing by Magnuson of a claim on lot 5, section 10, 49-17, containing 13.4 acres.
Father Homar declares his belief that Magnuson made his filing for the sole purpose of defrauding the Indians of the church, parsonage and burying ground, and says the land, except for three-fourths of an acre, is useless for agricultural purposes, being on the slope of a steep hill.
The petition goes into some of the early history about the land under dispute and tells of the establishment of the church and the acquisition of other buildings which have been erected on the site. Nearly 300 Indians are said to be buried in the ground which Magnuson now seeks to claim.

DATE SET FOR ANNUAL PICNIC

Old Settlers Will Celebrate Their Event at Lester Park.

The annual picnic of the Old Settlers' association at the Head of the Lakes, will be held at Lester Park, Wednesday, Aug. 25. Arrangements for this event were made at a meeting of a committee yesterday, comprised of James Bardon of Superior and W. C. Sargent of Duluth.
Notices of the picnic will be issued to every member by Secretary W. S. McCormick. The association comprises 250 members, and it is expected that these will be largely represented at the park.
President Luther Mendenhall of the association says that the picnic will be an informal affair, at which everybody is to have a good time. Rev. F. Thomas, a prominent Chicago minister, who is spending his vacation in Duluth, is to address the association at its picnic.
The picnickers will gather at the Lester Park pavilion at noon, when lunch will be served. Music will be furnished by La Brosse Minnesota Naval Militia band.

KIDNAPED GIRL FOUND.

Was Stolen From Parents Eighteen Years Ago.

Norfolk, Neb., Aug. 16.—Kidnaped for eighteen years—since she was a wee tot 2 years old—a young woman in St. Louis, who recently wrote to Nebraska papers asking for information regarding herself, is about to be restored to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Mike Schainost at Gross, Neb.
Eighteen years ago the Schainost family lived in Brown county, near Ainsworth. A ranchman named Ormsby was a neighbor. Ormsby formed a peculiar attachment for the 2-year-old baby girl of the Schainost family. One night the little child disappeared and could never be found. A few days later Ormsby moved away.
No word of the missing child was ever heard until a day or so ago when a letter from a young woman in St. Louis, printed in this state, disclosed the fact that her story was decidedly similar to that of the missing girl. Mr. Schainost has gone in search of the daughter.

SECRET MARRIAGE

A Month Ago Surprises Citizens of Owatonna.

Owatonna, Minn., Aug. 17.—Owatonna citizens were surprised yesterday to learn that Miss Arenna B. Knobloch was married on July 5 at Mankato to Ralph Huyck. The bride, who is prominent in the younger social set at Owatonna, is the granddaughter of B. S. Cook, who on July 20 committed suicide by shooting himself. The marriage ceremony was performed by the judge of probate of Blue Earth county and the witnesses were clerks in that office. The bride left a few days ago with Huyck for Mason City.

Inflammatory Rheumatism Cured in Three Days.
Morton L. Hill, of Lebanon, Ind., says: "My wife had inflammatory Rheumatism in every muscle and joint; her suffering was terrible and her body and face were swollen almost beyond recognition; had been in bed for six weeks and had eight physicians, but received no benefit until she tried the Mystic Cure for Rheumatism. It gave immediate relief and she was able to walk about in three days. I am sure it saved her life." Sold by all druggists.

Race For Supremacy.

It is interesting to watch the race for supremacy among Minneapolis-St. Paul-Chicago trains. First place is securely held by the Pioneer Limited and the second place by the Fast Mail. Both trains are entirely owned by the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railway. There are three other fast trains via this line from the Twin Cities to Chicago every day, and there is no extra fare to ride on them. Address W. B. Dixon, Northwestern passenger agent, St. Paul, for further particulars, lowest rates, etc.

Are you willing to have a majority of the people look upon and think of your store exactly as it is pictured in your advertising—as being as big, comparatively, as the space you use, compared to the space used by your competitors; as being as enterprising as your advertising is enterprising—as being dull on the day that your advertising is dull—as not caring for business at all on the days that your advertising does not appear? That's how the matter will impress them.

THE GREAT NORTHERN OPERATORS TO VOTE ON ENDING STRIKE

Ballot Is Ordered Taken at Once on the Montana Division.

The Men Are Said to Have Been Offered an Increase In Pay.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 18.—Fourth Vice President Dermody of the O. R. T. received telegraphic orders last night from President Perham, directing that Dermody take a vote of his division as to whether or not the striking operators should return to work and end the strike. Mr. Dermody will take the vote of out of town strikers by wire, and will report the result to President Perham at St. Paul.

Mr. Dermody stated that he felt confident that the men would vote to call off the strike, as they had assurances of receiving an increase in wages.

St. Paul, Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—President Perham of the O. R. T. said today that he had advised Fourth Vice President Dermody, at Helena, to take a poll of the men on the Great Northern system as to whether they would return to work, he having been advised that the men had been offered an increase in pay. He had heard that as a result of this offer there had been a break on the Great Northern last night.

"That is all we have been working for," said Mr. Perham, "and if the men have succeeded in getting more pay, we are pleased. I am glad to hear that Dermody says he thinks the men will vote to return to work on the increase.

"So far as the Northern Pacific is concerned, everything is still in good shape. If the officials of the Northern Pacific railroad should make the same offer I would think it advisable for them to return to work on that system also. The best thing to do then is to call off the strike. I expect to get reports from this vote by 6 o'clock this evening."

GREAT DECREASE IN DEATHS DUE TO NERVOUS TROUBLES

New York, Aug. 18.—An examination of the health records of New York, prompted by statistics recently compiled by the Chicago health department, shows that there has been a remarkable decrease in deaths from nervous troubles in this city since 1870. While other ailments, such as heart disease, Bright's disease and consumption, have been gaining ground, all affections of the nervous system have diminished as New York has grown larger and more turbulent.

As stated, the investigation was inspired by a recent report from Chicago, showing that deaths there from nervous disorders had fallen off from 37.6 persons per 10,000, in 1870, to 12.8 persons in 1904.

A table compiled by the registrar from the records of Manhattan and Brox boroughs shows these surprising results:

Death rate per 10,000 inhabitants in 1870, 34.72; in 1880, 23.06; in 1890, 19.91; in 1900, 14.17; in 1904, 19.88.

Notwithstanding these statistics, Dr. Wellington, head of the health department, declares that the weather and desruction of human life and health at the pressure and complexity of New York life are constantly increasing. It is now manifest, he asserts, in diseases other than those of the nervous system. He declared, also, that the decrease in purely nervous diseases is very largely due to the decrease in consumption of whisky in New York.

CONTRACTOR BELIEVED TO BE VICTIM OF UNION SLUGGERS

Chicago, Aug. 18.—R. H. Davidson, a building contractor, is missing from Chicago, and his friends, and relatives think he has met death at the hands of a union labor slugging gang.

Davidson was in the employ of Frank W. Adams as superintendent of the construction of a new building at Rockwell and Thirty-seventh streets. The construction of the building has marked by continuous labor troubles.

After he had discharged a number of bricklayers Davidson received a call from a man who is supposed to have been a union agent. That was several days ago.

The interview between the contractor and the stranger ended in a violent quarrel, in which Davidson knocked his caller down on the floor of the new building. Two days later Davidson left his work as usual at 5 o'clock in the afternoon, but he did not reach his residence. The next day an unknown person called Frank Adams on the 'phone and said: "You will find your man Davidson in the river."

Since that telephonic communication, no word has been heard from Davidson or anything about it.

ROOSTERS ARE FORBIDDEN TO CROW

New York, Aug. 18.—Roosters are forbidden to crow, bells to be tolled, and engines to toot their whistles in the suburb of Mount Vernon, between 10 o'clock at night and 6 o'clock in the morning, according to a decision reached yesterday at a meeting of the board of health.

The ban will be placed on these so-called nuisances Saturday, and after that owners of indiscreet fowls and restless watch dogs will be subjected to fines, ranging from $5 to $50.

It is said that the ordinance is aimed at two railroads, which handle all of their freight to Mount Vernon at night. These roads bring most of their freight into the city between 1 and 4 o'clock in the morning. Aside from the corporations, however, the new regulation reaches nearly every resident, as the majority of them possess either a dog or a chicken, and most of them have both.

ENGLISH FINANCIER WOULD MURDER WIFE

Offered a Detective $25,000 to Put Her Out of the Way.

London, Aug. 18.—A great sensation has ben created by the arrest of Hugh Watt, a financier and formerly a member of parliament for the Camlachie division of Glasgow, on the charge of attempting to procure a private detective to assist in the murder of his former wife. Detective Marshall testified in police court today that Watt offered him $25,000 if he would induce the woman to come to Watt's flat, where he proposed to kill her by the administration of chloroform, and then to remove the smell of the chloroform with peppermint. Watt was remanded for trial on bail of $3,000. The police found both chloroform and peppermint in Watt's apartments.

Watt was in the divorce court some years ago when his wife sued him for a divorce, the co-respondent being Lady Violet Beauchamp, daughter of the late Lord and Lady Roden, and the divorced wife of Sir Reginald Beauchamp. Watt has since married Lady Violet Beauchamp.

Since the granting of the divorce, Watt and his former wife have been in the law courts regarding their marriage settlements, and much bitterness has resulted from this litigation. A couple of weeks ago the parties appeared in a police court, Watt charging his former wife with having assaulted and violently ejected him from her house, where he said he went for the purpose of trying to compromise their business disagreements.

ABOUT READY FOR ECLIPSE.

New York, Aug. 18.—Prof. Turner of the British eclipse expedition to Assouan, telegraphs that preparations are well advanced, says a Herald dispatch from Alexandria, Egypt. The American, British and Russian parties are now on the ground. By the Egyptian government every assistance will be given, and the antiquaries' department will allow the use of tombs for magnetic observations.

ENVOYS IN A DEADLOCK OVER LIMITATION OF RUSSIA'S POWER

WHOLE CARLOAD OF DEAD FOUND IN RIVER

Colored Victims of the Railroad Wreck Near Norfolk.

Bodies All Fell From Car as It Was Raised By Derrick.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 18.—Up to 10:30 o'clock this morning there were twelve known dead taken from the wreck of the Atlantic Coast Line railroad's Kingston and Greenville, N. C., excursion train, though there are some eighty of the colored excursionists yet missing, and the probabilities are that the bodies of many of these will be found in the bottom of the river after all dragging has been completed.

The Merritt and Chapman Derrick and Wrecking company raised the two submerged cars, but as they did so the ends fell out of the cars, and what dead were therein went to the bottom of the river, with debris from the interior of the cars.

The river is now being dragged, and it is expected that a number of bodies will be taken from the water before night.

The latest victims to be found are an unknown colored man and unknown colored woman, it having been impossible up to this time to identify either. These bodies were taken from the water this morning.

The only white persons known to be dead up to this time are W. E. Jolly, the promoter of the excursion, and his young nephew, Edward Forbes.

There are some fifty-six or sixty of these 169 excursionists who have come to Norfolk, either slightly injured or bruised. There are twenty-three injured at the hospitals, with twelve known dead, which leaves between seventy and eighty of the excursionists yet missing, and it is believed that a large majority of these are at the bottom of the river.

A revised list of the injured is now being made up as fast as possible.

The Atlantic Coast Line officials have given out no statement in the matter, but Cleveland Thompson, an eye witness, says that the small "danger" flag which was placed on the track to warn the approaching Kingston train that the draw was open, though formerly a red flag, had faded almost completely white from continuous use during the last five years.

It was Engineer S. B. Reig's first run over the Atlantic Coast Line to Norfolk, he having just come from East Radford to this division, his former employment having been with the Norfolk & Western railway. He did not know that he was approaching a draw at the time. The faded danger flag, it is declared, was so small that the engineer did not see it and when he saw the "stop" sign just before he reached the trestle leading to the draw, his train, which was moving thirty-five miles an hour, could not be stopped in time, though he made every effort to make the danger brakes work. The small unseen danger flag is said to have been only 100 yards from the trestle, which is a short one.

The tug for which the draw had been opened was just in the act of passing through when the train dashed into the water. The tug reversed her engines quickly and just avoided being caught by the engine.

Cleveland Thompson declares Engineer Reig remained by his engine up to the very last and did not jump, as first reported. He went down with the engine and was badly injured about the head and body. He is now in the Sarah Leigh hospital here and may recover.

J. J. Thompson, aged 60 years, a farmer and father of Cleveland Thompson, rushed with an axe to the scene of the wreck and leaping twenty feet to the top of the second coach cut a hole in the top of the car and rescued thirty-five people just before the car dropped into the water and became almost completely submerged.

At noon divers went to the bottom of the river at the scene of the wreck and found a carload of dead men and women and children, these being the victims in the car behind the engine, whose bodies went into the river when the end of the car dropped out as it was raised by the derricks this morning.

DOG GUARDED BODY.

Faithful Animal Found By Mistress' Dead Body.

Mason City, Iowa, Aug. 18.—The fidelity of a dog was clearly demonstrated here the other day. Mrs. Michael Toner was found dead in the Coldwater, a small stream running through Dougherty. The family had a shepherd dog they value very highly. This dog had a fondness for Mrs. Toner. In the early morning she arose and it is thought that while under some temporary derangement she went to the stream and drowned herself. The dog accompanied her to the stream and four hours after it is thought the deed was committed, the dog was found on the bank near where the body lay in the water. Strangers were first to approach and discovered the body.

The dog would not allow them to touch it and they had to send for members of the family before the faithful dog would relinquish his watch. The dog was wet and it is evident from the appearance of her clothing that he had tried to pull her to the shore.

BARON MISTAKES WOMAN FOR DEER AND KILLS HER.

New York, Aug. 18.—Baron Speck Von Sternburg, a brother of the German ambassador, shot a female poacher at midnight in mistake for a deer, cables the Herald's Berlin correspondent. The shooting occurred on Count Von Schulenburg's preserves in Neugattersleben. The woman has since died. Baron Sternburg has voluntarily surrendered to the police, and has been allowed bail.

IROQUOIS WINS

The American Defender Retains Possession of the Canada Cup.

Captured the Fifth Race of Series By Small Margin.

Charlotte, N. Y., Aug. 18.—The deciding race of the series for the possession of the Canada cup, the yachting trophy which is being contested for by the Temeraire, the Canadian challenger, and the Iroquois, the American defender, was started today in weather conditions resembling those of yesterday, which were distinctly favorable to the American boat. The course for today's race was triangular, three miles to a leg, to be sailed twice over.

The yachts crossed the starting line as follows: Iroquois, 11:15:20; Temeraire, 11:15:25.

The wind at that hour was blowing about six miles an hour from the southeast. Iroquois turned the first mark at 11:52:08, Temeraire at 11:53:58.

The Iroquois turned the second mark at 12:31:30, Temeraire at 12:32:15.

The Iroquois turned the home stake at 1:02:30, completing the first half. Temeraire turned at 1:02:37.

The Iroquois turned the first buoy on the second round at 1:21:10, Temeraire at 1:23:30.

Steamer Sails For Orient Leaving 250 Sacks In 'Frisco.

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—The Pacific mail steamer Siberia sailed from this port on Wednesday last, Aug. 16, for the Orient, leaving behind 250 pieces of mail. The steamer took away in all 426 packages of mail. Of the 250 pieces left behind and returned to the postoffice, forty-two pouches and forty-one sacks were destined for Manila, thirty-nine pouches and ten sacks for Honolulu, twenty-one sacks for United States warships of the Asiatic fleet and ninety-seven sacks for China and Japan, making a total of eighty-one pouches and 168 sacks. Most of the local registered mail was left behind. The 426 sent on were unaccompanied by letter bills and the bills of lading for 8,000 tons of cargo were also left behind.

The local superintendent of mails holds the steamship company responsible for failure to send enough wagons to take the mail away in time, claiming that it is the duty of the company, under its contract with the United States to call for the mail at the door of the postoffice and to convey it to the ship.

TWO SESSIONS GIVEN TO ARTICLE ELEVEN

Sakhalin and Indemnity Will Go Over Until Next Monday.

Japs Hint at Intervention By President If Envoys Disagree.

Portsmouth, Aug. 18.—The deadlock between the Russian and Japanese envoys over Article 11 of the peace conditions (the limitation of Russia's naval power), which developed at yesterday's sitting of the conference, had not been broken when the envoys adjourned for luncheon at 12:30 p. m. today. The forenoon session was entirely given up to consideration of the article and the official statement issued after adjournment said that the discussion would be resumed this afternoon. The official statement follows:

"In the sitting of this morning, Aug. 18, the conference has continued the discussion of Article 11, and the discussion has not been finished. The discussion of the article will be resumed at 3 o'clock."

Portsmouth, Aug. 18.—When the peace envoys met today it was practically with the tacit understanding that at the end of today's session they would adjourn until Monday. The "prophets of evil," as those who believe that all hope of a treaty is gone, are called, predicted that today would witness the final rupture, and that, at most, there would be only one more meeting, not for a final effort to reach an accord, but to exchange the diplomatic amenities, and bid each other farewell.

This does not correctly represent the situation. Unless something entirely unforeseen on either side occurs today, the final struggle will be postponed until Monday, to give both sides time to hear the last word of their governments.

No matter what the written "full powers" of envoys may be, these days of the cable and the telegraph, which keep envoys in instant communication with their home governments, has made more or less of a fiction of the "full powers," which, in the olden days, were given to envoys charged by their governments with negotiating and settling international issues. Diplomatic negotiations are now conducted by emperors and governments rather than by emissaries. Envoys propose and emperors dispose.

Both sets of envoys here are in continuous communication with their governments. Accounts of each day's proceedings are cabled nightly to Tokio and St. Petersburg, and messages are constantly arriving from both capitals. The reports of the Japanese are much longer and more complete than those of the Russians, and the secretaries of both delegations work day and night preparing and deciphering messages.

Article 11 (the limitation upon Russia's naval power in the Far East) was pending when the envoys reassembled. The indications were that it also would go over without final action. The last article, No. 12, relating to fishing rights on the Russian littoral, may be yielded by the Russians, but neither 10 (the interned warships) nor 11 or 12 presented insuperable difficulties. Everything now harks back to indemnity and Sakhalin. These, as from the first, is the crux. If they can be adjusted, the remainder will be child's play.

It is difficult to fathom the Japanese mind, but as stated in the Associated Press dispatches there have been vague moves in the conference chamber which indicate that they are willing to consider the disputed points together, "en bloc," and this is the basis of the main hope that they are ready to compromise. When these points were thrown out M. Witte did not "tip his hand." He watched like a hawk, but he wanted his adversaries across the table to commit themselves. They did not do so. Nevertheless, Mr. Sato reiterated to the Associated Press this morning before he went to the conference chamber that the disputed articles would be reverted to "later"—which means Monday.

The Russians in the final test may yield one of the two points. They will not do more, if they will do so much. If the Japanese, therefore, do not yield at least one, the conference is wrecked. That can be regarded as certain. If the conference threatens at the last moment to go to pieces, the Japanese hint vaguely at an attempt at rescue by President Roosevelt. They offer no explanation, they furnish no specifications. Where, how, in what way they do not say. Perhaps tomorrow or Sunday an emissary might be sent to Oyster Bay to sound the president. Perhaps if they personally believe in yielding one of the points and their government is still obdurate, they will ask President Roosevelt to intercede, to bring pressure to bear at Tokio. The president might be asked simultaneously to urge both the Russian and Japanese emperors in the name of humanity to make mutual concessions. But old hands at diplomacy say the situation created would be so delicate as to preclude the possibility of President Roosevelt stepping into the breach.

The morning session of the peace conference came to an end at 12:30. The envoys repaired to the lunch room immediately.

FEVER INCREASING, DEATHS DECREASING

Considerable Anxiety However Over the Number of New Cases.

Noon yellow fever report:

New cases in New Orleans since 6 p. m. Thursday	14
Total to date	1,237
Deaths today	1
Total deaths	181

New Orleans, Aug. 18.—While the low death rate from yellow fever in New Orleans is gratifying there is considerable public anxiety to see a diminution of the number of new cases which will indicate more surely the control the authorities have of the situation. Malaria continues to be mixed with the yellow fever list that is reported daily.

The Louisiana board of health was advised, today, by one of the physicians who has been on duty among the sick on the riverside plantation in St. Mary's parish that there has been a total of forty-eight cases of fever and three deaths there.

New Orleans, Aug. 18.—An analysis of the report for the preceding twenty-four hours shows that thirty-two of the seventy-four new cases of yellow fever appeared in the heart of the originally infected quarters. The explanation given by the inspectors is that after their own houses are disinfected and the mosquitoes killed some of the Italians go around and pay visits to sick friends, become infected themselves and carry the fever home with them.

The situation above Canal street continues to improve. In that section obedience to the federal regulations is more general and the results are plain. While the report showed five new cases only three new squares are infected.

The unexpected decline in the death rate is giving such a feeling of satisfaction here that people are beginning to believe that the possibilities of the visitations have been overdrawn. The doctors, however, say that the low death rate is due to the fact that practically the whole community has been educated up to the necessity of calling a doctor the moment fever temperature develops.

There is consideramle interest here in the proposed house to house canvass at Gulfport, because Gulfport has been doing a large maritime trade and there has always been some apprehension here that fever might slip into that city.

The board of health at Lake Charles finds itself helpless to make headway against the state of public opinion in the town. The health authorities desire to put on a moderate quarantine, but the municipal officials and citizens generally have ranged themselves on the other side and all efforts to open the doors to freight from New Orleans have been unsuccessful thus far.

President Souchin has asked the railroads to run small trains to infected points in order to furnish supplies to the people. Dr. Wiren has endorsed the recommendation both as a means of relief to people in stricken communities and as a sanitary measure of the highest importance.

NO POLISH BISHOP

Archbishop Symon Dashes Hope of American Catholic Poles.

"Good People But Not the Brains of Our Nation."

Detroit, Mich., Aug. 18.—His grace, Archbishop Francis Symon, personal representative of Pope Pius X., has decided that it is time to call a halt for the exuberant hopes and exaggerated expectations which are being entertained by the Polish clergy in this country as the result of his tour of inspection in the United States.

Diplomatically, but decisively nevertheless, the distinguished prelate has shattered the dreams of a host of clerical gentlemen in St. Louis, Chicago, New York, in this city and other cities with a large Polish population—dreams of the mitre and the staff, a vicariate or some such elevation.

After a brilliant reception at the residence of the Rev. Fr. F. Mueller of St. Albertus church, his excellency consented to an interview with the Journal in which he disclosed his views on the Polish question in this country. Coming from such a source the views expressed are authoritative and final.

The interview was conducted in German, the archbishop having studied at the university of Munich, from which seat of learning he earned the degree of doctor of divinity.

"Forty years ago I was at Munich," the archbishop said. "A long time ago, but the memories of that beautiful city are always vivid in my mind.

"This is a wonderful country. Full of life, vigor, business. Still I find that materialism prevails altogether too much. They show me a tall building, a big piece of machinery, a new car, a big store and then in despair I look for a piece of statuary, a monument, an art gallery.

"'Have you a museum, a home for art here?' I ask in the many cities where I have been and I am shown a little building with but very little of value within."

"The Americans are a great, but materialistic people.

"At the same time I am strongly impressed with the great toleration, the unrestricted religious freedom that prevails here. The several creeds dwell in harmony together, such as would be impossible in Europe, and the respect one man has for the religious opinions of his neighbor is a high tribute to your national character. I myself have been the recipient of this sentiment everywhere I have been."

"How does your grace find the Polish congregations in this country?"

"Devoted and prosperous, indeed."

"Does not your grace think that the Polish clergy should be better represented in the hierarchy of this country?"

"You mean in the hierarchy?"

"Yes. Is that not your present mission as the personal representative of the holy father?"

"No, not exactly. I have been sent to look around and investigate and study the conditions. The information sought is as to whether the average intelligence of the Polish Catholics of America warrants a representation in the hierarchy.

"And, in this respect, I must say I have looked for it everywhere and found very little—almost nothing. The Polish immigration in this country is the youngest, recruited from the humblest walks of life—laborers, farmers, artisans. They are all good, pious, God-fearing people, but they are not the brains of our nation."

"Since the death of Cardinal Ledochowski you are the only Polish prelate in Rome."

"I am the only Polish representative in the counsel of the holy father at Rome."

"You are really a Russian, are you not?"

The archbishop protested.

"God forbid!" he said. "Only geographically. I am a Pole."

"But you were a priest at St. Petersburg?"

"I was assistant to the archbishop at one time, and then again I was rector of the academy."

"Are you acquainted with the present czar?"

"Very well, very well, indeed. In my position I always was invited at court functions and attended them, coming into personal contact with the emperor frequently.

"What is your grace's estimate of him?"

"He is a good fellow" (guter Bursche), was the reply. "An unsophisticated and naive person. There is no malice in him, but he is completely under the control of his mother, who again is dominated by other influences."

The archbishop left Detroit yesterday for Cleveland and thence will go east to return to Rome.

TRAGEDY OF TWO LIVES

Is Righted After Lapse of Fifteen Years.

Joliet, Ill., Aug. 18.—Mrs. Margaret Wilson, who deserted her husband, Abram Cox, fifteen years ago to elope with another man, has returned to her old home here and been reunited with her family, and it is said that her re-marriage to her former husband will take place within a few days.

Mrs. Wilson's story reads like fiction. Married to Abram Cox when she was only 16 years of age, against her own inclination, she was unable to learn to love him, and after several years of unhappiness, during which four children were born to them, she fled with Patrick Wilson and severed all ties with her family.

Cox secured a divorce and remarried. Wilson then married Mrs. Cox, but last summer, yielding to the entreaties of his eldest daughter by his first wife to return to care for his legitimate wife in her old age, he deserted the former Mrs. Cox.

A few days ago Mrs. Wilson, now aged, returned to the scenes of her girlhood. She visited the home of her daughter, Mrs. Peter Ambrose, who almost fainted when she saw her mother.

Other members of the family were sent for, and finally old Abram Cox, his second wife long since dead, was induced to see his first spouse. A reconciliation was effected and now it appears that the tragedy of these two lives is to be righted at last.

IROQUOIS CLUB'S PLANS

For Federal Supervision of the Insurance Companies.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—From two authentic sources it is learned that the subcommittee appointed a few days ago by the Iroquois club's special committee on insurance has practically arrived at a definite plan of action which embodied federal control and supervision of the insurance companies.

Two prominent members of the subcommittee declare that the plan, which will be in the shape of a resolution, will be simple and comprehensive and, if adopted by congress, will prove signally effective in preventing unjust operations of insurance companies and in protecting their policy holders.

Rivers McNeil, member of the Iroquois club and chairman of the insurance committee, says that the plan is similar to the resolution recently adopted by the Bar association of Omaha. It recommends that congress pass a law declaring that an insurance policy is an instrument of commerce. If this should be held constitutional by the United States supreme court, James G. Condon, a member of the committee, says the government could then step into the insurance arena and inspect and supervise the affairs of the various companies for the protection of policy holders.

WOMAN OF SIXTY

Walks From the South to New York.

New York, Aug. 18.—On her way from Creston, W. Va., to Ottawa, Can., having walked as far as this city, Mrs. Martha Rafe, 60 years old, applied at the department of outdoor poor for transportation the rest of the way. Being told to wait a time, she misunderstood and started out, saying: "Well if you-all's can't do anything for me, I guess I can walk." She was stopped and her case was referred to the United Charities.

Pittsburg, Pa., and Return—$24.00.

Excursion tickets on sale August 18 and 19 to Pittsburg, Pa., at $24.00 for the round trip. Final limit for return Aug. 28th. City Ticket office, 302 West Superior street.

COURT IS ASKED

To Rescind Order For a Boy's Adoption.

Mankato, Minn., Aug. 18.—William H. Ewing, formerly of Minneapolis, and his 16-year-old son, Lester, are petitioning to have the district court rescind its order for the young man's adoption by his grandparents, made some years ago.

The Ewings were divorced in Minneapolis in 1893, the wife getting the decree and the care and custody of the child. Later, Mr. Ewing succeeded in having the court change its order so as to give the boy to him. Before this could be put into effect the boy was adopted by his grandparents in the Blue Earth county diserict court, so as to prevent his going to his father. At that time the lad said that he preferred remaining with his grandparents, as his mother made her home there. Later on his mother married again and his father moved to a farm near that of the Pickles, who are the boy's grandparents.

On July 2 last the boy left his grandparents' home and went to that of his father. The latter wants to send him to college, and will endeavor to have the decree of adoption set aside. The boy says that he will run away before he will return to his grandparents. Mr. Ewing is a brother of former County Treasurer J. A. Ewing.

MICHIGAN FRUIT

Consignment of Plums and Peaches Has Been Received.

Season For Berries and Small Fruits About Over.

Michigan fruit is now in the market and the consignments that have been received will aid materially in supplying the heavy demand for the California variety.

The first car, containing plums and peaches, grown in Lower Michigan, was received last week, and the Michigan fruit will now cut considerable figure in the market.

The plums are quoted at 30 cents for a basket containing a fifth of a bushel, and the peaches are the same price.

The demand for California fruit is now very much in excess of the supply and the dealers have been experiencing great difficulty during the last week or two, to secure enough fruit to fill their orders. In the East, especially, the hot weather has brought an enormous demand, and there the prices are ruling from 15 to 25 per cent higher than in Duluth.

The plums now being received consist principally of Japans, silver prunes and some red plums.

The peaches consist of yellow freestones, late Crawfords and some Elbertas.

Each car of California fruit received on the local market now contains a few boxes of grapes. It is still early for this fruit, but there is a limited supply of green and black grapes available. The quality is good, but the price is necessarily still very high.

When the Michigan fruit becomes more plentiful, prices may be lower, but no lower prices are looked for on the California crop.

* * *

The apple crop will be one of the few crops in the country this year that will turn out a comparative failure.

The reports received by the dealers from New York state, Wisconsin, Michigan and Canada denote that the crop has been light in all parts of the country, and that it will not amount to over one-half of last year's crop.

The early varieties are now as plentiful as they will be at any time this season, and such kinds as Duchess and Maiden's Blush are now on the market.

Like all early apples they are more or less wormy, but aside from that, the quality is good.

* * *

The season for small fruit and berries is practically over. No more consignments of raspberries are being received by the dealers, and the Wisconsin crop is now out of the market. The only berries now coming in to the city are the wild raspberries picked by women and children in the country about Woodland and Lester Park.

A few Wisconsin blackberries are still being received, but the supply is limited, and they will not be on the market long.

Blueberries are still fairly plentiful, but owing to the shortage in the supply of California fruit, the demand for them has been very heavy, and they are disposed of almost as rapidly as they are received.

A few occasional shipments of currants are still being received by the dealers, but they are no longer to be relied upon.

* * *

The lemon market again shows signs of excitement. Warm weather in many parts of the country has again caused a heavy increase in the demand and the price jumped back to $7.50 per case.

Dealers all over the country are carrying but a short supply of lemons, and the demand for them greatly exceeds the supply. The market is consequently in a very delicate condition, and any decided increase in the demand causes an immediate fluctuation in the prices.

Vegetable prices, almost without exception, have declined during the past week.

"We are selling about 1,000 dozen ears of corn a day," said one of the dealers yesterday afternoon, in speaking of the heavy demand for green corn. "When you consider that there are only 65,000 people in Duluth and that we are one of half a dozen firms in the city, you can appreciate the amount of corn the people are eating these days. Of course a large part of this is shipped out again to the range towns and other surrounding villages."

The corn is coming principally from the country about Eau Claire.

The potato crop gives excellent promise of being a large one, and one of excellent quality. The price has still further declined this week to 50 cents a bushel.

Some early pumpkins are now in the market selling for $1.75 a dozen, and the "great American desert" will once more be in order.

* * *

The butter and egg markets remain unchanged this week. Egg prices are firm at 20 cents a dozen, and the butter prices are also firm at the figures quoted last week. Receipts have not been heavy, and the demand has been good.

* * *

The poultry market is firmer this week, and there has been a slight increase in prices. Live hens are quoted at 12 cents a pound, and springs at 14 and 15. The demand for poultry is steadily increasing and will continue to do so until after the Thanksgiving and Christmas trade.

MRS. JOHN D. STRYKER DIES

Succumbs to Grim Reaper After Illness of Years.

Mrs. Susan M. Stryker, wife of John D. Stryker of the firm of Stryker, Manley & Buck, died at the family residence in Hunter's Park yesterday afternoon. Funeral services were held at the residence this afternoon at 2 o'clock, after which the remains were taken to Towanda, Pa., for interment. Mrs. Stryker was a daughter of William H. Morgan and was born near Towanda, Pa., Sept. 14, 1839. She was married to Mr. Stryker in 1881 and for nineteen years her home has been in Duluth. For about fifteen years she had been in declining health, but through an indomitable will power had lived an active life. She was a woman of strong character and religious faith, an active member of the Glen Avon Presbyterian church. For the past few weeks her strength failed rapidly and the end came peacefully. Besides her husband she leaves two daughters, Susan and Harriet.

Doctors Find Woman Insane.

Mrs. Anna Holm, who resides near Tenth street and Seventh avenue east, was examined for insanity in probate court yesterday afternoon and was committed to the state hospital at Fergus Falls. Oscar Olson, the young man suspected of insanity and who was picked up on the streets here by the police, will be sent to Two Harbors for examination. It has been found that he resides in Lake county, having been working at Knife River for some time past. Information was forwarded the Lake county officials today and the sheriff is expected to come after Olson.

FEARS ARE FELT FOR THE STEAMER ATHOS.

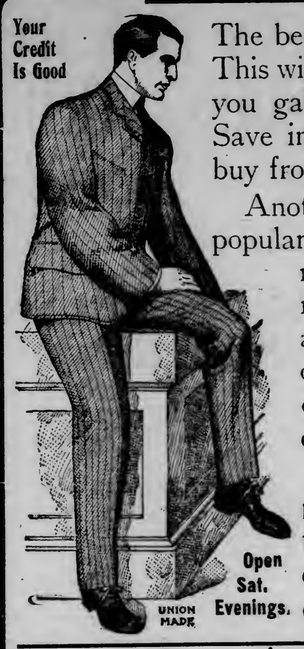

New York, Aug. 18.—The British steamer Athos, which sailed from Port Antonio, Jamaica, for this port on Aug. 2, with a cargo of fruit, is about eight days overdue, and insurance agents are beginning to inquire about her. The Athos was spoken, Aug. 3, when about 125 miles north of San Salvador island, in the Bahamas. She reported that her machinery was disabled.

The heavy weather of the last few days has caused a feeling of alarm on her account. The Athos has a crew of twenty-eight men, mostly of Brooklyn.

There are a few people who "boast" that they "do not read ads." A few years ago these same people probably "boasted" that they "did not read newspapers." So, you see, they are improving—even if a little slowly.

ONE YEAR IN PRISON.

Forged Check to Go to Brother's Wedding.

Butte, Mont., Aug. 18.—Lester Thayer has been taken to the penitentiary at Deer Lodge to serve one year for forgery. Thayer lives near Great Falls, and, learning that his brother was to be married, forged a check for $15 in order to be present at the ceremony. When he attempted to pass it at Shelby, the forgery was detected and he was arrested.

Thayer is about 22 and readily acknowledged his guilt, saying he believed his bridegroom brother would make everything good, as he was getting married and had a little cash saved up.

TORTURED BY ECZEMA

Body Mass of Sores. Could not Sleep Spent Hundreds of Dollars on Doctors, but Grew Worse.

CURED BY CUTICURA FOR $8

"Cuticura saved the life of my mother, Mrs. Wm. F. Davis, of Stony Creek, Conn. Hers was the worst eczema I ever saw. She was hardly able to eat or sleep. Her head and body was a mass of sores, and she despaired of recovery. Finally, after spending hundreds of dollars on doctors, growing worse all the time, living in misery for years, with hair whitened from suffering and body terribly disfigured, she was completely cured by two cakes of Cuticura Soap, five boxes of Cuticura, and three bottles of Cuticura Resolvent.—Geo. C. Davis, 161 W. 36th St. N. Y."

CHANGES URGED

Auditors Recommend Different Methods In Keeping City's Funds.

Claim City Could Save Money By New System.

"The city of Duluth could save $10,000 a year if a better system of conducting its funds and keeping its accounts were installed," said W. H. Gleason of Chicago, who is in the city completing the audit of the city's books for the Marwick Mitchell company, and preparing the report which will be submitted to the council.

"There are a number of things which our men have run across which, in our opinion, should be changed, and which would save the city money if they were changed. They will be reported to the council in our written statement, but there are two or three points in particular which I might mention at this time.

"One of the most important changes which I would suggest is the establishment of a purchasing department. At the present time, whenever the fire department wants a dozen brooms, or the police department a pound of nails, or the janitor of the city hall a gallon of paint, they are purchased by the different departments and requisitions sent in.

"There should be one person in charge of the purchases for all the departments. The heads of the departments could anticipate their needs and send in requisitions. All of the material could then be purchased at wholesale, and at a rude guess at least 10 per cent should be saved.

"Then the system of regarding the different funds practically as trust funds, which must not be touched, is not good business. Under the present system transfers are made from the general fund to the fire department fund, or the police department fund, and these sums of money must be kept inviolate. Consequently, although there may be $10,000 in the fire department fund, a voucher may be held up for the police department fund. Of course the idea is to keep the departments within their allowance but the council could just as well order the transfers made when needed.

"The question of delinquent taxes is also an important one. Your county officers send down a statement of the amount of taxes collected. They should also send with it a detailed list of the delinquent taxpayers, and the city's legal department should get after the delinquents.

"In Chicago, several years ago, after going over the city's books, I made a recommendation to this effect, and was laughed at, but I started out myself with a collector, and in three days I collected delinquent taxes to the amount of $110,000.

"There are a number of other points on which we will make recommendations in our report, but that must be submitted to the council before being made public.

"The report will be made out in Chicago. Mr. Cole, who has been here since the commencement of the work, and myself will leave for Chicago tonight with all the information necessary to compile the statement for the council, and will send it in with whatever recommendations are thought necessary as soon as we can complete it."

PUBLIC IS AROUSED.

The public is aroused to a knowledge of the curative merits of that great medicinal tonic, Electric Bitters, for sick stomach, liver and kidneys. Mary H. Walters, of 546 St. Clair Ave., Columbus, O., writes: "For several months, I was given up to die. I had fever and ague, my nerves were wrecked; I could not sleep, and my stomach was so weak from useless doctors' drugs, that I could not eat. Soon after beginning to take Electric Bitters, I obtained relief, and in a short time I was entirely cured." Guaranteed at all druggists; price 50c.

115 WEST SUPERIOR STREET.

West Duluth.

Great preparations are being made by the West Duluth contingent of the Switchmen's Union of North America for its coming excursion and picnic, which will be held at Ashland next Sunday. The affair is under the auspices of Zenith lodge No. 28 and Head of the Lakes lodge No. 107. From present indications at least 2,000 people will be in atendance. Mayor Williams of Ashland has extended the welcome of the city to the switchmen and their friends.

The trains will leave Duluth at 7 a. m. and West Duluth at 7:30. At Superior they will be joined by a section from that city. The committee has so arranged that there will be accommodations for all, no tickets being sold for which there will not be ample seating capacity. The first section will leave Ashland at 6 p. m., followed shortly by the second.

The feature of the day will be a baseball game between the Great Northern team of Superior and the Northern Pacific team of Duluth. A unique and entertaining feature of the sporting program will be a "wooden leg" race between J. E. Sullivan of West Duluth and the champion wooden-legged switchman from Allouez. A fot race will also be a number of the program. No liquor of any kind will be sold on the grounds, although light refreshments will be obtainable.

The Superior Marine band will furnish music for the occasion, both on the train and in the dance pavilion.

WEST DULUTH BRIEFS.

ENVOYS IN A DEADLOCK

ing in the newspapers, there exists in official circles in London a strong conviction that a treaty of peace will be the outcome of the conference. The Associated Press is able to state that the British government, which has been kept informed of the progress of the negotiations, through Minister Haisha, is entirely hopeful that a lasting peace will be concluded.

A diplomat, with whom the Associated Press discussed the question, said: "It is natural for both sides to assume an unanimously uncompromising attitude, and to maintain their respective positions to the point of breaking off negotiations. This has been the practice of plenipotentiaries at every peace conference. I do not believe that the plenipotentiaries in the case will leave Portsmouth without signing a treaty. Their responsibility for the continuance of this ghastly war is too serious. Honor in the contest has been won and lost already, and a treaty with or without sacrifice on points of difference will affect the prestige of neither.

"Both the Russians and Japanese knew practically what terms could be arranged when it was agreed to meet, and the Russians were well aware that the Japanese would want Sakhalin and indemnity. If the plenipotentiaries kep their tempers, I am of the opinion that they are not likely to split on any points before them."

SAKHALIN ISLAND.

Russians Say Japs Have No Claim to It.

Portsmouth, Aug. 18.—Having read the statement from a Japanese member of parliament made a few days ago to the Associated Press, giving the Japanese attitude regarding Sakhalin island, Alexandre Briantchinoff, correspondent of the Slovo of St. Petersburg, voicing the Russian exceptions to the statement, said, today:

"One of the great bars to the conclusion of a peace, so much desired by the whole civilized world, is the difference between the envoys on the question of Sakhalin. The Japanese pretend that Sakhalin is really an organic part of their empire. They say it only came into Russia's possession through force and that Russia would lose little in ceding it back to Japan as she has shown her inability to exploit its resources, having used it only for the colonization of criminals. The Japanese people, they say, on the contrary, have always considered themselves the rightful owners and having now taken it by conquest, will never submit to relinquishing it. Of course, it is certain that the Japanese once in legal possession of the island will accomplish there much more than the Russian government has in the past, not only in an agricultural, industrial and colonizing way, but especially in a military and strategic way. We cannot deny that the success of their arms has given them certain claims to the island, but those are the only claims they possess." But possession can only be legalized by the ratification of a treaty.

"It is an error for them to claim historical rights to the possession. Up to the last century the island was inhabited only by the native barbaric tribes. Then a few Russian colonists landed and occupied certain parts of the island. The Japanese began fishing in the waters of the Southern end of the island. Some very small fishing villages were built.

"At last the legal status of the island arose. Propositions were made to divide it between Russia and Japan. The Japanese never made any claim to the whole of the island and their political interests there were limited that in 1855 (treaty of Smyodo) and 1875 (treaty of St. Petersburg) the Japanese only asked the delimination of the frontier between the two possessions at the extreme south of the island. In 1873 the Japanese minister for foreign affairs, Soiessima, proposed to Russia to cede the Japanese part of the island in exchange for Russian neutrality during the war of conquest which they then contemplated against Korea and finally in 1875 it was the Japanese who transferred the pourparlers regarding the island to St. Petersburg and brought them to a conclusion, receiving in return for their possessions in South Sakhalin the Russian Kuriles. They never claimed they were forced to the exchange. No one in Japan protested against this treaty, their fishing interests in the waters of the island having been fully protected. They then made no pretensions to colonization there as they had not yet completed the colonization of the most northerly of their own group of islands—Hakkarde. Instead of desiring to extend their colonizing efforts northward they had turned their eyes to the more alluring prospects to the west and south, Korea, Formosa and the Philippines. The claim to the hisorical and national rights to the island are therefore not warranted. The Japanese, in a word, are seeking to profit by their present success to completely and definitely assure their paramount position in the Far East. Sakhalin in their hands means Vladivostok, Russia's sole and insufficient base on the Pacific, at the mercy of Japan. Vladivostok could be attacked from three sides. Russia would no longer have the possibility of resisting Japanese encroachment. At her bidding she would be compelled to withdraw from her position in the Orient. Japan's claim to Sakhalin is easily comprehended, but it is impossible to understand the lack of foresight of America, France and even England, which do not seem to realize the impending and far-reaching consequences."

NO INDEMNITY

Ever Paid Where Country Was Not Occupied.

Portsmouth, Aug. 18.—Mr. De Martens, one of the Russian delegates and recognized as one of the great authorities on international law, not only in Russia, but throughout the world, in speaking to a correspondent of the Associated Press about the principle of the war indemnity, said that there was no precedent in history where a country whose territory was not occupied in whole or in part by the enemy had paid war tribute upon the conclusion of peace. Russia, Mr. De Martens said, was not crushed. She was not on her knees begging for peace. She wanted peace but she could go on fighting for years. Japan had not even approached the true Russian frontier.

"Should Russia consent to pay tribute to Japan in any form," continued the eminent jurist, "it would be her political death. The powers would understand that she accepted the proposition of President Roosevelt not because she was desirous of an honorable peace, but because her power had been annihilated and she recognized that it was impossible for her to continue the war. It would mean a public confession that Russia is at Portsmouth helplessly kneeling before Japan imploring peace and ready to accept any terms imposed. No one will seriously contend that the Muscovite empire is in any such position."

With many interesting historical examples, Mr. Martens proceeded to elaborate his thesis that no country had ever paid indemnity except powerless to confront the enemy on the field of battle and with a large portion of her territory in the enemy's possession as a hostage.

In 1807 he pointed out when Napoleon imposed the peace of Tilsit French troops occupied practically all of Prussia and the Prussian royal family had fled to Russian territory. France could dictate terms. She exacted a war indemnity of three hundred millions of dollars and garrisoned several Prussian towns with French troops at the expense of Prussia as a guarantee of payment. She required that the Prussian army should be reduced to 40,000 men.

In 1815 when Napoleon was annihilated at Waterloo after the famous "100 days" and the second treaty of Paris was concluded, the allied powers occupying Paris as the Prussians did later in 1870, imposed in addition to other conditions a war indemnity of $500,000,000 to be paid in five years, during which time the allied troops were to hold a portion of French territory. That sum, however, was considerably reduced by Wellington at Aix La Chapelle and France completed the payment of the indemnity in three years.

The largest war indemnity ever exacted was imposed by Prince Bismarck upon France in 1870. It amounted to $1,000,000,000. But Napoleon had fallen, Gambetta was powerless. Prussia was at Paris. The third republic succeeded in liquidating the indemnity in two years, while, according to the treaty she had five years' time in which to pay. In other cases even where a portion of the territory of the fated country was occupied no indemnity was exacted or even asked—for instance Russia in 1856, although the Crimean peninsula was occupied by the Anglo-Franco Piedmontese troops, was not asked to pay tribute. Neither Austria in 1859 after having been defeated by the Franco-Piedmontese and having lost boundary, nor in 1866 after having been beaten by Prussia paid no indemnity. Denmark in 1864 lost Schleswig-Holstein to Prussia, but paid nothing.

"A new precedent was made by America," added Mr. De Martens, "in her war with Spain. Although victorious and in a position to claim indemnity, she ended the war on principle and actually paid $20,000,000 to the Madrid government for the Philippine Islands."

"But that," he remarked, "was as the French say to 'dorer la pilule.'"

Independent of all these considerations, Mr. De Martens said Russia's objection to the payment of an indemnity, under no matter what form, comes from the fact that in all her history she never paid a cent of tribute to a foreign power, not even during the time of her worst defeats under Peter the Great, when a large portion of the country was in the hands of the invader. In conclusion, he called attention to the fact that to pay an indemnity to Japan would be for Russia to create a precedent new in the world's history.

PLEASED WITH WITTE.

New York, Aug. 18.—Isaac N. Seligman, the banker, has returned from Portsmouth, N. H., and expressed the belief that the peace conference will become a bright spot on history's pages. Speaking of the meeting between M. Witte and the Jewish bankers, including himself, Mr. Seligman said:

"We did not ask for the conference. Neither did M. Witte call for it. It had been arranged by other parties to have us come together.

"We were much impressed by M. Witte, his breadth, his candor and his human feelings. As we understand it, he has no powers to do what we asked, but we believe that he will use his good offices and that he will be in a position to bear our message to the emperor in a convincing way that we are confident will bear fruit."

BOYS ALL WELL.

Y. M. C. A. Campers Enjoying Themselves at Deerwood.

"All the boys in camp are well and enjoying themselves immensely," said Phil Bevis, secretary of the Y. M. C. A., who returned from Deerwood this morning.

"There are fifty-four boys up there now, and eight or ten more are going up today or tomorrow. I never saw a nicer crowd of boys in my life. They are the healthiest, cleanest and most active crowd of boys we ever had in camp.

"The weather has been a little rainy since they have been there, but that hasn't interfered much with their fun."

BUILDING LINE

Work on Duluth-Mankato Line Is Actually Under Way.

Between Albert Lea and Mankato—Great Northern's Winnipeg Line.

The Duluth, St. Cloud, Glencoe & Mankato railway seems assured, at least so far as the portion of it between Albert Lea and Mankato is concerned, a distance of fifty-four miles.

E. L. Tobie & Co. of New York, who some time ago were awarded the contract for this part of the line, have sublet the grading contract to Balch & Motley of Minneapolis for the thirty-two miles between Albert Lea and Cream. Balch & Motley in turn have sublet most of the work to smaller contractors, and most of the latter have their equipment on the ground, have their camps prepared, and have started work at various points along the line.

The survey of the remaining eighteen miles, from Cream to Mankato, has not yet been made, but the engineers are about to proceed with the work. Then contracts will be let for the grading. It is expected that the entire grading, bridge and culvert work, will be completed in time for the laying of rails in October or November. The contract calls for the completion of this part of the line by Jan. 1, but the contractors are likely to claim two or three months more, on account of alleged delays on the part of the company.

The Minneapolis & St. Louis tracks will be used for four miles out of Albert Lea.

SURFACING ROAD.

Great Northern to Have Fine Winnipeg Line.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The work of resurfacing the Great Northern roadbed, from this city to the Canadian line with three feet of gravel, will be completed next week, and the Great Northern will have from St. Paul to Winnipeg, one of the speediest pieces of track in the entire country. The work of resurfacing, which has been rushed forward rapidly by large gangs of Italian laborers, from pits at Angus and Downer, follows the laying of the new 86-pound steel which is to provide a speedway for the Great Northern passengers in their fast flight from St. Paul to the Manitoba metropolis. Before the steel gangs were put to work, large crews of civil engineers were employed to straighten out all kinks and bends in the road, which it was possible to avoid, new supplies of ties were put in along the roadbed, and the old clay bed leveled to the side of the track.

HARMLESS MACHINE SENT JACOB SCHIFF.

New York, Aug. 18.—A supposed explosive machine received by Jacob H. Schiff, of the firm of Kuhn, Loeb & Company, bankers, at the office of that company was, today, turned over to the police for examination by Mr. Schiff. The box contained matches, cotton, and another substance supposed to be an explosive.

The police investigation disclosed that the supposed infernal machine was harmless. It was a pasteboard box and contained besides three matches and a wisp of cotton, only a little torn paper. It was opened by an employe of the firm, as Mr. Schiff was at Bar Harbor. The box was mailed in New York and under the address were the words "Edward Spenth."

PRESIDENT DEVOTES DAY TO RECREATION.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 18.—No visitors were received, today, at Sagamore Hill. The invigorating weather induced the president to devote the day entirely to recreation. He played tennis with the children in the morning and later left Sagamore Hill accompanied by some members of his family for a few hours outing. Kermit Roosevelt left today, for Deadwood, S. D., on a visit to Capt. Seth Bullock, the superintendent of the Black Hills forest reserve. Kermit is taking the trip alone. He will remain with Capt. Bullock for two or three weeks on a hunting expedition.

ELMQUIST BACK?

May Be Asked to Take His Old Church Charge.

Chinlund of Lincoln Is Turned Down on This Understanding.

Will Rev. A. F. Elmquist be recalled as pastor of Bethany Lutheran church of Twenty-third avenue west and Third street? That is the question which is stirring up the Lutherans of the West end at this time. On Wednesday night the congregation of the church met to vote upon Rev. E. G. Chinlund of Lincoln, Neb., whose name had been presented by the church council for consideration. Mr. Chinlund got 41 votes to 76 against him. It is claimed that the sole cause of his defeat was the knowledge recently acquired that Mr. Elmquist will come back from Minneapolis since it has been suggested that a substantial increase of salary could be secured from Bethany congregation. It is understood also that Mr. Elmquist's expectations in St. John's English Lutheran congregation in Minneapolis have not been fully realized.

Mr. Chinlund, when he preached here a few weeks ago, made many friends and demonstrated good ability as a speaker. It is generally conceded that had not Mr. Elmquist's return become possible, Mr. Chinlund would have been elected.

The church council has already met and decided to present the name of Mr. Elmquist two weeks hence; and it is believed that barring a refusal on Mr. Elmquist's part before that time, he will be elected to his old charge, which has not been filled since he left here two months ago.

MISSION YOUNG PEOPLE

Convention Being Held at West End Church.

The annual convention of the Northwestern division of the Young People's societies of the Swedish Mission church opened last night at the Swedish Mission church of Twenty-first avenue west and Second street. Rev. F. O. Kling, pastor of the church gave the address of welcome in which he assured the delegates that they were received with opn arms by the city of Duluth and especially by the members of his church.

Prof. D. Nyvall, president of Walden college, McPherson, Kan., lectured on the work that young people can do for the church and gave a stirring call for them to go into the vineyard of the Lord and work for his cause.

The delegates took a drive around the boulevard this morning and this evening will be taken for a trip around the horn on the Newsboy, the boat leaving the Twenty-first avenue west dock at 7:30 and the Fifth avenue west dock at 8 o'clock.

The business meeting of the convention will be held Saturday. On Sunday, Rev. P. Mattson, who for years has been one of the church's missionaries in China, will speak.

REV. TOTTERMAN BACK

After Absence of Three Years in Europe.

Rev. K. S. Totterman, formerly rector of St. Peter's Swedish Episcopal church at Twenty-eighth avenue west and First street, returned to the city Saturday after an absence of three years in Europe.

While absent, Mr. Totterman has visited almost every country in Europe, studying their religions and conditions. He spent a good deal of time in Russia, Greece and Turkey, looking into the working and dogmas of the Greek Catholic church. He says there is considerable discussion about the Greek and Anglican churches fraternizing and possibly uniting. There are very few things in which the Greek, Anglican and Roman churches differ and the Greek and Anglican churches are closer together than they are with the church of Rome. While in St. Petersburg he met Pobiedonoseff, the head of the Greek church in Russia and who, it is charged is the power behind the throne in Russia.

This man has the czar as putty in his hands and is in fact the ruler of all the Russias. Mr. Totterman was in Odessa when the terrible persecution of the Jews took place in Kishenieff, and met a number of the Jews who had fled from the latter place. He says conditions in Russia are terrible.

Mr. Totterman will likely remain in Duluth. He is awaiting the return to the city of Bishop Morrison before making his plans. Mr. Totterman raised the money to build St. Peter's church at Twenty-eighth avenue west and First street and was pastor here for three years.

While abroad Mr. Totterman was for a time assistant priest in the state church in Sweden. He will conduct services next Sunday evening at St. Peter's church.

LOSES AN EYE.

Charles Gustafson Painfully Injured on Coal Dock.

Charles Gustafson of the West end, while working on No. 2 dock of the Pittsburg Coal Company on Garfield avenue on Tuesday last, met with a severe and serious accident. Some men were shipping a piece of steel and a piece of it, about half an inch in length flying from under the cold chisel buried itself in Gustafson's right eye.

The physicians had to mutilate the eye to such an extent to have the steel taken out, that they finally had to remove the eye to save the other.

West End Shortrails.

Mr. and Mrs. M. Potter of Grinell, Minn., are visiting friends in the West end.

John Mattson, lumber grader for the Scott-Graff Lumber company, has bought the corner on Twenty-ninth avenue west and Third street and will build a double store. Another dwelling house and grocery store is also being built on the corner of Twenty-ninth avenue west and Second street.

Miss Alma Peterson has gone to Minneapolis to pay Rev and Mrs. Elmquist a visit. She expects to be absent a month.

The moonlight excursion under the auspices of the Scandinavian Salvation Army last Wednesday evening was largely attended and a neat sum was realized to apply on the new building to be erected by the army on Sixteenth avenue west shortly.

George D. Jewell, who went to Elkhorn, Wis., with the remains of his wife for burial, Monday evening, is expected home Saturday morning.

James McHugh has returned from Ishpeming, Mich.

Dr. Arthur Sheleen of Hallock, Minn., is visiting here with his brother, who lives in the Christian block.

Mrs. F. N. Beckman of Center City, is visiting friends and relatives at the West end.

Carl A. Person of 1827 West First street is visiting friends at Grand Lake this week, having his vacation.

Andrew Nelson left yesterday for Rush City to visit relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. John Nord of 1911 West Second street are visiting with friends in Michigan.

Duluth Observatory, No. 30, of the North Star Benefit association, will meet next Monday evening at 202 Twentieth avenue west.

Fire broke out about 2 o'clock Tuesday morning in a barn at the rear of August Miller's residence on Twenty-ninth avenue west and Third street. The whole block might have been wiped out as a heavy wind was blowing at the time, had it not been for Park Policeman Dash, who happened to be passing and turned in an alarm. It is thought a tramp set the place on fire as one was seen near the barn only a short time before.

PARDONED TOO LATE.

Prisoner Dies Before Montana's Board Could Act.

Helena, Mont., Aug. 18.—A few days ago Governor Toole granted a pardon to Michael Mulich, who was serving seven years for manslaughter, but before the board of pardons could act Mulich died in the penitentiary.

District No. 2, United Mine Workers of America, comprising the states of Montana and Wyoming, is in convention here. The following officers were elected: John Morton of Stockett, Mont., president; Edwin Gilldroy of Dietz, Wyo., vice-president; James Morgan of Dietz, secretary and treasurer. The miners will confer here on Aug. 22, with the representatives of the coal companies on a scale of wages for the year.

Henry A. Lambert, a well-known employee of the Montana Ore Purchasing company, is dead from an abscess in the ear. He was born May 1, 1854, in St. Paul, and was the son of Judge H. H. Lambert, one of the early settlers of Minnesota.

Resplendent in her coat of new paint, and with her crew immaculate in fine raiment and polished shoes, the Fern will steam into Duluth harbor tomorrow afternoon at 2 o'clock and tie up at her new home.

Fred Engels, who left the boat at Houghton, arrived in the city this morning and stated that the Fern was to be brought in at that hour tomorrow, or as nearly that time as possible.

It is hoped by the friends of the naval reserves that as large a crowd as possible will be on hand to welcome the reserves home from their trip and do honor to the occasion of the arrival of the boat.

La Brosse's Marine band will meet the boat and help give the sailors a proper reception.

Commander Guy A. Eaton is in charge of the vessel, which he has striven so hard to secure for the use of the Minnesota division of this branch of the service.

FAIL TO IDENTIFY MARSH AS "MR. DOVE."

Plymouth, Mass., Aug. 18.—The Chicago men who came here today to see George L. Marsh failed to identify him as the man wanted in Chicago in connection with the murder of William Bate in November last.

The party, which consisted of Detective P. J. Sheehan and Thomas Slavin of Chicago, Peter Sturtz of Romeo, Ill., and another man, arrived at Brockton last evening. They came here today and saw Marsh in Plymouth jail, where he has been confined since his arrest on the murder charge.

FEUD CLANS MEET.

One Killed and One Is Seriously Wounded.

Cincinnati, Aug. 18.—A Times-Star special from Pikeville, Ky., says that in a second meeting of the feud clans of the Mullins and Flemings on the Pike at the Letcher county line, Monroe Seward, a member of the Mullins faction, was killed and Henry Mullins dangerously wounded. The shooting was general, but all escaped save Seward and Henry Mullins. Creed Vanover, of the Fleming faction, was slightly injured.

O. R. T. STRIKE NEARS AN END

Will Probably Be Called Off as Soon as Vote Is Known.

St. Paul, Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—Indications today point to the probability of the calling off of the strike of the telegraphers on both the Great Northern and Northern Pacific roads before night. It is known that President Perham of the O. R. T. has sent out a request for a vote of the men who are out on the Northern Pacific road as well as to those on the Great Northern, and that the returns will come by wire sometime tonight. Although President Perham says the reason for his action in regard to the men on the Great Northern system was that the company had offered the men a raise in pay, an official in General Manager Ward's office speaking for Mr. Ward, said positively that no tender of a raise in pay had been made to their striking employes.

"A committee of the men notified us that they were going to call the strike off," he said, "and that is all there is to it. We are not dealing with the men as members of the O. R. T. nor any of the O. R. T. officials."

President Perham it is said, will leave St. Paul tonight for San Francisco. This is taken as an indication that he has given up the fight.

A TERRIFIC WIND STORM AT TOPEKA.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 18.—A terrific wind storm, accompanied by a heavy fall of rain, prevailed here early today, the wind, according to the local weather bureau, blowing at the rate of fifty miles an hour. The buildings of Crosby & Co., the Shawnee mills and the Crawford opera house were unroofed. Many residences were damaged, barns were blown down, trees were uprooted and much other minor damage was wrought. As far as known no one was injured.

AGENT IS ARRESTED

Representative of St. Paul Liquor Firm In Court.

Agents for outside wine or liquor firms who sell small orders to consumers, will have a hard time of it in Duluth if the prosecution of Louis Patterson now being conducted by County Attorney McClintock, is successful.

Patterson was arrested on a warrant sworn out by Henry Caplov, to whom it is claimed Patterson sold two gallons of whisky, as an agent for the California Wine House of St. Paul.

He was arraigned in the municipal court on the charge of selling liquor without a license, and waived preliminary examination at the advice of his attorney, C. O. Baldwin. He was held to the grand jury by Judge Cutting, and the case will be tried there.

The case is in the nature of a test case, and the two attorneys have filed a stipulation of certain points which will be admitted as proven. The case will decide whether or not agents for firms in other cities have the right to dispose of liquor in small quantities at retail in the city of Duluth without taking out a license.

The case is one of considerable importance, as there are a number of outside firms doing business in this manner.

SUGAR RATE WAR.

New York, Aug. 18.—News that the sugar rate war between Eastern, Western and gulf line railroads, which was proceeding to a harmonious settlement last week, is to be continued, was made public here today. As the voting now stands there is no provision for further peace conferences.

WILL PLAY HERE.

Sunday's Double Header Is Transferred to Duluth.

The double-header between the Duluth and Superior ball teams which was to have been played in Superior next Sunday, has been transferred to Duluth, and the two teams will play two games for one price of admission at Athletic park.

The first game will be commenced promptly at 2 o'clock and the second will be played as soon as the first one is over.

MUST PAY A TAX ON TIMBER

Government Will Assess Americans Speculating In British Columbia.

Vancouver, B. C., Aug. 18.—Many millionaire Americans, including the Weyerhauser interests, have been taking up hundreds of square miles of timber on the supposed route of the projected Grand Trunk Pacific railroad, through the forests of British Columbia, and the timber will be held under special license for speculative purposes.

The provincial government posted notices that all timber held under special license would be taxed 2 per cent of its value. It is estimated that $20,000,000 worth of timber is so held, and that the province will thus collect $400,000 if the holders of timber will stand it.

If, in store advertising, "the wish is father to the thought" of effective publicity, and grandfather to the act, the trio should form a happy family.

KANSAS IS RICH

Farmers Are Not Borrowing But Want to Lend.

Loan Agents Complain Bitterly of the Changed Conditions.

Abilene, Kan., Aug. 18.—"I will have to go out of the business, I guess," said a loan agent here. "The only way I can get business is to stop lending money and go to borrowing. The modern mortgages all have clauses that allow the farmers to pay off any part of the principle at the time of any interest payment. They are doing this at such a liberal rate as to make it hard lines for the loan agent. I had no business here and so went up in Northwest Kansas to a little town called Palnville, where I made a dozen loans in two days four years ago. I called on the local banker and asked him if he knew where I could lend some money.

"'Not around here,' said he, 'I have more money on hand myself than I know what to do with.' I stopped at three other towns and in all got similar replies. Here at home when a bank failed because it was paying 10 per cent interest on $200,000 of deposit; now the three banks have more than $700,000 on deposit for which they are paying no interest."

It is nearly as bad when it comes to buying land. The farmers who sell do not want money. A resident here went out Southwest a few days ago and looked at a farm for which $8,000 was asked. He decided that he would take it.

"How are you going ao pay for it?" asked the farmer.

"Spot cash—have the money in the bank now for you."

"Well, I don't want the cash, and will not sell it that way. I want to get a mortgage for most of it."

The buyer finally offered to pay only half and gave a mortgage for the remaining $4,000, but even this was not enough and the deal fell through because he would not give a larger mortgage. This condition is somewhat different from that of six years ago, when every sale was on a basis of all the cash possible.

The Middle West feels so strong this year and the farmers have been so fortunate that producers are not disposed to rush their crops to market at low prices, as they have been accustomed to do in past years. They endeavored then to sell as rapidly as possible at the opening of the crop season, now they hold for what they consider a proper price everything they raise—unless forced to sell to prevent deterioration. They test things, too. One farmer in this county has been experimenting with wheat. He finds that in the course of a week's drying process 1,000 bushels of new wheat will shrink 4.9 bushels, an amount that is worth considering when large quantities are held. He has been publishing this for the benefit of his neighbors.

A new kind of buyer is a Missouri man who is writing to the county officers and land dealers in Central and Western Kansas to this effect: "I will buy all the land in your county that can be sold for $100 a quarter section and pay cash for the same." One county clerk up in Northwest Kansas replied: "If you will raise your price to $100 an acre I think I can get something for you."

As an instance of the rate at which lands go up in price is a quarter section northwest of this place. Last fall an agent, who had held it for many years, sold it for $2,000 thinking he was doing well. Last spring it sold for $2,400. Last June two young women who had saved a little money bought it for $2,600. Last week they sold it for $3,200. It may be sold again this fall for a yet larger figure. A stenographer working in a real estate office bought a quarter section in Western Kansas for $500 last fall. She has been offered $700 and is hold it for an even $1,000. She is likely to get it.

ROMANTIC EVENT

In Connection With Ashland Iron Mine on Gogebic.

Demise of Woman Whose Peculiar Powers Discovered It.

Ironwood, Mich., Aug. 18.—The demise of Mrs. Hayes-Chynoweth, whose death at the age of 80 occurred recently at "Edenvale," her home near San Jose, Cal., has served to recall a romantic incident in connection with the history of the big Ashland iron mine, in this city, with which she was intimately associated. The Ashland is the westernmost property of the Michigan portion of the Gogebic range, being located on a hill rising on the eastern bank of the Montreal river, and for the past few years has been operated by the Cleveland Cliffs Iron company, one of the largest of the so-called independent iron mining corporations engaged in the Lake Superior region.

The mine was first opened by the owners of the fee, J. O. and E. A. Hayes, the latter since and at present a congressman from California, and later was secured on lease by the Peokee & Gogebic Development company, by which it was worked until 1895, when the property was abandoned as worked out. The Hayes brothers, who had removed to California, thus had the mine thrown back on their hands, a thoroughly discredited property, which had been surrendered as worthless by a strong corporation owing to the apparent complete exhaustion of its ore bodies.

Miss. Hayes-Chynoweth, the mother of the Messrs. Hayes, was according to many persons who claimed evidence of the occult abilities attributed to her, gifted with peculiar powers. The Hayes brothers, who are shrewd and successful business men, had implicit confidence in their mother's prognostications, and in justice to her and to them it should be said that her advice proved uniformly good, even when apparently unwarranted by existing conditions.

Madam Hayes, from her home in California, in a literal sense turned her spiritual eyes upon the Ashland mine, more than two thousand miles distant. The underground openings were minutely described to her, it is related, and she indicated the existence of large ore bodies remaining untouched, locating them with such exactitude that anyone acquainted with the mine would know just where to drift or crosscut to reach them, if they existed. As soon as the snows melted in the spring of 1896, the Hayes brothers were on the ground, and they began actual mining work in June of that year. The mine was freed from water, and temporary shaft houses were rigged, the old ones having been allowed to fall into the pits when the ground caved. It is perhaps no exaggeration to state that at that time there were scarcely as much as a thousand tons of ore in sight in the entire mine.

It was hinted when the Hayes brothers resumed work at the Ashland that they were acting under the supposedly inspired instructions of their mother, and there was no little snickering on the part of the incredulous, who were in the great majority. This did not bother the Messrs. Hayes, and from the first it was evident that they were not merely exploring for ore, but were arranging to reopen the mine upon a large scale, their plans having been perfected before the first hammer was struck on a drill or the first gallon of water forced from the mine.

Smiling incredulity was changed to mild surprise when the first ore body was actually opened by the miners, but as strike after strike was recorded and the Ashland was changed from an abandoned seram into a big mine with millions of tons of ore in sight, within a few months, the scoffers became mum. In every case, it is related, the ore was found where the mother of the owners had told them to seek for it. The property was in exceedingly bad condition for mining, yet in the first twelve months the Hayes brothers mined and brought to the surface something like 150,000 tons of high-grade ore, in addition to which large ore bodies were cut by diamond drills at great depth.

One series of holes was bored on the western boundary of the property, and another across the eastern end, near the line of the steel corporation's big Norrie mine, those on the west being sunk an average of about 1,000 feet each, while those on the east, owing to the incline of the ore measures, were drilled to about 1,500 feet. The deepest hole on the west encountered a body of ore at a depth of 750 feet, which was apparently about 150 feet thick, measuring nearly vertically, followed by a dike of diorite, then another lens of ore, another dike and more ore. The same formation was met with in the east end, in the borings made there, showing continuity of formation and the unquestionable existence of enormous deposits of ore below the deepest of the old workings, extending under the entire tract from east to west. The cores from the holes showed a fine Bessemer hematite, almost equal to the best ever mined in the Lake Superior region.

The resuscitation of the mine was almost a resurrection. In 1896 the output of the property was 253,000 tons, and in the spring of 1901 the Ashland mine was sold by Hayes Bros. to the Cleveland Cliffs company at a figure not made public, but generally thought to be about $3,000,000. Since then the mine has shipped more than a million and a half tons of ore, bringing the aggregate since the opening of the property to an amount in excess of 4,000,000 tons, and it will take several decades of mining before the ore bodies at present in sight are exhausted.

This is a strange tale to be related to the public for fact, yet it has been given official cognizance by the office of the commissioner of mineral statistics for Michigan, which, in a report on the subject, declared that the facts could be readily verified by the skeptical.

At the time of her death Mrs Hayes-Chynoweth was the head of the "True Life" church, founded by her at San Jose two years ago and she was also editor of the True Life, a monthly periodical, devoted to her religious tenets and the cultivation of the spiritual life. She was a woman of exceptional mental endowment, of deep spiritual insight and of broad charity. Her religious fervor was an inheritance from her father, Rev. Abraham Folsom, a minister of the Free Will Baptist church.

Mrs. Hayes-Chynoweth was born at Holland, Erie county, N. Y., in 1825. Later the family removed to Cuba, N. Y., and when the daughter, Mary, was 23 years of age they settled in Wisconsin, then sparsely inhabited. Pioneer life and the family's limited means prevented Miss Folsom from attending school, her whole period of schooling being included within a year, but by reading and research she acquired such a thorough education that her labors as a teacher were entirely successful and she followed the profession for some time. Her salary as teacher went toward paying off the mortgage on her father's farm.

At the age of 28 Miss Folsom became the wife of Anson E. Hayes, a cousin of the late President Rutherford B. Hayes. She first visited California in 1872, and after the death of her husband located permanently at San Jose. Her second husband, T. B. Chynoweth, a San Jose attorney, died about a year after their marriage, since which her time and labors had been given almost entirely to religious activities. Her sons have become prominent men in the Santa Clara valley, and as proprietor of the San Jose Mercury and Herald wield a large influence.

DOINGS IN MICHIGAN

Workman Loses Life By Being In Too Great a Hurry.

Sault Ste. Marie—Because he was too anxious to quit work when the whistle blew Walontine Kyykky, a Finn, was killed while trying to get out of the hold of the steamer Thoano. He grabbed the cable of the hoist and was drawn up, but hit his head on a hatch and fell to the bottom of the hold, his brains being dashed out. He leaves a wife and four children in Finland.

Florence—A. E. Edmonds and a party of Rhinelander capitalists recently inspected the Pine river near Florence where they will put in a big power plant and other improvements at the cost of several hundred thousand dollars. There is a forty-nine foot fall in the river and 12,000 horsepower will be developed. This will be used to supply the cities of Florence and Crystal Falls with light and to operate an interurban line from Iron Mountain to Spread Eagle lake and to Florence and Crystal Falls. Mr. Edmonds authorized this statement. The power station will be eight miles from Florence.

Raber—The saw mill owned and operated by the Mud Lake Lumber company at Raber, Chippewa county, was burned to the ground during the night. The origin of the blaze is a mystery. The company had a watchman on duty, but when he discovered the fire it was beyond control. The mill was valued at $25,000 and furnished employment to a large number of men. The company has a two-year cut in sight and the mill owned by W. D. Hitchcock of De Tour may be secured to complete the work. The Mud Lake Lumber company is one of the big concerns in this part of the country, having operated at Raber, on an extensive scale for several years. The lumber and logs at Raber were not damaged by fire.

Iron Mountain—An agent of a Chicago concern sold to two Iron Mountain societies four flags at a cost of $375 each, making a total of $1,500.

Vulcan—Rev. Father Cavicel of Vulcan is formulating plans for the erection of a Catholic church at Faithorn. As a starter, George Harter has pledged $200 to the building fund.

Crystal Falls—The Crystal Falls board of public works has engaged an engineer to make the required survey and prepare plans for the sewer system it is proposed to establish in that city. The expert secured is E. J. Bradbury of Columbus, O. He will be paid $10 per day for his work.

HAPPENINGS IN DAKOTAS

Fargo Woman Charged With Kidnaping For Immoral Purposes.

NORTH DAKOTA.

Fargo—Charged with kidnaping a 14-year-old girl for immoral purposes, Mrs. Nettie Sherwood is having a speedy trial here. Mrs. Sherwood dressed the girl in long skirts and this week took her to Tower City, where they were located by the girl's mother. Mrs. Sherwood was held to the district court and it is in session, she is being given an immediate trial.

His attempt to board a moving train at Castleton resulted in injuries which caused the death of William Maunu, of Menahga, Minn. He was brought here to be taken to the hospital, but died while being removed from the station. He and two brothers were on their way to the North Dakota harvest fields.

A tour of the principal cities in North Dakota is to be made by the First Regiment band of Lisbon. The trip is possible as a result of the interest taken in the organization by Governor Sarles, who has been a member of the Hillsboro band many years. The organization is directed by W. D. Wallace and is easily the crack musical organization of the state.

Valley City—For several years there has been a demand here for houses to rent that could not be supplied, although seventy-five to a hundred new houses are being built every year, the present season being no exception. New residences are but a small part of the improvements for this year, however. The state normal school has completed a $25,000 dormitory for girl students, it being the second completed the last of next month, a $40,000 east wing addition to the normal to be used exclusively for a model school.

The Catholics have in construction a fine $15,000 church, and the Methodists are also erecting a $12,000 edifice. John Tracy, cashier of the First National bank is building a $5,000 house, and E. O. Dobbin is building one to cost half that amount.

Velva—In an altercation between Jonas Peterson and Emil Roebuck the latter had his right leg broken. Peterson was fined $50 and costs on a charge of assault and battery.

SOUTH DAKOTA.

Chamberlain—The auction sale of lots in the new town of Reliance, the second town west of the Missouri river on the extension of the Milwaukee railroad, was held in Chamberlain by officers of the railroad company, and attracted a crowd. Nearly all the lots in the platted business section were disposed of, among the new institutions for which sites were purchased being a bank, two lumber yards, two elevators, two general stores, a hardware store and a drug store. Most of these new business enterprises will be in operation in a week. The prices ran at about $250 for business lots.

Howard—Fire at Carthage Thursday morning destroyed a half block of business places, the principal ones being Satter's general store, loss, $1,200; Strand's general store, loss $12,000; Opera house, loss, $3,000; Shield's hardware, loss, $1,000; Typley building, loss $1,500. Young, barber; Owens, restaurant, and Palmer, real estate, had slight losses. All had insurance. The artesian water supply saved the town.

Aberdeen—O. D. Buchecker, the eccentric Walworth county man, is again an inmate of the Brown county jail. He came in from the West on a Milwaukee train Tuesday evening, attired in expensive clothes and wearing the high silk hat which is becoming noted in Northern South Dakota. Hailing a cab, he tossed a dollar to the driver and told the driver he wanted to go to jail to "see some of his friends." Upon his arrival at the jail he requested leave to talk with the inmates. Leave was granted and he shook hands with them all and presented them with a huge shortcake. He also gave each prisoner a silver dollar. Buchecker then urged the officers to permit him to remain in jail, but the officers refused his request. Friday Buchecker was arrested on the charge of being drunk, and rejoined his friends in jail until his trial.

Telephone messages from Faulkton state that a strip of country near that city five miles wide and ten miles long has been devastated by hail. The fields of ripened grain which were all ready for the harvester were threshed out on the ground by the hail, and the loss to the farmers will be very heavy. The damage is estimated at 70 per cent of the crop that was still standing.

The Milwaukee road has purchased a tract of twenty acres about six miles west of Aberdeen upon which it will construct a reservoir for water storage purposes. The water supply of the road in Aberdeen is deficient and the reservoir will be built to increase the supply. The water will probably be pumped from the reservoir to the roundhouse in Aberdeen.

PARISIANS WONDER

At the Extravagance Shown By Shah of Persia.

He Is Very Nervous But Absolutely Unafraid of Assassins.

New York, Aug. 18.—The visit of the shah of Persia impresses on Europe that it should import its treasury secretaries from Teheran. How Muzafer-ed-Din can afford to travel in the imperial style that surrounds him surpasses any understanding. He has a suite of sixty gentlemen, including viziers, chamberlains and others of his court.

No wonder that stories are current that many trunks of the "King of Kings" are filled with gold. But where does he get the money? Persia has owed $17,000,000 to a Russian bank since 1902 and until this is paid can contract no other foreign loan without that bank's permission.

The shah's menials are rather more numerous than the gentlemen of his suite, which numbers, altogether, 127. They occupy very much of the Elysee Palace hotel, which goes in successfully for grand style, and, therefore, attracts many American millionaires, who consider it cheap because there are five francs in a dollar. The first and second floors of the hotel—the shah's own rooms—with every kind of hot and cold baths, are known as the Belgian king's.

The juvenile princes and their governor have the apartments of Tom Walsh, the Colorado boss—that is to say, the apartments assigned to Walsh when he and Leopold, his friend, stay at the Elysee Palace. At Contraxville the Persians had an entire hotel to themselves in the park. This is the dearest of the Vosges watering places.

At Ostend they will not have less spacious lodgings. They will stay there for about a fortnight, or longer if the shah finds himself strengthened by the air. They then go on to The Hague to visit Queen Wilhelmina, whose husband, doubtless in the German interest, wants to make up to the shah but not, presumably, to the extent of paying the hotel bills. Think what a suite of 127 will cost in the Netherlands!

In returning home the shah will visit Berlin and St. Petersburg. The Grand Duchess Vladimir, he told M. Loubet, expressed the highest hopes in the final triumph of Russia, when he met her at Contrexville, but her looks contradicted her words.

The shah's treasurer must pay out much money for his master's railway expenses.

Muzafer-ed-Din's fatalism keeps fear of assassination out of his heart and mind, but it does not tone his delicate nerves. His typically Persian face would be remarkably handsome had not a too imperial Asiatic life left its mark. These are visible in the relaxed cheeks, underlip and eyelids and one wonders whether he is not threatened with general paralysis. Nose, eyebrows and forehead do not tell the same tale and the eyes themselves, apart from their setting, are magnificent.

The shah suffers from nervous terrors and has not sufficient will to banish them. He abhors anything of a bright yellow color. Knowing this, Mme. Loubet banished Marechal Niel roses from the decorations on the day the shah took luncheon at the Elysee. Being so nervous, his Persian majesty travels in special trains, whose speed must not exceed twenty-four miles. To whiz along at sixty miles would knock his nerves to pieces. Besides, the line has to be kept clear while he travels.

Muzafer-ed-Din's rheumatism has bent his shoulders, but he has a striking air of dignity. He is mild, kindly, courteous, intensely receptive and easily amused. It vastly pleases him to watch the ways of children, their nurses and the society people in the Champs Elysee. As a spectator he has a coign of vantage on his balcony looking on the Rue Gaillee, a few dozen yards from the great thoroughfare through which the "elegant life" of Paris flows on its way to and from the Bois.

Nothing amuses the shah more than to see children, nurses, soldiers, errand boys and society people revolving like mad on the wooden horses. The spirit they throw into this harmless pleasure explains to him why France was, until 1870, and may again be the great military nation of Europe. The French, he reflects, have saltpeter in their veins, the British beer and the Japanese their camphorated shimose.

The shah has six sons and eleven daughters and brought with him his youngest son, 11 years old, and three grandsons a little younger. This son was born four days after the assassination of the late shah, Nasz-ed-Din, and is named for him.

These three are beautiful children, but life in Paris is not all play and bonbons for them. They must study. A staff of carefully chosen professors—French, German and Persian—teach them under a Persian governor. A shiek Islam instills principles of religion and justice into their young minds.

The shh is mentally curious. Despite his nervousness, he calmly endured the sight of his own and of his grand vizier's skeletons as Curie, who with his wife discovered it, demonstrated the porperties of radium in the underground cafe room of the Elysee palace.

It was not easy to induce that savant to go there to make the demonstration. He abhors flunkeyism and has principles which run against nobility distinctions. However, he complied with the shah's desire to hear from him an account of the discovery of radium and to see its strangeness. He did so because it had been explained that his compliance would open Persia to Western scinetists.

Curie, however, was not to be persuaded at the close of the lecture to accept, though from the shah's own hand, the insignia of the Lion and the Sun in brilliants.

He gave as his reason that he had declined the cross of the Legion of Honor offered to him by the French government and besides his principles forbid him to take any decoration, nor would he accept a souvenir. He agreed, however, to be the medium in passing on from the shah $60 to the Soclete des Arts, of which he and his wife are members.

DESERTED BY FRIENDS

Man of Wealthy Connections Takes His Life In Park.

Philadelphia, Aug. 18.—The body of a man supposed to be Joseph Alexander Thompson of Pittsburg was found on a bench in Fairmount park near the Belmont mansion, yesterday. The cause of death has not been determined, though it is probably a case of suicide. In a letter found on him the writer claims relationship with the Thaw family of Pittsburg. The letter says:

"I am Joseph Alexander Thompson of Pittsburg, Pa., son of Andrew Turley Thompson, who for years was the agent of the Young Men's Bible society of Allegheny county. My brother, William R. Thompson of Sparkill, N. Y., knows my circumstances and will not help me or my family. He married Mary Thaw, daughter of William Thaw, who died in Paris. He was second vice president of the Pennsylvania railroad; also of the firm of Mark & Thaw of Pittsburg and father of Alice Thaw, who married the Earl of Yarmouth and Harry Thaw who was supposed to be married to Miss Evelyn Nesbit, the concert artist. I am connected with Harriet Thaw who lives on Cross street between Ninth and Tenth and who was allowed to live in squalor with rats as her companions as one of our relatives. Me and mine are starving and have been for the past five months but they would not help me."

"He allowed his brother, Dr. A. D. Thompson to starve to death in Philadelphia in 1879 or 1880 and also his ——— Jr. Thompson of Penn avenue Pittsburg, to fall so low that he had to send him to Florida, where he died and still he gives $50,000 to the W. & I. library. What have I, as his brother to look for? I have been a slave to hard work for forty years and as Virginia says "There is no way but this." Joseph Thompson, 130 South Hicks street, Philadelphia, Aug. 16$, 1905."

New York, Aug. 18.—When inquiry was made at the home of William R. Thompson in Sparkhill, N. Y., today, concerning Joseph Alexander Thompson, the statement was made that Mr. Thompson was ill and could see no one. From the person who answered it was impossible to secure any information regarding the dead man.

DROWNED IN OIL,

But the Tank Contained Only Six Inches.

Chanute, Kan., Aug. 18.—Dudley W. Chambers was drowned in an oil tank containing only six inches of oil. It is believed the fumes first caused him to faint and fall. The accident happened on the Burghart lease, five miles southeast of Chanute. Mr. Chambers was field manager for the Southwestern Oil and Gas company, which is operating on the Burghart lease. He went out to the property a few days ago. His horse was found hitched to the fence. It is thought that the victim was asphyxiated by the gases arising from the oil. The top of the tank was broken in, showing that it had given way beneath his weight. He had been unable to crawl up the greasy sides of the tank and it became his death chamber. There was only about six inches of oil in the tank. Mr. Chambers had been living in Chanute for two years or more. He was proprietor of the Delmonico hotel for a time, and after selling out there worked as ticket agent for the Santa Fe railroad here. He had been working for the Southwestern about a week.

TWELVE KILLED AND FIVE INJURED AT QUARRY.

Allentown, Pa., Aug. 18.—The officials of the Lehigh Portland Cement company yesterday made a statement to the effect that twelve workmen are known to have been killed in the cavein at the company's quarry at Ormrod, Wednesday, and five were injured. Eleven bodies have been recovered. It is possible that additional quarrymen are buried under the limestone, and if this is the case they may not be found for several weeks.

JAPS WANT MORE GUNS.

Berlin, Aug. 18.—The Japanese government is negotiating with the Krupps for fresh orders of armor plate and guns. Director Eccius of the Krupp firm is here arranging the contracts with the Japs agents.

WIND STOPS FAST TRAIN

Curious Achievement of Recent Severe Storm In Nevada.

Reno, Nev., Aug. 18.—Nevada has just been visited by the worst windstorm or cyclone in its history. As a result telegraph poles for a distance of several miles on each side of Battle Mountain were blown down, some of them being twisted into splinters. A train running at the rate of forty miles an hour was brought to a stop with the throttle wide open. Cattle and horses are reported to have been killed and a portion of the town of Battle Mountain was literally turned upside down.

Trees and sage brush were uprooted and carried along in the path of the storm. Fences were torn up, barns and other smaller buildings were overturned and wrecked.

One end of the twister struck Battle Mountain. The people were warned of the approaching cyclone and were fleeing when it struck the town. Chimneys were torn from their fastenings, the bricks being whirled through the air, porches were torn off and large buildings were in all instances shaken and in a few cases literally turned on their foundations. An immense windmill in front of the Railroad hotel was lifted from its fastenings and carried to the roof of the hotel. The immense weight of the wheels caused the roof to give way, sending debris, iron and timbers into the rooms below, from which only a few moments before a number of frightened occupants had fled.

On the Southern Pacific the trains were given a hard tussle. A westbound heavily laden freight train, running at the rate of forty miles an hour, was brought to a complete standstill just west of Battle Mountain. The fact that it was not wrecked was due to the fact that the cyclone struck it head-on. The train was in charge of Engineer Boutelle and despite the fact that his train was under way and the throttle wide open at the time he could not make progress until the storm passed over. The only damage done the train was a smashed car window and a few car roofs.

TABLET TO BE RAISED

To Heroic Engineer of the Santa Fe.

Topeka, Kan., Aug. 18.—A bronze tablet will be erected by public subscription in the state house to the memory of Edward Grafstrom, the chief mechanical engineer for the Santa Fe, who lost his life during the flood of 1903 in saving the lives of people who had been caught by the rising water in North Topeka.

In design the tablet shows in bas relief an excellent likeness of Mr. Grafstrom. Also in bas relief is the representation of the Milan arch bridge, which was partially destroyed by that disastrous flood, and another design of a locomotive, one of those of the Santa Fe road with the design of which Mr. Grafstrom was intimately familiar. The inscription on the tablet is as follows:

"In memory of Edward Grafstrom, son of Col. Carl Alexander and Cecelia Grafstrom. Born in Motola, Sweden, Dec. 19, 1862. He was educated at Orebro university and Boras Institute of Technology, where at the age of 19 he received the degree of mechanical engineer and at the time of his death was chief mechanical engineer of the Atchinson, Topeka & Santa Fe railway.

"During the great flood of June, 1903, which swept over North Topeka, he designed and built a small sidewheel steamer in which, with a volunteer crew of six men, he rescued hundreds of people. While making the last trip on the night of June 2, 1903, the boat was capsized and Mr. Garfstrom was drowned.

"His noble personality endeared him to all.

"This tablet is erected in grateful appreciation of his heroic sacrifices in giving up his life to save others."

HALE AND HEARTY

And Able to Travel at Age of 100.

Webster, Mass., Aug. 18.—Hale and hearty and in comparatively good health for his advanced age, Benjamin G. Warner of South Woodstock was 100 years old yesterday. He is probably the oldest person in this section.

His numerous relatives and friends assembled at his shady farm home and celebrated the occasion with simple exercises. The exercises commenced with the planting of a memorial white oak tree on the lawn, and ended with the singing of "Old Hundred." Judge A. McMathewson of New Haven, a grandson of Mr. Warner, presided at the exercises. Remarks were also made by Frederick W. Hinrichs, the Rev. Mr. Hibbard and Clarence W. Bowen.

The aged man has been in the habit for the past quarter of a century annually to make journeys alone to Hartford, Providence and other places. He recently went to Putnam, Conn., to partake of the May breakfast prepared by the Woman's Board of the Day-Kimball hospital.

Mr. Warner seems apparently in such health as to round out a few more years to his already remarkably long life.

CONSTIPATION is a crowding of the bowels with fecal matter that is not carried off by the natural passage. It is caused primarily by lack of certain elements in the food which tend to more or less imperfect digestion and to hardening of the fecal matter, to sluggish, torpid liver, and to lack of secretions in the nature of lubricating fluids in the bowels and intestines.

CALIFORNIA PRUNE WAFERS supply the lacking elements in the food and also act as a gentle tonic on the glands which recreate the gastric juices, the bile and other elements.

CALIFORNIA PRUNE WAFERS if taken as directed, will positively cure the most obstinate cases of Constipation, Biliousness, Torpid Liver, Indigestion, etc., so as to stay cured. 100 Wafers, 25 cents. Sold by

INDIANA MAN

Was Enraged on Being Called a Democrat.

Goshen, Ind., Aug. 18.—When Daniel Hibschman, an old soldier, hailed George W. Phillips, a comrade, with "Hello, there, you old Democrat," Phillips, a pronounced Republican, took offense and picking Hibschman up threw him through a plateglass window, injuring him seriously. Phillips was compelled to pay $25 for a new window. In explanation he said he hated Democrats worse than poison.

MISS ALICE'S ESCORT

At St. Louis Fair Remembered by the President.

Hanover, Pa., Aug. 18.—Capt. William E. Weigle of near Hanover, who has traveled extensively and served Uncle Sam in various ways, has been appointed superintendent of transportation at Panama by the United States government and has just sailed for his foreign post of duty.

Mr. Weigle was one of the men in charge of the Philippine exhibit at the Louisiana Purchase exposition in St. Louis last year and he acted as the escort of Miss Alice Roosevelt, daughter of the president, when she visited the World's fair.

X-RAY DISCLOSED NEEDLE.

Instrument Had Lamed Sufferer for Three Years.

Shenandoah, Pa., Aug. 18.—Dr. J. Spencer Callen, with the assistance of the X-ray, has discovered a needle in the foot of H. J. Price of Tamaqua, who suffered for three years with a swollen and lame foot, which at times kept him confined to his home.

Then the needle was extracted, giving the patient great relief. How the needle got into his foot is a mystry.

BLIND TWELVE YEARS,

But Surgeons Hope to Restore Her Sight.

South Bethlehem, Pa., Aug. 18.—Whipped in the face by a big blacksnake while at an Evangelical association campmeeting at Kunkletown, a dozen years ago, and blinded the next moment, Miss Sarah Bonser, just out of her teens, is at a private hospital, and specialists now have hopes of restoring her sight.

Almost ever since the mishap she has suffered from ulcerations of the eyesockets, and now that the surgeons have overcome that affection they will resort to a heroic operation to restore her sight.

LUMBERMEN AT WAR.

Shall Sluice Gates Be Shut or Open?

Chesuncook, Me., Aug. 18.—The lumber war, which attracted attention on the St. John river during the spring, has broken out again, this time at Chamberlain lake, and serious trouble is feared.

According to reports received here there was a clash at the lake between a crew employed by the St. John Lumber company and the agents of the Marsh & Ayer Co., a Bangor firm.

It is reported that the St. John crew went to the locks which dam the foot of the lake and attempted to raise the gates. These locks are controlled by Marsh & Ayer. The attendant in charge says that the St. John crew assaulted him, took his rifle and raised the gates despite his protest.

An agent of the Marsh & Ayer Co. has gone to Chamberlain lake with the intention of closing the gates. It is feared that trouble will result if the gates are again closed.

The St. John men want the water running to clean up their drives, while the Bangor firm wishes to hold it back for power purposes.

CREPE FOR POODLE.

Entire Family Attends the Pet's Obsequies.

Cincinnati, Aug. 18.—Crepe hung from the front door of the store conducted by Carl Schwartz, in the West end, and business was suspended so that the proprietor and his family might pay tribute to the memory of their pet poodle, whose body lay in state in a tiny casket within the house.

Two days ago the dog disappeared. Searchers were sent out, and a liberal reward was offered. The poodle came back badly injured by a wagon, and it soon died.

Schwartz ordered all customers from the store, pulled down the shades and tacked up the crepe.

At night the bereaved members of the household accompanied the body to a secluded spot in the country, and there buried it. A slab affectionately inscribed marks the grave.

SUFFEL & CO. 131 W. Superior St.

In Woman's Sphere
Social, Musical and Club Circles.

One of the most charming of the week' affairs was the reception, this afternoon, at which Mrs. John Panton received at her beautiful home, on East Second street. The guests of honor were Mrs. A. W. Dutton and Mrs. William White. The home was beautifully decorated in the summer flowers. In the reception room, which was done in pink, the decorations were white asters and dainty asparagus ferns. In the living room and library sweet peas were used, and the dining room was especially attractive in decorations of nasturtiums. The pretty little flowers in the rich shades were used with candles in harmonizing colors.

Assisting about the rooms were Mrs. W. W. Billson, Mrs. George C. Howe, Mrs. F. J. Pulford, Mrs. W. E. Richardson and Mrs. W. T. Bailey. In the dining room, Mrs. C. A. Luster and Mrs. A. B. Wolvin and Mrs. H. F. Williamson, Jr., and Mrs. J. B. Cotton presided, and assisting them were Miss White, Miss Berenice Crowley, Miss Faye Richardson, Miss Rebecca Bailey and Miss Margaret Denfeld. On the porch, which was made exceedingly inviting with beautiful rugs and palms, punch was served by a number of the young society girls. They were Miss Maud White, Miss Elizabeth Shirley of Louisville, Ky.; Miss Esther Adams, Miss Katheryn Hubbell, Miss Barbara Rapley, Miss Florence Eaton and Miss Jennie Jewell Powell of Grand Rapids. During the receiving hours over 300 guests called.

Kitchen Shower.

Miss. R. G. Willis entertained at a kitchen shower last evening at her home on West Second street in honor of Miss Agnes Nelson. The forty guests were members of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Second Presbyterian church. An informal musical program was given by Miss Nellie Gorby and Miss Maud Manson. Miss Nelson will be married next Monday evening, at the home of her parents, to Arthur Smith.

Wedding Invitations.

Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Wilson have issued invitations for the wedding of their daughter, Miss Mae Wilson, and Emil J. Schweizer of Selma, Alabama. The wedding will take place at the home of the bride's parents at New Duluth, Wednesday, Aug. 30. After the wedding Mr. and Mrs. Schweizer will leave for Selma, where they will make their home.

Pretty Costume Party.

Misses Emma and Gertrude Swanstrom entertained at a pretty costume party last night at their home, 3290 West Eighth street. The rooms were prettily decorated, and the pretty costumes worn by the guests made the affair a most pleasant one. The guests were:

Mesdames—
Edwin S. Hall,	E. A. Swanstrom.
Clifford Keene,
Misses—
Emily Merritt,	Emma Johnson,
Viola Helm,	Leola Markus.
Annie Morgan,
Messrs—

WRITES OF ANTWERP.

Mrs. W. J. Bryan Writes of That Interesting City.

Mary Baird Bryan, the talented wife of the Hon. William J. Bryan, who, with her children, is spending the summer in Europe, has the following interesting letter in the current number of her distinguished husband's weekly paper, the Commoner:

He who comes to see old things needs only to look about him in Antwerp. The city dates back to the seventh century and our old friend, Julius Caesar, made here an invasion in 57 B. C. In one of the parks stands a very large statue of Boduognatus, chief of the Nervi, who headed the Belgic opposition to the said Julius. As I looked at the monument I could but mourn that this brave chief had not politely killed Caesar before he wrote his commentaries. What a relief to the schoolboys and girls of all generations!

While the site of the city is old, it has been burned and rebuilt until the newer part is quite modern. Electric cars, electric lights, bicycles and automobiles show the people in touch with the times. The older life shows itself in many customs.

One notices at once the industry of Belgium dogs. They pull the vegetable carts to market. The dogs pull, the good wife pushes and the husband does not appear. He may be at home dressing the children for school, but I have no positive proof. Dogs have a monopoly, too, on the milk trade. They trot along very business-like and waste no time. When a stop is made they crawl under the cart to rest in the shade.

Much moving of baggage, lumber, fuel and furniture is done in hand carts. Horses are comparatively scarce and out of the reach of many working people. The wagons for heavy hauling are built very low, which seems to me more sensible than our high wagons, so much less strength being needed for loading.

The air is full of tobacco smoke and music, and the whole population seems to eat out doors at innumerable restaurants whose little round tables stand on the walks and often in the streets and whose musicians play lustily to drown out neighboring bands.

In the hotel the door knobs are in the middle of the door and the key turns around twice before the door will open. The windows are hinged and open like shutters. The beds are high and mighty. Great pillows, corpulent bolsters and ponderous mattresses confront one, not to mention the quilted comfortables and the feather bed under which one is supposed to sleep. The American usually rebuilds his bed before retiring, and then sleeps in perfect comfort.

Antwerp is especially noted for her art gallery and for her zoological garden. The latter belongs to the government and is most beautifully arranged. So much money and care are used in providing a home for the animals as nearly as possible like their native haunts. The birds have cages so large that trees are included and they fly among the branches as if they were free. For birds which live near water, rocky ledges have been built on which to roost and build their nests. Quail and pheasant have thick low growing bushes in which to hide and the mountain goats have rocky heights which are quite surprising where they may climb and below are little caves for shelter. They rear their young here and seem very contented. There is no restlessness among the animals, as there is so often in our gardens. The collection is very complete, being regarded as one of the best in the world.

Among the statuary, "The Finding of Moses" gave me great pleasure. The princess, so thoroughly Egyptian and full of beauty, kneels on the brink of the stream, while before her in his bulrush cradle lies the infant, strong of limb and perfect in form. Lotus flowers bloom upon the water. I do not know who has carved this piece, but he has made the marble live.

In the gallery we found much to delight us. I remember best "The Raising of Jarius' Daughter," by J. de Vriendt. Upon a mosiac floor lies an oriental rug upon which the body of the daughter rests. Death is in every limb and in pallor of the face. The mother lies upon the floor with her face buried in the robe of her child—a picture of despairing grief. Hired mourners wail in the background, while near the body the film of burning incense rises.

Christ with His disciples about him stands near the door and listens with gentle pity to the father who tells his story. He speaks with eagerness and with hope. The picture is very large and so full of life one forgets he sees only flat canvas, and feels that he stands in the presence of the lowly Nazarene. MARY BAIRD BRYAN.

The Evening Story

MISS BETTY'S TRAMP

By L. B. Hotelling.

(Copyright, 1905, by Daily Story Pub. Co.)

Miss Betty sat on her little front porch just between daylight and dark. The fireflies flashed in and out among the tall hollyhocks and the mosquitoes sang lustily. Now and then, a village lad strolled by with his sweetheart on his arm. They recalled Miss Betty to the days when John and she strolled arm in arm, or spent the long, summer evening sitting on her mother's porch, planning for the future. But the future faded away after John went to war. He must have been killed; for he had not returned.

A tall man was passing. Miss Betty thought he was admiring her hollyhocks. She bent forward to get a better view of him in the gathering dusk. The man moved on and Miss Betty fell again to musing. Clouds were gathering in the east, and a sharp flash of lightning reminded Miss Betty that she left the milk in the pantry window. She brushed the mosquitoes from the screen door and passed through her well kept sitting room to the little kitchen beyond.

Miss Betty pushed the pantry door open. And there, with his back to her, stood a man devouring one of her fresh apple pies. Miss Betty was not the kind to scream; she just stood still for a moment, then said:

"Well?"

The big fellow wheeled about. His mouth was too full of pie to answer.

"Seems to me," said Miss Betty, "some people have lots of nerve."

"Guess they do, ma'am."

"Seems you have a lot."

"Well, ma'am, if you was so afired hungry, I guess you would have nerve."

"Bless me! If I was a man of your size I wouldn't talk of being hungry. Farmers are just begging for hands. You needn't tell me you can't get work."

"But, lady—"

"Don't 'But, lady' me. The world is full of such critters as you. I can not endure stealing. The good Lord never meant it to be, or he would have said as much in the Book."

The tramp bit another mouthful from the pie. In the growing darkness Miss Betty watched his outline for a moment.

"Land sakes! You suppose I would go about stealing my living? Bothering decent folks with your prowling, sneaking ways. I've a notion to call the neighbors."

The tramp lay the half-eaten pie on the shelf. "Look here, lady," and there was a soft tone to his voice, "this is the first time I ever stole for a living. I was powerful hungry. I saw you sitting on your front porch and decided to try your back door."

"That it? Why didn't you ask, like a man? Every last one of your class will sneak in on a lone woman."

"'Twas kind of sneaking lady, I'll admit. But for two days I've been without food." There was a tremble in the voice that touched Miss Betty's heart.

"If you had asked me I would have given you something to eat."

"You see, ma'am, I wasn't going to run a risk of being refused. And now, if you'll stand by, I'll leave as I came."

Miss Betty rattled the doorknob for a moment. "If I was sure you was deserving I would give you a meal. I'll do it, anyway. Just come out here in the kitchen and eat like a man. But mind you, don't try to play any of your tramp tricks on me," and Miss Betty picked up the broom.

Miss Betty lighted the lamp and turned to glance at her strange visitor. As their eyes became accustomed to the light each stared at the other. Miss Betty drew near him, looking him square in the face. For a moment neither moved. Then the tramp cried:

"Betty!" and held out his hand.

"John Dale, as I live!" Miss Betty grasped the kitchen table for support. "Oh, John, I thought you dead these eight years." Miss Betty passed her hand over her eyes, as though to brush away the darkness gathering about her.

"Betty, it's me. You needn't be afraid," said John, as he advanced toward her. "Shake hands, Betty."

Miss Betty backed away. "Not now, John. You didn't do as you agreed."

John let his hand fall by his side. "Betty, it's not my fault. If you had waited for me—"

"John—!"

"Wait, Betty, till I have finished, then I'll go my way. As I was saying, if you had waited for me, I would have done as I agreed. Maybe it does look bad for me to be caught stealing from you, Betty. But I was powerful hungry." John let his head fall on his breast.

"It's not so much the stealing, John, you could have let me know you still lived."

"I couldn't, Betty. I was a prisoner, besides, what was the use? You have a good man," John looked about the neat kitchen, "I know I've acted sneakin' but when a fellow is hungry—"

"You needn't say another word about being hungry, John. If you are hungry I'll get you something to eat, although you did play me a bad trick." For ten minutes Miss Betty busied herself between the kitchen table and the pantry. Once, in the pantry, she wiped the glad tears on her white apron. She lighted the well trimmed wick of the oil stove, and put the coffee over to boil. "Now, then," she said, as she seated herself in the cane bottom rocker, "tell me all about it. Land sakes!"

"It's a long story, Betty. But I'll tell it just as it happened. At our first battle I was taken and sent to Libby prison. One day I was sent to the 'Pen' at Andersonville. It was a hell, Betty, and I would have starved if the good Lord hadn't sent a storm that drove the guards off the stockade. Three companions and myself escaped to the mountains. For many weeks I lay sick with fever. One day, after I began to get better and thought of returning home, a trooper came into camp. He was from this part of the state. Of course, I was anxious to hear from home and you. He said that the old place had been burned, and you had married and gone away. Betty I did not care to come East after that. A month later I started West and have knocked from 'pillar to post' for five years. Some time ago I decided to come home and try my luck. But my money gave out and there was no other way but to tramp!

For a long moment the silence was only broken by the singing of the coffee pot. Miss Betty rose, filled a large white cup with coffee. "There, John, just sit up and eat your fill."

"Where is your man, Betty?"

"Man! I never had a man. Goodness, how some people tell things to suit themselves."

John placed his knife on the table and stared hard at Miss Betty. "But you used to live in the little town over yonder." John jerked his thumb over his shoulder.

"After mother died I came here to live with Aunt Hannah. Aunty has been dead these three years."

John looked into his coffee cup for a moment, stirring its contents. He drank, the cup dry, then wiped his mouth with the back of his hand.

"Well?"

John pushed his chair back from the table as he rose. He walked around the table and took Miss Betty's hands in his. "Betty, can we begin life where we left off?"

Miss Betty hung her head for a moment. When she looked up there were tears in her eyes, as she simply answered: "Land sakes, John, maybe, after you have cleaned up a bit."

RUIN BY RAIN THREATENED

Outlook For Crop In Red River Valley Is Serious.

Crookston, Minn., Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The luxuriant golden crop of grain standing in the fields of the fertile Red River valley at the present time promises to be ruined by the excessive moisture of the past few days. Following the rain of three days ago which was persistent and steady, a fourteen hour downpour, yesterday, has made matters very serious and unless conditions of the weather and atmosphere change immediately, the horny handed farmer of Northern Minnesota and the Dakotas will have to pay the fiddling weather man for a merry tune and one of the biggest crop losses on record in these parts in recent years.

With the crops in the excellent condition which they were previous to the rains, and the outlook for a bumper fall harvest, the rain comes as a most discouraging feature and farmers generally are blue over the matter. Farmers coming to the city, today, take a hopeful view of the matter and believe the rains will be succeeded by drying winds and warm weather needed for harvesting operations.

PRESIDENT TO FORCE ACTION

Far From Weakening on Railroad and Tariff Questions.

Washington, Aug. 18.—From Oyster Bay comes a report not calculated to add to the comfort of those statesmen who are opposed to doing anything in the next session of congress on railroad legislation or tariff consideration.

When it was semi-officially given out the other day that it had been decided that Mr. Roosevelt would not summon congress in extra session next November, the standpatters on railroads and tariff were more than jubilant. They took it to mean that the president was weakening in his advocacy of rate legislation and had abandoned tariff revision entirely.

But, according to some pretty straight information, the probable abandonment of an extra session has nothing to do with the rate legislation, unless it be to strengthen the president.

Ever since he first thought of summoning congress, the president has been besieged and importuned by senators and members who have offered abundant reasons against the proposition. In a great many instances, personal matters have been brought forward to induce the president not to issue a call for an extra session. This senator could not possibly be in Washington, and that congressman had made arrangements which would be sadly interfered with. The president is reported to have made the following remark, or one pretty near like it, to Senator Henry Cabot Lodge, who, by the way, seems to be just as close to the chief executive as ever, since his return from abroad:

"Lodge, you have asked me about that extra session. I suppose you would be all ready for it, but there are several who say they are not. Perhaps they will be better prepared on the railroad question in December than a few weeks earlier.

"It is a question which we must meet fairly and squarely without any shirking, either from the executive office or congress."

MAN KILLS DAUGHTER AND THEN HIMSELF.

Pueblo, Col., Aug. 18.—Frank Ward, foreman of a yard gang at the Pueblo steel works, has caused the death of his daughter, Frances, aged 16, by forcing her to swallow a quantity of poison, and then committed suicide by using the same drug. Neighbors said Ward had been drinking heavily, and had threatened to kill himself and the girl. Ward was a widower.

POLL TAX

Assessed According to Weight In French Town.

New York, Aug. 18.—A Paris cable to the World says: A small French town in the Pyrenees district has struck a novel way to increase revenue from taxation. The municipal council placed a tax on the physical weight of the citizens, arranging the following schedule: Below 130 pounds, no tax; from 130 to 200 pounds, $3 annually is demanded; from 200 to 270 pounds, $6; for all weights above these figures the tax increases at the rate of $6 for each 20 pounds.

Trouble came when the local authorities tried to collect the tribute. The fat people formed a committee to appeal to the prefect, who represents the Federal authority in the district. Thus a stay was gained, but it appears probable that the town could put into execution the new law, if it should fight the case in the courts.

Most of the opposition was from the women, who held meetings and torchlight processions to signify their opposition to the measure, which struck them harder than their husbands.

BOY CATCHES GATOR

But He Bites His Captor and Escapes.

Delphos, Ohio, Aug. 18.—Orville Wagoner, a lad 10 years old, caught an alligator in the Miami and Erie canal while fishing for carp. The reptile was about fifteen inches long. As it was being drawn up it struck the boy, biting him on the wrist.

The alligator has been causing a great deal of excitement here for some weeks. It was a pet that got away from a party at Spencerville last spring.

It is now at large again, as the Wagoner boy was unable to hold the reptile.

THE FIREMAN'S LIFE.

From the deadest, dullest of monotony to the heights of danger and excitement.

This is the scale that the fireman's life runs. For days, perhaps, his life proceeds along a dull level with nothing but the routine work of keeping the apparatus and the fire hall up to their cleanest, brightest condition to keep him occupied, and sometimes he even has to pursue these occupations until there seems danger of polishing all the metal work down to a dangerous point of weakness. Then, at an unexpected moment, which may be broad daylight or at an hour of Egyptian darkness, the fire alarm brings him at a step into the wildest of excitement, calls him into places full of danger which he must enter without question at the command of his chief.

There was an incident the other day in New York which was by no means uncommon, but which happens along just as the convention of fire chiefs in Duluth brings up the subject of fire fighting, and therefore becomes useful as an example of the fireman's life. A soap factory burned in New York. It was not such an immense fire; the loss was only $50,000; but it shows the spirit of the fireman, and the perils into which his calling leads him. Also it shows how little he heeds those perils when duty calls him.

The contents of the factory made the fire an uncommonly fierce one, and there were noisome gases that overcame many of those who were fighting it. Many were made unconscious and upon being rescued with difficulty gallantly returned to their posts. Some were seriously, perhaps fatally, injured. Laddermen and nozzlemen choked and fell, sometimes several at the same time. None could endure the frightful conditions long, but there was no shirking. Those firemen proceeded with their duties as calmly and as much as a matter of course as any bookkeeper would in turning a page to make another entry in the peace and safety of his office.

They say the days of heroism are past, and that except in times of battle men do daring deeds no more. Nonsense. There are as many stories of heroism, if they were all compiled, connected with the fighting of fire, as there have been connected with war itself. The courage required to face such conditions as those described above, while comrades are falling to prove the dangers, is as great as that required to induce men to stand without quailing upon the forefront of a line of battle.

New York had reason to be proud of the bravery of its firemen in that juncture. The country has reason to be proud of its firemen wherever they are employed, for there is hardly a department in the country that has not had its similar experiences.

A NEEDED REFORM.

The Bismarck Tribune reports that it is now suggested that all executions in Minnesota be held in the state penitentiary, and adds that that is the law in North Dakota, though nobody has yet been executed under it, the first victim being slated for October.

It should be the law in Minnesota, too, and the only arguments that can be urged against it are those of the people in the penitentiary town, who do not wish to have the odium added to the name of their community of being a place of execution as well as a place of incarceration. That argument, large though it is to the people of Stillwater, should not weigh so heavily as it has in the past. It has been sufficient in at least one session of the legislature to prevent the passage of the law the Tribune refers to.

Executions, which some people call no better than murders because they do not believe that human law can give man the right to take man's life, are grievous and shameful things, and the quieter they are handled the better. If every hanging were conducted in the quiet interior of the state prison, with no witnesses except a legal few, it would be carried on under conditions that would be ideal. To have them done at county seats all over the state gives them a disagreeable notoriety and an unhealthy prominence.

The passage of such a law, however, is difficult because of the prevalence of the amiable "you tickle me and I'll tickle you" custom of legislative log-rolling. As the people of their district do not want it, naturally the Stillwater members have to oppose it. Other members need the votes of the Stillwater members for their own pet measures, and they agree to vote against the penitentiary executions law if the Stillwater members will vote for the appropriation for their state institution. In this way it is an easy matter—as the reform is not a crying need and one that will make many votes—to secure enough opposition to defeat the bill.

Some day, however, it will become a law, and it will be a wholesome thing for the legislature to do.

RECIPROCITY.

"Reciprocity has been damned with faint praise and with false friends long enough. The time has come to unmask so that the people may know who stands for and who stands against this doctrine. The friends of reciprocity have passed through years of depresion and discouragement, simply because it has been coddled in conventions and crucified in congress."—Governor Cummins of Iowa in his speech yesterday at the Chicago reciprocity conference.

It is a timely thought well put. It is high time that every dodger on this question is smoked out and forced to put himself on record for or against reciprocity. The chances are that in every case where a public man is reluctant to go on record in the matter, he will be found to be at heart a "standpat" Republican, who still "crooks the pregnant hinges of the knee" before the shrine on which the trust magnates of the country have set up a hideous god which they have falsely labelled "Protection," and which they call upon their dupes to worship. Their idea of protection is plunder. Real protection should be protection of the general public's best interests, not protection of the grasping efforts of a few to collect unholy profits.

"The folly of maintaining a tariff schedule that will enable us to sell $1,000 of manufactured goods in our own markets, but which will prevent the sale of $10,000 of manufactured or agricultural products in foreign markets, is so striking that it can only be explained upon the hypothesis that we have surrendered to a senseless fear of disturbing commercial tranquility. Tranquility is very desirable, but to be lasting it must be founded on industrial justice."

This is more sound common sense from the same source. It shows the logical results of the "standpat" opposition to reciprocity. It means that in their blind attention to robbing the people of this country through an unrighteous tariff schedule, they are ignoring the fact that they are affronting other nations and losing, through failure to arrange a just reciprocal arrangement, opportunities for selling goods abroad.

Yet if the victims in this country can stand it awhile longer, why should the standpat manufacturer care for foreign markets, when he is getting twice the price and many times the profit out of his own people that he could possibly get in competition with the manufacturers of the world in the foreign market?

But shortly the people generally will appreciate, as many of them do now, that this question of tariff is a question in which they are vitally interested, and that it is not wholly a thing to be determined by the wishes of the trusts. Then the tariff will be made a means of producing good, instead of producing evil. Governor Cummins voices the sentiment of a large majority of his party, a sentiment that the "standpat" people are trying mightily to throttle. His logic is irresistible, and his conclusions sound.

GETTING RICH QUICKLY.

The only way to get rich quickly that has been demonstrated to be a success is to induce others to believe that they are getting rich quickly by handing their money over to you. The only trouble with this method is that it almost invariably runs counter to some provision of law, and most of those who have demonstrated that it is a good way to get lots of money have also demonstrated that it is a good way to get into jail.

But for investors, these demonstrations have shown that almost any opening that offers sure and quick returns of riches is a thing to be avoided as a plague. Thousands of failures in life have been due to the impatience of those who cannot content themselves to get rich in the old-fashioned way, and who seek a royal road to wealth. This leads them to bite on the tempting lures of the get-rich-quick shark, and in the end he gets their money and they get experience which may help them but does not seem to be a bit of good to others.

That is the most peculiar and most discouraging thing about it: that men do not seem to be able to profit by the experience of others. If a man comes up to another man and wants to borrow $10, the man approached will shy like a skittish colt and run like a scared deer. If the same man approaches him and tells him he has an oil well out in an unapproachable wilderness somewhere, and that stock in it is sure to be worth forty times what it is now in a few weeks, he cannot get his money out fast enough, and far from stopping at $10, he will give him all he has. If it is a case of borrowing a small sum, the lender wants to know all about the borrower, and even wants some security for his money. If it is a case of getting rich quickly out of a wildcat investment, he never stops to ask a question, but hands over all his money at once for fear he will not get in on the ground floor.

But this method is superior to other methods of getting rich quickly, because it has the merit of being honest so far as the investor is concerned. There are ways that are not honest, such as borrowing from the till to take a flyer in stocks, the amount borrowed without the employer's knowledge to be returned, of course, immediately.

It is still true that the only safe way to get rich—if one prefers to get rich rather than do some of the many other far more satisfactory things there are to be done in this world—is by the old-fashioned way of living within the income, and investing the first feeble savings in the bank until there is enough to make a sane, legitimate investment in something that the investor knows something about.

THE FIELD SURVEY.

Hotel Gossip.

Norman Peel, representing the "In Old Kentucky" company, which will be at the Lyceum next Friday and Saturday, is in the city, having only just returned from spending the summer in France and England. He talks in the usual interesting fashion of the showman of what he saw on the other side and, incidentally, can tell some odd facts in connection with the American people.

"Actors are most of them superstitious," said Mr. Peel, "and when Jacob Litt, after agreeing to produce the piece, when it had been turned down by a number of the leading managers of the country, said that he was going to name it 'In Old Kentucky,' because all of the scenes were laid in that state, the profession freely predicted failure.

"Because the title had thirteen letters in it the old timers shook their heads and said that the play would never be a success, but would only result in a loss to the man who staged it. To begin with, a good deal of difficulty was encountered in selecting a name, and when one was finally found that appeared to suit, Mr. Litt made up his mind that no mere superstition should interfere with its use. To show what little faith he placed in such superstitions, he announced that not only would 'In Old Kentucky' be used, but he would add an additional hoodoo by giving the first public performance on Friday. This program was carried out. Maybe it was the double hoodoo, or maybe it was something else, but there is no denying that the production has been a success ever since its start, thirteen years ago in Mr. Litt's Grand Opera house in St. Paul. From here we go to St. Paul and we will be at Minneapolis fair week.

"I like France much better than England. Paris is far ahead of London, and seems more like the cities in America. Especially is this true of the city hotels. In London the hotels are poor excuses, but in Paris they are all right. One thing in which these foreign cities differ from those in America is in the ordinances governing the speed of automobiles. In London the speed limit for the machines is twenty-five miles an hour on certain of the busy streets, and on other streets there is no limit. In Paris there is no limit at all. It fairly takes one's breath away to see some of the devil wagons shooting along through the busy districts. In London the autos keep to the left side of the road, but in the French metropolis they keep to the right, and, as long as they are on the right side of the road, have almost unlimited rights. They may knock a man down and maybe kill him, but the occupants will escape arrest. Indeed, if a man does not get out of the way and is hit by one of them he stands a good chance of being arrested for obstructing the path. His only chance is to prove that the machine was on the wrong side of the street.

"Everybody wants speedy machines over there. They are not satisfied to travel at the rate of forty-five or fifty miles an hour. I was out riding with a party one day when a companion kept track of the mile posts. He found that our average speed during the ride was seventy miles an hour.

"I didn't find the evils of the tipping system so pronounced as I had expected. One is supposed to give numerous tips, but, as a rule, they do not cost him so much as if he were traveling in America. The equivalent of 12 cents American money is looked upon as an unusually generous tip in England. The usual English tip is what would amount to 4 cents in this country. It is much the same in other foreign countries. If you sit down at a table and order a glass of beer you are supposed to tip the waiter who brings it."

• • •

Edward Cook, manager of the "Ben Hur" company, who also happens to be in the city just now, was reminded by Mr. Peel's automobile talk of a telegram he had received a few hours before from A. W. Dingwall, one of the best known theatrical men in the country. It appears that Mr. Cook and Mr. Dingwall went in as co-partners in the purchase of an automobile this year, and the latter has been using it quite extensively along the Atlantic coast recently. The message referred to conveyed the sad news to Mr. Cook that his machine positively refused to go at a speed to exceed forty-five miles an hour. Mr. Cook wired back instructions to either give the purchase away or throw it in the junk heap. Forty-five miles, he says, is much too slow to keep the autoists traveling at that rate in the procession.

The Latest in Gambling.

New York Sun: "I struck what was to me a new gambling scheme down in Mexico," said a mining engineer who had just returned from looking over some property in Diaz's domain. "Down there the sports gather about the coffee tables and each takes a loaf of sugar from the bowl. Then they place their lumps before them, and put the coin in the middle of the table. The man on whose lump a fly lights first wins. The game looks to be on the level, but it isn't. The crooked gambler manages by some secret or hocus pocus to get a drop of water on his lump of sugar, and the flies are sure to select it for a lighting place. I don't know how a fly knows a wet lump from a dry one, but it does know."

The Weather.

You have seen a man—or maybe a woman—who went along for several days with a face like a thundercloud, growling and scolding, as ugly as the traditional bear with a sore toe. Then some day the "grouch" had an occasion to erupt, and a twist of temper followed that made everybody stand from under. Then the man's face cleared, his normal condition of amiability returned, and everything was lovely. He had worked off his "grouch," and was himself again. That is what has happened to the weather. For a week it has been uncertain and surly. It simply wouldn't be entirely pleasant, though there were intervals when it seemed about to smile. Then yesterday afternoon and last night it worked off its "grouch" with a sharp electrical storm and torrents of rain, and this morning it showed up smiling and ineffably lovely. It has worked off its "grouch," and ought to be good for awhile.

Arguing from different premises, the weather man come to the same conclusion. While it will be clear tonight, he says it will be fair, and the same tomorrow. The winds will be fresh westerly.

Showers or thunderstorms occurred during Thursday or last night over the Red River valley, western Lake Superior, Northern Lake Michigan, Minnesota, the Middle Missouri valley, Oklahoma, Arkansas and South Atlantic states, heavy at Duluth and St. Paul. It is cooler over South Dakota, Southern Montana and Wyoming. The barometer is low north of the Dakotas. In the lake region the winds are fresh southerly with partly cloudy weather.

The Gypsy's Warning.

Trust him not, O gentle lady,
Though his voice be low and sweet—
Heed him not who kneels before thee,
Softly pleading at thy feet;
Now thy life is in its morning;
Cloud not this thy happy lot,
Listen to the gypsy's warning—
Gentle lady, trust him not.

Lady, once there lived a maiden,
Young and pure, and, like thee, fair;
Yet he wooed, he wooed and won her,
Thrilled her gentle heart with care—
Then—he heeded not her weeping—
He cared not her life to save!
Soon she perished—now she's sleeping
In the cold and silent grave!

Lady, turn not from me coldly,
For I have only truth—
From a stern and withering sorrow,
Lady, I would shield thy youth;
I would shield thee from all danger—
Shield thee from the tempter's snare—
Lady, shun the garbed stranger—
I have warned thee, now beware!

Take your gold—I do not want it;
Lady, I have prayed for this—
For the hour that I might enlight him,
And rob him of expected bliss.
Aye, I see thou art filled with wonder,
At my looks so fierce and wild—
Lady, in the churchyard yonder
Sleeps the gypsy's only child!

Shake, Brother, Shake.

Wayne, Neb., Herald: This season makes us tired. We would much rather pile ourselves to the mossy spot, beside the babbling brook, beyond the sound of the irrepressible printer's lusty yell for "copy," than be compelled to remain here to chronicle Hazzard Spivin's recent visit to Speckville or say nice things about the marriage of the big-footed daughter of some fellow who hasn't paid his subscription for twelve years. Right now we'd sooner be fishing than be president.

Ye Gallant Scribe.

Mallard Call: Mallard and vicinity is blessed with the finest lot of young Ladies, you ever saw all very charming and all good looking. The older ones are good looking too.

The Homesick Man.

Ah, my hand is mighty hungry for a tiny, sweaty fist;
Both my lips are fairly famished to be warmly, wetly kissed;
And my arm is simply starving for a fuzzy little head
That, when I am home and happy, loves to use it for a bed.

Can it be that once I fretted at a peevish midnight wail,
That will seem like sweetest music when I've hit the homeward trail?
Was it I who put her from me with a feeling of relief—
I whose soul is sick to see her, be the absence long or brief?

Was it I that grew impatient when she made me drop my pen
And consume a precious hour soothing her to sleep again?
Would I think that hour wasted could I swathe and soothe her now
As I fondly play I'm smoothing out the puckers from her brow?

Could I feel, when next I hold her, all that now I feel and know,
Could I then recall the yearning as my lonely way I go—
But alas. When Love possesses, it is blind and deaf and dumb, Saving its appreciation till the heart with grief is numb.

—S. W. GILLILAN, in Baltimore American.

Doctors and Their Dues.

Philadelphia Record: No class of men are so charitable as the doctors. The amount of free medical service they give the poor is incalculable. When the leading physician in New York died a few years ago his friends disclosed the fact that for years he had rendered to the poor gratuitously services worth, at the rate people of means paid him, $20,000. A Baltimore physician who died the other day had destroyed his books that there might be no effort to collect fees from his patients who were unable to pay. The relief of suffering begets generosity and stimulates sympathy.

No Race Suicide With Them.

Journal of the Society of Arts: A single pair of rabbits, if left undisturbed, will, all things being favorable, have augmented their numbers to four and a half millions in four years.

Twenty-two Years Ago

Dr. I. L. Mahan, formerly United States Indian agent for the La Pointe agency, is in town this week with his family, visiting Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Ensign. Dr. Mahan has kept track by the newspapers of what has been going on in Duluth since he left here three years ago, but he says the half has not been told him.

I. Freimuth, the Metropolitan dry goods dealer, has started on a business trip to Chicago and New York.

Hon. F. Petre of London, father of R. W. and D. A. Petre, is in Duluth visiting his sons, and will be in this vicinity for two months or more.

Mr. and Mrs. Warner, Mr. and Mrs. Gilbert and a number of others have returned from a camping out excursion at Fond du Lac.

Born, to Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Mannheim, on the 18th inst., a daughter.

A. J. and N. J. Miller are perfecting plans for a large stone or brick building, to be erected on the 50-foot lot belonging to their mother, on the southeast corner of Superior street and Third avenue west.

Sussmilch & Montague, the new jewelry firm, will open early in September in the Opera House block. The new firm have had practical experience in the jewelry business in Dixon, Ill.

Another railroad company has filed articles of incorporation, under the title of the Duluth, North Shore & Southwestern Railroad company. This new road runs on the north for Beaver Bay, Grand Marais, and the northern boundary of this state, and on the south for St. Cloud and the southwestern boundary of Minnesota. The incorporators and first board of directors are H. E. Long, Dr. V. Smith, William J. Tranal, Thomas W. Mayhew, Louis H. Grieser, Philip M. Graff, and Richmond D. Mallet.

The heavy winds have been extraordinary for this time of the year. The Manistee, in attempting to enter Ashland harbor, encountered such a gale that she had to put out into the open lake and run across to Isle Royale.

DOMESTIC PLEASANTRIES.

Chicago Tribune: "It's wonderful," said Uncle Allen Sparks "to see what can be done with water power these days. I know a man over in the next county, the stingiest man that ever lived, but his wife can get anything she wants from him by doing a little judicious weeping."

Somerville Journal: He—At what age do you think a girl ought to marry?

She—Well, I couldn't think of setting the day before next October, George; when I shall be just 29.

Houston Post: "Is it possible for a man to love two girls at the same time?"

"Sure; we've got five at our house and I love all of them all the time."

Philadelphia Ledger: "And the children, poor little blessings!" Mrs. Popley was saying, after the excitement was over, "they were so scared at the noise and the uproar they looked ready to faint."

"Yes," said Popley, "blessings blighten as they take their fright."

Cleveland Plain Dealer: The Father—I want you to understand, sir, that my daughter is one of the ornaments of the smart set!

The Suitor—Don't try to disparage her, sir. I'm willing to take her just as she is.

Philadelphia Press: Mrs. Browne—I wonder if the new order of things will reform Mr. Luschley to any extent. He's married, I understand.

Mrs. Malaprop—Yes, he's a benedictine now.

Chicago Tribune: "What became of that women's church that was started here a while ago?"

"Broke up in a row."

"What was the trouble?"

"Squabble about the distribution of offices. The deacons were elected all right, but not a single woman in the bunch would accept the office of elder."

MINNESOTA OPINIONS.

Sauk Center Herald: Those who didn't support J. Adam Bede for congress last fall are very anxious he should run for governor next year.

Fergus Falls Journal: The attorney-general has given his opinion that the law passed by Senator Ward Stone at the last session of the legislature, making mileage books good in the hands of the bearer, is of no effect, which bears out the contention of many members who opposed it and tried to pass some effective legislation on passenger rates. The bill was drawn in a railway office and was put in as sort of a buffer to prevent more meritorious measures from being passed.

International Falls Press: "Drainage is the best investment that the state of Minnesota can make." Thus spoke Governor Johnson at Crookston the other day, and Governor Johnson is a convert to the drainage idea, having arrived at the above conclusion after a good look at the territory in need of drainage and a thorough canvass of the pros and cons of the matter.

Cass Lake Voice: Make an endless chain of the drainage league. Every county in the state should have at least a hundred members. Get busy and keep the ball rolling.

International Falls Press: Every ambitious politician is now an ardent advocate of state drainage of swamp lands. A good barometer of public sentiment.

Owatonna Chronicle: We are doing a lot of crying out against the trusts, but how many of us have taken the pains to find out where our congressman stands on the subject?

Bemidji Pioneer: If John A. Johnson escapes this hero worship unspoiled a greater than Dewey is here in Minnesota.

Brainerd Arena: Quit your knocking, put your shoulder to the wheel and things will move faster.

St. Peter Herald: The people are tiring of secrecy. Some one ought to suggest that it is time for the board of control to discard its gum shoes.

Red Wing News: Who would have the hardihood to defend graft? Yet the tariff is full of it.

Hibbing Tribune: A Duluth messenger boy created a sensation recently by doing a somnambulistic stunt. It has been generally supposed that all messenger boys sleep when they walk.

Red Lake Falls Courier: If the senate refuses the privileges of the floor to all of its members under suspicion there will hardly be a quorum present.

Red Lake Falls Courier: The man who votes the straight party ticket regardless of the qualifications or honesty of the candidates is more likely to be considered a chump than a patriot.

Reflections of a Bachelor.

New York Press: A man is always in a bigger hurry to get married than he is afterward to let people know he is.

It is a shame to end a good sermon so soon when a man is in the middle of a fine nap and it wakes him up.

A girl will worry a great deal about the way the poor on the east side suffer and let her own mother sit up till 2 o'clock in the morning sewing on a dress for her while she gets her beauty sleep.

Russia's Only Hope.

Life: In Russia the only way to spell Evolution is R-E-V-O-L-U-T-I-O-N.

Talented Colored Girls.

Philadelphia Press: Miss Portia M. Washington, daughter of Booker T. Washington, was one of the twenty-five young women to be graduated from Bradford academy at Haverhill, Mass., this year. At Cornell the highest honors in the senior class have gone to Miss Jessie R. Fauset, a colored girl, and the only woman student of her race in the college of arts.

He Ought To Know.

Philadelphia Telegraph: This story is told on Tom L. Johnson, multi-millionaire mayor of Cleveland:

While he was in congress and waging vigorous warfare against the trusts there were those of his colleagues on the other side who did not agree with him, and wearying of the repeated demands for legislation the late Mr. Dingley of Maine, the author of the war revenue bill, made a speech in which he said plumply that the clamor against the trusts was all for effect, and that as a matter of fact there was no such a thing as a trust in existence.

Mr. Johnson was greatly interested.

"How about the steel rail trust?" he demanded.

"There is no such thing as a steel rail trust," replied Mr. Dingley, "and never was."

"Well," said Mr. Johnson, cheerfully, "there is a steel rail trust, and I am president of it."

Mr. Dingley sat down without another word.

Hero of the Home.

He liked to prodigal awhile, an' then eat fatted calf.
He wouldn't read the papers, nor give ear to good advice,
An' never went to meetin' house, except-in' once or twice.

His father got discouraged, an' let the farm run down;
An' he gave a mortgage on it to a feller up in town;
He got the rheumatism an' a misery in his chest,
So they took in summer boarders to help pay interest.

That boy would never learn to plow, nor mow, nor feed the stock.
He'd anchor in a shady place, as solid as a rock.
The only thing he kered to do, except to sleep and sup,
Was sit around an' pass the time a-playin' seven-up.

The summer boarders' bein' lonesome, sat into the game.
They played for money, and his mother said, "Oh, Jim, fur shame!"
But that there boy knew high-low-jack; it was his regular biz.
And, then, besides, the cards that they was playin' with was his.

The feller with the mortgage came along one autumn day,
An' said, "You'll have to leave your dear old home unless you pay."
An' then Jim Perkins says, says he, "Here's your gold, and more!
Get out, an' never let your face be darkenin' our door."

"How did you get the coin?" his parents asked, with tearful pride.
"By patient industry, an' seven up," the boy replied.
They offered thanks because they had a son so good and kind.
There's a moral to this story, but it's mighty hard to find.

Sure Sign of Prosperity.

Boston Globe: Crop reports from all over the United States showing that the crops this year in all probability will break all records are much more encouraging signs of the continuance and increase of national prosperity than high prices of the stocks handled by the Wall street gamblers ever can be.

A Double Hardship.

He was speaking once at a dinner given to commemorate an important event in the history of New England, his text being "The Pilgrim Fathers." "I have always," he said, "felt the deepest sympathy for the Pilgrim fathers, who suffered such extraordinary hardships in establishing a foothold in this country. But, sorry as I have felt for the Pilgrim fathers, I have felt still sorrier for the Pilgrim mothers; for not only were they obliged to endure the same hardships, but they had also endured the Pilgrim fathers."

Some New York Window Sills.

New York Correspondence Philadelphia Ledger: Persons who live under conditions wherein there is a prodigality of space may be interested in the pictures of a near view of a New York apartment-house. Here is a list of articles displayed on the window sills of an apartment near Times square:

Second Story—Three bottles of milk, one rug.

Third—Siphon, covered saucer, open can of sardines.

Fourth—Six bottles of beer, two pillows, pug dog asleep on sill.

Fifth—Another siphon, eight red tomatoes, another bottle of milk.

Sixth—Four more bottles of beer, cantaloupe.

Eighth—Pitcher of milk, bottle of mineral water, one tomato and a pair of pajamas.

Ninth—Still another siphon, mysterious jug.

Tenth—Two apples, bottle of beer, cat asleep on set of furs.

The courtward of this apartment-house would be a desirable refuge if a sudden windstorm arose. It would literally "rain cats and dogs."

Information at His Elbow.

Chicago Journal: "Do men gather grapes from thorns or figs from thistles?" asked President Roosevelt in his Sunday sermon. The president should see Secretary Wilson before he exposes his ignorance again like that.

Jerome Enthusiasm.

Newark News: The danger seems to be that those New York reformers, in their zeal for Mr. Jerome, are likely to make him mayor and district attorney at the same election.

CONGER IS TO GO TO CHINA

To Stay Boycott on American Goods, If Possible.

Oyster Bay, Aug. 18.—Edwin H. Conger of Iowa, formerly United States minister to China, and since last April the American ambassador to Mexico, will return in the near future, if present plans are carried into effect, to China. His mission will be of a somewhat diplomatic nature, the specific purpose of which will be to allay, if possible, the agitation aroused in parts of the Chinese empire against the use by Chinese of American products.

Ambassador Conger, who has been scarcely more than three months at his new post in the city of Mexico, was summoned to the United States to confer with the president about the Chinese boycott of American goods. He had a long conference with the president yesterday. It is known that the ambassador will not return to Mexico, and that arrangements are making for his projected mission to Pekin.

Mr. Conger spent eight years in China as the American minister. He is well known and popular among the officials of the Pekin government. Ambassador Conger's presence in China will not affect the position or the duties of W. W. Rockhill, the American minister. Ambassador Conger talked briefly in response to inquiries concerning his visit.

"It would be improper for me," he said, "to discuss for publication my talk with the president. "We did consider the subject of the boycott of American goods in China, which, I understand, is rather serious. The boycott I know very little about, as it developed after I left Pekin.

"Is there foundation for the report that you expect to resign your mission to Mexico to become a candiate for the governorship of Iowa?"

"None at all," replied the ambassador. I am not a candidate for an office within the gift of the people of the state.

"Then you expect to continue in the service of the government?"

"Yes, I expect to."

Among the subjects discussed by the president and Ambassador Conger was that of the Hankow railroad, running between Canton and Hankow. Mr. Conger strongly deprecated the relinquishment of the road and its concessions, even for a large cash consideration. What the American-China Development company may do as to the sale of the property to the Chinese government probably will be announced in a few days, but it is suggested that Mr. Conger's proposed mission to China very likely has an important relation to the Hankow railroad question. It is expected that Mr. Conger will be succeeded as American ambassador to Mexico by D. E. Thompson, who is now American ambassador to Brazil.

Mr. Thompson is a resident of Nebraska, and was appointed minister to Brazil, with a view to giving him a more important diplomatic post when the opportunity offered.

TWENTY TO THIRTY DEAD

Colored Excursionists Suffered In Atlantic Coast Line Wreck.

Norfolk, Va., Aug. 18.—Between twenty and thirty negroes, occupying the first car of an Atlantic Coast line excursion train from Kingston, N. C., to this city, were killed or injured six miles from this city shortly after noon yesterday. The train, consisting of the engine and six coaches, plunged through an open draw of the bridge at Bruce station, the engine and one coach being completely submerged in about sixteen feet of water and the second coach partly submerged.

It is difficult at this time to estimate the number of the dead. It is believed that every person in the first car perished, none having yet been accounted for.

With the exception of the train crew and the promoters of the excursion all aboard were colored. The engineer, fireman and conductor escaped.

The train was running at a rate of fifteen or twenty miles an hour as it approached the bridge. The specific orders of the road to stop all trains at the bridge whether the draw is open or not was apparently ignored. The train plunged into the abyss. Both engineer and fireman discovered the open draw too late to stop the train. The air brakes were applied but did not work properly.

The scene following the wreck was one of indescribable horror, with the shrieking of men, women and children who were drowning, struggling out of the partly submerged coach and floating in the river. The passengers, who were uninjured immediately started to rescue those imprisoned in the cars. Norfolk and Portsmouth were communicated with and physicians were sent out on a wrecking train.

Many people in the neighborhood went to the scene of the wreck and helped in the rescue. The injured were taken to the track embankment and were attended there by the physicians.

The engine is completely submerged, not even the smokestack being visible. The car that was next to it is also submerged completely and the dead can be gotten from it only by diving under the car. The train consisted of six coaches. Four of these remained on the track. Those aboard these cars were only shaken slightly. The damage to passengers were confined to the first two coaches.

COMING ATTRACTIONS.

LYCEUM—Monday, "The Chaperons."

"UNDER SOUTHERN SKIES."

"Under Southern Skies" will open at the Lyceum this evening for its engagement of three performances. It is one of the largest and most expensive dramatic companies traveling, and it is now in its fifth successful season. It was first presented in New York city in November, 1901, at the Theater Republic (now the Belasco theater). There it had a run of three months, and has since then been on tour throughout the East, returning four and five times to many Eastern cities. "Under Southern Skies" is a love story of the South, told with so many original and fascinating touches and by such diverting types of Southern characters that the play has been pronounced "the most original, diverting and unhackneyed play of Southern life ever written."

"THE CHAPERONS" COMING.

The favorite musical comedy, "The Chaperons," is having one of the most successful tours in its history this season. A generous management has provided a completely new scenic environment, new costumes and new electrical effects. It is well to note that in the large organization there is a host of pretty faces and tuneful voices. To lovers of musical comedy the coming engagement of "The Chaperons" will appeal most strongly. "The Chaperons" will be presented at the Lyceum Monday.

"IN OLD KENTUCKY."

No more popular theatrical attraction visits this city than "In Old Kentucky," announced for presentation at the Lyceum, Friday and Saturday of next week. Plays may come and plays may go, but "In Old Kentucky" will doubtless go on forever.

BLINDNESS

Menaces the Children of England, Says Expert.

London, Aug. 18.—"There is little use in trying to make marksmen if we ruin the eyes of the nation in childhood."

This statement was made at the public health congress by Sir James Crichton-Browne during a discussion of the alarming increase of eye troubles among school children.

"In two generations half the people will be blind and the other half wearing spectacles, unless something is done to check the injury to the eyes of the children," he declared.

The discussion was opened by Prof. H. R. Kenwood, M.D., who declared that on the important question of the care of their eyes the children were in complete ignorance.

They worked under bad light that injured even good eyes, he declared, and were kept at work with eyes that badly needed expert attention. Hundreds of them were even made partially blind from want of more common sense and a little elementary knowledge of the matter.

Dr. Allan Wilson said that his experience had proved to him that electric light did a large amount of serious harm to the eyes.

A resolution was passed to the effect that medical officers of schools should be appointed, and it was decided that the matter should be brought before the education authorities.

TWO POLICEMEN KILLED.

Czestochowa, Russian Poland, Aug. 18.—Two policemen were killed, and a woman fatally shot, here, yesterday, by an unknown man at the doors of the Church of the Virgin. A pilgrimage was leaving the church after the celebration of mass, when the assault on the policemen took place. The pilgrims were thrown into a panic and a fearful crush followed, in which many were injured.

SALARIES RAISED

Canada Boosts Wages of Officials and Provides Pensions.

Annual Expenses Increased By Over Half Million Dollars.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 18.—The summer of their discontent, during which the members of the Canadian house of commons have been sweltering within the precincts of parliament hill, will be followed by a glorious autumn of plenty, for their sessional salaries have been increased. It seems to be a recognized fact that towards the end of a session some unexpected expenditure must be made, but nothing so lavish was expected as went through the house at the finish of this particular sitting.

Ministers' salaries are increased, ex-ministers are given pensions and judges' salaries are augmented all over the country, increasing the nation's annual expenditures not less than $541,977.

The premier's annual income has increased from $9,500 to $14,500, and this includes $4,000 increase as president of the council of ministers, his $1,000 increase in his sessional indemnity and his former allowance. Provision has been made also for the leader of the opposition, who in future gets a salary of $7,000 as leader, in addition to his $2,500 sessional indemnity.

Members of the senate and the house of commons receive an increase of $1,000 each. Ex-ministers who have served for five years get pensions of half their salary. This total annual increase for legislative purposes will amount to $329,000.

But there are certain drawbacks. The mileage privileges are cut down and members can only draw their actual transportation expenses from their homes to Ottawa and return, and, worst of all, $15 a day is to be deducted from members' allowances for every day they are absent from their seat.

It is generally admitted that the increase in the sessional salaries of the premier and the leader of the opposition are only right, in view of the important and honored positions which they hold, but the idea of a pension to ministers who held portfolios for at least five years meets universal approval. Canada's public men have as a rule died poor and lived poor in their old age, and the pension idea is one that is calculated to encourage the best men to sacrifice private interests for the good of the country.

Only ten ex-ministers will benefit by the idea, including Sir Charles Tupper, Sir Hector Langevib, J. Israel Tarte, Sir Hibbard Tupper, Mr. Blair, Mr. Sifton, Sir Mackenzie Bowell, Sir A. P. Cardon, Sir John Carling and Messrs. Foster and Haggard. Precedents for this sort of pension can be found in Great Britain.

The decision about the matter when reached and the discussion upon it were most harmonious. Neither was there much discussion upon the question of the increase of the salaries of the judges. This is a matter that has been talked about for years. The minister of justice showed that the judiciary of Canada was the worst paid in the British empire.

In Victoria and New South Wales the chief justices get $17,500, in South Australia and New Zealand from $8,500 to $12,500, in other colonies with mostly much smaller population than Canada from $5,000 to $12,000. Therefore the judges' salaries were increased from $1,000 to $2,000 a year each.

No doubt there will be a lot of talk about this increase of the sessional indemnity from $1,500 to $2,500 among the electors during future elections, particularly among the rural electors, who will look upon $2,500 a year as a sum representing daily opulence and ease. They do not realize, however, that $1,500 a year was really almost niggardly on the part of a beneficent commonwealth.

During the earlier part of confederation living in Ottawa was cheap and at $4 or $5 a week comparative luxury could be had, but mere board and room, whether in private boarding houses or hotels, costs at least from $60 to $100 a month nowadays.

For members who brought their wives and families to Ottawa the allowance was utterly inadequate. So generous is the parliamentary spirit just now in regard to the spending of money that it is announced that shortly a meeting will be held of all the provincial premiers, together with the council of ministers, to agree upon some satisfactory basis for the allotment of provincial subsidies. This has been a vexatious matter for a long time and a settlement will do the Dominion at large a great deal of good.

It is also announced that $340,000 will be paid as a lead bounty, and this gives some sort of an idea what the lead industry in Canada amounts to.

It means that nearly 56,000,000 pounds has been produced. This means nearly 28,000 tons. Of this 11,000 tons have been exported and $10 per ton is being paid for that, while $15 per ton is paid as bounty for the remainder which was smelted within the borders.

During one of the very last days of the session the statement was made by a prominent official of the department of agriculture that each year tons of excellent fruit go to waste in Canada. Everyone knows that often the apple crop is so large that the fruit can not be given away, but this gentleman stated that all sorts of other fruits are equally neglected.

He cited an instance of how in 1903 over 100,000 baskets of plums were never harvested. One farmer actually offered 5 cents per basket to have them removed.

Strange to say, at the same time there was a scarcity of this sort of fruit in England.

The waste seems to be mainly due to lack of proper transportation and the methods of mixed farming.

LIGHTNING

Strikes Eveleth Houses But No One Injured.

Eveleth, Minn., Aug. 18.—A severe electrical storm, lasting about five minutes, struck Eveleth at about 2 o'clock yesterday afternoon. Lightning hit several houses but did little damage, and no one was injured. The home of Walter J. Smith on Jones street was struck, the chimney shattered and a small hole torn in the roof. The house of John Jacobson on Jackson street was struck but little damage was done. Mrs. Smith was alone in the house at the time, and although stunned, she did not know that the house had been hit. The shock attendant upon the striking of these two houses stunned Mrs. Johnson, a seamstress, living near by.

A fire of enormous proportions is raging in the mountains northeast of Ogden, Utah, covering an area of many miles. Many thousands of dollars worth of timber has already been destroyed and the flames are spreading rapidly without opposition.

John F. Foster of England, where he rides with the Quorn hounds, was probably fatally hurt on the Meadowbrook polo field at Hampstead, L. I., yesterday. His right leg was broken and he suffered internal injuries.

Mrs. Media Wells, a widow, shot and instantly killed William Burch, to whom she was engaged to be married, at her home in Hutchinson, Kan., and then committed suicide. Burch, who boarded with Mrs. Wells, was killed as he lay asleep on a couch. No cause is known for the shooting as there had been no known estrangement between the couple. Burch was 48 years old and was car superintendent of the Hutchinson Street Railway company.

TRAIN WRECKED IN CITY OF ST. PAUL.

St. Paul, Aug. 18.—The Great Western limited, the Chicago Great Western train, which left the union depot at 8:30 o'clock last evening, was wrecked at Annapolis street, near the city limits, resulting in the injury of Engineer T. Kennedy and Robert Heath, the express messenger, Minneapolis. Some thirty passengers, who were thrown in a heap, were bruised but none seriously. The wreck was caused by sand on the tracks, which had been washed down from the bluff which skirts the roadbed for a couple of miles in the vicinity.

The track had not been cleared at midnight and the train was annulled.

Pine City's Beauties.

The Pine City Commercial club has issued a neat little pamphlet setting forth the advantages and beauties of the capital of Pine county. The book is entitled "Pine City and Vicinity: in the Lake Park Region of Minnesota, the Land of the Big Red Clover." Illustrated by a number of handsome views of the lakes about the city, its letter press sets forth in effective language the facts about Pine City's excellent location and advantages as an agricultural and business region and as a health and pleasure resort. It is a neat pamphlet, and ought to be effective in advertising the Pine City country.

PARK POINT GROCERY BURNS

Midnight Fire Totally Destroys Building and Contents.

The Park Point grocery store, a one and a half-story frame structure at the corner of Thirty-first street and Minnesota avenue, on the point, was burned down shortly after midnight. The grocery was operated by L. J. Lynch, who leased the building from R. B. Knox & Co., agents for the owner. The building was insured for $200, but it is understood that Mr. Lynch's loss, which is in the neighborhood of $800, will be total, there being no insurance.

When discovered the whole building was in flames, no opportunity offering to save any of the contents. As there was fire in the building during the day it is supposed that the conflagration started from the inside. Several cottages are in proximity to the burned building, but owing to the drenching rain that fell earlier in the evening and the fact there was no wind at the time of the fire, no other damages was done.

Mrs. M. L. Parker of Park Point was giving a masquerade party last evening at her residence near the grocery store and the guests turned out in costume to watch the blaze.

LIGHTNING HITS HOTEL

At Bagley But No One Seriously Injured.

Bemidji, Minn., Aug. 18.—The Clearwater hotel at Bagley, during an electrical storm in that village yesterday, was struck by lightning and some damage was done to the interior of the building. The cook and his wife were standing in the kitchen when the bolt struck the house and the man received a shock but recovered in a few minutes after being carried into another room of the building. Several other bolts struck the town and Albert Kaiser, cashier of the First National bank in that village, had a narrow escape from death.

Wife Sues For Divorce.

Mrs. Josephine Klinch, aged 43 years, charges her husband, Nicholas Klinch, with cruelty and unfaithfulness and has instituted divorce proceedings in district court. They were married at Wabasha, Minn., Sept. 9, 1888, and have three children, the custody of whom is asked by the mother. Mrs. Klinch says her husband was idle, penurious, indecent in his language to his family and of generally bad moral character.

TEAM CHOSEN FOR SEAGIRT

Minnesota's Representatives In the National Rifle Contest.

Lake City, Minn., Aug. 18.—The following men have been selected to represent Minnesota at the national rifle contest which will be held at Seagrit, N. J., next week:

Lieut. Clark, Company C, First regiment; Sergt. Lang, Company B, Second regiment; F. W. Britton, hospital corps, Third regiment; Fred Britton, hospital corps, Third regiment; Mad. Resche, Third regiment; Musician Simpson, Third regiment; Musician Price, Company B, Third regiment; Sergt. Reinhart, Company C, Second regiment; Sergt. Bird, Company C, Third regiment, Lieut. Winton, Company B, Second regiment; Private Comenski, Company C, Second regiment; Adjutant Walk, First regiment; Capt. Everett, Company B, First regiment; Private Pitchette, Company B, First regiment.

These men were selected on the basis of their average scores through the tryout which has been in progress the past week. With them will go Adjutant Gen. Wood, team captain; Lieut. Col. Corriston, spotter, and Sergt. Harper, ordnance sergeant.

The team will remain at Lake City for practice until tonight, when it will leave for Seagrit. Before entering the contest the two men making the lowest average score in the shooting preliminary to the tournament will be named as alternates, as there are fourteen men in the squad, and the team number is twelve.

GOVERNOR JOHNSON

Revokes Warrant of Extradition For Michigan Man.

St. Paul, Aug. 18.—Believing that the machinery of the state should not be utilized to collect a debt, Governor John A. Johnson has revoked his warrant of extradition for the return of Oscar E. Sorum from Winona, Minn., to Grand Rapids, Mich., where he is wanted on a charge of removing from the state furniture which he had purchased on the installment plan.

Sorum is charged with embezzlement, and finding that the papers were legal, Governor Johnson a week or two ago honored the requisition from the governor of Michigan. Sorum was placed under arrest at Winona and the sheriff from Michigan was about to take him to that state. Governor Johnson granted a further hearing, with the result that the warrant of extradition was revoked.

WARSHIPS COLLIDE.

San Francisco, Aug. 18.—The cruiser Chicago, flagship of the Pacific squadron, flying the flag of Admiral Goodrich, went aground close to the lighthouse and fog signal station on Angele island in this harbor yesterday. She came up from San Diego with the disabled gunboat Bennington in tow and accompanied by the navy tug Fortuna. A strong ebb tide was running and in the current the tow line on which the Bennington was trailing parted. Before her headway could be stopped the Chicago ran her bows up on the beach. The Bennington on her momentum sailed close up to the stern of the stranded vessel before her anchors took hold. The tug soon got a line to the Chicago and succeeded in pulling her clear of the bottom, but when she came off she took a sheer that sent her straight for the anchored Bennington. The current of the tide carried her down across the bow of the anchored vessel and there was a smashing of metal as they came to gether.

The two vessels, afoul of each other, went drifting on the tide. Both were considerably damaged.

SEVEN CHILDREN IN ONE WEEK.

Honolulu, Aug. 18.—A dispatch by wireless telegraph from Hilo says that Hana, the Hawaiian wife of Kailua, a Chinese, gave birth to one child last Thursday, two on Sunday, one on Monday, two on Tuesday morning and one on Tuesday night. All are dead.

PASTOR FALLS DEAD.

Red Wing, Minn., Aug. 18.—Rev. C. Lindell, aged 58 years, assistant pastor of the Swedish Lutheran church at Vasa, fell dead in a drug store here Wednesday night. He was on his way to Chicago to attend the funeral of a daughter.

PROGRESS MADE

Removed Large Rocks and Sawed Three Big Piling.

Submarine Engineer John Wanless has completed part of his contract for laying water and gas mains across the Duluth ship canal. After several days of severe labor by himself and his assistant, Mr. Wanless has made an opening through the foundation work of the north pier, and has extended sections of the 12-inch and the 8-inch mains through the opening.

Before Mr. Wanless undertook the job it was thought that a great deal of trouble would be encountered in making an opening through the north pier, owing to the fact that in the cribwork foundation to the concrete superstructure were known to be a large amount of rock of immense size. Difficulty was encountered, but not so much from the rock as from the piles, for three were found to be slightly out of line, and had to be sawed off. Working at a depth of about twenty-three feet in water, and sawing piling 12-inches in diameter, surrounded by rock and with such a tremendous weight from above, required patience and persistence. It took an entire day to saw one of the piles, as the weight from above pressed together the opening made by the saw as fast as it was made. Assistant United States Engineer John Darling, who examined the portions of the piling taken out, says they are in as good condition as when put in, and that in his opinion the timbers will remain sound practically as long as the pier exists.

Owing to the high water in the bay and canal, because of the three days' northeast wind, the opening made by the diver is twenty-three feet below water level. The opening extends clear through the pier foundation, a distance of twenty-four feet, and is three and one-half feet deep by four feet wide. The work of removing the rock from underneath the pier was conducted from both sides of the structure. On the land side of the pier the government had left a pipe well, six feet square, extending down to the bottom of the pier and timbered to the top. In this well, which contains water to the height of that in the canal, Mr. Wanless and his assistant worked in turn with crowbar and tackle, taking out the rock. A clam shell dredge was used in the canal to dig a large hole into which a large quantity of the rock removed was dumped. Some of the rock was pulled out along the side of the pier foundation on the bed of the canal, and a portion of it will be used to fill in around the water and gas mains, which are now in position through the pier.

It is not anticipated that the work of making a hole through the south pier foundation will take so long, for the reason that the rock in the crib work is smaller and can be more easily taken out.

During the time the divers have been at work under the pier they have been watched by large and interested crowds of people, who, though they could not see the work being done under water, waited to see the divers coming up or going down as they took turns at the work.

It is understood that there is a prospect of the water and gas mains being laid across the ship canal in the very near future. It was at first planned to postpone this work until the close of navigation, but Mr. Wanless is said to be contemplating starting this work, and finishing it, if he finds he can do so, without interference from the boats as they pass in and out of the ship canal.

EXCURSIONS PLEASE PEOPLE

Herald's Excursions Up River and on Lake Draw Crowds.

In the history of steamboat excursions at the Head of the Lakes there have been no excursions more popular with the people than those given by The Herald on the steamer Newsboy to Fond du Lac, every Monday, and the thirty-miles ride given on Lake Superior, on the steamer America, every Tuesday afternoon. In arranging for these popular excursions The Herald has been enabled to get the very low rate of twenty-five cents for the round trip, either for the ride to Fond du Lac or for the lake trip, and the manner in which the people are patronizing both is a demonstration of their appreciation. On every trip the boats have carried large and delighted crowds.

A day's outing at beautiful historic old Fond du Lac at the nominal expense of twenty-five cents, including one of the most delightful boat rides of about thirty miles up and back the St. Louis river is an opportunity that appeals to the masses, and every Monday whole families with their lunch baskets can be seen hurrying to the Fifth avenue dock to board the steamer Newsboy, which starts for Fond du Lac at 9 o'clock and returns at 6 o'clock in the afternoon. The picnic grounds at Fond du Lac are free to patrons of the steamer and delightful times are reported.

A thirty-mile ride out and back on grand old Lake Superior for the ridiculously low price of twenty-five cents for the round trip is one of the strongest attractions that the people of Duluth have ever had presented to them. In making arrangements for these Tuesday excursions The Herald has considered the fact that many of the business men and their families are not able to get away early in the day, so the America does not start out on the trip until 4 o'clock in the afternoon, returning at 9 o'clock in the evening. This gives practically everybody, an opportunity of getting a ride along the north shore on one of the finest passenger steamers in the service of A. Booth & Company. Passengers are invited to bring their lunch baskets and, for those who do not care to do so, a stop of one hour will be had at Two Harbors, where supper can be procured at the restaurants or the hotels. On the last Tuesday excursion a great many people took their lunch baskets and had their suppers spread out on the grassy banks of the lake at Two Harbors. The moonlight ride back to Duluth is one of the finest features of the trip.

MESSENGER MISSING WITH FIRM'S $10,000.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Gus Bobbs, a messenger employed by the dry goods house of Charles A. Stevens & Brothers, has disappeared with $10,000 of the firm's money, and a reward of $500 has been offered for his capture. Bobbs was employed in the place of the regular messenger, who is on a vacation. He was sent to the bank yesterday afternoon to make a deposit, carrying $10,000 with him. He did not appear at the bank, and later it was learned that he had left for New York over the Nickle Plate road.

STARTLING REPORTS

Of Wholesale Timber Stealing In Northern Minnesota.

St. Paul, Aug. 18.—Startling reports of wholesale timber stealing in Northern Minnesota were filed with the state timber board yesterday by the state cruisers who have returned from a cruise, and the board has decided to make a determined campaign to arest the offenders.

The evidence which the state has collected is being kept secret that the board may not be hampered in its effort to apprehend the offenders. Members of the board after an all day session refused to divulge the information they had received, further than to state that some startling discoveries had been made.

Several million feet of timbor are involved, and if the board carries out its plans it will collect many thousands of dollars. The trespass was deliberate, and the state will insist on trebe damages. The trespass was committed about two years ago and is of such a nature that no blame attaches to any present or former state official.

Simultaneously with the reports of timber trespass, information reached the board that several million feet of state timber in Northern Minnesota is in danger of fire or windfall, and it was decided to hold a public sale at the capital at 10 o'clock on the morning of Oct. 17. This timber is located in Beltrami, St. Louis, Itasca, Cass, Cook and Lake counties.

"There are millions of feet of timber in these counties that is liable to damage or entire loss through fire and windfalls," said D. E. Elliott, one of the state cruisers who conferred with the board. "In fact the state lost a good deal of timber through forest fires last spring and while there has been considerable rains since then, there is still much danger of forest fires."

CHARGE OF ARSON

In Second Degree Against Mrs. Silversack Dismissed.

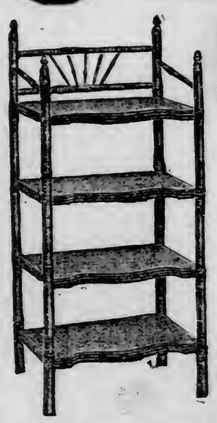

Bemidji, Minn., Aug. 18.—The charge of arson in the second degree against Mrs. Frank Silversack for firing the saloon building of her husband at the corner of Minnesota avenue and Fourth street, was yesterday afternoon dismissed on motion of County Attorney McDonald in Judge Pendergast's court.

The other charge against Mrs. Silversack—that of arson in the third degree—a preliminary hearing upon which was concluded in Judge Pendergast's court, has not been decided by the court.

RECIPROCITY MEETING CONCLUDES ITS WORK.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—The reciprocity conference called to devise means of bettering the trade relations between the United States and foreign countries finished the work yesterday for which the meeting was called; arranged for a committee to prosecute the plans of the convention and formed a permanent organization styled as the American Reciprocal Tariff league. The committee which will consist of fifteen members to be appointed by the chairman was given full power to organize and promote the work for which the convention assembled.

SUSPECTS PARADED.

Placed on Show In Broadway By Police.

New York, Aug. 18.—Acting Capt McCauley, in command of the Mulberry street detective bureau, inaugurated a new method of exposing suspicious characters Wednesday, when he ordered a public exhibition of eight alleged "wire tappers" arrested in a raid.

They were lined up before the entire central office force and McCauley read them a lecture. He then turned to the driver of the patrol wagon and said:

"I want you on your way to the West side court with these men to drive directly up Broadway, so everyone can see them. If anyone asks you what they did, stop and tell him they are confidence men and wire-tappers. I wish I could have signs placed on the wagon showing who and what these men are. It will do good to give publicity to them."

The men were taken to court as McCauley had ordered, and when the prisoners were arraigned before Magistrate Mayo they were held in $500 bonds each for further examination today. Capt. Schulm said that by that time he thought he would have three or four "suckers" who had been "trimmed."

WOODS IN FLAMES.

Bolt of Lightning Starts Fire In Montana.

Missoula, Mont., Aug. 18.—Forest fires are raging in the western part of Montana with increased fury, according to reports last night from Clinton, and the damage will be heavy.

H. H. Dickinson, who, in company with a crew of men, is assisting Special Land Agent Sharn in fighting the fire, says that ten men are engaged in stubbornly fighting the dense wall of flames. The fire near Clinton started from a tree that was struck by lightning. It spread quickly from this tree to the grass and underbrush, and burned in a straight line almost seven miles north of Clinton.

From this line it has burned west as far as the eye can see, and, as there is much fallen and lead timber in that part of the country, the fire at times has been very fierce and destructive. There seems to be a regular wall of flame running for seven miles north and south, and this flame was spreading westward when Mr. Dickinson left the scene.

Men have been fighting and beating back the fire all along the line in an endeavor to keep it from spreading eastward across the Clinton-Potomac road in the direction of several claims owned by Missoula men.

WOMAN IS FEVER VETERAN

Has Been Through Epidemic Three Times.

Savannah, Ga., Aug. 18.—Passing through three yellow fever epidemics is an experience which few can relate, but when that experience is deepened and more severely emphasized by having been twice afflicted with the malady, a person might speak with unquestionable authority on the subject.

Such has been the experience of Mrs. Rhoda Hargrave, who lives at 424 State street east. She has lived in Savannah sixty years, and during the epidemic of 1876 nursed nine members of her family through the siege without the loss of a patient and without herself becoming infected. Mrs. Hargrave first had the fever in 1838. She was living in Charleston and fever was raging there, and at the same time it was epidemic in New Orleans. Her father was a sea captain and returned from New Orleans, bringing the infection, it was thought, to the family, though the fever was in Charleston before his arrival.

At that time the family was stricken with the fever and passed through it without serious results. In 1854 Mrs. Hargrave again had the fever, this time in Savannah. During her experience Mrs. Hargrave has nursed a great many cases of fever.

DESERTED BY HUSBAND

Mrs. P. F. Ward Is Left to Support Two Children.

Deserted by her husband, who left about a week ago for Portland, Or., Mrs. P. F. Ward of 426 Lake avenue north is left as the sole support of herself and two small children.

Ward was a partner in the firm of Curry & Ward, blacksmiths, who have a shop in Second alley between Third and Fourth avenues west. About a week ago he kissed his children, and told his wife she would not see him again. He informed her that she could do as she pleased with his interest in the shop, and turned over to her the rental from a house owned by him in West Duluth.

A few days ago Mrs. Ward sent the following telegram to the police department in Portland, to be delivered to her husband.

"Come back home. Will do the best I can. Do not desert me and the babies."

The Portland police attempted to locate Ward, but their efforts have not been successful up to the present time.

Ward had been traced to Portland through a friend in St. Paul, who stated that he had seen Ward, and that the latter was bound for Portland.

"I do not care now whether he comes back or not," said Mrs. Ward this morning. "I can get along without him."

FIRE TUG TESTED

America Throws Streams Over the Highest Missabe Dock.

Owned By Towing Company and Chartered By Railroad Company.

Steaming slowly alongside No. 3 dock, the highest ore dock belonging to the Duluth, Missabe & Northern Railway company, this morning, the fire tug America, which arrived from Erie, Pa., yesterday, threw an inch and three-quarter stream of water clear over the top of the dock and to the middle of the slip on the other side, demonstrating beyond a doubt the fire-fighter's prowess.

The America, which is owned by the Great Lakes Towing company, has just been chartered by the Duluth, Missabe & Northern company for service at the ore docks in this city to handle the large boats in and out of the slip, when necessary, and to be available immediately in case of a fire at the dock. The tug was taken out to the dock this morning to test her fighting qualities, in the presence of a number of the railway company officials, and the test was a must successful and satisfactory one.

The America was built at Buffalo, N. Y., in 1897, for the Hand & Johnson Tug company, especially for fire fighting purposes. When the Great Lakes Towing company was organized she was among the boats taken over, and for the past nine years she has been doing efficient fire service in the harbor at Erie. The America is a steel tug, 80 feet long, 21-foot beam, 12-foot depth and 123 gross tons. She is rated at A1, and resembles most, of the harbor tugs, the Zenith. The America is about three feet shorter, and a little greater beam, than the Zenith, but the two tugs have about the same power.

The test this morning was conducted by Thomas Johnson of Cleveland, assistant to President Edward Smith of the Great Lakes Towing company. Accompanying the boat was Capt. Herbert Vroman, local manager for the towing company; Vice President W. A. McGonagle of the Duluth, Missabe & Northern company, Supt. J. W. Kreitter, Dock Agent George Treviranus, Chief Clerk H. A. Rutter and W. J. Wallace of Proctorknott, superintendent of motive power on the road.

All conceivable tests of the fire apparatus of the tug were carried out. The America has pumps that throw more than 1,000 gallons of water per minute. There are four ordinary attachments for 2½-inch hose and one stand pipe, all of which can be operated at the same time, throwing five streams, though the force is not great enough to fight fire at any range with so many streams. With three ordinary streams and the stand pipe in operation this morning the end of No. 3 ore dock was literally drenched with water, from the water line to the top.

No. 3 dock, which is the last built and the highest of all the local ore docks, is 68 feet 6 inches high. With the standpipe in operation an inch and three-quarters stream was thrown fully twice the height of the dock, with the tug far enough away from the dock to escape if a portion of the structure should fall. Under 310 pounds water pressure at the pumps, streams an inch and a half and an inch and one-eighth in diameter were sent over the top of the dock. Three streams working at once under the same pressure reached to the top of the dock from a safe distance away from the structure, throwing a literal sheet of water against the side and satisfying the railway company and dock officials that the tug could do efficient work in an emergency.

The America will be stationed at a dock to be especially built for her. A telephone service will be inaugurated right to the pilot room and she will have a double crew, day and night.

It is understood that the railway officials welcome the installation of the fire tug for the reason that a fire scare was had at the dock about a week ago when a blaze was started on board one of the boats tied up and waiting for a load of ore. The dock construction comprises an immense amount of timber which is usually dry as tinder and made even more inflammable by reason of the oil and grease dripping on it from the cars and the engines runing overhead. The need of a powerful fire tug stationed right at hand for immediate service, before a blaze could get a start, has been recognized and the want is now believed to be filled.

AT LAST

Pennsylvania Maid Finds Man Under Her Bed.

New Kensington, Pa., Aug. 18.—After having looked under the bed for many years each evening before she retired, Miss Lillian Heckman, daughter of Oswald Heckman, proprietor of the Hotel Heckman in this place, was at last rewarded for her search. Sure enough, there, under the bed, was a man.

Miss Heckman screamed, and all the hotel employes and guests rushed to her assistance. Then the man was taken into custody and searched. A gold watch, two diamond rings and other booty were found.

The stranger gave his name as Davis, but a letter from Philadelphia and a name plate, both bearing the name Guy Madden, lead the police to believe that he is from Philadelphia. He is in jail at Greensburg.

MISS ROOSEVELT

To Stop In China to Meet Empress.

Washington, Aug. 18.—Capital society was surprised by the decision of Alice Roosevelt to stop in Pekin and not return home with the party of the secretary of war, due in San Francisco Oct. 1. Her change in plans is attributed to the fact that she is unwilling to decline the invitation to be presented to the dowager empress of China at a special reception.

Miss Roosevelt, it is said, has been invited to visit the family of Minister W. W. Rockhill at Pekin and will leave the party upon her return to Japan from Manila. Accompanied by her companions, Miss McMillan and Miss Boardman, she will proceed to Shanghai, where she will board the steamer Mongolia, arriving in San Francisco Nov. 3.

Minister Rockhill arranged for the presentation to the dowager empress, at the request, it is said, of Secretary Root.

ATLANTIC CITY'S MAYOR

Would Regulate Length of Bathing Skirts.

Atlantic City, N. J., Aug. 18.—Surf maids are in a pout over the effort of Mayor Stoy to interfere with their privilege of regulating the length of their bathing skirts.

The instructions reported to have been issued to the life guards to have short skirts measured in order to have them conform with the ideas of the czar who sits enthroned in the city hall have raised a mighty protest from the fair ones.

When Mayor Stoy reached the city a half dozen men were lined up in the corridor. They all made inquiries about the office of official bathing skirt measurer.

The mayor declined to receive any applicant, and it was left to his secretary to turn disappointed ones away.

CHRISTIAN GOLF SECT

Has Been Founded By an Iowa Preacher.

Iowa Falls, Iowa, Aug. 18.—Golf and religion will be mixed for the benefit of body and soul by the members of a new sect known as "Christian Golfists" just founded by Rev. George Cady, one of the best-known Congregational divines in Iowa.

Dr. Cady, who is an enthusiastic golfer, manages to play the game, it is alleged, without using profane language when he makes a mighty swipe at the ball and fails to hit it, and he thinks he can induce some other enthusiasts to drop that most unnecessary adjunct. As a health promoter he declares golf beats the remedies proposed by Mrs. Eddy or Dowie.

"If you tack religion on to almost any enterprise it will soon attract a lot of followers," he said. "I don't know anything that needs an admixture of religion worse than does golf, and therefore I have decided to organize the Society of Christian Golfists."

FRENCH COUNT

Gets Divorce Because His Wife Confuses Him.

New York, Aug. 18.—A Paris cable to the World says: When the Count and Countess de Binon were divorced last week in Paris the court decided the case unlike any other that has yet come before it. The countess' lawyer declared that the count never acted as his client's husband at all, alleging that in her presence he felt a physical and mental confusion which was ruining his mind and body, although the match was supposed to have been a love match.

The count had declared to his wife that he meant to leave her immediately, since the strange demoralization of her presence would end in his death. On advice of the family, the countess left her husband's house, hoping her temporary absence would give him a chance to recover. In this hope she was deceived, for when she returned to the house the first sight of her drove her husband to such an acme of excited despair that she had immediately to leave again.

Under these circumstances the court gave the countess her divorce.

Gossip has it that there is another explanation of the matter, the count having deliberately taken this quick method of securing a divorce, desiring to contract a union with another woman whom he met the very day of his wedding.

MUST DROP THEATER

Or Kansas City Man Will Lose Fortune.

Kansas City, Mo., Aug. 18.—Before he can inherit his father's estate, John T. O'Connor, stage electrician at the Orpheum theater, must give up the theatrical business and attend mass every Sunday morning. If he does not comply with these conditions he will be cut off without a cent. Such are the terms contained in the will of Patrick O'Connor, father of John T. O'Connor.

The estate consists of 30,000 shares of Victoria copper mining stock, two lots in Decatur, Ill., and the O'Connor home at 3016 Dunham avenue. The mining stock is said to have considerable value. This estate is left to Cornelius O'Connor, a brother of the testator, to be held in trust according to the following clause of the will:

"Said trustee shall hold said property or the proceeds thereof in trust for the use and benefit of said John T. O'Connor, and shall pay over semi-annually to him the net rentals, or interest thereof, provided the said John T. O'Connor shall have abandoned the theatrical business and try to lead a Christian life by attending mass on Sundays. If the said John T. O'Connor shall not comply with the conditions aforesaid then the trustee shall not pay over to him any of the interest or rentals of said property, but shall allow the same to accumulate in his hands, and at the death of said John T. O'Connor said trustee shall deliver or pay over all of the property or money in his hands to my nieces, Elizabeth Rhorer, Annie Rhorer, Frances Rhorer, Catherine Thornton, Emma Rhorer, Hannah Thornton and Columbia Rhorer in equal parts, share and share alike."

BARRACOUTA WINS 1905 CHAMPIONSHIP.

Oshkosh, Wis., Aug. 8.—Barracouta of White Bear has won the class B championship of 1905 in the eighth annual regatta of the Inland Lakes Yachting association regatta. In the fifth and closing race of the series, today, she came in second, led by a small margin by Pathfinder of Minnetonka. Her total percentage for the week is 457.1, while that of Pathfinder is but 342.8 the latter losing 100 per cent Thursday by fouling Barracouta at a buoy which ruled her out of the race and gave her no score in that event. Had the event of Thursday counted for Pathfinder she would now be tied with Barracouta for the championship, each having 442.8 points.

BLOOMBERG REWARDED

For His Activity In the Last Campaign.

St. Paul, Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—G. A. Bloomberg, Jr., of St. Peter has been given a position under the state railway and warehouse commission, and there is considerable dissatisfaction in the Democratic executive department.

Bloomberg, a former district clerk of Nicollet county, it is alleged, was responsible for the affidavit in the last campaign, charging Governor Johnson with filial disrespect. The affidavit, which, among others, contained the signature of Bloomberg, was in effect that Governor Johnson's father died while an inmate of the Nicollet county poor house. Governor Johnson did not discuss the story of Bloomberg's, but there were others under him not so backward in airing their sentiments. They called it an outrage.

Frank A. Day, the governor's private secretary, was credited with the statement that Bloomberg's appointment was a reward for his activity in the last campaign.

DALLAS WINS THE NEXT CONVENTION; JOHN STAGG CAPTURES PRESIDENCY

Texas Town Has Fine Margin When Vote Is Taken.

Paterson, N. J., Man Easily Wins Leading Office.

It took only one ballot in each case at the fire chiefs' convention this morning to decide where the convention will be next year and who the president of the association will be. As to the first matter, Dallas, Tex., won out as the convention city over Louisville, Ky., and John Stagg of Patterson, N. J., was chosen president of the association.

Out side of these choices the convention did not do much of anything. The election of a convention city was set as a special order for 10 o'clock this morning and it had been decided that the election of officers should immediately follow.

Therefore this morning was felt to be the morning of the chief battle of the convention and each member came with his loins girt up for strife. T. E. Smith, Jr., one of the trade journal editors present at the convention, said this morning that in the fourteen years he has been attending fire chiefs' conventions, this is the first time he has ever seen a fight for the presidency started. He says there have been several candidates mentioned at conventions heretofore, but up to this time it has usually been fixed up before the voting. However, in this particular case there were three candidates and for a few moments they amounted to four, but Chief Michael G. Higgins of Albany, N. Y., declined to allow his name to be used after he had been nominated by Mayhew W. Bronson of Larchmont, N. Y.

The convention, when it adjourned this morning, decided to meet tonight, and later, after the convention had adjourned, a number of the officers agreed to have the convention meet at the pavilion at Lester Park, as it was planned by the local committee on arrangements to take the boulevard drive to Lester Park today, have luncheon there this evening and follow that by a dance. There are a number of matters up for discussion and the older heads of the convention decided to hold their meeting at Lester Park while the young fellows could either attend the convention or join in the dance, just as they saw fit. This afternoon at 2 o'clock the members of the convention and their ladies met at the Central high school and had their pictures taken on the steps of the high school.

There will be a business session tomorrow morning and during the time the men are in meeting the ladies will take a trolley ride about the city in chartered cars. It is expected that the business of the convention will be ended by tomorrow noon. A good many of the delegates will leave for home or for the Twin Cities this afternoon and evening and more will go tomorrow and Sunday. Quite a number, however, are planning to stay over until Monday and Tuesday, most of the Easterners figuring on going back by way of the steamer North West next Tuesday night.

When the convention opened this morning Chief John Kendall of Detroit read a paper on "Fire Drill and School of Instruction, with Plan of Training Tower." Chief Kendall's paper proved highly interesting in view of the fact that he was advancing the interests of a training tower which one of the captains of his force has invented. The tower is rather out of the ordinary and is believed to be so equipped as to develop a fireman rapidly.

There was also a paper by Chief Canterbury of Minneapolis, followed by a discussion on the Morrill insurance bill before congress. This was laid over until tomorrow morning as a special order of business for that time.

Ten o'clock having arrived the convention proceeded to chose where it would meet next year. Chief H. F. Magee of Dallas extended an invitation from Dallas Texas, and promised that if the convention was sent there for next year "We will show you Texas and a good time." He presented a communication from Byron T. Barry, the mayor of Dalas, inviting the chiefs in the name of the city government, the common council and other public bodies to go to Dallas next year to hold their convention.

Chief Fillmore Tyson of Louisville, Ky., presented the claim of his city for the convention of next year. He claimed that it is a logical point because it is near the central government's establishment, is easy of access for manufacturers wishing to exhibit their wares and besides that it is close to the Mammoth Cave, one of the wonders of the world. Chief Tyson promised that if the convention honored his city with its next sitting it would be received with true Kentucky hospitality.

These nominations of cities were followed by numerous seconds for each by different parts of the country. Then W. H. Atwell of Dallas, Texas, who spell-bound the convention last year in his effort to get the convention for his city, was called for. Mr. Atwell did not attempt much oratory this time, for things looked too easy for Dallas. Odds were offered at 2 to 1 on Dallas, with but few takers. Mr. Atwell merely said that he was present to enforce the claims of "that valiant fire fighter, Chief Magee of Dallas," for the right to the convention next year. Mr. Atwell worked in a few stories, which delighted the audience, and declared that Dallas does not want the convention in order to boom the city, but merely out of compliment to Chief Magee and his assistants, whom the city honors, and to whom it wishes to show appreciation for their skill in saving the city from destruction on three different occasions. Mr. Atwell brought from the governor of Texas a personal invitation for the chiefs to go to Dallas for their convention next year. Said the governor, according to Mr. Atwell:

"Texas is made up of people from every other state in the Union. Tell the chiefs to come down here and meet their cousins, for there is scarcely a person in any other state in the Union who has not a relative or so in Texas."

Continuing, Mr. Atwell said:

"My people are people of the heart. Commercialism has not chilled the Texans. We are prepared for you, our women are expecting you, and we want to love you for a week next year; and when you go away I'll warrant you will love us forever. We will give you a time that you will never forget."

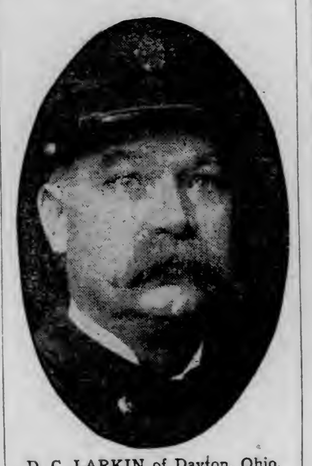

The matter then came to a vote and it was decided that if more than one ballot was necessary the lowest on the first ballot would be dropped out. The result of the ballot showed that Dallas had captured the convention getting a majority of 14 over Louisville and Niagara combined. The vote stood as follows:

Dallas, 87; Louisville, 46; Niagara, 28.

Chief Tyson of Louisville moved that the election be declared unanimous, which was done and the chief then invited the convention to choose Louisville for 1907. Mr. Atwell of Dallas was called upon again and acknowledged the compliment of Dallas in graceful language. Chief Magee of Dallas also thanked the convention.

* * *

The matter of president then came up and Chief McQuade of Chattanooga placed John T. Black of Duluth in nomination. Ex-Chief Benedict of Newark, N. J., nominated Vice-President John Stagg of Paterson, N. J., Mayhew W. Bronson nominated Michael Higgins of Albany and W. H. Bywater nominated Chief Canterbury of Minneapolis. Chief Higgins declined the nomination saying that younger men than he would be better fitted for the place. In the seconding of nominations, Chief John Stagg of Paterson, N. J., received many seconds. It was stated generally that as firemen believe in promotion, Chief Stagg should be promoted from first vice-president to president. It was asserted repeatedly that he had first been made second vice-president and afterwards first vice-president and has frequently filled the first chair with honor and ability and should be promoted. That is the sentiment which seemed to fill the delegates and the vote showed Chief Stagg elected on the first ballot gtting a majority of 45 over Messrs. Black and Canterbury. The vote stood: Stagg, 96; Black, 14; and Canterbury, 39. The other officers were elected by acclamation and are as follows:

First vice-president, George M. Kellogg of Sioux City, Iowa, who was second vice-president.

Second vice-president, Michael Higgins of Albany, N. Y.

Secretary, James McFall of Roanoke, Va., who was appointed during the year to succeed Henry A. Hills, deceased.

Treasurer, D. C. Larkin of Dayton, O., (re-elected.)

State vice-presidents were nominated as follows by a committee and the report was adopted:

Alabama, J. F. Browder; Arkansas, Charles F. Hofer; California, D. T. Sullivan; Connecticut, Rufus R. Fancher; Colorado, E. E. Batty; Deleware, G. W. Sasse; District of Columbia, W. F. WAS ON THE LADDER

Dr. Rice's Story Will Bring Him an Interesting Souvenir.

Chicago's Fire Chief Disgusted With Some Federal Regulations.

In his speech before the fire chiefs at the Lyceum Wednesday evening, Rev. M. S. Rice told a story of a thrilling feat performed by firemen at a great fire in New York. The story was told remarkably well and this fact together with what it developed after the meeting was over, makes the story of the recital worth the printing although that does not necessarily need to mean that it was not worth printing anyway. Mr. Rice had eulogized the courage of firemen and went on to say:

"Have you forgotten that great fire in New York several years since when the great Windsor hotel was burned with such sorrow? You could not forget it. It was St. Patrick's day and the great procession was passing the hotel when with a clash and roar the wagons made way and stopped with a grind on the pavement. What a thrill struck the people's hearts as they saw the hotel was in flames. Excited throngs ran every whither. Truck No. 21 rolled in and around to a standstill on the cobble stones. Three characteristic firemen were there. I will never forget their names. They were McDermott, McGuire and Martin. Martin and McGuire sprang down and the woman's weight by only one hand. The crowd below ceased to breathe. My God, how long could he hold out! Thus he swung for a moment never thinking of letting his burden drop and saving himself. Then he regained a foothold.

H. F. MAGEE, Dallas, Tex., Whose Vigorous Canvass Won for Dallas the Convention of 1906.

"Above him the white streams, curving like huge snakes fell hissing into the bank of smoke and flame. The extension ladder was shooting up and up and as he came down another story it swung and swayed beneath him. On its top rung sat McGuire calling to him: 'Hold on, old man.'

"Infinite care helped them to make the transfer and in a moment during which the crowd stood in agony the three were on the end of the firemen's ladder. Could the swaying ladder hold them? There it was against the sky swinging and swaying scarcely seeming stout enough to bear the burden. McGuire caught the woman, McDermott said: 'Can you make it, Mac? When McGuire said he could, McDermott went back to the same window from which he had taken the woman and rescued a little dog he had seen appear with his nose appealingly over the sill. When he brought the dog down to the now restored woman somebody asked McDermott what made him take such desperate chances for a dog. He rather shame-facedly replied: "I couldn't see him burn; he was alive."

* * *

At the end of his speech while the crowd was about Mr. Rice congratulating him, Mayhew W. Bronson of New York, formerly fire chief at Larchemont, N. Y., came up and grasping Mr. Rice's hand said, while his voice shook with emotion:

"Mr. Rice, I want to thank you for that story of the fire boys. I was on that ladder myself at the time it happened. I've got a piece of the ladder which broke under McDermott and the woman and I want your address so I can send you part of it as a souvenir."

Mr. Rice was as delighted as Mr. Bronson and they had quite a talk. Mr. Bronson says that McDermott is now captain of his company in New York, but he does not know where McGuire and Martin are. At the time the thrilling affair happened, Mr. Bronson was learning the rudiments of the fire fighting game. He is no longer in the fire service, but is pushing the sale of a fire fighting appliance which he has on display here. He is and was at the time of his service in the New Larchemont department, known, as the "millionaire chief." He is several thns a millionaire, coming of a wealthy and influential family and entered the fire fighting service merely because it had a special attraction for him.

* * *

Mr. Bronson is, besides a millionaire and noted fire chief, quite a society favorite it is said, although he seems to be quite a retirent man. He is president of the Larchemont Yacht club and is a member of many New York clubs. Fire fighting was a fad with him and one that he has never recovered from. Mr. Bronson is a bachelor, which is hard to reconcile with the fact that he is good-looking, rich and in every way a gentleman.

* * *

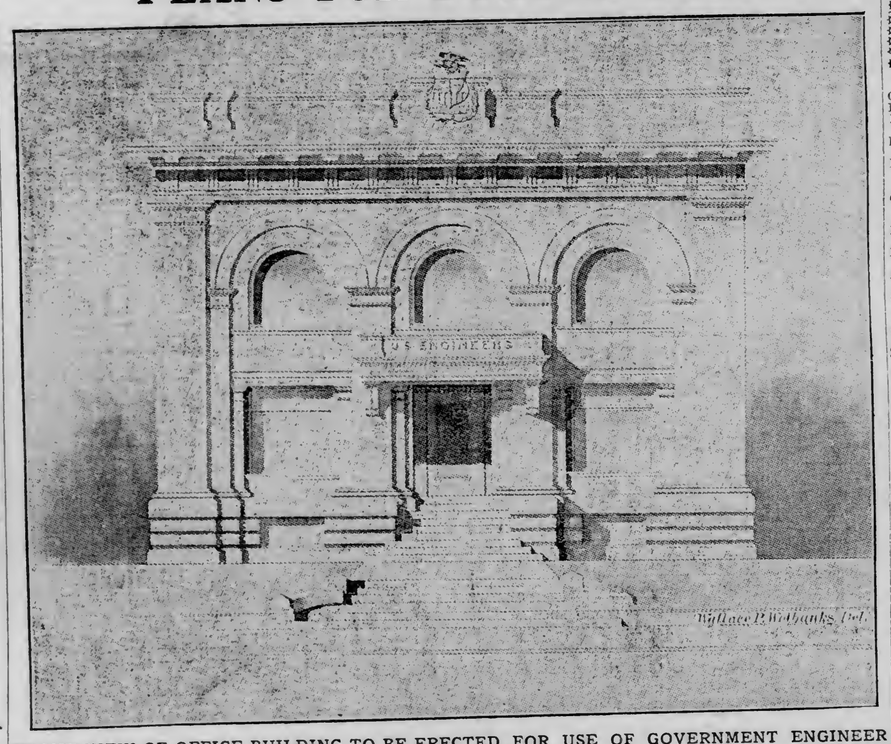

That a chief's life is not all a bed of roses has been shown in many of the remarks cast out during the convention. Chief Campion of Chicago told the prize hard-luck story, however. It was during a discussion of a paper in which the matter of fire protection on steamers and excursion boats was being dealt with. Chief Campion claimed that the government is too rigid in its laws in some cases and cited as a case in point the following:

"Some little time ago," said the Chicago fire chief, "I allowed twenty-five policemen to use one of my fire tugs for a matter of duty. The first thing I knew I was cited to appear before the United States admiralty authorities and fined $70 for carrying passengers. This made me hot because I had shown that the boat was carrying the police as a matter of public duty. That made no difference with the United States officials. I had to pay the fine anyway. Grown curious, I asked: 'If 125 people were in danger of being drowned and I took the fire tug out and saved them, what would happen to me for carrying the 125 passengers?' I was told that I would be fined $1,000. Now on the other hand, if I did not save people under such circumstances the citizens of Chicago would hang me; so you see that no matter how you look at it, I'm up against it."

Next Monday, Herald excursion to Fond du Lac on the Newsboy. Tuesday, thirty mile sail down the lake on the America.

CHIEF ENGINEER APPROVES PLANS FOR DULUTH BUILDING

Within the next few months there will be erected in the government park at the Duluth ship canal a handsome building to be occupied by the government engineer, to cost between $15,000 and $20,000. The project has been under way for a long time. A special dispatch to The Herald from Washington, today, announced that the plans for the new building have been acted on favorably by the war department and that the papers were, today, returned to Major Charles L. Potter, engineer in charge of this district.

It is expected that as soon as Major Potter receives the papers steps will be taken to immediately advertise and call for bids for the construction work, the building to be started this fall, if possible.

With the construction of this building, Duluth will have the first and only structure that has ever been erected in this country for the exclusive use of a government engineer.

The plans which have just been approved by the chief engineer's office are in accordance with a project approved April 1, 1905, calling for a three story building, 46½ feet square with a concrete foundation and superstructure of pressed brick with Bedford stone trimmings.

The building will be constructed along classical lines, the Doric order of architecture prevailing. The designs and plans, were made by Wallace P. Wellbanks, draftsman in the engineering department at large, and connected with the local offices, under the direction of Major Charles L. Potter, corps of engineers, U. S. A., and J. H. Darling, assistant engineer. The construction work will be, also, under the direction of Major Potter and his assistants.

The building will be erected in the government park on the north side of the north pier of the Duluth ship canal, and 110 feet east of the aerial bridge. The grounds are to be graded up three feet above the present grade and a second three foot seawall will be built on the lake side. For further protection, the curving along the north pier will be raised the same height, so that the building will be secure from the heaviest seas. Cement walks will be built around the building and grass plots will cover all the bare sandy places.

The grounds will be inclosed by a concrete curbing one foot high running out from the sea wall and the north pier.

In the cornice of the building over the main entrance, as shown by the picture, will be the United States corps of engineers' coat of arms in hammered sheet zinc.

The basement will have four rooms and a store room, the feature of which will be the cement testing laboratory. This will occupy a space of 40 by 16 feet and will be equipped with all modern appliances for testing concrete and the materials which enter into its composition. In connection with the important concrete works which have been carried to completion and others which are still in progress in this district, a large quantity of the broken briquettes or test pieces have accumulated. It is proposed to utilize these specimens, and, at the same time, commemorate the work that has been performed in the laboratory under the Duluth engineer's office, by tessallating the laboratory floor with these specimens. They will be set in cement mortar with their record numbers, so that by reference to the records on file at the laboratory, the whole history of any test piece may be quickly ascertained, thus creating a permanent and lasting cabinet of the briquettes that have resulted from the tests, and placing them where they are not only out of the way, but actually constitute a work of utility in the construction of the laboratory.

The other basement space will be occupied by a watchman's office, a hot water heating plant and a vault that will extend up through the first and second stories.

The entrances from the front and rear will be tiled and will be finished in red oak with panelled walls and ceilings in the hallway. The doors will have heavy beveled glass. The other doors throughout the building will be panelled.

The officer in charge will have his office on the first floor, adjoining which will be the chief clerk's office, wardrobes and a washroom will also be provided.

On the second floor will be located the principal assistant engineer's office, the offices of two other assistant engineers, the drafting room, chart room and washrooms.

The third floor, which is hidden by the cornice in the picture, will have the photographing, blue print and dark room. This room will be equipped and fitted out along the most improved lines.

On the first and second floors the large plate glass windows will be pivoted at the top and bottom for opening.

The concrete foundation work and the additional sea wall construction will be under the direction of Assistant Engineer Clarence Coleman.

CITY BRIEFS

Independent ferry to Superior, 5c.

Lightning yesterday afternoon struck the residence of E. W. Orchard, 423 Eighth avenue west, and burned several holes in the wall of the parlor and one of the bedrooms. The plaster on most of the rooms was badly broken, and a picture hanging on the wall was destroyed. Mr. and Mrs. Orchard and three friends were seated in the parlor when the crash came. None of them was injured.

Fire was discovered this morning in a pile of rubbish in the basement of the Jewish church at Third avenue east and Third street, but it was extinguished before any damage was done.

Edgar J. Buttenheim, assistant manager of the Municipal Journal of New York, is in the city with the fire chiefs, and while here is arranging for a descriptive article on Duluth, which will appear in an early issue of the journal.

Make up your parties now for The Herald excursion Monday to Fond du Lac on the Newsboy, and the Tuesday excursion thirty miles down the lake and return, on the America. Twenty-five cents covers the expense for either trip.

COL. MOSBY AFTER

The Oklahoma Grafters Who Live on the Minors.

In Southwest to Unearth Graft In Indian Service.

Guthrie, O. T., Aug. 18.—Carrying an old-fashioned hickory cane, with a curved handle, such a cane as could be purchased for 25 cents in any flint hill Missouri town, and walking as briskly an deasily as if he were a man of 30, Col. John S. Mosby, whose renown as a commander of guerrillas in the Confederate army is known to every schoolboy, has come to Oklahoma to unearth graft in the Indian service. His particular mission as an assistant attorney in the department of justice is to investigate alleged frauds by guardians in the management of estates of Indian minors. Col. Mosby was in Ardmore and took an active part in the work of the federal grand jury that indicted B. H. Colbert, United States marshal; Governor Johnstone, ex-Governor Palmer Mosely, the members of the law firm of Mansfield, Cornish & McMurray, and other persons for offenses against the federal government and the Chickasaw nation.

Col. Mosby, from an ancestral standpoint, is a genuine Virginian. True to his Virginia instincts, he tells of Virginia and things Virginian. He recalls vividly the stirring events which he helped to mold into the permanent history of his land. He has strongly cut features, the jaw and nose of a fighter, and small, dark eyes, deeply set, that peer quizzingly and ask questions without the use of words. Col. Mosby may have been a dandy in his younger days, but he is no longer fastidious in his dress. He does not use tobacco in any form.

Probably the most remarkable act in Col. Mosby's life was when he left the Confederacy and joined the Republican party. The scorn and contempt shown by his fellow Virginians when he broke Southern traditions became practically a social and political tragedy for Col. Mosby. He was a flourishing lawyer in Warrenton, Va., when he changed. Lifelong friends turned their backs upon him and denounced him as a traitor to his people and his family. To speak of Mosby in Virginia was to execrate him. Col. Mosby talked about this unhappy experience. Tapping his cane on the floor, he said: "My old friends now are ashamed of what they did and said. They agree with me that it would have been better had all of us in the South begun early to heal the scars left by the strife that devastated our land."

President Hayes appointed Col. Mosby American consul in Hongkong, where he remained seven years. He was offered a place by President Grant, who declared that he owed the electoral vote of Virginia to Mosby. Mosby, however, did not accept. Mosby afterward was for sixteen years an assistant attorney of the Southern Pacific Railroad company in San Francisco. President McKinley remembered Mosby and gave him a place as special agent in the general land office. President Roosevelt transferred him to the department of justice.

When Col. Mosby reached Hongkong he found Dr. John Lochwood of Virginia. Lochwood had left the United States in 1851. He was intensely bitter against the federal government. Mosby was the first Confederate that Lochwood had seen. Lochwood did not know that the war actually was at an end until he saw Mosby and learned that he had come as an official of the federal government.

Gen. Grant was then on his trip around the world and when he reached Hongkong Col. Mosby, as the official representative of the United States, boarded the steamer to welcome President Grant and his party. He was accompanied by Lochwood. Mosby was a close friend of the Grants, and after exchanging formal courtesies he introduced Dr. Lochwood, with the remark: "Gen. Grant, I present to you the last fugitive Confederate, and ask that you give him his parole." Mrs. Grant interceded smilingly and said: "Gen. Grant, I bespeak the most liberal terms for Dr. Lochwood." Lochwood was somewhat abashed, but recovered his composure and said: "I would surrender to no other man in the world, but I am willing to surrender to the man to whom Gen. Lee surrendered."

President Grant told Lochwood that he freely gave him his parole and hoped that he would return soon to his native land and help restore it to prosperity and happiness. Dr. Lochwood grew to be an ardent admirer of President Grant.

ECZEMA

ITCHES AND BURNS

The return of warm weather means a return of torture to Eczema sufferers. The blood is charged with burning acids and acrid matter which is forced to the surface through the pores and glands, forming pustules which discharge a sticky fluid, and the itching is intense.

The doctors said I had pustular Eczema; it would break out in small white pustules, mostly on my face and hands, discharging a sticky fluid; crusts would form and drop off, leaving the skin red and inflamed. I was tormented with the itching and burning characteristic of the disease for five years, and during the time used various medicated soaps, ointments and washes, but these applications seemed to make me worse. After taking S. S. S. a short time I began to improve; the itching did not worry me so much. I continued the medicine, and soon all the ugly eruptions disappeared and my skin is now as clear as anybody's. I have not been troubled with any breaking out since.

Urbana, O. E. E. KELLY.

Sometimes the disease is in the dry form, and bran-like scales form on the skin, but the cause is the same—humors in the blood. Salves, cooling washes, powders and the like can do nothing more than relieve the itching, because they do not reach the acid-laden blood, the seat of the trouble. S. S. S. cures Eczema and all skin diseases by neutralizing the acids and carrying them off through the proper channels. When S. S. S. has done this the symptoms pass away, the blood is cooled and the disease is cured permanently. Nothing acts so promptly or surely in skin diseases as S. S. S., and it at the same time acts as a tonic to the entire system. Book on Skin Diseases and any medical advice without charge.

EARTHQUAKE WAS SEVERE

Missionary Tells of One on Japanese Inland Sea.

New York, Aug. 18.—From Hiroshima, Japan, a city on the inland sea, where are situated some of the Japanese military hospitals, comes to the Presbyterian board of foreign missions, from Rev. W. B. Langsdorf the report of a severe earthquake, which occurred a few weeks ago. Mr. Langsdorf says: "It was the worst ever experienced in this part of Japan. The natives say that about thirty years ago much damage was done and many people injured, but this shock was the worst the city has experienced. Many persons were killed or injured, houses collapsed or were thrown from their foundations, and large fissures appeared in the earth.

"There were two shocks on Friday, six on Saturday, two on Sunday, two on Tuesday, and another Wednesday night. Many people refused to sleep in their houses and camped out in the fields three or four nights notwithstanding heavy rains. When the first shock came I was at one of the military hospitals trying to help some of the wounded soldiers. I was talking to a poor fellow when the whole building suddenly began to rock like a ship in a storm at sea. My soldier friend had to clutch at the sides of the bed to keep himself from falling out. I shall never forget the sight as I stood in the center of the room with feet braced, just as on a pitching vessel. One of my helpers was on the floor beside a bed with his hands over his head; another was disappearing at the door followed by a long line of white-robed figures, who suddenly seemed to have pressing business in that direction. All the while the building was crashing to the floor.

"If you take a pasteboard box and push it first at one corner and then at the othe until you think it will fall in, you will get some slight idea of the way that building looked. After helping to make some of the poor fellows comfortable, I hastened home. The streets were filled with panic-stricken people and on all sides could be seen evidences of the visitation. You can imagine my great relief at finding our house standing and all the family uninjured, though greatly alarmed. When I examined I found how marvellous had been our escape. The earth, houses and all, present the appearance of having buckled up, humped like a camel, and parts of the ground appear to have jumped by the way of variety.

"All the chimneys on both houses are cracked, and in one of them the chimneys crashed through the roof and ceilings to the ground. Not a room in either house escaped. A clock and book-case were hurled to the floor, china and glassware crashed, our whole house was moved from its foundations and a number of the main beams and braces supporting the roof were left in dangerous condition. One of the many peculiar things that happened was this: One of my large book-cases was overturned and sent flying across the room. The lower shelf was filled with large books. These were left in perfect order and upright on the floor, just as if the floor had been the shelf. The bookcase, shelves and all, were three feet away from these books. It seems incredible, but it is the fact.

"In less than an hour I was getting estimates on the repairs, realizing that immediate action was necessary to save the house from complete loss. I did the best I could and consider the amount I have to pay to be cheap for Japan, and in America the same amount of work could not be done for five times the amount. On the next day it rained very hard, but I kept the workmen at it, working with them on the top of the houses, between shocks of which there were six that day. Naturally the strain has been great upon us all, but we are devoutly thankful that we have all escaped injury. But even yet we do not know when there will be a repetition of what we have gone through. Yet we believe there is work here for us to do and that the Lord will spare us to do it."

STATE FOREST POLICY

Is to Be Established In Maryland Soon.

Washington, Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—C. D. Bell of the forest service has proceeded to St. Mary's county, Maryland, in order to make a forest description and a map, showing the condition and description of the commercial and other forests in that county.

The work is a continuation of the cooperative study begun several years ago by the forest service and the Maryland state geological survey. It is undertaken, like the similar studies in which various states have co-operated with the service, as a basis for establishing a state forest policy. Minnesota, New Hampshire and other states have already achieved tangible results in this way.

ADAMS TO REFORM

Aged Policy King to Delve In Mines of Mexico.

Says He Will Make a Billion For His Children.

New York, Aug. 18.—"Al" Adams, the policy king, who was released from prison but a few months ago, says he is going to reform and make a billion dollars for his children.

Having reached nearly three score years, many of them filled with strife and bitterness, the man, now pale and broken in health, is seeking an elysium in Mexico. His physician told him he had less than five years to live if he stayed in New York, and fifteen years at the outside if he should go to a dry, mountainous climate. Today his private plans are completed. His business plans are arranged. By the end of August he will be on his way to Old Mexico to start life anew in the gold fields of ancient Guanajuato, the scene of the recent flood, where so many hundreds of lives were sacrificed.

He says frankly he does not dispute his title of "policy king." He has no excuse to offer. He is selling his real estate with a view to investing his capital in Mexico. He wants the world to forget for his family's sake. Amid new associations, in new pursuits he hopes to make a new name, to achieve fame that will obliterate the memory of the old "Al" Adams.

"There was another side to 'Al' Adams the newspapers never told them of," said "Al." "Mind you, I have no word of complaint against the press. I took my medicine, and I took it straight. I got more than my dose at times, but nobody ever heard me protest. There was an outcry against the way I made my money. I didn't scatter tainted money in all directions to soften criticism. I did not try to buy public opinion with philanthropy. For my past I have no palliation or defense. It is a sealed book.

"The one memory I would like to leave behind me, however, in this city, is that, in spite of all that has been said about me, I have lived a happy life with my family. I have raised my children well, and we have dwelt together in mutual love and respect. My future is dedicated to them.

"I will work. I always labored.

"No idle luxury for me. I've worked all my life. I've made money all my life. I intend to keep on. I've been too busy to learn how to enjoy myself like some rich men. Racing stables and steam yachts don't interest me. Business is my recreation.

"My boy Lawrence came to my rescue. He is a natural mineralogist. In college he studied mining. Now he will come in handy. For the last four years he has spent most of his time in Mexico. He has been over every foot of the country. He knows its history from the time of the Aztecs.

"I guess that I will get along all right. Guanajuato has been on the map for over three centuries. The city has electric lights, horse cars, a modern hotel and a splendid theater. I expect, however, to spend most of my time at the mines. When it gets dull I will run down to the theater.

"I will never tire of making money. I shall try to make a billion dollars. Rockefeller in his old age does not despise it. I was born to work. The same faculty Rockefeller possesses to turn a penny into a dollar I guess was put into me. I will never stop while I live."

QUAINT EPITAPHS

Erected In Cemetery For Pets In London.

New York, Aug. 18.—A London cable to the World says: Many Americans have visited the Animals' cemetery in Hyde park this year. Our Yankee cousins and other tourists are attracted not only by the curious nature of the cemetery and its beauty, but by the many remarkable inscriptions on the headstones.

The cemetery contains the remains of several hundreds of pet dogs, cats and monkeys, each of which is interred in a miniature grave, with head and foot stones and rails. Many of these headstones bear eloquent witness to the grief of the animals' owners as well as tributes to the virtues of the dead. Here are some of the inscriptions:

"As deeply mourned as ever dog was mourned,
For friendship was by her adored."

"To the beloved memory of Orphie and Muth, whose sweet, loving lives ended at Myere's. They were lively and pelasant in their lives, and in their death they were not divided."

"We are only sleeping, dear master."

"I'll meet you again."

"A faithful friend, he pined for his lost mistress and died."

The cemetery was opened chiefly through the aid of the late duke of Cambridge, the king's uncle, in 1881. One of the first interments was that of the duke's terrier, which was run over and killed.

SOUR STOMACH
(ACID DYSPEPSIA.)

Now Reconized as the Cause of Serious Disease.

Acid Dyspepsia, commonly called heartburn or sour stomach, is a form of indigestion resulting from fermentation of the food. The stomach being too weak to promptly digest it, the food remains until fermentation begins, filling the stomach with gas, and a bitter, sour, burning taste in the mouth is often present. This condition soon becomes chronic and being an everyday occurrence is given but little attention. Because Dyspepsia is not immediately fatal, many people do nothing for the trouble.

It is now well known among able physicians that the whole constitution is gradually undermined and weakened, that the nerves and vital organs are seriously affected by any form of dyspepsia. This is plain, as every organ, every nerve in the body is nourished by the blood and the blood is replenished from the food digested. If the food is properly digested the blood is pure, the nerves steady, but if supplied from a sour, fermenting, decaying mass the blood is vitiated, poisoned and the result is shown in sleeplessness, lack of energy, poor appetite, nervousness. Every trifle is magnified and the dyspeptic sees nothing but the dark side of everything.

Within a recent period a remedy has been discovered prepared solely to cure dyspepsia and stomach troubles. It is known as Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets and it is now becoming rapidly used and prescribed as a radical cure for every form of dyspepsia.

It is not claimed to cure anything except dyspepsia and stomach weakness in its various forms, but for this is has been shown to be unequalled. The eminent specialists, Reed and O'Leary, have recently stated that they considered Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets an unfailing specific for disorders of the digestive organs, and the remarkable cures made in cases of long standing dyspepsia proves that this remedy has extraordinary merit.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets have been placed before the public and are sold by druggists everywhere at 50 cents per package, and while it promptly and effectually restores a vigorous digestion, strengthens the stomach, improves the appetite and makes life worth living.

THE INDIANS WERE AFRAID

That the Use of Drums Was Forbidden By Law.

Guthrie, O. T., Aug. 18.—Undecided as to whether the law placed any restriction upon the use of the mescal bean in their religious services, three members of the Otoe tribe of Indians called upon Governor Ferguson to obtain definite information on the subject. Their visit was a source of much interest and some amusement to Governor Ferguson, who advised them that the legislature had enacted a law forbidding the use of the mescal bean in any form. They assured the governor that the Otoe had no intention of violating the law; that they desired to be good citizens; to first know the law and then abide by it.

The three stalwart representatives of the Otoes who called upon the governor were Chief Headman, Interpreter Coonskin and John Cleghorn. Chief Headman was the dignified spokesman of the party, while his conversation was made intelligent to Governor Ferguson through Interpreter Coonskin.

The three were, by Secretary Carr, ushered into the presence of Governor Ferguson, and the interpreter stated briefly the object of their visit, informing the governor that Chief Headman desired to address him on the subject. At a signal from the interpreter the chief advanced toward the governor, and, before speaking a word, extended his hand. After the handshake he remained standing, beginning at once to speak earnestly upon the subject which was uppermost in his mind. When he had finished he again shook hands with the governor before resuming his seat.

The chief informed Governor Ferguson that he had received advice to the effect that a party of Sac and Fox Indians were soon to come before the governor and file charges against the Otoes, alleging that they were using the mescal bean.

From the conversation it was evident to Governor Ferguson that the chief was anxious to forestall the Sacs and Foxes by explaining the situation before the charges could be filed. He assured the governor that while some of the tribe favored the use of the mescal bean, the head men of the tribe did not countenance its use, and that there were only a very few, if any, who used it.

The mescal bean is a product of Mexico. It has the properties of an opiate, or, rather, an intoxicant, and was formerly used largely by the Indians in their religious worship. The speaker explained to the governor that the user of the bean had wonderful visions and thought he could best worship the Great Spirit and, as he expressed it, know Him better by using it. He said that some used whisky instead of the bean. The chief then amused the governor by asking him seriously his opinion as to whether the mescal bean or whisky was beneficial to them in their worship. The governor replied that it decidedly was not, in fact, that they could worship better without either. The chief then assured him that he was of the same opinion, and that the other leading men of the tribe held the same view of the subject; that "the Indian could know the Great Spirit better without the use of the bean."

"Only one Great Spirit," said the chief. "White man worship Him best in church; Indian know Him best on prairie. If against law to use mescal bean, Otoe no use it. Otoe want to use drum, though. Any law against drum? White man use big box." Here the chief with gestures explained that he meant a piano. "White man also play on stick," imitating the trombone player. "Otoe no want to break law. He use no drum if law say no."

Governor Ferguson explained to the chief that he knew of no law against the use of the drum in the Indians' religious service.

BIG GRAY WOLVES

Getting More Numerous In North Missouri.

Marceline, Mo., Aug. 18.—Big gray wolves seem to be getting more numerous, and their depredations are more daring than ever in the vicinity of Rothville. This section is well settled up, and wild animals have always been as scarce there as elsewhere in North Missouri, until parties began raising large herds of sheep. Then the pests seemed to increase wonderfully, and many of the citizens thing they came from other parts of the country.

Several flock owners have lost considerable numbers of sheep, and a reward of $20 is offered for the scalp of every adult wolf killed in either Yellow Creek or Salt Creek townships.

Among others who have lost sheep, Cyrus Riddle alone lost forty head. Riddle McCambell, Manlove, Mayo and others who have sustained losses, now intend to buy a pack of regular wolf hounds and make life miserable for the big gray rascals from now on. The sheep raising industry has come to stay, and consequently the wolves must go, for they cannot stay together.

LUCKY ONES.

Daniels and Balbock Draw Two First Chances.

Provo, Utah, Aug. 18.—Ray Daniels of Provo was the first name drawn from the box at the drawing for homesteads in the Uintah reservation. Noah M. Balbock was the second. Daniels and Balbock will be entitled to the first and second sections respectively of the reservation lands to be thrown open to entry on Aug. 25. The values of these homesteads of 160 acres each have ben conservatively estimated at from $5,000 to $10,000. Fully 3,000 persons were present when the drawing began, under the personal supervision of W. A. Richards, commissioner of the United States land office.

NEW NATIONAL BANK.

Washington, Aug. 18.—(Special to The Herald.)—The application of D. C. Smutz of St. Paul, O. A. Robertson, Henry C. Schroeder, J. A. Ring, J. W. Cox and Joseph C. Wood, to organize the German National bank of Shakopee, Minn., with $25,000 capital, has been approved by the comptroller of the currency.

The Dynamo of the American People

We are a race of workers.

Work requires brain, nerve, energy.

We glory in achievement.

To work and work with might and main, good food is absolutely essential.

Although nearly every one eats soda crackers sometime, yet there are a few people who do not consider their true value as an article of daily food. But it is now a recognized and established fact that the soda cracker contains the most tissue, fat and muscle forming elements of any article of food made from flour.

Great as is the value of the common soda cracker, yet it is small in comparison to Uneeda Biscuit—the most wonderful soda cracker ever baked, and of which nearly 400,000,000 packages have been sold.

Uneeda Biscuit, the food of power, transmitting as they do the elements so vital to our well-being, may in very truth be called "The Dynamo of the American People."

COUNTESS SCORES

The Police Because of Treatment Inflicted on Her.

She Is Held For Clever Game of Swindling.

Paris, Aug. 18.—Attention is again fixed on that erratic lady, the Comtesse de Horn, whose troubles and tantrums have frequently caused merriment in Paris. She was sent from prison yesterday to the palais de justice to be examined with the sham Comte de Mareuil, alias Courtadon, who is also in jail by a magistrate relative to the affair of Prince Bronislas Gerdoltz, a Pole.

The prince wanted to raise $50,000 for the purpose of floating a mining company. He applied to the Comtesse de Horn, alias Mme. Gros, believing her to be a smart business woman with important relations. The countess introduced the Polish prince to Courtadon, and she offered to lend him securities representing nearly $75,000 on the condition of receiving proper commission.

The prince agreed, but first of all had to pay $300 to the Comtesse de Horn as her commission for introducing him to the lender. The partner of the prince, Signor Poli, an Italian lawyer, was next put into communication with Courtadon. The latter took a leaf out of the book of that remarkable woman, Mme. Humbert. He obtained $5,500 in ready money from the Italian lawyer, to whom he then handed over a packet containing the securities, which were for the prince.

Signor Poli drove in a cab with Courtadon to a banker's, where the securities were to be verified and authenticated. On the way to the banker's Courtadon stopped the cab in the Rue Saint Lazare, got out, and said that he wanted to see a man. Poli was to be good enough to wait for the space of ten minutes. The Italian did so, but as Courtadon did not return at the expiration of the stipulated time, he began to feel uncomfortable.

Opening the packet of securities, he found that it contained a few lapsed railway bonds, several pieces of newspapers, some prospectuses of phantom companies, and what appeared to be part of the sheet of a bed. Furious at the trick played upon him the Italian jumped out of the cab, paid and dismissed the driver, and lodged a formal complaint against the Countess and her accomplice, whim he accused of having swindled him. Such is the strange case which has again necessitated the appearance of Mme. Gros, or the Comtesse de Horn, at the Palais de Justice—a place which she filled with her vociferations a few months ago, when she was being examined on other charges.

A few days ago the countess again made herself heard and felt. She entered the office of the examining magistrate like a fury, and began to complain of the treatment inflicted on her, and of the municipal guard, who acted as her warder. "It is abominable," shrieked the countess made in the presence of the magistrate. "At that contaminated hole, the Saint-Lazare prison, they shoved me into a police van, a panier a salade, as if I were a trollop from the gutter. I refused to travel in it, so they put me into a taximetre cab, with that horrible wretch, who must have been eating or drinking something nasty."

"Pardon, madame," said the municipal guard, "I have only eaten a bit of garlic in my salad." "Yes, you wretch," retorted the countess, "you smell abominably, and so do all your horrible colleagues," and the infuriated woman shook her fist at them.

Her next proceeding was to snap a pastile out of the hand of the judge d'instruction, who was about to refresh his throat with one of the lozences which he had taken from a box.

Soon after the countess became calmer, and agreed to be examined. She flared up again, however, when Signor Poli, the Italian lawyer, was called, and when he repeated his charges against her and Courtadon. "You lie," she cried, "you scoundrel. Your prince is an adventurer, and we are his victims; you want to blackmail us." Courtadon was calmer, but he, too, maintained that the swindlers were not the countess and himself, but the Pole and the Italian. The examining magistrate remanded the two prisoners, refusing to allow them out on bail.

ROOSEVELT

Wears a $4 Suit In the Summer.

London, Aug. 18.—The London World in its "Celebrities at Home," publishes an interview with Robert J. Wynne, the American consul general, held in the consulate general, St. Helen's place, E. C. Here is part of it. Following is an excerpt:

"Though London city men were sweltering in black coats and tweed trousers, the consul general of the United States looked, and probably was, as cool as a cucumber in a light suit of Holland.

"In America we dress according to the weather," said Mr. Wynne, as he gave me a lion's grip. "I guess you English dress according to the fashion. Well, that's more expensive and not so comfortable."

He looked down at his cool suit with a smile of reminiscence.

"The last time I saw President Roosevelt I wore these same clothes. It was at the White House at Washington, and, of course, the suit was a little free and easy for an official visit, so I apologized.

"'Mr. President,' I said, 'I must make my excuses for appearing before such a great person as yourself and on such an important occasion in an outfit that cost $6.' The president stared at me, and then seized my arm.

"'How much did you say?' he asked.

"'Six dollars, Mr. President.'

"He burst out laughing.

"'Well, I have beaten you,' he cried. 'I am nearer to the people than you are. This suit of mine cost me only $4!'

"I dare say some English people would be surprised to learn that the president of the United States had condescended to wear a $4 suit."

HEAVY BREAK IN PRICE OF WHEAT

Clearing Weather In the Northwest Brings Heavy Slump In Price.

Minneapolis and Duluth Are Down About Three Cents.

Duluth Board of Trade, Aug. 18.—Clearing weather in the Northwest brought a demonstration of how thoroughly this has been a weather advance this week, for in the Northwest, especially, the market proceeds to be as sensitive to favorable conditions as it was to unfavorable. In Duluth there was a decline of 2¾c in the September option and in Minneapolis 3c. Chicago fell 1¾c, New York and Kansas City 1¼c and St. Louis ⅞-1c.

The foreign situation is the one strong feature, Liverpool today showing an advance of ¼ to ½d. London and Antwerp were unchanged and Paris unchanged to ⅛c lower. Prices abroad hold well in spite of declines on this side. Manitoba wheat is said to find difficulty in selling.

Stocks of wheat at Duluth are expected to show no change this week.

Primary receipts of wheat were 696,000 bus, last year 787,000 bus. Shipments 456,000 bus, last year 518,000 bus.

Argentine shipments of wheat this week amount to 1,672,000 bus, against 2,664,000 bus last week and 1,984,000 bus last year.

Corn in the Liverpool market closed ½d lower to ¼d higher. In the Chicago market September corn closed ¼c higher. September oats closed a shade lower. Primary receipts of corn were 568,000 bus., last year 271,000 bus. Shipments 467,000 bus., last year 144,000 bus. Argentine shipments of corn this week were 2,543,000 bus., against 3,462,000 bus., last week and 3,784,000 bus. last year.

Trading in wheat was dull and the market very weak. The old September option opened 1⅛c lower at 85¼c, dropped to 84⅞c at 9:40, rallied to 85c at 9:50 and then slumped to 84¼c at 10:25. It then advanced to 85¼c at 11:30, and then lost another cent by the time of closing, the closing price being 83½c, a loss of 2⅜ for the day. The new September option lost the same, closing at 79½c.

Flax was dull and weak, though not in a marked degree. The American company was said to be supporting the market at $1.13 for October. October opened ¼c higher at $1.13½, fell to $1.13 and closed there, a loss of ¼c. The November option also closed ¼c lower at $1.13¾. September fell ½c to $1.14½. Stocks of flax at Duluth will decrease 125,000 bus. this week.

Oats and rye were unchanged.

Following are the closing prices:

Wheat—On track, No. 1 northern, 87¼c; No. 2 northern, 83½c. Durum, No. 1, 76c; No. 2, 69c; September, old, 83½c; September, new, 79½c; December, 79c. Flax to arrive, $1.21; on track, $1.48; August, $1.21; September, $1.14½; October, $1.13; November, $1.13¼; December, 1.12¾. Oats to arrive, 26c; on track, 26c; September, 26c. Rye, September, 56½c. Barley—Feed, 36@40c.

Receipts: Wheat 14,802, corn 3,150, oats 6,112, barley 20,352, rye 568, flax 614.

Shipments: Wheat 24,751; oats 79,999; rye 113.

THE CHICAGO MARKET.

Wheat Easy By Reason of Liberal Offerings.

Chicago, Aug. 18.—Clearing weather in the Northwest brought out liberal offerings of wheat here today and made an easy market. September was off at the start 3⅝@⅞c to 82¾c at 82¼c to 82¾c and declined under pressure by local traders who had covered on the previous bullishness to 81⅞@82c. Minneapolis, Duluth and Chicago reported receipts of 262 cars compared with 356 cars last week and 126 cars a year ago.

The market showed no recuperative ability. The close was but a shade up from the low point for the day at 81¼@¾c, a net loss of 1¾c.

A fair demand by commission houses steadied the corn market after an easy opening, influenced by wheat weakness. Cables were steady. Scalpers bid the price down at the start. September was off ⅛@¼c at 52⅜@52¾c, but recovered to 53c. Local receipts were 305 cars, of which 136 graded contract.

A local commission house had made influential purchases of old September, causing a stiffening of prices in all options. September advanced to 53¾@⅞c, but lost some of the gain on realizing sales. The close was firm at 53¼c, a gain of ¼c.

Oats were steady at slightly lower prices. Light receipts overcame a tendency toward weakness in sympathy with other grains. September was down a shade at 26c. Local receipts were 262 cars.

Packers gave fair support to provisions, a steady tone resulting. September pork is unchanged at $14.32½. Lard is up 2½c at $7.80. Ribs are a shade higher at $8.87½.

Close: Wheat—August, 80¾c; September, 81¼@⅜c; December, 82⅝@⅞c; May, 85⅝c. Corn—September, 53¼c; old, 53½c; December, 44⅜c; old, 46½c; May, 44¼c. Oats—August, 26c; September, 26c; December, 26⅝c; May, 28⅝c. Pork—September, $14.50; October, $14.25; January, $13.07½. Lard—September, $7.72½; October, $7.80; November, $7.55; December, $7.72½; January, $7.20. Ribs—September, $8.72½; October, $8.80. Rye—Cash, 56½@56c; September, 57¾c; December, 58¼@59½c. Flax—Cash, northwestern, $1.16; southwestern, $1.06. Timothy—September, $3.60; March, $3.60. Clover—August, $12.75. Barley—Cash, 39@46c. Cash, wheat—No. 2 red, 83¾@84¼c; No. 3 red, 82½@83½c; No. 2 hard, 84¼@91c; No. 3 hard, 80¾@88c; No. 1 northern, 84@95c; No. 2 northern, $1.00; No. 3 spring, 85@95c. Corn—No. 2, 54¾@55c; No. 3, 54½c. Oats—No. 2, 25½c; No. 3, 25@25¼c.

GRAIN GOSSIP.

Logan & Bryan, Chicago: Wheat—Influenced by the lower Minneapolis curb, our market opened sharply lower and except for one rally, which carried prices about ⅝ up from the low point, market was dragging all day. It closed practically at the low point. The action of the market seems to bear out our recent writings. It has had a three days' advance and about all that could be expected considering the slow action of the market. We see no change in the situation and continue to look for a slow market.

Corn—Primary receipts about same as shipments. The early market did not give much promise of the activity and strength which developed later in the session. This came suddenly, and largely on buying by the principal bull interests. The short interests found offerings scarce, and had to compete with others in filling their contracts.

Oats—Ruled steady and closed unchanged which practically tells the story. Trade continues featureless. The best we see at the moment is a slow trading market.

Provisions eased off today under what looked like liquidation sales. Late in the session packers' support was not in evidence and the desire to sell a little outside stuff cost market a goodly portion of yesterday's advance. We see no change in speculative conditions.

* * *

Edwards, Wood & Co.: Wheat—There was no strength in today's wheat market and prices slumped weakly from a nervous and lower opening until the close. The loss for the day was about 3c from yesterday and the close was right on the bottom. There was only one consideration during the day. It was the weather and nothing but the weather and the reports that came in from the fields were of a singularly unanimous character. One or two reports from about Fargo said that the late storm had broken the heads from standing grain because the straw was brittle and the heads heavy. This proved to be something of a bearish argument as soon as the trade realized that the grain must be heavy indeed to cause the straw to break. Leaders seemed to take the position that if this was the case and only a little was damaged there must be a tremendous crop of the uninjured fields. Fair weather is predicted for tomorrow and much improved receipts are expected next week. Russian cables from some of the continental markets reflected the improvement in the prospective yields of grain in that country. The indication now says that not so favorable, and as the yield of India is vastly more important to the world at the present time than that of Russia where exports may be shut off by law at any time, the trade paid more heed to them than to others. At that the weather in the Northwest was the only effective influence. As we pointed out yesterday the course of the market followed the weather reports. It seems likely that the break has gone about far enough for the present and purchases look attractive at this level for quick trading.

PHILA. COUNCIL

Will Investigate Wholesale Dismissal of Employes.

Philadelphia, Aug. 18.—The select branch of city council has passed a resolution calling for the appointment of a committee of seven, with full power to investigate the removal of all officers and employes of the city during the last three months. The resolution gives the committee full power to summon witnesses and employ counsel and such other assistance as may be deemed necessary.

The resolution was introduced by Milton C. Work, who explained that two directors of departments, several bureau chiefs and several hundred other employes have been dismissed from the service of the city without the mayor giving any reason to the council, as required by the laws governing the city.

LUMBER DEALERS HAVE GRIEVANCE.

Ottawa, Ont., Aug. 18.—The National Wholesale Lumber Dealers' association, an American organization which is in session here with twenty-two other lumbermen's organizations of the United States, passed a resolution to complain to the interstate commerce commission against railroads east of the Mississippi river, who compel lumbermen to equip cars to receive lumber shipments.

DECLINE IN STOCKS

Selling Orders Outstripped Buying and Prices Crumbled Away.

Better Tone In the Late Afternoon But Close Easy.

New York, Aug. 18.—The opening movement of prices in the stock market was irregular and the trading was active and varied. St. Paul was carried up 1¼ and Northern Pacific nearly a point, but the grangers and Pacifics otherwise were rather heavy at fractional declines. The United States Steel stocks also opened a fraction more than last night and Kansas & Texas preferred lost a point.

Selling orders outstripped the buying and prices crumbled away after an unsuccessful effort to sustain the market by bidding up the transcontinental stocks. Before the reaction became general Great Northern preferred, Chicago, St. Paul, Minneapolis & Omaha, Minneapolis & St. Louis and Pittsburg, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis had broad gains of 2 points. Car preferred 1⅝ and the Northwestern stocks, Pere Marquette preferred, Locomotive preferred and Texas Land Trust 1. The more active of the strong stocks surrendered their advances, later including St. Paul, and Northern Pacific an Northwestern fell 1¼ below yesterday's close. Large fractional inroads were made on the values of representative leaders all through the list and New York Central, Louisville & Nashville, Atlantic Coast Line, Southern Pacific, Delaware & Hudson, Rock Island preferred, Lead, United States Rubber, Republic Steel preferred and Federal Mining succumbed 1 to 1½ and Locomotive 2.

A very heavy accumulation of Pennsylvania at an advance of nearly a point strengthened other stocks by sympathy. Long Island rose 7, Chicago Terminal preferred 2¼ and Malting preferred 1. Locomotive rallied 2. The evidence of realizing prompted traders to offer prices down again and Union Pacific yielded abruptly 1¼ and Southern Pacific 1⅝. The effect was perceptible on the whole list and St. Paul, Atchison, Chesapeake & Ohio, Cleveland, Cincinnati, Chicago & St. Louis, Copper and Smelting fell 1, United States Steel 1⅜ and Delaware & Hudson, Iowa Central preferred and Northwestern 2. Bonds were steady at noon.

The grangers and Pacifics managed to recover a trifle despite the continuance of the selling movement in a number of other stocks. Offerings were very moderate, but comprised a large variety of stocks. Delaware & Hudson yielded 4 points, General Electric 2¾, Toledo, St. Louis & Western preferred 1½ and Illinois Central, Rock Island, Ontario & Western, Chicago & Alton, American Car, Colorado Fuel, Tennessee Coal, United States Steel, Peoples Gas and United States Reduction preferred 1 to 1¼.

A better tone prevailed in the late afternoon, but in only a few instances did the extreme recoveries reach as much as a point. The exhaustion of the selling movement threw the market into comparative dullness. A few stocks dropped off at intervals. Northern Pacific lost 1. Great Northern preferred 3 and Pullman 4¾.

Reading moved up 1¼ to a record price at 113⅜ and the market hardened in sympathy. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo preferred, Consolidated Gas and Cotton Oil gained 1 to 1¼. The rally did not hold well. Pennsylvania relapsed to below last night and some other stocks fell back to the lowest of the day. The large movement of currency for the week to the interior awakened anxiety as to the money market. Minneapolis, St. Paul & Soo, B. & O., Atchison preferred and Southern Railway lost 1 and Pittsburg Coal preferred 1½. United States Steel preferred ran off to 104 and the closing was easy.

THE COTTON MARKET.

New York, Aug. 18.—The cotton market opened firm at an advance of 2@11 points on active Southern bull support and covering promoted by bullish private crop condition reports, private cables reporting the Lancashire strike finally averted and higher Liverpool cables. There was heavy realizing and local bears sold freely, but prices continued to advance until October sold at 10.75, or 22 points net higher and 52 points over the low level of yesterday. This was followed by a reaction of about 10 points, with the market in the middle of the morning nervous at a net advance of about 15@16 points.

Spot closed quiet, 15 points higher; middling uplands, 10.75; ditto gulf, 11.00. Sales 800 bales. Futures closed steady; August, 10.42; September, 10.46; October, 10.62; November, 10.66; December, 10.73; January, 10.81; February, 10.85; March, 10.87; April, 10.89; May, 10.91.

NEW YORK MONEY.

New York, Aug. 18.—Money on call easy, 1¾@2½ per cent, closing bid, 1¾; offered at 2. Time loans steady; sixty days, 3 per cent; ninety days, 3¼@3½; six months, 4. Prime mercantile paper, 4@4½ per cent. Sterling exchange steady, with actual business in bankers' bills at $4.86.65@70 for demand and at $4.84.65@70 for sixty days; posted rates, $4.85½ and $4.87½; commercial bills, $4.84⅛. Bar silver, 61c; Mexican dollars, 46¾c. Government bonds strong; railroad bonds irregular.

COPPER GOSSIP.

Boston to Paine, Webber & Co.: The suit against Lawson and Burrage by the Copper Range had a dampening effect on the market today and stocks were dull and slightly weaker. There was very little pressure to sell but there were practically no buying orders. Tecumseh and Allouez are still being accumulated. The metal market is still very strong and there is no indication of any decline in prices at present.

TREASURY BALANCES.

BEAUTY CONTEST

Ends In Riot, Twenty Men Being Injured.

La Grange, Ind., Aug. 18.—Lovely candidates in a beauty contest were the innocent cause of a big riot in the town of Stroh, in which twenty men were injured, many of them seriously.

The beauty contest was held in Stroh. The town was represented by three damsels, and the neighboring village, Elmira, entered a matron and a maid. The decision was to be reached by votes. Elmira is a larger town than Stroh, and practically the whole population came over and voted.

When the ballots were counted it was found that one of the Stroh candidates had won. The Elmira contingent charged ballot-box stuffing. Charles Lederone and Ellis Shellberger were specifically charged with the offense. Arguments led to blows, and in a minute almost the entire male population of both places were battling with fists, behind houses, fences and in the open.

Shots were fired and three men had bullet wounds dressed. "The beauties" ran to cover and telephoned for assistance. The battle went on for an hour and then the Elmira men, carying off their wounded, retured home. Though beaten in the beauty exhibit, they are said to have won in the physical argument.

WOOD FOR PAVING.

Forest Service Will Investigate Cheaper Kinds.

Washington, Aug. 18.—The forest service of the department of agriculture has announced that it has taken up the study of woods for special uses and experiments will be conducted particularly to secure a wood for street pavement which will prove lasting. The circular states that in recent years engineers have become convinced that with the right selection and treatment of material, and with the right method of laying wood paving can be made successful. Consequently a revival in wood paving has begun and many of the largest cities are again trying it.

Wood pavement is now made almost exclusively of one of two of the best construction woods and if it should become popular the drain on these woods would be seriously in danger. The forest service will direct its experiments to determine if there are not among the various cheaper and more abundant species some which by proper treatment be submitted for the more valuable kinds now in use.

FLEA DISINFECTANT MAY KILL SOLDIERS.

Cincinnati, Aug. 18.—As a result of spraying their bodies with a disinfectant to destroy fleas, Ernest A. Graham and Alva Cain are in a serious condition and may die.

Since the First regiment returned from Vicksburg, Miss., the armory has been infested with fleas brought from the South by the soldiers. Graham and Cain took a contract to disinfect the armory.

ORDER FOR HEARING APPLICATION FOR APPOINTMENT OF ADMINISTRATOR.—

State of Minnesota, County of St. Louis. —ss.

In Probate Court, Special Term, August 10th, 1905.

In the Matter of the Estate of Joseph Polzin, Deceased:

On receiving and filing the petition of Peter Polzin of the County of Milwaukee and state of Wisconsin, representing, among other things, that Joseph Polzin, late of the County of St. Louis, in the State of Minnesota, on the 25th day of June, A. D. 1905, at the County of St. Louis, died intestate, and being an inhabitant of this County at the time of his death, leaving goods, chattels and estate within this County, and that the said petitioner is father of said deceased, and praying that administration of said estate be to Peter Polzin granted;

It is Ordered, That said petition be heard before said Court on Monday, the 11th day of September, A. D. 1905, at ten o'clock a. m., at the Probate office, in the Court House, in the City of Duluth, in said County.

Ordered Further, That notice hereof be given to the heirs of said deceased and to all persons interested, by publishing this order once in each week for three successive weeks prior to said day of hearing, in The Duluth Evening Herald, a daily newspaper printed and published at Duluth, in said County.

Dated at Duluth, Minnesota, this 10th day of August, A. D. 1905.

By the Court,

J. B. MIDDLECOFF,
Judge of Probate.
